SEVERAL years ago Director Maurice Tourneur turned out a film version of this reliable old Drury Lane stage melodrama, which proved a good box office attraction. His second essay with the same material results in a picture superior in every way to its predecessor. The new "Sporting Life" is a genuine "corker" of its type. Lovely ladies, noble race horses, prize fighters, a dashing hero and villain of the deepest dye, are all present in a feature vibrating with fast action, loaded with suspense and projecting thrills by the score. Bert Lytell is immense as the athletic young Lord Woodstock, who takes on and knocks out the ring champion, when the chap he backs against the pug is doped; Marian Nixon makes a palpable hit as heroine Nora Cavanaugh, and the support is perfect.

THEME. Melodrama of London Sporting and society circles.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fine photography and rattling action. Scene where fighter is doped, and killing of woman responsible for his misfortune. The ring contest. Scene where hero, his fighter and girl are trapped in Limehouse den. Winning of the Derby.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tell patrons this is adaptation of famous melo which was great London Drury Lane success and scored two years run in this country with Robert Hilliard as star. Go the limit on boosting fight and race scenes, the appealing romance, the tremendous thrills. Feature Bert Lytell and Marian Nixon.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any house.

SUMMARY. A realistic and thrilling picture version of celebrated old Drury Lane melo, and fine box office attraction. Stages stirring ring contest and view of Epsom Downs, with hero's horse winning Derby.

THE CAST

PRESS NOTICE

A MAGNIFICENT film version of the great London Drury Lane stage success, "Sporting Life," which had a two years run before the footlights in this country, comes to the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. It is an elaborate melodrama of London sporting and society circles, vibrating with thrills, offering a sympathetic love story, a furious prizefight, and great scene visualizing the running of the Derby at Epsom Downs.

Bert Lytell plays the role of hero Lord Woodstock, supported by Marian Nixon, Paulette Duval, Cyril Chadwick and other well-known screen favorites.

CATCH LINES

When the man he backed to win the fistic championship was doped, young Lord Woodstock took his fighter's place and won by a knockout. He rescued his girl from a Limehouse den and saw his racehorse run to victory in the Derby.

His Majesty Bunker Bean

(Warner Brothers—7291 Feet

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE novel by Harry Leon Wilson from which this film was adapted is rich in the finer shades of subtle humor, its hero an amusingly credulous and, at times, rather pathetic figure. Translated to the screen in its present form it registers as mere slapstick comedy, and pretty crude slapstick at that, not a single trace of the story's lovable human appeal being retained. As a program attraction in localities where continuous horseplay delights patrons, it may do well enough at the box office, but critical audiences will find it simply tiresome.

Matt Moore is badly cast in the lead. He is years too old for the role, which calls for a callow youth. As portrayed by Moore, this Bunker Bean is just an effeminate near-imbecile. Director Harry Beaumont seems to have sacrificed all sense of true comedy proportions to clowning tactics which are in evidence all through the picture. These get the laughs here and there, but the general impression the feature makes is that of strained, over-done burlesque.

THEME. Farce comedy steered along slapstick lines, dealing with love adventures of male stenographer who thinks he is the reincarnation of an Egyptian king.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene in which mummy reaches hero's apartment. Bunker's "sideplays" when taking dictation from employer. Romance development. Slapstick stuff, culminating in climax with Bean and rival fighting in pond.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a comic feature with wildly absurd situations. Tell patrons about Bunker's ambition to imitate royal ancestor and his love affair with boss's daughter.

DRAWING POWER. Not suitable for first-class houses. May pass where fans are satisfied with knockabout clowning and not particular as to story or acting values.

SUMMARY. Starts as straight comedy, but whirls abruptly into slapstick, pushed to excess and maintained up to climax. Rough-house work amusing in spots, doesn't hold interest. No appeal for sophisticated movie fans.

THE CAST

Bunker Bean.....Matt Moore
Marie Breede.....Dorothy Devore
Bud Matthews.....David Butler
Jim Breede.....George Nichols
Mrs. Breede.....Helen Dunbar
Grandma Breede.....Gertrude Clair

Adapted from Novel and Stage Play by Harry Leon Wilson. Director, Harry Beaumont.

SYNOPSIS. Bunker Bean, millionaire Jim Breede's stenographer, inherits money, is persuaded by phoney clairvoyants that he is a reincarnation of an Egyptian king, and buys from them a mummy supposed to be his royal self. Full of conquering confidence, he wins the love of Breede's daughter, Marie. The mummy turns out to be a fake. Bunker becomes timid again, but finally rallies and weds Marie.

PRESS NOTICE

A YOUTH who believes himself to be the reincarnation of an Egyptian king is the hero of "His Majesty Bunker Bean," which will be presented at the ———— Theatre on ————. This is a merry farce-comedy, an adaptation of Harry Leon Wilson's successful novel and stage play, abounding in comic absurdities and unique situations. When the hero acquires a mummy which he believes to be his former royal self he grows so confident, that in no time he is engaged to his millionaire employer's daughter.

Matt Moore is the star, with Dorothy Devore, David Butler, George Nichols, Helen Dunbar, and others in support.

CATCH LINES

If you thought you had royal blood in your veins, would the idea help much in attaining your desires? Come and see how this hero's ambitions soared upon learning that he was once a king.

Was It Bigamy

(William Steiner Prod.—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN inferior production and poor investment for the exhibitor, excepting as half of a double bill, or in houses where a daily change policy prevails. Its plot is rather absurd, decidedly unconvincing and the director hasn't improved matters any, padding it out with entirely superfluous detail. The heroine finds herself in a fix because she has married two men, although in each case it is made clear that she is "a wife in name only." She dreads being prosecuted for bigamy, which, under the circumstances, isn't surprising, even if she acted under generous motives, wedding hubby number one to reform him, and the second in order to save her beloved guardian from going to jail. The trouble with the yarn is that you can't imagine any female outside of a half-wit, getting snared in such a foolish fashion.

The acting of Edith Thornton and Earle Williams in the leading roles is the film's best box office asset. But even Miss Thornton, with all her charm and sincerity, can't do much with an impossible part. Williams, as Steele, isn't quite so badly handicapped, and gives a capable performance.

THEME. Domestic drama, wherein girl, to save guardian from jail, weds second husband while first is still alive.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Acting of principals. Scene where Ruth Sedley finds first husband a drunken degenerate, living with native woman, and his death by an avenging bullet.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Your best plan is to play up Edith Thornton and Earle Williams as much as possible, as both are well-known players. The title may draw, feature it, but don't promise too much as regards story.

DRAWING POWER. Only suitable for daily change house, or as half of double bill.

SUMMARY. Domestic drama, weak, unconvincing plot, with heroine in trouble because she weds two men and fears prosecution. Edith Thornton and Earle Williams the leads, save the picture from being a complete flop, but it won't do for discriminating audiences.

THE CAST

Ruth Sedley.....Edith Thornton
Carlton Steele.....Earle Williams
Judge Gaynor.....Thomas Picketts
Harvey Gaynor.....Charles Cruz
Attorney.....Wilfred Lucas

Author, Forrest Sheldon. Directed by Charles Hutchison.

SYNOPSIS. Harvey, son of Judge Gaynor, induces Ruth Sedley, his father's ward, to marry him under promise of reformation from his idle life. He goes to South America. Judge discovers son has stolen bonds belonging to client Carlton Steele. Ruth overhears Judge threatened with prison by Steele, unless she weds latter. She contracts second marriage with Steele. Later, she goes to Harvey, Steele following. Finds Harvey a drunkard, living with native woman. Harvey is killed by native. Steele and Ruth admit their mutual love.

PRESS NOTICE

SHE was innocent in intention, if not according to law, when she wedded a second husband while the first was still living. Go and see what happened to Ruth Sedley, heroine of "Was It Bigamy?" the picture which opens at the ———— Theatre on ————. A domestic drama with extraordinary complications, much human interest, a double love story and thrilling climax.

That universal favorite, Edith Thornton, plays the role of the beautiful heroine who dared the anger of the law to save the guardian she loved from prison.

CATCH LINES

She married one man to reform him, another, to save her beloved guardian from going to jail for a felony committed by his worthless son. In each case she sacrificed herself, but the second marriage proved her salvation.

The Prairie Pirate

(Producers Distributing Corp.—4603 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BORDER tale melodrama which sizzles with speedy action and puts the thrill punches over in decisive style! Wherever good Westerners are in demand this picture will surely please and hold its own at the box office. As is the case with most features of the kind, the probabilities are considerably stretched, but this fact does not detract from the film's market value as entertainment for an extremely large class of movie-goers, the members of which are content, so long as they get enough excitement for their money.

Harry Carey, as the young ranchman who turns outlaw to avenge his sister's murder, plays the role with unfailing dash and energy, and Trilby Clark, a bewitching little brunette, registers as a very fascinating Spanish heroine. Director Edmund Mortimer has had especially good luck with his color effects, all the backgrounds are exceedingly picturesque and the shots of the Mexican fiestas oddly alluring, with their display of quaint costumes and graceful charm.

THEME. Border melodrama in which young ranchman turns bandit to avenge sister's death, accomplishes purpose and wins beautiful senorita for wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Melodramatic sweep and speed of action. The picturesque surroundings. Colorful atmosphere. Harry Carey's virile acting, horsemanship and athletic activities. Big scene where he overcomes enemy he sought, EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a rip-roaring border melodrama, crammed with suspense, exciting sequences, and offering a pleasing love romance. Feature Carey, and tell the fans this is one of his very best.

DRAWING POWER. A banner attraction for any house where Westerners are popular.

SUMMARY. Colorful Westerner, charged with fast action and thrills, has romantic appeal, a strenuous border melodrama, with Harry Carey in a part that will please all his admirers.

THE CAST

Brian Delaney ..... Harry Carey
Ruth Delaney ..... Jean Dumas
Howard Steele ..... Lloyd Whitlock
Teresa Esteban ..... Trilby Clark
Jose ..... Tote Ducrow
Don Estaeban ..... Robert Edeson
Aguillar ..... Fred Kohler

Adapted from "The Yellow Seal," by W. C. Tuttle. Director, Edmund Mortimer. Pnotographed by Georges Benoit.

SYNOPSIS. His sister's murder causes Ranchman Brian Delaney to become a bandit seeking revenge. He raids Steele's gambling house and aids Don Esteban and latter's daughter Teresa, who are in gambler's power. Later, he stops wedding between Steele and the girl, is wounded, but carries her off. When Steele comes to his hiding place, he overcomes him, disguises him in his clothes and the gambler is killed by posse in pursuit of Brian. It transpires that Steele was the murderer. Brian and Teresa are united.

PRESS NOTICE

HARRY CAREY appears as the dashing hero of "The Prairie Pirate," a stirring Western melodrama slated for the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a border tale, remarkable for its colorful settings, breath-taking thrill scenes, and virile work of the star, whose horsemanship stunts and fighting ability have never been so successfully demonstrated. There's an appealing love romance involved, with beautiful Trilby Clark as a Spanish senorita heroine.

The hero turns outlaw to avenge a sister's murder, fulfills his oath and wins the Spanish girl.

CATCH LINES

He turned bandit to avenge his sister's murder, and became the scourge of the border, helping the poor, robbing the rich and defying his pursuers.

Harry Carey as "The Yellow Seal," the border bandit who trailed to death the man who slew his sister and won the love of a lovely senorita.

The Pony Express

(Paramount—9929 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

DIRECTOR JAMES CRUZE has added another brilliant success to his screen triumphs, "The Pony Express." It would be futile to indulge in comparisons between the new feature and its predecessors of historical significance, the worth-while facts being that this picture excels in its own particular period, offers splendid entertainment, and having lived up to its advance notices, should, with the great advertising campaign made by Famous-Lasky in its behalf, register a sure-fire box office hit.

The exploits of the pony-riders and undercurrent of events leading up toward the outbreak of the Civil War are fused into a stirring melodrama which is curiously convincing in its colorful realism, because the on-looker knows it stands upon a firm historical foundation, and a love affair between the hero and Betty Compson supplies the necessary sentimental lure. The work of the entire cast is superb, with performances by Ernest Torrence, George Bancroft, Wallace Beery, Ricardo Cortez and Miss Compson standing out in bold relief.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The feature's spectacular appeal, magnificent scenic shots and melodramatic thrills; good direction and work of cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature this as another triumph for the man who directed "The Covered Wagon." Stress the picture's historical accuracy and educational values, melodramatic thrills and scenic beauty. Every member of the cast is worth advertising.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any theatre, large or small.

SUMMARY. A great historical feature with melodrama and romance craftily interwoven. Crammed with thrills, ablaze with colorful scenery. Has sure spectacular appeal for all classes of movie patrons.

CATCH LINES

A picture that will awaken patriotic pride in the breast of every true American who sees it.

A wonderful spectacle of scenic beauty, a crashing melodrama, a beautiful love story, a great educational factor.

Children and adults alike will thrill to the sensational punches and intense human interest of this vivid American historical epic.

The Dark Angel

(First National—7311 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

TRAGIC suggestion and intense pathos are the mainsprings of this Samuel Goldwyn production, which nevertheless ends on a cheerful note, is brimful of sentimental lure, never carried to excess, and always convincing. It is well directed and beautifully photographed, the views of the hunt, the quiet beauty of the English landscapes, symbolic touches showing Death's shadowy angel hovering overhead, are all perfect examples of camera technique, and a couple of battle shots, with trench backgrounds and artillery in action register as the very acme of war realism. Also, the picture introduces in the personality of Vilma Banky, who plays the feminine lead, an actress of genuine talent who must be reckoned with in considering the future's lineup of budding screen stars.

Physically attractive, she is natural and wistfully appealing in the emotional phases of a difficult role. Ronald Colman has never appeared to such good advantage as in the part of hero Captain Trent, and the support is faultless.

THEME. Heart drama in which soldier hero goes blind and is willing to sacrifice future happiness by dissuading sweetheart from marrying him, but girl remains faithful.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Charming scenic views, realistic battle shots. Sustained heart interest. Scene in which hero conceals his blindness and greets fiancee coldly. Fine acting of Ronald Colman, Vilma Banky and support.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Make it plain that this is not a straight war play, although some battle stuff is shown. Stress the sympathetic side, the lover's attempted self-sacrifice, the exquisite scenery and good acting.

DRAWING POWER. Should satisfy all classes of patrons in big and little houses.

SUMMARY. A gripping drama of love and devotion, with war angle on which plot revolves. Is beautifully photographed, well acted and directed. Possesses universal appeal.

PRESS NOTICE

"THE Dark Angel," a heart drama of throbbing interest, is the attraction billed for the ——— Theatre on ———. The story relates how Captain Trent, soldier hero, goes blind, returns quietly to England, earns a living as author and tries to forget his sweetheart, Kitty Vane. The latter, on the eve of wedding another man, finds Trent, who conceals his blindness and pretends he no longer loves her. But Kitty discovers the deception, refuses to accept his sacrifice and they are united.

A wonderfully sympathetic, human story, with Ronald Colman and beautiful Vilma Banky in the leading roles.

CATCH LINES

The grim realism of war and attempted self-sacrifice of a soldier hero who when blind and was willing to give up the woman who loved him for her own sake.

The Cyclone Cavalier

(Rayart—4928 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN amusing comedy, with occasional melodramatic splurges verging close on the mock-heroic margin, this picture classes as a sufficiently entertaining program attraction. It has the familiar background of a Central American revolution and equally familiar U. S. hero, whose activities in dodging and overcoming foes and making love to a pretty Spanish girl are constantly in evidence. Not much to the plot, but plenty of slapstick fun and startling acrobatic stunts performed by Reed Howes, the good-looking, agile star. Director Albert Rogell keeps the action pot boiling over all the time, there certainly isn't a dull moment in the film, and the chances are strong that it will score a hit with a majority of the fans.

Carmelita Geraghty gives a vivaciously pleasing performance as the girl in the case, Jack Mower is a sinister figure as he stalks about in cloak and sombrero, as the villainous El Diablo, and the support is effective.

THEME. Comedy-melodrama, with young American foiling Central American revolutionists and winning President's daughter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The ceaseless swing of action. Attractive scenic shots. Reed Howes' acrobatic stunts. Amusing slapstick comedy. Scene where Howe displays swordmanship and holds palace stairs against attacking party Romantic interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Reed Howes as the handsome lover and play up his gymnastic stunts. Bill as amusing comedy with melodramatic thrills and love affair. Mention colorful backgrounds and Carmelita Geraghty's good work.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Offers Central American background, with U. S. hero upsetting revolutionary plans, winning President's gratitude and pretty daughter. Lively comedy with melo thrills interpolated, burlesque suggestion and fast action throughout. Pleasing program production.

PRESS NOTICE

COMEDY, thrills and romance mingle freely in "The Cyclone Cavalier," listed as the leading screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Reed Howes plays the hero, a madcap young New Yorker, whose father sends him on business to Central America. He falls in love with the president's daughter, incurs the old man's displeasure, but after getting tangled in a net of adventures, foils a revolutionary plot, saves father and girl, and wins the latter.

Some amazing stunt work by the star is in evidence.

CATCH LINES

This young New Yorker made things hum when he dropped into a nest of Central American revolutionary plotters. He loved the President's daughter, and proved it by foiling the rebels.

A merry mixture of fun, exciting adventure and heart romance. Handsome Reed Howes in an enthralling hero role. Laughter, suspense, love and fighting thrills in "The Cyclone Cavalier."

Going the Limit

(Gerson Pictures—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A BRISK mystery melodrama, chiefly remarkable for its lively action and agile stunt work of the star, Richard Holt. The plot isn't much out of the ordinary, but by speeding it up to the 'steenth degree and never allowing Mr. Holt a chance to sit down and recuperate, Director Duke Worne has turned out an amusing film which should prove acceptable entertainment for the fans who like the leading man's stuff and welcome exciting jolts. The heiress heroine is abducted early in the game and when Richard gets after the crooks who trapped her, there is always something doing in the fervid thrill line. The finale comes after a wild chase up and down hill that is full of fresh and thoroughly unexpected angles and a decided novelty of its kind.

As in his previous films, Dick Holt is at his best when dodging around in the stunt situations, but his performance on the whole is creditable, and Ruth Dwyer figures as a very appealing and good-to-look-atheroine, with other members of the cast rendering adequate support.

THEME. Crook melodrama, with hero performing neck-breaking stunts and rescuing girl from underworld gang.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The athletic stunts pulled by Richard Holt. Scene where heroine is kidnapped by crooks. The fast action and bewilderingly rapid chase of gangsters which winds up story.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature the stunt work of star and mystery plot. Play up the big climax, with the hunt after the crooks through San Francisco streets.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where Holt is popular and the patrons want fast melodrama, with vivid stunt trimmings.

SUMMARY. Mystery melodrama, puts over decisive punches and thrills, with Dick Holt performing all kinds of amazing stunts. A good card, if your patrons are strong for exciting screen fare.

"GOING THE LIMIT" a whirlewind mystery melodrama, alive with thrills and fast action, is registered as the main attraction on the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. Richard Holt is the star, and early in the story he gets on the trail of a band of crooks who have kidnapped the heroine. Holt, noted for his breath-taking stunts work, outdoes all his previous acrobatic activities in this film.

Ruth Dwyer scores a hit as the winsome heroine, giving an excellent performance.

CATCH LINES

You know what Richard Holt can do as a stunt artist. But you've never seen him put over such thrill stuff as he does in this picture.

The crooks got away with their kidnapping plan. But when hero Holt got on their trail, they found they couldn't finish what they started.

The most exciting man-hunt through San Francisco streets ever filmed.

The Storm Breaker

(Universal-Jewel—6064 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A WHIRLWIND of human emotions and salt sea gales off the rock-bound coast of Nova Scotia, this picture, with its impressively natural settings and fine direction gives House Peters an opportunity to again demonstrate his ability as a delineator of strong character roles of which he takes full advantage. As the physically powerful and blatantly confident fisher king of a small isle, Mr. Peters scores heavily, and ends up as a very pathetic figure when realization comes that he like other ordinary men, is but the sport of destiny after all. Yet, the finish cannot be listed as unhappy, for it is plainly suggested that the temporarily disappointed man, will later find solace in the affections of Judith Nyte, his mother's orphan ward. The feature as a whole is entertaining and is a likely box office asset.

THEME. Drama with marine atmosphere, depicting fisher-captain's mistaken love for wrong woman, and his sacrifice for brother's sake.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The forceful, appealing work of House Peters in leading role. Picturesque sea views. Romantic complications. Big storm scene when lifeboat is launched and John Strong rescues drowning brother.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the magnificent maritime shots, the conflict between hero's affection for brother and love for the girl he desires. Boost House Peters' splendid work and the rescue-dash of lifeboat through raging gale.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in any house.

SUMMARY. A drama rich in conflict of emotions, with fine character sketch of rugged, overbearing self-confident fisher-captain by the star. Has strong romantic values and puts over tremendous thrill in big storm and lifeboat rescue scene. Will please any audience.

New 600 Seat Theatre Opens on Broadway

Embassy, Managed by Society Leader, Creates Interest Through Unusual Features

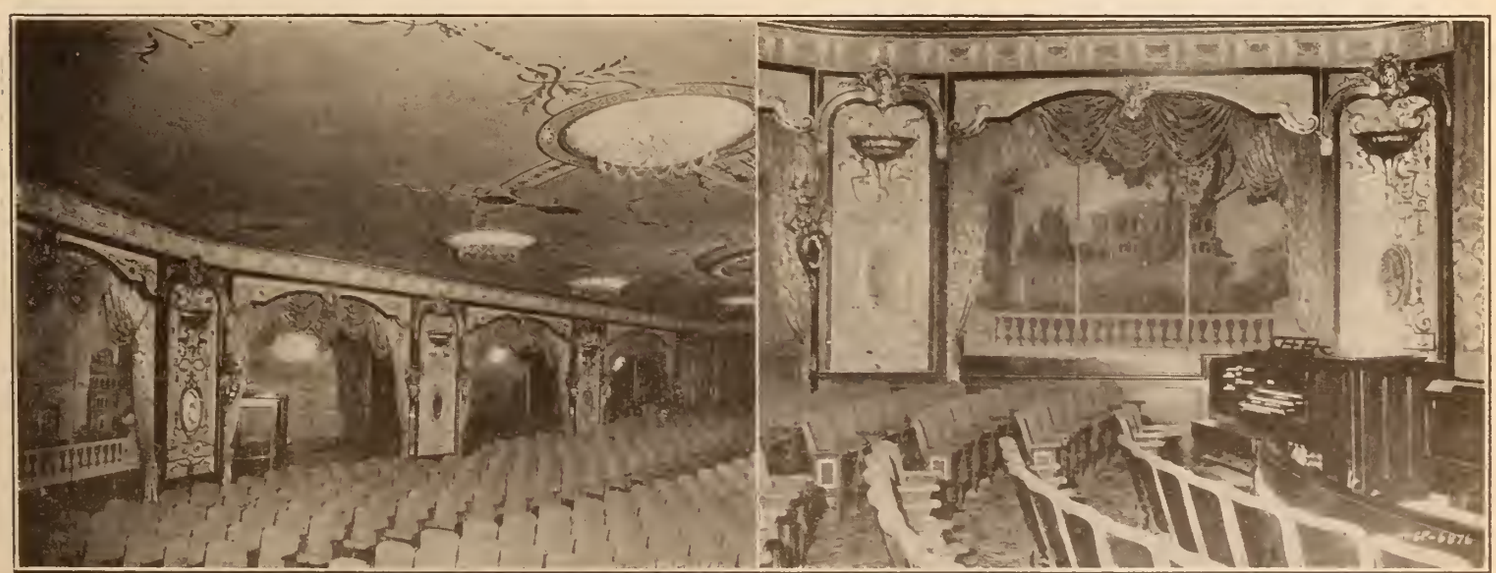
A NEW and altogether delightful development in motion picture theatres has come to the fore with the opening of the new Embassy Theatre, Broadway, New York City. This theatre is a small and intimate playhouse dedicated exclusively to the showing of motion pictures without auxiliary features, other than an accompanying orchestra, and as such is proving an unqualified success. Gloria Gould, well known society girl, has been placed in charge of the theatre by Metro-Goldwyn, who controls it.

The Embassy seats but 600 people, and the entire audience views the screen from one floor, there being no balconies, no mezzanines and no boxes. The auditorium is richly and profusely decorated in French baroque, applied in decorative plaster and gilt carvings enhanced by silk damask hangings of deep carmine. Arcade-like side aisles gives access to both auditorium and stage, and wide and graceful side aisles between elaborately ornamented piers outline the wall decorations. These decorations consist of paintings reproducing Gobelin and are chiefly architectural in subject matter. Two of them flank the proscenium and conceal the organ enclosures, and have been painted by Arthur Crisp.

The color scheme, of gold and carmine, has been tastefully executed and is reflected in the richly ornamented ceiling, which is a large indirectly lighted dome surrounded by illuminated art glass panels. The aisles are wide, and the seats, which are covered with tapestry and have carmine lacquered arms and black lacquer and gold standards and backs, are roomy and comfortable. A proper balance of direct and indirect lighting has contributed effective illumination, added to the decorative ensemble and established a most pleasing atmosphere. The lighting fixtures, which were especially designed for this theatre, are of bronze and cut glass.

The lobby and vestibule have been done in marble, the stone panels being set off with bronze display frames, mirrors and decorative plaster work. A richly carved circassian walnut and marble advertising kiosk takes the usual place of the ticket booth, the ticket office having been placed in the lobby. The men's smoking rooms and ladies' retiring rooms are accessible from the lobby and have canvas covered walls portraying decorative subjects in, respectively, the style of the Francis I and Chinese Chippendale periods. The marquee is distinctive, varying radically in design from the usual canopy. Public telephones are available in the rest rooms off the lobby, and elaborate heating and ventilating systems have been installed, insuring clean, comfortable atmosphere at all times.

Perhaps the most notable feature of the presentation is the excision of all auxiliary program features with the exception of the accompanying orchestra, which in this case delivers the famous Franz Lehar score with brilliant effect. All seats are reserved, and it is planned to continue to play attractions on the long run policy at a two dollar top. The theatre, having entrances on both Broadway and 46th Street, is well located in the very busiest center of New York's theatrical district.



Exhibitors throughout the industry are watching closely the progress of the Embassy. It is prophesied that the theatre will be largely copied in size and in details of management throughout the country.

Construction Starts on New Roxy Theatre

CONSTRUCTION is to start immediately upon the New York Theatre to be built for Samuel (Roxy) Rothafel, according to Walter W. Ahlschlager of Chicago, who is completing plans for the big New York structure. According to the architect the theatre will be the largest, and he believes, the finest in the world. It will have 6,210 seats, consisting of 3,200 on the main floor 910 seats on the loge and 2,100 seats in the balcony.

There will be three high speed passenger elevators to the balcony and separate and private stairways leading from the foyer to the loge. Entrance from Seventh Avenue will be by means of an outer foyer 100 feet wide, 120 feet long and 20 feet high, which will lead to a grand salon 60 feet wide and 100 feet deep and 60 feet long. The project, it is estimated will cost $6,000,000.

The president and managing director will be Samuel (Roxy) Rothafel, until recently managing director of the Capitol Theatre, situated 150 feet away from the entrance to the new house.

Theatre Construction News From Central Section

Theodore Gray, South Eleventh Street, Springfield, Ill., has let a building contract to O'Shea Brothers, 1214 East Jefferson Street, for a one-story, 65 by 115 ft. theatre building on North Grande, between 8th and 9th Streets. It is reported that the house will cost $250,000.

Hagerman & Harshman have the contract for the construction of a new theatre at Sullivan, Ill. The building will be two story, 40 by 70 feet and cost about $30,000. The names of the owners are being withheld for the time being.

J. M. Ensor who operates the Crescent Theatre in Little Rock, Ark., plans to build a new house at 2618 East Sixth Street and has taken bids from contractors. The house will be one story, 60 by 140 feet and cost about $25,000. Wittenberg, Delony & Watts, 408 Southern Trust Building, Little Rock, are the architects.

Plans have been announced for a $250,000 theatre to be erected at Lankershim Boulevard and Weddington Avenue on plot 100 x 210 ft. on Lankershim, California. The theatre will be of latest design and will have a seating capacity of 1500 persons. This site has been leased by the Hollywood Theatres, Inc., from The Weddington Investment Company for a period of ninety-nine years.

New Theatre on Walnut St., Springfield, Mass.

John W. Foster is drawing plans for the erection of a theatre building on Walnut Street near Union Street, Springfield, Mass. The building will have three stores on the street front. The approximate cost is to be $65,000. The owner of the new structure is Hyman Kronick, of Springfield, Mass.

New House to Be Erected in Sullivan, Illinois

Sullivan, Illinois, is to have a new movie theatre to be erected on the east side of the Square. The theatre building will cost in the neighborhood of $30,000. The owner of the new structure will be J. H. Ireland of 608 South Haworth Avenue, Decatur.

APPRAISAL
A PLAY IN FIVE ACTS

ACT ONE

DO not leave the appraisal of the seating equipment and arrangement of your theatre to guesswork or hearsay. It is too important. Get the cold facts for yourself by actual experience and personal observation. With hundreds of other theatre owners and managers throughout the country, make Thursday, October fifteenth, your personal inspection day of the seating of your theatre.

ACT TWO

ACT FIVE

AFTER having made your visit of inspection to your theatre, make careful appraisal of the comfort, beauty, dependable strength and durability of the seating. Does it meet your ideas of comfort and beauty viewed entirely from the point of view of a total stranger visiting your theatre? If in any way deficient, write our Theatre Seating Engineering Department for suggestions and counsel. No obligations involved or implied. It will be a paying investment.

Inquiries and Comments

Proper Screen Borders

THE field immediately surrounding a motion picture screen exereises eonsiderable influence on the appearanee of the projected picture as explained in the preceding article and for this reason

The psyehology of most exhibitors is rather difficult to understand. Some will go to considerable expense in the way of installing first class projeetion room equipment and accessories but will attempt to struggle along with an antiquated screen which bears the accumulations of three years' dust. When the quality of projection is not up to snuff they are at a loss to account for it and will usually blame everything in sight but the thing that is aetually causing the trouble.

Others will eoncentrate their efforts at improvement on the sereen to the negleet of everything else and will ordinarily arrive at the same eonclusions reached by the first class; i.e., that any money spent for projection equipment is just so much good money tossed out the window.

There is a third group, quite small to be sure, but growing, who eonscientiously provide what they honestly believe to be all the neeessary equipment for good sereen results but fall down on the final step—that of providing the proper projection environment.

This is due not so much to unwillingness to meet the necessary requirements but rather to a lack of knowledge as to just what is required in the way of screen surroundings to seeure the desired effect.

Recommendations

The requirements for perfect projection may be summarized as follows:

(1) The illumination of the pieture must be suffieiently brilliant to eliminate the Purkinje effect for normal untinted films.

(2) It will be an advantage if this brilliance is inereased till the eye is at its maximum sensitiveness for contrast and change of tone, i.e., at the steepest part of its gamma curve (see Fig. 1. preceding artieles).

(4) This should be in sueh a way that the general light does not reach the screen itself. When un-illuminated by the projector the sereen should appear darker than the walls or baekground.

(5) The contrast illumination of the background should be of such an order that the highest lights of the picture have at least ten times its intrinsic brilliancy and the shadows less than one-third. An actual black will be obtained in the shadows of normal pictures and the true illusion of night in the dark-blue scenes will be preserved. The border will provide a standard light for scaling tone values and determine the iris aperture of the eye. (The scheme of theatre lighting developed and recommended by the research laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Co., seems to bear this out.)

The question now remains, how are these points to be achieved in practice? The problem is divided naturally into two parts —the improvement of existing theatres and the design of new ones.

How to Do It

In Fig. 3 is shown a sketeh of the interior of a typical small theatre, looking toward the screen, with the faults of illumination emphasized. The screen is set in a ground aetually or virtually black—that is to say, maintained at an illumination much less than the darkest part of the pieture. The walls being darker in body color than the screen, and the side lamps exposed in every direetion, the screen reeeives more seattered light than any part of the house. The rows of lamps down the sides do not provide peripheral illumination of the right kind to influenee the iris aperture. During projeetion the center of interest wanders from point to point on the screen and is followed by movements of the eye to bring the center on to the yellow spot and favea (for sharp vision). The outer part of the yellow spot is therefore sometimes focussed on the black surrounding border and sometimes on the bright pieture. The images of the side lamps wander similarly on the peripheral region. This induces alternate contrast of the worst kind and leads to eyestrain and faulty appreeiation (of the picture.)

The first thing to be done is to shield the lamps with large diffusers towards the audience and with opaque masks, towards the screen. Then any dark curtains or background should be removed from the latter and a uniformly distempered border substituted. This could be illuminated in various ways, of which two will be indicated. If the screen could be brought forward a little, lamps could be placed behind and supplied with current through resistances to provide exactly appropriate lighting. Or a suitable stereoptican lantern might be housed in the projection room ("Projector box" was the author's phrasing) and, with a transparent slide having a central opaque rectangle (of exact aperture proportions), throw an annular (hollow) beam of light on the border and background.

Improvements

Apart from the improved tone values such an arrangement would give, it would remove the effect, so noticeable at present, of the pieture being suspended without human aid in space. It would give the much truer illusion of gazing through a window on a seene taking plaee outside. (This explains the effects obtained in the United States by Mr. Martin with his illuminated border whieh, incidentally, the inventor himself seemed unable to satisfactorily explain.

The effect might be developed by giving the background some form associated with walls and windows—not colonnades or elaborate framing which, guessed at in the semi-darkness, would only distract the eye, but a symmetrical paneling or graining. The presence of a regular pattern, as illustrated in Fig. 4, would emphasize the structural purity of the picture and minimize its granularity.

It will be recalled that the editor of this department has consistently recommended a scheme of picture border similar in general effects to that described by Dr. Hickman—that is, placing a jet black narrow border (about 4 to 6 inches wide depending on picture size) around the picture area and then using a large surrounding border of gray material (such as velvet) to prevent eyestrain and bring forth the tonal values of the picture at the same time giving the illusion of perspective.

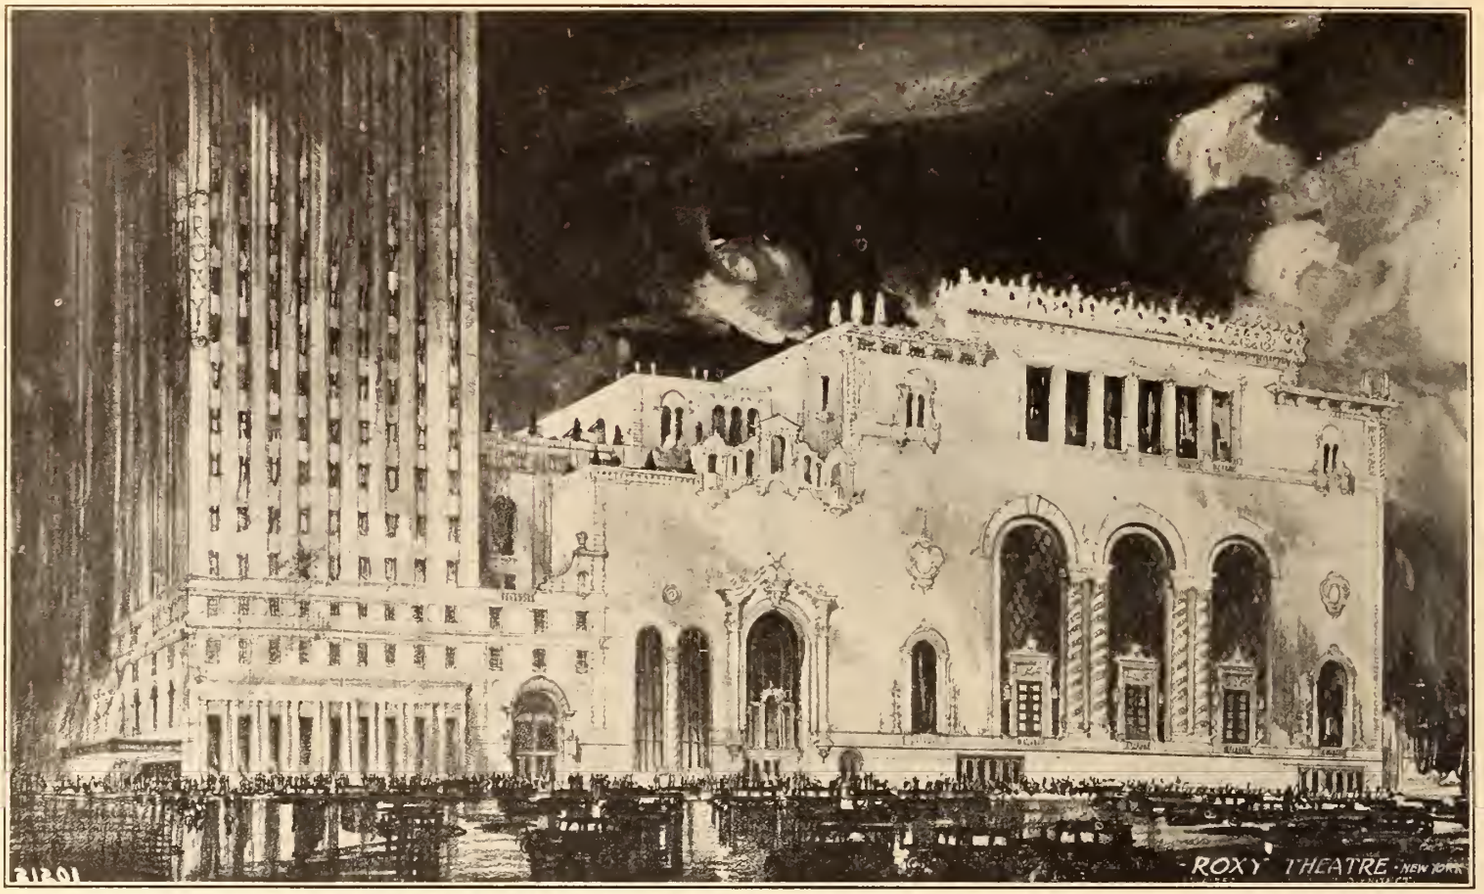
MODERN THEATRE SEATING

Beauty and Value

THERE are two very sound reasons for the amazing growth of popularity which Steel Furniture Company seating is now enjoying.

First, is outstanding beauty of design. In fine color harmonies, skillfully balanced proportions, and luxurious upholsteries, Steel Theatre Chairs are masterpieces of their kind.



Second, is the equally important fact that this better seating is offered at prices which indicate truly remarkable value.

If you are contemplating seating for a new theatre or new seating for an old one, you owe it to yourself to investigate the Steel line. The complete catalog and the services of experienced seating engineers are yours for the asking.

Lighting Effects Needed for Theatre Lobby Display Frames

By Wm. F. Libman, Libman-Spanjer Corp.

PICTORIAL art, and its proper illumination are two subjects that are indeed closely allied. To understand how important it is that a framed subject shall have its varied values enhanced, by proper lighting, it is only necessary to recall the fact that in the exhibition of paintings, the question of lights, shadows, and illumination have every influence in regard to the hanging and location of the painting.

And so it is with lobby frames. After all, the pictorial matter that is placed within the frame, comprises a framed picture that is hung in the lobby to attract and to interest.

If this framed picture is poorly illuminated, or if it is but faintly discernible, rest assured that its appeal is negatived 50 per cent or over. It is difficult for the public to become interested in any thing that is hard to decipher or that is not clearly defined.

To bring out the value of proper lobby illumination we can again best illustrate by reverting to the store window simile. Just imagine the strides that have been taken in the lighting of store windows. From the period when merchants with the advancement of superior police protection began dispensing with the heavy shutters and blinds that were used to cover their entire windows at night, up to the present day of brilliantly lighted store fronts that are visible for blocks, the matter of utilizing window space for night displays of merchandise, has demanded the attention of experts, an attention that has reached not only into the offices of the greatest advertising geniuses but into the laboratories of the largest lighting organizations as well.

As a result we have witnessed the development of an entire new science which has produeed out-door flood lighting, X ray window lights, special window border lights, etc., all of them taking up the duties of old Sol himself after that worthy heat and light produeer has disappeared in the west for the day. This art of proper lighting, and of appealing to the human eye and mind through light is praetically at its beginning.

To fully realize what dramatic and compelling values light gives to commonplace things, just stand some evening at the Times Building, New York City, looking toward the Columbus Circle district, at a time nearest dusk. The crowds, buildings, streets, differ but little from the other eities.

But all of a sudden, one by one the theatre, window front, and roof sign and flashers are turned on, and what a transformation. That whieh a few minutes ago was a scene that could be duplicated in almost any large eity, is now the only and incomparable Broadway. It was light that caused this transformation. That and nothing more. And so it is with the lighting of the lobby. There isn't a theatre lobby anywhere that shouldn't look infinitely better at night than it does in the daytime. Gilded frames with their high spots of burnished gold, mirrors with their candelabras or bracket lamps, and crystals, are all of them designed and calculated to individually send out their appeal with the aid of proper illumination.

This element in lobby attractiveness is but another phase of the lobby business where the recognized expert is best fitted to advise and consult.

For instance, he knows that in certain cases, a border of lights around the edge of a frame will light up only an area representing a certain distance from the edge of the frame, leaving the centre of the frame or case too dim for satisfaetory results. In this case, front lighting, or the mounting of fixtures that will spread their illumination aeross the entire face of the frame or case is needed.

To get a better idea of what the writer has in mind, just pause some time in front of a brilliantly illuminated billboard, and notice the manner in which it is lighted; note too the absolute lack of dark corners, or dim effeets in the field of illumination.

For the lighting of transparencies, the border and strip lamps are perfeetly in order. The transparency when artistically mounted, and if the subject is a well executed one, is about the most attractive means of lobby advertising. First of all, being a bright spot in itself, it catches the eye at once. Then the rear lighting, if arranged properly, gives added color, tints, and values to the painting or poster, which enhanced by a pretty frame, forms an almost irresistible combination.

Through the proper lighting of mirrors we have another wonderful and valuable night attraction for the lobby. As has been pointed out in previous articles, the lobby mirror is a feminine requisite as well as an ornamental medium, but when properly illuminated, through means of strategically located lamps and candles, several mirrors can transform a modest entrance into a spacious, commodious, magnifieent lobby, all through the means of reflection and illusion, superinduced by mirror lighting.

"Seven Days"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Colony, N. Y.

American: "It is a rattling good comedy. The titles are almost as full of laughs as the action. Some one with a fine sense of comedy wrote them."

World: "At the Colony there is much to laugh at, as the picture stands, and Mr. Hale, always a free and easy light comedian, is worth anybody's trip there to see him no matter how far in the suburbs you may live. He and the person who thonght up snappy sayings with which to hang together the episodes have made the film worthy of Broadway showing."

Herald-Tribune: "'Seven Days' is the feature at the Colony this week and, having been the rounds, it looks to us like the most amazing picture on Broadway. Al Christie has gathered together a most effective cast for this comedy. Lillian Rich is one of the handsomest and most subtly amusing young stars on the screen."

Mirror: "This is an uproariously funny farce. Director Scott Sidney has packed the picture with hilarious situations, comically interpreted by the players who seem to have enterd into the spirit of the yarn with infectious vengeance. Lillian Rich does surprisingly good work as the heroine. Eddie Gribbon is a yell as the burglar while Mabel Julienne Scott, as the spiritualistic novice, is simply corking. Even the subtitles, of which there are comparatively few, contribute to the fun."

Daily News: "'Seven Days' is the happiest choice for the moviegoing on Broadway this week. The audience laughed and chuckled and chuckled and laughed. Spanking good entertainment. If you don't laugh you're just pretending."

"Seven Days"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Forum, L. A.

Herald: "Laughing incessantly until their sides ached, the first night audiences accorded a riotous welcome to 'Seven Days' at the Forum. Lillian Rich takes full advantage of opportunity displaying her skill as comedienne and laugh follows laugh every moment from the time she is first flashed on the screen until the end of the picture. Recent comedies have been notoriously lacking in plot, but here is a picture which not only has a main plot that is bound to be humorous, but also subplots galore."

Examiner: "'Seven Days' at the Forum keeps audiences shrieking with laughter. Laughs? Thousands of them! 'Seven Days' is the last word in merriment. The audiences roared, chuckled and shrieked all day yesterday at the Forum."

Times: "'Seven Days' proves a hilarious joy fest."

"The Mystic"—M.-G.-M., Capitol, N. Y.

American: "I should say 'The Mystic' is rattling good entertainment. Who doesn't like to see the tricks of a successful medium revealed in a way that makes one chuckle at one's stupidity? The gypsy costume and free and easy manners suit Aileen Pringle, who makes Zara, the gypsy medium, a person of distinction and interest. The psychic powers of Zara are laid bare in a screen drama that is unusual enough to insure the Capitol Theatre a very profitable week."

Times: "Tod Browning has another original and stirring production at the Capitol this week. Conway Tearle and Aileen Pringle are excellent in their particular roles.

Sun: "Mr. Browning reveals himself once more as possessed of an unusual aptitude for casting a weird, tense atmosphere around a given melodramatic plot. The shadowy composition of scenes is excellent. I should say that 'The Mystic' is worth seeing."

Telegram: "If the true test of any form of entertainment is its capacity for holding interest, then 'The Mystic' is good entertainment, for you never weary of it during the hour it is on. So artfully has Browning worked that the Capitol audience yesterday was tense and amused during the seances in the film."

Mirror: "'The Mystic' is an enthralling crook drama with a refreshing new touch. Aileen Pringle puts fire and zip into her role, and Mitchell Lewis is simply priceless. The story gallops in the wake of Jimmie Burton, clever crook, who utilizes the mediumistic gniles of a Hungarian gypsy and her two assistants, polishing them off into entertaining rogues."

Evening World: "'The Mystic' is bound to prove very popular, if only for its revelations of fraudulent tricks employed at spiritist seances and for the ingnious manner in which these revelations are screened. Aileen Pringle does one of the best characterizations of her career as Zara, the gypsy medium."

Graphic: "'The Mystic' is an engaging film, The story is by Tod Browning, whose production 'The Unholy Three' stamped him as a master director. In 'The Mystic' Browning has done an equally splendid piece of directing. It is a very good story and extremely well told. There are no cumbersome side issues, no long waits, nor over-sustained situations. The story moves forward rapidly, concisely and logically from the opening scenes to the finish."

"Pony Express"—Paramount Imperial, S. F.

Chronicle: "'The Pony Express' has swing, sweep, thrill. There is romance, suspense, strength, beauty, in its tale of the brave men who rode the pony express. The picture thrilled an elite and critical crowd and aroused it to applause throughout the length of the film. 'The Pony Express' is a worthy successor to 'The Covered Wagon.'"

Herald: "It is a lesson in visualized history. Wallace Berry's masterly performance will linger in memory. Several of his scenes are as fine acting as the motion picture camera has recorded."

Examiner: "There has perhaps never been such a moving picture audience as that which crowded the Imperial theatre last night for the premiere of 'The Pony Express.' Gowns and jewels created a replica of the Diamond Horseshoe. A roll call might have been made from the Blue Book and Social Register. Last night's affair at the Imperial will live in the annals of the city's theatrical history as one of brilliance and impressiveness. 'The Pony Express' is more exciting than 'The Covered Wagon.'"

Call: "While Betty Compson, Ricardo Cortez and Ernest Torrence were convincing and picturesque, the picture was stolen by Wallace Beery in the role of Rhode Island Red, a happy-go-lucky tramp, the greatest work of his versatile career. 'The Pony Express' is a truly effective picture—a truly constructive picture—one that must not be missed."

Bulletin: "Brilliant in every particular, spectacular in its introduction and finished throughout, the opening of 'The Pony Express' last night at the Imperial was in every sense of the word a real motion picture premiere. It would have been difficult to have selected a more fitting subject for the Diamond Jubilee week commemorating California's seventy-fifth birthday of her admission to the Union."

News: "Possibly 'The Pony Express' is not as great a picture panoramically as 'The Covered Wagon,' yet it is a greater picture in plot, more thrilling, a great picture historically, with true epic sweep against which is set a moving, thrilling, humorous and emotional story. If memory serves right, this is the first time a director who has made an enormous success such as 'The Covered Wagon' has ever repeated with as big a pictnre. James Cruze is to be congratulated. He has done it again."

"Iron Horse"—Fox, St. Francis, San Francisco.

Call-Post: "Whatever else you do, don't miss 'The Iron Horse.' We ask it for your own sakes. A truly glorious motion picture dramatically, photographically, romantically, historically — came to the St. Francis Theatre last Saturday; and, if salvos of applause at its conclusion are any criterion, it should still be here when the Christmas holidays roll around."

Examiner: "'The Iron Horse' is a salutary and highly educational picture. A schoolboy who witnesses it may be given a month's vacation, for he has acquired more history than he can usually cram into his head in two months of dull reading. Lest this frighten anybody who hankers for entertainment and hates to be beamed by a textbook in the process, let us qualify the verdict by saying it is as full of action and humor as 'The Covered Wagon.'"

Bulletin: "History and fiction are combined in 'The Iron Horse,' the truly remarkable picture this week at the St. Francis. When it is all said and done, however, it is the historical portion of the picture which furnishes the thrills and the fact that the director, John Ford, followed the true story of the great railroad building epoch of the West makes the film far more interesting than if the seenario had been purely fiction."

Chronicle: "John Ford has created something memorable in 'The Iron Horse,' which is being shown at the St. Francis Theatre: a great picture, one in which the glow of beanty and the glamor of romance cover a tale of vast labor with glory."

"Limited Mail"—Warners, State-Lake, Chicago

American: "Monte Blue, of course, can act. He is wholesouled and natural. Bless him, he makes the whole show wholesouled."

Post: "If you crave aetion on the sereen 'The Limited Mail' was made expressly for you. Don't fail to see it. From the pictorial standpoint, too, it ranks high. Also, the picture has a heart interest story, with Monte Blue, Vera Reynolds, Tom Gallery and little Jackie Huff as the principals. The humor is supplied by Willard Louis. The train episodes, most of them taken in the Royal Gorge of Colorado, are gorgeous. 'The Limited Mail' will amply satisfy those who want to be thrilled."

"The Love Gamble"—Henry Ginsberg, Garden, Milwaukee.

Sentinel: "It is a pleasure once in a while to turn from a picture of the wide open spaces to the more limited confines of a shabby studio on Beacon Hill, the Bohemian Quarter of Boston. A man may be a man, or a woman may be a heroine, riding a hobby instead of a broncho. It also seems to indicate that one may shoot at a high ideal to greater purpose than at a fellow man in chaps and sombrero. Mr. Frazer and Miss Rich do exceptionally fine work and have the support of a clever cast in which James Marcus, Pauline Garon and Arthur Rankin lend admirable support. Robert Frazer has just the right blase manner."

Newspaper Opinions on New Features

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Opera House, Easton, Pa.

Press: "'Drusilla With A Million' at the Opera House this week should play to crowded houses. It is a masterpiece of motion picture art and the biggest thing since 'Over The Hill' which it equals in pathos and heart interest. Mary Carr, who played the mother in 'Over The Hill' plays Drusilla with the delicious mother appeal that she knows how to invoke. It is remarkable how Miss Carr can portray age so realistically. Equally as noteworthy in the play is Priscilla Bonner's portrayal of Sally May, the orphanage waif. The story makes a picture that everyone will want to see."

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Colonial, Indianapolis

Times: "One of the nation's best photoplays—that's 'Drusilla With A Million.' When the history of the American movie industry is written I am sure that 'Drusilla' will be included in the list of the very best pictures ever made. Because of its simplicity, its charm, the human acting of Mary Carr, Priscilla Bonner, Kenneth Harlan and the greatest lot of babies ever assembled in a movie studio, 'Drusilla With A Million' will be a picture to be remembered."

"Sally of the Sawdust"—United Artists, Rialto, L. A.

News: "'Sally of the Sawdust' is a great picture. The picture brings deep-seated guffaws with its comedy, and counts ten with its dramatic moments."

Times: "One glorious circus picture—'Sally of the Sawdust.' The Lord only knows when it will end its run here. It makes them laugh, it makes them cry, it makes them thrill."

Express: "As to entertainment in abundance, there cannot be a doubt."

"The Unholy Three"—M.-G.-M., State, New Bedford

Mercury: "It is a picture which, as shown at the State yesterday was the most engrossingly fascinating offering this far in a season that has started out brilliantly. Mr. Chaney's portrayal was another triumph in virile characterization for that gifted actor. His portrayal was no less effective than that of the clown in 'He Who Gets Slapped.' Harry Earle's impersonation of Tweedledee was masterly, the midget's clever assumption of a baby role and his callous willingness to engage in any crime being delineated with a skill that contributed largely to the spooky tenseness of the dramatic situations."

Standard: "The photoplay 'The Unholly Three' being shown this week at the State Theatre is a crook melodrama of great power and refreshing originality. You may say that its excellence is due to the fine discrimination of its director, Tod Browning; to brilliant character acting by Lon Chaney and six more; or to the strange and unusual story of criminals, true to life; but the truth is, this picture is like Kipling's 'ship that found itself' during its first voyage,—it is one imaginative whole, commanding an imaginative response from its audience. We thought 'The Unholy Three' splendid entertainment."

Times: "A mystery picture that is off the beaten path and as thrilling as any melodrama has arrived. It's 'The Unholy Three,' the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture which played to packed houses Sunday at its premiere showing at the State. Director Tod Browning has contributed his greatest work to the screen in this singular tale of the villainous careers of three undisciplined freaks thrown together in a dime museum."

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Million Dollar, L. A.

Times: "'The Freshman' is one of Lloyd's top-notch triumphs. It is great, taken all in all, vastly amusing; refreshing and pepful to a high degree, with a touch of romance that makes the enjoyment of the audience seem ever to have extra zest. It is all mechanically perfect, with spontaneity, too, and proves Harold and his entire staff capable of amazing invention."

Express: "It was a field day for Momus. The god of ridicule must have scored his highest record in throwing humans into laughter spasms when Harold Lloyd's comedy 'The Freshman,' received at the Million Dollar Theatre its first showing. If it has ever been exceeded, it is not within the ken of anyone present. It sets a new mark for his powers for effective drama, for realism and for threading his attack on the risibles with sympathetic appeal. In the course of the story there are innumerable episodes that rouse the audience not merely to amusement but to 'belly laughter' spontaneous and uncontrolled."

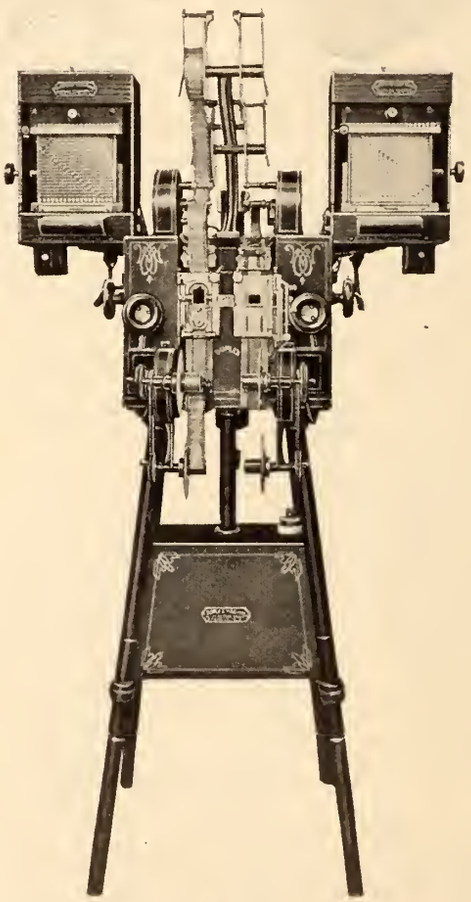
Record: "If there has ever been a doubt in your mind whether Harold Lloyd is our foremost screen comedian, then 'The Freshman' will certainly remove all doubts. Lloyd has given us many enjoyable hours through his past efforts at comedy, but it can be truthfully stated that this has them all beaten. Never have I ever witnesed such a storm of approval for any film as that yesterday afternoon during the first performance."

Herald: "You'll laugh. You'll feel a little catch at the throat. You'll go away saying that it is one of the most wholesome screen comedies you have ever seen. That is, if you are just an ordinary American with a good old-fashioned Yankee sense of humor. That's the prediction of this reviewer after seeing Harold Lloyd's newest mirth-provoker, 'The Freshman' at the Million Dollar Theatre yesterday. The picture has everything, dramatically speaking."

News: "Howdy, Mister Lloyd! Heretofore I have always called you Harold. With utmost respect, it is true, but never with that particular brand to which your work in 'The Freshman' entitles you. Hence, the mister substitution. Your comedies have been bigger and better from the beginning. But 'The Frshman' leaves me speechless."

Examiner: "Fun gushes forth with the unfailing prodigality of a geyser in Harold Lloyd's new comedy, 'The Freshman.' This popular comedian finds an inexhaustible source of lively humor on the college campus. He has his audiences at the Million Dollar Theatre rocking in their seats at the vicissitudes of the young collegian he impersonates. Further than that, he has them cheering him to victory in the football scenes. Some achievement in the annals of the silent drama! Not since 'Grandma's Boy' has Lloyd had the opportunity to temper his clowning with pathos."

"His Buddy's Wife"—Associated Ex., Loew's, New York, N. Y.



Graphic: "'His Buddy's Wife,' starring Glenn Hunter, is being featured at the Loew Theatres, and we want to say that the patrons of the outlying movie houses have a great treat in store for them. The picture is a Tom Terris production and is as fine a bit of artistry as we've seen anywhere anytime. Glenn Hunter scores a hit as the hero, doing some of the best work we've ever seen him do—but then, Mr. Hunter never fails to register the ability he displays in this film. Edna Murphy is sweet, pretty, and altogether charming."

NEW YORK — ALBANY

Chosen for one of New York's "Smartest" Theatres

UNDER the personal management of Gloria Gould, the Embassy Theatre draws its patronage from the elite of New York City.

Quality is the key note of this exclusive theatre. In selecting the furnishings Miss Gould chose for class, distinction — superiority.

The matter of selecting projection equipment was placed in the hands of experts. For, as the management expressed it, what could be more essential in this theatre than perfect picture presentation?

* * * * * * *

Naturally Simplex projectors were unanimously chosen.

You have a critical audience to please, and they too will appreciate good projection. Why not follow the example of the best theatres? Install Simplex projectors and assure your audience perfect pictures. Simplex projectors cost no more and they pay bigger profits in the long run. chosen "THE AMERICAN VENUS" and will play the title role in the Paramount Picture of that name!

TWENTY-FOUR hours before Miss Fay Lanphier ("Miss California") was chosen "Miss America" by the fifteen distinguished judges at the Atlantic City Beauty Contest, she had been picked to play the title role in Paramount's beauty classic, "The American Venus." Not only was Miss Lanphier selected as the most beautiful of all the 64 prize-winning beauties, but she was also the girl who screened most perfectly and who most nearly met the measurements of the original Venus.

The tie-up between Paramount's "The American Venus," "Miss America," and the Atlantic City Beauty Contest is thus complete. Exhibitors playing the picture (released in December) will cash in on the world-wide publicity this great Contest brought forth.

In addition to the sensational publicity "The American Venus" has already received, Paramount has a money-making plan for you to help your local showings of the picture by running local beauty contests. Paramount stands ready to donate prizes for these. Ask your exchange about the "American Venus" statuettes.

"The American Venus" is a fast-moving comedy romance with a great cast, in addition to "Miss America" and the bathing girls. Many of the scenes, in Technicolor, were made upon the Atlantic City boardwalk and include actual shots of the Beauty Carnival.

sensational FOX successes!

JOHN FORD—mention his name and you think of "The Iron Horse," one of the greatest pictures of all time. He has also produced "Lightnin'" and "Thank You"—John Golden plays—"Kentucky Pride" and "The Fighting Heart."

REGINALD BARKER, master director of outdoor pictures, has produced a screen triumph for Fox, based on James Oliver Curwood's "When the Door Opened." Now he's preparing to film "The Johnstown Flood," a dynamic American epic.

JOHN GRIFFITH WRAY has made A. E. W. Mason's novel, "The Winding Stair," into a photoplay that breathes the romance of Morocco and the dash of the French Foreign Legion. It strengthens Wray's well earned reputation for producing artistic box office successes.

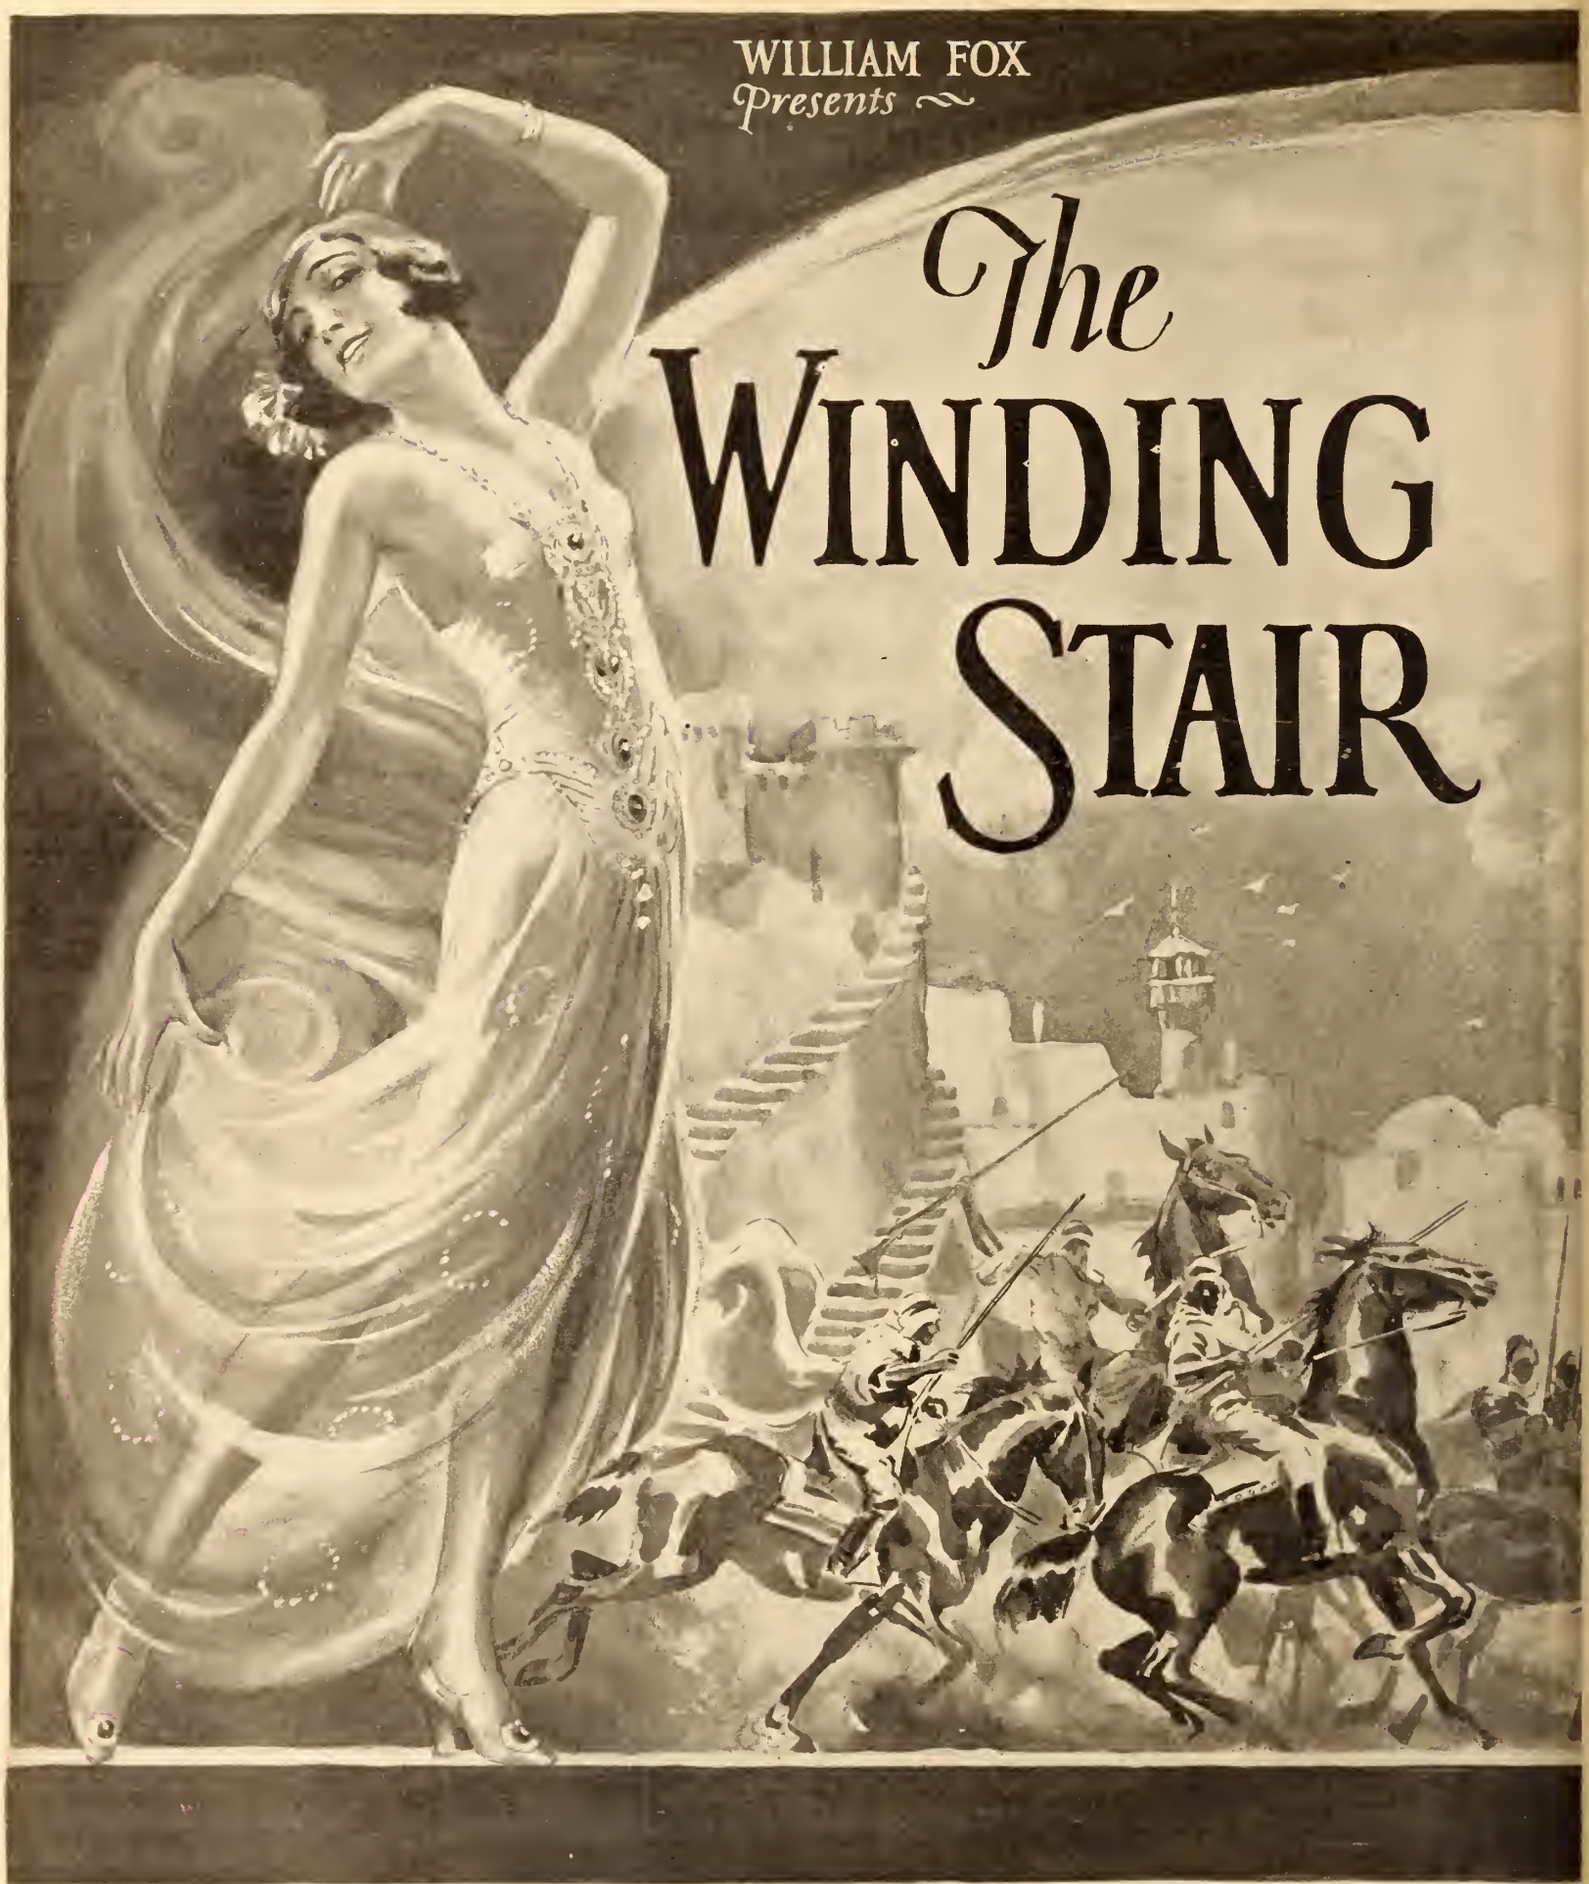
J. G. BLYSTONE has added to the pleasure of millions of Tom Mix fans with "The Lucky Horseshoe," which followed the Blystone-Mix production, "Dick Turpin." Now they are filming a popular Max Brand novel, "The Best Bad Man."

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER has made "Thunder Mountain," based on "Howdy Folks," a real drama of love in the hills of hate. "The Wheel" has all the punch of the stage play. Both are Golden successes, with proved audience appeal.

FRANK BORZAGE has done some of the best work of his distinguished career in filming "Lazybones," Owen Davis' gripping stage drama. Borzage will also direct "Wages for Wives" and "The First Year," John Golden plays. All three have proved their box office pull.

ROWLAND V. LEE has made "Havoc" into a powerful film. In "As No Man Has Loved" he has caught the adventure and romance of Hale's story, "The Man Without a Country." He packed all the thrills of Conrad's "Nostromo" into "The Silver Treasure," a colorful South American romance.

HARRY MILLARDE has made the screen version of Channing Pollock's play, "The Fool," with the same intelligent sympathy that he put into world-renowned "Over the Hill," one of the greatest money-makers the screen has known.



EMMETT FLYNN'S name recalls "The Connecticut Yankee." Now he's made another masterpiece, "East Lynne." It's better than the original melodrama, which has always drawn patronage for three generations. The picture will pack them in.

HENRY OTTO is celebrated for his skill in bringing fantasy to the screen. In "The Ancient Mariner" he gives his imagination free play, and it promises to beat his former greatest achievements.

How Can We Im Metro-Gold

1. LOBBY CARDS: Do you use them?

Can you suggest improvements in their make-up?

2. POSTERS: What paper do you buy for a normal showing?

Do you use block as well as pictorial 24-sheets?

3. ADVERTISING: What space do you use for an average showing?

Indicate whether the following list of advertising material is sufficient for your average newspaper requirements: Three 1-col ads. Two 2-col. ads. Two 3-col. ads. One 4-col. ad. One 6-col. ad. Five character line drawings. Assortment of 1-2-3 and 4-col. advertising slugs. Can you suggest any additions to this choice of advertising material?

4. LINE CUTS and HALF-TONES: Which type of advertisement do you prefer?

Many exhibitors declare that half-tone reproduction is unsatisfactory. Are advertisements in line safest for your general needs?

5. MATS and CUTS: Which do you use in advertising?

Do you find your present cut service satisfactory in the exchanges or does it appear that there is not a sufficient supply of cuts available?

6. SLIDES: Do you use them? Have you any suggestions to make regarding improvement in their selling value?

Do you believe that slides should carry brief copy in addition to announcing the production?

7. HERALDS: Do you use them?

What suggestions can you offer for making them more effective?

8. ROTOGRAVURE SUPPLEMENTS: Have you ever planted a Roto Supplement with your Sunday newspaper?

Do you believe that their selling value is worth their expense?

Do you advocate them on Special Productions only?

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER is making the outstanding box-office hits today. Pictures like "The Unholy Three," "Pretty Ladies," "A Slave of Fashion," "Sun up," "Never the Twain Shall Meet" deserve the most effective promotion that it is possible to offer to exhibitors.

Believing that the only intelligent cooperation is the one arrived at by getting the opinion of the exhibitor who is in direct contact with the public, offers these questions:

9. SERIALIZATION OF PICTURE STORIES: Do you find that serials running in local newspapers help build interest in attractions?

Is your local newspaper interested?

10. RHYMED REVIEWS: Do you think a Rhymed Review on each picture would be a welcome addition to your press and advertising service?

Would you use a Rhymed Review on a panel in your lobby?

11. PRODUCTION CUTS: Do you get production cuts of the right kind for your press work?

Can you make any suggestions that might be of help to you in bettering this service?

12. PRESS MATERIAL: Are you getting publicity and feature stories of the kind your editor requires?

Have you any ideas for improving this service?

13. ACCESSORIES: Which is your most valuable accessory?

Have you found a need for any additional advertising aid which is not furnished by your exchange?

14. STILLS: Do you find the production stills furnished are satisfactory for your needs?

For newspaper reproduction? For use in lobby frames? Do you favor including straight portraits of all prominent players in the cast?

15. PICTURE REVIEWS SERVICE: We have recently instituted the new Picture Reviews Service, the first time this has been done. What do you think of it?

16. CAMPAIGN BOOKS: What could we have added to thecampaign book on for example "The Unholy Three" (you can get a copy from your exchange) that you would need?

WHEN you fill out this questionnaire you are helping us to help you. Fill in these answers and mail to: Service Editor, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, 1540 Broadway, New York City. Your opinion will be appreciated and every effort made to follow your helpful suggestion.

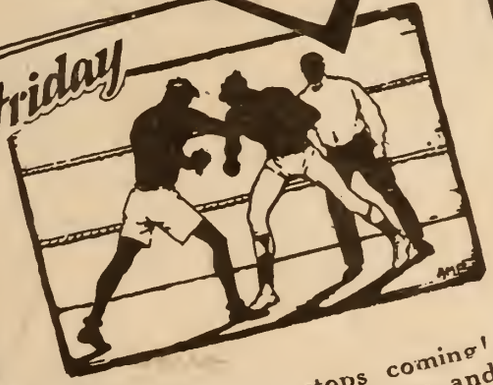
DIARY

Tuesday

What a battle! I found Nora and her kidnappers in a dark cellar where she was being held for ransom. How I lit into those scoundrels! They'll need an ambulance to carry them away. I grabbed Nora and jumped into my racer and what a chase they gave me!

DIARY



Wednesday

Just because I've fallen in love with Nora, they've kidnapped her, to keep my attention from the Derby race. I'd rather lose all my money than this new happiness in loving Nora. I've got to find her! If they injure so much as her little finger I'll have their heads!

DIARY

Friday

Trouble never stops coming! My fighter backed down and I had to take his place in the ring, to cover my big bet. And I'm there when it comes to a fight! What I did to that fellow is a shame. He looks like a moth-eaten turnip now. And I've got 10,000 pounds in my pocket.

Thursday

Olive should be more sensible. I'm in love with Nora, and that's that. I'm thru with Olive. What a howl she raised backstage tonight. Being wealthy and eligible has its drawbacks when a woman decides a man can't stop loving her. She's going to stir a lot of trouble.

C

To the Editor of Greater Amusements:

Seeing so much about Universal's complete service plan, or contract, I may say that I have booked this service and believe it is the only sane thing that the small town exhibitor can do. I had to discontinue my mid-week shows until Universal's salesman came along with the complete service proposition, and I took him up with the idea that there was another hitch somewhere that would cost me as much in the long run as the old system of contracts.

However, I am pleased to say that I find that I can run my mid-week shows, change shows on Sunday, and besides realize a small profit on Wednesday. I double my patronage Saturday and Sunday and the program for the week sets me back just a trifle less than when I ran three nights per week, with two programs. Universal comedies fill a long felt want, and their features never fail to please. I am strong for the complete service plan, and if other producers would open their eyes and hearts to the needs of the small town showman as Universal has, there would be less weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth.—

The number of readers of The Saturday Evening Post is conservatively estimated at 10,000,000.

Here is your patronage guaranteed in advance!

Arthur Stringer is a writer whose stories are eagerly looked for by readers of the popular publications. They are vivid, realistic, colorful and human. He knows the highways and the byways of metropolitan life. He knows Fifth Avenue — its splendor and its sophistry — its sophistication and its shams — and he has put his first-hand knowledge into a story that is thrilling millions of readers today.

Filmed on the actual scenes, the local color and sense of reality of New York's most famous thoroughfare are visualized as they have never been before on the screen.

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY. OCTOBER 3, 1925 NO. 14

"Getting Away With Murder"

THE motion picture business is taken severely to task in a bulletin recently issued by a newspaper trade publication. It seems that during the Greater Movie Season week the press agents in one of the key cities not only "grabbed" a lot of valuable newspaper space, but so loudly acclaimed the fact that the noise echoed through the business offices of most every prominent newspaper in the country; and then back to New York City, whence a special notice was issued warning all newspapers against marauders from the ranks of the movies and a further repetition of such "grabs."

Obviously, if you "get away with murder" it doesn't pay to shout it from the housetops. The successful second story operator is a very mum individual. So, at least, our press agents can sign the pledge to stop bragging. We assume, of course, that the publicity interests of the pictures and the theatres of the land are greater than the interests of the press agents themselves. The man who gets away with newspaper murder also murders himself, his firm and his industry.

Everybody knows or should know that the clever and successful press agent is the man who convinces the newspapers that he is working for them, not against them. He has their continuing confidence; certainly he doesn't let them think he is rifling their safes. Their respect for him is his one great asset.

But the larger question is this: does free space really pay? And this: hasn't the industry grown too high in stature to rely upon publicity donations?

On the one hand it may be said that we are dealing in a commodity of vast public interest. People want photoplay news, and so the newspapers want to give it to them. And so the newspapers want to receive it. There's a large and important field of work here for the press representatives of the theatres, producers and distributors. This isn't space grabbing; it is space feeding.

But at its best it doesn't merchandise pictures; this can only be done by straight advertising. That's true of pictures and any other commodity; it is so true that it is beyond any argument. And it is proved year in and out by the profitable expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars.

This industry has acquired its merchandising stature. Today, with any picture the advertising money to be spent upon it ranks—or should rank—right along with the important costs of production, prints and distribution. Any individual or firm unable or unwilling to enter into adequate advertising is handicapped as severely as by inadequate facilities for production, distribution and sales.

The fallacy long prevailed in the amusement business that only free space counted, that the advertisement itself was a perfunctory matter, and necessary only to get a reader. Which is one good and solid reason why the legitimate stage business is just where it is today.

I don't know of any business today where the advertising man and the publicity man—men of ideas, writing ability, sales and newspaper experience—are more important than in this. But, by the same token, I don't believe that any theatre or producer or distributor can get by, today, by grabbing space for which someone else pays.

Judy King, clever comedienne in Fox Imperial comedies, displays her ability to perform the Charleston, now all the rage on the West Coast.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

A GENUINE FALL

LEON ERROL, famous stage comedian, cast in the leading role with Dorothy Gish for First National's—"Clothes Make the Pirate," is noted for his ability to take funny falls, which apparently would dislocate the limbs of any ordinary man. But Mr. Errol's ankles, or at least one of them, so often designedly twisted by the agile owner, got an unexpected twist while filming scenes for the comedy, and he flopped in dead earnest, tearing a ligament. The only consolation the comedian found in the incident was that he was able to save himself from a twenty-foot plunge down on a pile of rocks. In his current stage hit, Louie the 14th, Errol earns the designation because a millionaire picks him as a guest to avert the bad omen of having only thirteen persons at a banquet. His good luck persisted on before the footlights, but certain of his superstitious friends are now advising him to carry a rabbit's foot while performing for the camera.

An interesting character study of a sterling actor, Frank Currier, as he appears in 'Lights of Old Broadway" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), soon to be released.

A lovely figure among the newcomers on the Christie lot is Jean Lorraine, leading lady in comedies for current release on the Educational program.

FILM REPRESENTATIVE IN RADIO

TO ANNE DALE, young screen actress who will be remembered for her portrayal of the crippled girl in the Fox film version of "The Fool," went the honor of representing the picture industry on the elaborate radio program which marked the launching of the Forty-Second Street Centennial from station WRNY at the Hotel Roosevelt. Radio scouts report that it was in the clearest of diction and with the choicest of words that Miss Dale expressed the film industry's wish for the continued success of Forty-second Street. That her address over the air made an impression at so auspicious an occasion is the more remarkable for the fact that Miss Dale was sandwiched between two such experienced orators as George Gordon Battle and Louis Wiley, business manager of the New York Times.

Max J. Weisfeldt, popular field sales veteran, who has rapidly risen to be Northwest Division Manager for Film Booking Offices, with headquarters in Minneapolis.

A startlingly unusual scene from "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" (Fox), the first to be released, showing the Mariner (Paul Panzen) watching Death and Life-in-Death (Gladys Blockwell).

Harry Langdon, completely surrounded by Sol Lesser and John McCormick, signs the contract which will make him a First National star, to appear in feature comedies for that company.

Pauline Stark and Lilyan Tashman make a fascinating pair of choristers in "A Little Bit of Broadway" (Metro-Goldwyn), a story of chorus girl life.

Marion Ivy Harris, a beautiful Atlanta girl who is among the youthful students of the Paramount School at the Long Island studio.

Eleanor Boardman, with William Haines, her leading man, and John M. Stahl, her director, between scenes of "Memory Lane" (First Nat'l).

A CRUZE ANNIVERSARY

LANDMARKS are plentiful in the career of James Cruze as a screen director, but they grow in number—as witness the fact that "The Pony Express," in itself a notable accomplishment even for a record so brilliant as his, marks the director's golden film anniversary. The work is Cruz's fiftieth directorial effort, though the record dates back only nine years, at which time he first took up the megaphone for Famous Players-Lasky as the director of "Too Many Millions," in which Wallace Reid was featured. Statistics are sometimes interesting, and here's an instance where they are. For the facts show that Cruze is a workman as well as an artist. An average of more than five pictures a year over a period of nine years is testimony to the man's energy as convincing as the individual works have testified to his artistry.

Since starting his career as a director, Cruze has essayed a wide range of photoplay types. With equal skill and understanding of their inherent values he has brought to the screen comedies, dramas, melodramas, satires, in a variety of settings—and the record mind you, includes "The Covered Wagon," "The Pony Express" and "Hollywood." Owing to a striking quality individual to the material, these latter three stand as his most sensational successes, though from the standpoint of direction just as fine a quality of treatment was present in his productions of "The Fighting Coward," "Ruggles of Red Gap," "Merton of the Movies" and other works. Cruze has already started his fifty-first picture, the screen version of "The Mannequin," Fannie Hurst's prize story, in which he is directing a cast headed by Warner Baxter, Dolores Costello and Zasu Pitts.

LIKES THE STUDIOS

VICE-PRESIDENT CHARLES G. DAWES is fast earning the reputation of a confirmed studio fan. He recently paid a visit to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, where he was greeted by Louis B. Mayer and welcoming committee of directors, stars and feature players, and after lunching, made a tour of the "Ben Hur" circus set, where stills and motion pictures of the inspection party were made. Also, having watched James Cruze film "The Pony Express" six weeks ago at Cheyenne, Wyoming, the General wasn't content until he appeared behind the scenes at Paramount's Los Angeles studio the other day, where technical work on the picture was completed. Mrs. Dawes, their daughter, Mrs. M. B. Ericson of Chicago, secretary E. Ross Bartley and several friends composed the party, which was taken in charge by General Manager Charles Eyton, who explained the mysteries of interior sets.

A GOLDEN GET-TOGETHER

THERE was a real "old timers" celebration enacted when Dan Mason and Charlie Evans met at the Fox studio. Mason, who has done many memorable screen characterizations, is playing Mr. Bailey in "Wages for Wives," the title under which John Golden's "Chicken Feed" is being produced on the screen by Fox. It is the role created on the stage by Evans. When the latter turned up at the studio he and Dan renewed old acquaintances and a statistical turn of the conversation revealed the fact that the wo had played together in the old-time variey shows just fifty years ago. Thereupon was the idea of marking the anniversary with suitable celebration, and a celebration there was.

A LONE STAR ISSUE

AMONG the pictures selected for the week ending September 12 by the National Committee For Better Films, but one, Paramount's "The Pony Express" appeared in the bulletin bearing the "star," which brands a film as particularly good. James Cruze's big historical production is listed under the heading of—For the General Audience, and Special Family "Audience including children of Grammar School age and up."

MISS GOULD AT HOLLYWOOD

PAULA GOULD, press and fan magazine representative, whose regular habitat is the F. B. O. Home Office, is sojourning at the organization's West Coast studios, getting acquainted with executives, stars and directors, and absorbing local color. During her stay on the Coast Miss Gould will write a series of articles for a nationally known magazine.

A super-vamp de luxe, 1925 model, is Myrna Loy, who is here shown in the costume which she will wear in "The Love Toy" (Warner Bros.), now in production.

Allene Ray, Pathe serial star, is an ardent aquatic fan, and is here seen about to dive off, while Walter Miller, her leading man, and other players are the "gallery."

AN EDITOR

The Week in Review

THE Famous Players-Balaban & Katz deal which has been shaping for some time has at length been officially announced. It has created, naturally, a good deal of discussion and a large variety of opinions. If it will serve at all to clear the air, we give here our own general opinion on the situation.

The legal phase of the matter we can dismiss by saying:—that's that. We are not competent to discuss the whys and wherefores. There are the past, the present and the future to consider, in this respect.

But, important as the legal phase may be, we are inclined to regard the banking angle as at least, a more definite influence.

This business, as we have pointed out before, is now in its capitalistic era. The stocks of some dozen film enterprises are now quoted on the stock exchanges. Large banking resources are back of some and the shares of stock are being widely distributed.

Now, in the merchandising of stocks, tangible assets like brick and mortar are highly desirable sales arguments. So it is only natural—and you could say economic—for theatres to enter heavily in the situation. After all, the other side of the business—the making and selling of pictures—is a very intangible thing. Men are not fixed assets—nor are stars.

Fox, Universal, Warners are right out after theatres—and if the banking resources match up, they may figure just as heavily as any one else. Of course, theatre management is going to count as well as money. When theatre chains first started I asked the head of one how far they would go. His reply was "as far as managers go." And that holds good today.

All this, of course, is beside the argument that producer-owned theatres are needed to get pictures adequately before the public. But that argument won't altogether hold water. As an instance: United Artists doesn't own a single theatre. Yet, from all accounts, this concern isn't having much difficulty in getting its goods to market. In fact, in a year when producer-ownership is at its height United Artists is, apparently, in its strongest position.

We are not going to argue with the man who says: "All right, but such and such a city is closed up." True, it is closed for some pictures—for the present. It will be hard sledding here and there and maybe generally in the key cities for a period—until the pinch is over. It will be mighty hard sledding for poor pictures everywhere, not merely right now but for all the future.

Nor can we well argue with the man who claims that Famous is out after enough theatres to pay for its production. That's stiff competition for the other fellow; but, if it is enterprise—and without a legal mind we can only view it that way—what about it?

The one phase of this entire business that still rises supreme in our minds is—pictures.

Suppose a farmer spent all his time and interest in improving his barns and let his crops and cattle go their own way. He would be in a pretty fix, wouldn't he?

It would seem right now that there's a lot of over-attention to theatres and other matters and too little to pictures. Yet right along pictures are making the big dividing lines among our business forces, and in all probability and in the final analysis they will determine commercial supremacy, and the general welfare of this industry at large in the show world. At least, that is our best guess.

* * *

LAST Spring in Hollywood I saw a number of pre-release showings of pictures.

Mostly they were too disappointing to write about, and all in the same way. The picture would start and build admirably. The story unwound logically, clearly, illuminatingly. The audience was tense, expectant, pleased. And then, about half way along, something happened. The story paused and looked about anxiously. It drifted into several eddies. It started this way and then tried another tack and finally plunged for the shore.

I assumed that in some cases a good deal of revamping would be done, after the tryout; but found later that it wasn't. Probably it was impossible to do much. I also laid the trouble to the story; that it was not meant for pictures. Pictures need simple and compact themes; at least they do at this stage of picture production.

But after viewing some pictures this Fall, and finding the same messing up of construction, one is forced to believe that it is due to some general studio practice.

What is the trouble?

It looks like a plain case of too many cooks.

Once I worked under an editor who used to approach his manuscript with sleeves rolled up and the grim jaw of a blacksmith. His attitude seemed to say: "Now, boys, let's all take a whack at this damn thing and beat it into shape." So we all rolled our sleeves up and went at it.

The result was always awful. Authors who cared only about their checks were uncomplaining. But the writer who took any pride in his name accepted his pay but refused to have his name appear—and justly so.

This remodeling process was not merely unnecessary and highly expensive, but disastrous. In every instance the creative threads were snapped and never nicely tied up. The patches showed glaringly; and the finished job was a plain mess.

Like the messy picture that is all too common.

* * *

WE hear a good deal these days about supervision of production. Most studios seem to be hunting supervisors just as producers ten years ago were seeking directors. At that time we had mighty few directors—good ones. Perhaps today we have mighty few good supervisors and the rest are the ones who are messing up pictures.

ON BROADWAY

By William A. Johnston

I notice that where a director is good—and today we have a goodly list—their work isn't supervised. Probably they won't stand it—like the magazine writers who refused to lend their names to emasculated stories.

Supervision—of any kind of creative work—is, or should be, a delicately skilful and masterful job. Otherwise it makes chaos. It requires master skill and experience.

And, anyway, why isn't the supervision exercised while the picture is on paper? That's where the picture should be made; at least, there's where its construction should be settled once and for all. The extra bits of business—brain waves they are called by the English—can be added in the making. But in the making you can't throw the picture off the track without a wreck—and a sad one.

* * *

PROBABLY too much blacksmithing is done to the story, too, by the supervisors or some other overseers; like the editor with his magazine articles.

Here's a new and true story, in that connection, straight from Hollywood: a friend of mine was waiting outside of a studio executive office, when suddenly a terrific commotion started inside. It kept right up, and he kept his eye anxiously on the door, expecting to see someone come crashing through the panels. A young lady came out with an armful of papers. "What is it?" he whispered, "a fight?" "Why, no," said she. "It's a story conference."

* * *

I LEARNED a lot at the Paramount managers' school last week—a lot about trade papers.

First let me say that this school is a real honest-to-goodness one, where some forty picked men are putting in a lot of hours and hard work every day for a period of six months. If this school as conducted doesn't turn out good managers I don't know what will.

Mr. Dickerson and I undertook to explain the various departments of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and for two and a half hours answered questions—sharp and pertinent ones.

My reactions were these:

That it would be fine and helpful all around if the high executives of this business knew as much about trade papers as these embryo managers of theatres.

That said executives, had they been present, would have learned how essential a trade paper is to modern theatre management—what a force it is in stimulating and stabilizing the retail sales of pictures.

That these managers were little interested in trade news, in particular the stilted and dreary utterances of and the doings of prominent trade personages; that they spotted at once and resented any inspired publicity; that they were, however, vitally concerned with all those departments having to do with the booking and presentation and merits and exhibition of pictures. In fact, they were still asking questions and making suggestions long after our allotted time was up; and it was apparent that, to satisfy them, we should about double the size of the paper.

We repeat: how gratifying it would be if New York understood just how the theatre managers use a trade paper, so that New York in turn could help us make it still more useful to the theatres.

* * *

A YOUNG lady came in to our office the other day and, after talking a good hour with her—she asked for but ten minutes—we decided that public relations would be a telling force in this business, and that she will be very successful in this field of work. Her name is Regge Doran. She ran the public relations department of West Coast Theatres, and now she is with Pathé. She has just returned from Chicago, where censorship will be a big issue next Spring when the Illinois legislature meets. She's a college graduate, but has gotten well over it; she is highly intuitive and intelligent—and she speaks box-office language. Any exhibitor in the country will be mighty glad to talk with her and, I surmise, after that talk, will come pretty near to entering heartily into her scheme of work.

I have before me a well-written treatise on the public relations of a theatre. But what it all amounts to—from an exhibitor's standpoint, at least—is this: getting to know your public and thereby to work with your public so that out of the harmony there will grow a substantially better box-office. Of course, there's a lot to be said about public relations: how the motion picture carries a great public responsibility, how it moulds the home life and thought, how it—public relations—will be the one way to solve censorship, Sunday closing and other pressing problems. But Miss Doran talks about the box-office, and that's why she is going to succeed. She will give us later some exact figures as to how her work increases the Saturday business and even makes it carry over into Sunday and Monday.

Of course, the great point of contact is the children—the proper and successful amusement of the children. But it doesn't end with the children—from a box-office standpoint. Not by any means. If the children are handled rightly, you have them advertising the picture and the theatre in each of their homes. It is the one sure way to bring the parents out.

Mostly children are regarded as puppets and treated so. We treat them much as the reformers treat us adults. On the contrary, as Miss Doran points out, children are the real, dyed-in-the-wool fans of the country. You can't fool them. You've got to give them the real goods, not sugar coated pills.

And there are plenty of pictures high in entertainment value and suitable for children and family patronage.

We suggest that exhibitors give Regge Doran as much time as Sam Katz gladly tendered her, namely a three-hour interview. We don't know of a more important service to the exhibitor.

Again—the British Situation

A DEFINITE move toward reviving British production seems to have been made. Thomas Ormiston, President of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, met representative producers at a meeting in London the other day, and the upshot was the appointment of a committee to meet the Government Board of Trade.

Mr. Ormiston's activities are directed toward establishing a national studio aided by Government subsidy. He does not, however, look upon the studio proposition as a complete solution of the situation. On the contrary, he declares it is "only part of the general scheme which we are preparing for the Government, but it does, I honestly think, go some way towards remaking British pictures.

"My idea is that such a studio can be erected for the sum of 200,000 pounds (about $1,000,000), and it should be located within forty or fifty miles of London outside the foggy area.

"I do not," continued Mr. Ormiston, interviewed by The Film Renter and Moving Picture News, "intend to ask the Government for a great deal of money. Whilst I am convinced that the Government are very anxious to see more British films as they are, undoubtedly, uneasy at the thought of the entire Americanization of our screens, at the same time it is my belief that the money for the studio can be got from the trade itself with some slight monetary assistance from the Government, some 10,000 or 20,000 pounds.

"We have got to realize," continued Mr. Ormiston, "that the exhibitor has to play his part in this problem and we are not shirking our responsibility. In collaboration with my colleagues I have seen producers and convinced them that a quota system is useless. As a matter of fact the quota or kontingent system is not, I am convinced, the way to tackle this problem. The reciprocity idea is excellent and one that we shall prosecute in the near future, but it is no use asking America to take a number of our pictures unless they have merit. They cannot possess that merit unless they are made in proper studios, that is why I think the National Studio will be a big advantage. Personally, I believe that American producing houses are wise and sensible enough to see that it will be to their advantage to take a number of British pictures to be released in their programs in return for the enormous number of pictures they show here. If they do not, then we shall, as exhibitors, have to bring pressure to bear, but I do not think this is likely to be necessary."

What is evidently another step in "the general scheme" is the announcement of a drastic campaign by the C. E. A. against block-booking. The General Council of the exhibitor association passed this resolution: "On and after January 1, 1927, no film to be booked unless it has first passed the Censor, then to be trade-shown, and the playing date is not to be more than six months from the date of the signing of the contract."

Mr. Ormiston and his associates are ready, they state, to ask for Government legislation against block-booking, if that step becomes necessary.

The campaign against block-booking is part of the plan to aid British production. "If British pictures are to have a chance," said Mr. Ormiston, "it is no good choking up our screens eighteen months and two years ahead, which does not give the British producers a chance to live."

All of which is highly interesting to the industry here, particularly as it is the exhibitor who has taken the lead in attempting to solve the British dilemma.

Resume of European Situation As It Affects Industry

No. 9: Probable Trend in Foreign Field Forecast

By L. C. Moen

IN the eight articles which have preceded this, an effort has been made to depict some of the highlights, at least, in the European-American film situation as it affects this complex industry. Many volumes could be devoted to the subject, if one were to enter into all its ramifications, and in the limited space of these articles it has been possible only to sketch lightly a few of the outstanding developments.

The response that has been accorded them, however, shows convincingly the keen interest that is felt on both sides of the water in the matter of international film relations. Foreign trade journals have been generous in their comment, and distribution executives in America as well, indicating that the problem is of equal concern on both sides of the Atlantic.

As matters stand today, it is likely that the gross foreign business done by American companies is about 30% of the domestic total. Few figures have ever been given out, but it can be stated that in the case of one leading company it is 42%, of another, 35%, and in several instances, 28 to 30%. Some of the smaller companies, who sell outright, do not do as well as this, but the large distributing organizations, which handle the bulk of the business, do very well, so that our estimated percentage is probably not far wrong.

It can easily be seen that every American exhibitor thus has a direct personal interest in the foreign situation. With this considerable revenue removed, conditions would become quite different in the American film industry. Yet, despite that fact, few companies have come to accord their foreign organizations the attention and importance they deserve—the attention they receive, for example, from such corporations as the U. S. Rubber Company, Standard Oil or International Harvester.

This is not the fault of the foreign personnel. In some instances, these men abroad are struggling valiantly against the handicap of limited facilities, lack of co-operation and even jealous inappreciation of the importance of their work. In other cases, men of high ability in the American field prove unfitted to the altogether new conditions which they meet abroad. Still others, happily in the minority, have created antagonism toward American pictures through their misunderstanding of the manner in which business must be conducted there.

Accidental Beginnings

The foreign branch of the American industry was, in the beginning, virtually an accident—and it has not yet quite come into its rightful position. There is no more reason for considering European revenue as "velvet" than for rating American bookings in the same manner. At least two companies—perhaps three— have been kept going during recent trying periods by their foreign business. One of them has admitted it publicly.

The foreign distribution machinery deserves all the consideration that can be given it. No country in Europe today, except perhaps England, is yielding the revenue which it might yield and which it can reasonably be expected to yield within a few years.

But—that increase is dependent upon keeping the channels of commerce free and open. Duties, tariffs, contingents, red tape —all of these things can, and will, throttle our foreign business if permitted to multiply indefinitely. Germany has a Kontingent. England is threatening something similar. Italy will put more rigid restrictions into force the first of the year. Australia has put a duty into effect which diminishes the profit from that field. Hungary is taxing imported pictures to help keep domestic production alive.

Whether such handicaps continue to increase or abate depends in a large measure on the attitude and tactics of the American industry. Men of the right sort, working hand in glove with the U. S. Department of Commerce and the American consuls, together with various local organizations throughout Europe, could create a lasting and cordial alliance based upon sincerity and mutual understanding of each other's problems.

Graham's Position

As an excellent and outstanding example, it seems only fair to mention John Graham, the Famous Players head in England. Graham, through his tact and intelligent understanding has made himself literally idolized by British exhibitors. While retaining his own individuality, he has fitted himself into their scheme of things in a frictionless manner. They regard him as one of them, if I judge rightly, and the prestige and advantage that have accrued to Famous Players are boundless. Not that Graham is the only one—but he is so excellent an example that I do not believe others will feel slighted if he is cited as a model.

Business in Europe, it must be remembered, is not conducted as it is in America. You can talk as you will of the fact that "people are pretty much the same the world over," but you cannot alter the fact that American sales methods in Europe, like the Hairy Ape, "don't belong." To the European, the principal characteristic trait of the American is his materialistic absorption in business—"chasing the dollar." Not that Europeans are in business for their health exclusively. Nevertheless, they do not permit it to monopolize all their waking hours.

Many of the European buyers and executives are men of old and distinguished families, with a rigid code as to what is done and what is not done. The "sign on the dotted line" school of salesmanship has little effect on them. The sort of representative who can successfully do business with them is the man who can fraternize with them at their clubs—the sort of man whom they will invite into their own homes gladly. Such men can do business with them—but not outside of business hours, remember!—on a far different basis from the man who does not fit into their scheme of things. Whatever our prejudices may be in regard to European traditions and customs, we cannot alter them by ignoring their existence, and the road to success lies through shaping our policy to them.

Fitting In

Men sent out by the U. S. Rubber company, Standard Oil, and other big corporations, are expected to become a part of the community where they take up their residence. They are expected to study and master local conditions and customs, and to shape their business practices to them. They are expected to aid the home office in developing new products, new ways of packing and shipping, and the like, which will increase business and improve foreign commercial relations.

There are men in the European field who are perfectly capable of doing this sort of thing, but they receive scanty encouragement in most instances. Until foreign business is given the recognition and support which it deserves it cannot come into its own.

Tribute should be paid at this point to Fox and Universal. The industry owes these two companies a great deal for their pioneer work in the operation of exchanges in all parts of the world. They virtually blazed the trail which others today are following, and they have benefitted accordingly in the prestige which their trademarks carry in all quarters of the globe today.

Now, with first run theatres coming into the limelight, Famous, First National and Metro-Goldwyn are thoroughly aware of the need for show window theatres in London, Paris and Berlin, at least. How far they will go remains to be seen. If they can get adequate first run representation in suitable houses, probably they will be satisfied—but if they cannot, it is not unlikely that some new theatre construction will be chalked up.

Europe does need better theatres. No one will gainsay that, but as we have pointed out before, their construction and operation must be planned with European tastes in mind. Merely transplanting American methods, system and ideas will not turn the trick. Alien enterprises are no more popular in Europe than in America, and the native touch must be given to any venture if it is to be established on a solid basis. The company which is affiliated with a leading local organization on a proper basis will be stronger in the long run than the purely alien corporation.

Production abroad will help, undoubtedly, but only if it is handled properly. Some such experiments in the past have worked more harm than good. The sporadic making of one or two or three pictures will be interpreted merely as a sop to European interests, and discounted accordingly.

Opportunity Desired

The Europeans do not so much desire that we produce pictures in Europe, as that we give an opportunity to their own producing forces. Their principal grievance might be summed up thus: "You have made your profit in our market, we have purchased your pictures freely—and you have closed your own market to us, making it difficult, if not impossible, for us to continue.

Right or wrong, that is the opinion now held, and no manner of argument will move them from that position.

Consequently, the most lasting move toward good will and a free, open market which any American company could make would be to enable European countries to produce for the market in these United States. The screen admittedly needs novelty—new backgrounds, new faces, new stories, new ideas—and there are persons and places in Europe that can supply all of these.

Difficult it may be, but it is certainly not impossible, to work out reciprocal plans by which these forces could profit by our own better knowledge of this market and be directed along lines that would enable them to make pictures suitable for distribution here.

Perhaps I shall draw the charge of being a propagandist when I assert that the successful distribution here of a certain amount of European product is vital to continued profitable existence and development of our foreign trade—but I believe that any one who surveys the situation dispassionately and with an open mind will reach the same conclusion.

If this is not done, it seems to me that we shall face a continually increasing hostility—an attitude that will mean the constant menace of legislation and tariffs both unpleasant and unprofitable.

The Paramount experiment of some years ago, in producing in London and Berlin, was undoubtedly unfortunate; not alone was it a failure in itself but it gave the impression that the whole idea was unsound. As a matter of fact—and I believe that those closest to the venture will bear me out—the move was ahead of its time. Conditions were not yet right—are only just beginning to be so now.

But if production is to be carried out abroad, alone or in association with European companies, then it must be done rightly. The best directors, the best stars, the best studios, the best artists, should be employed. Too often, in the past, these things have been taken for granted on someone or another's say-so. If there is to be co-operation, let it be between the best elements on both continents, so that it may have a fair chance of success.

Bruce Johnson, at First National, has made a significant gesture in the encouragement of British production. He has guaranteed the distribution, in all countries under his jurisdiction, of "The Only Way," and now, with the inclusion of Dorothy Gish in the cast of "Nell Gwynn," an effort will be made, apparently, to meet the requirements of the American maket as well. Richard A. Rowland, accompanied by Robert Lieber and M. L. Finklestein, has gone abroad, and it may be that there will be further developments in this direction.

The first company, it would seem, that makes a strong, firm move in this direction will occupy a place in the European field now unknown. Perhaps it will not be done in the manner we have suggested. Perhaps something altogether different will develop. But this much we can state without fear of contradiction:

Our trade depends upon two things, quality of product aside: 1. The buyers' attitude, including both the exhibitor and the ultimate consumer, the public; and 2. The governmental attitude, as reflected in tax and restrictive legislation.

Buyer in Control

As regards the first, the buyer, after all, is in control of any commercial situation. You can create a demand, but you cannot force a man to buy your product, and a friendly attitude here is essential.

As regards the governmental attitude, it is likely to be, in the main, a reflection of the other. If the European industry generally is hostile to the American product, it will always be able to put through a certain number of measures to handicap it.

If, on the other hand, we so conduct our affairs that Europe is convinced of our good will and "live and let live" spirit, the attitude toward us will be one of friendliness and reciprocity—and the channels of trade will remain free and clear, with the greatest ultimate profit to all concerned. This, I am certain, is no Utopian babble—but the expression of a truth which will hold in any industry that carries its trade to foreign shores.

In bringing this series to a close, I take this opportunity of again expressing my appreciation to the men, here and abroad, who have made it possible for me to collect this fragmentary data, and who have given unselfishly of their time and knowledge to assist me. And if any of the readers of Motion Picture News have derived from this series a tithe of the pleasure which I have received in its preparation, I have, to quote the hoary and inevitable bromide, "been well repaid." So, with the hope that American films may continue to blaze the trail of American commerce around the globe, and that the free interchange of the best product of all nations may bring about better international understanding of each other's problems and hopes and ideals, we write

THE END.

Abe Warner Back After European Survey

ALBERT WARNER of Warner Brothers returned to New York last week following a three months' survey of the theatre situation in a number of European countries. He visited Russia, Poland, Italy, Germany, England and the Balkan states.

Warners have admitted they intended to open theatres in Europe where it was necessary for them to have first class representation, but Albert Warner refused to comment on his trip until he has met in conference the other executives of the Warner organization.

United Artists Announce German Branch Chiefs

A. C. Berman, in charge of United Artists Corporation interests in Germany, which recently purchased the Ifa-Film-Verleih-G. m. b. H., sends word to the New York office of the appointment of branch sales managers as follows:

Berlin, 8 Friedrichstrasse, Alfred Peters; Dusseldorf, 46 Graf Adolfstrasse, Rudolf Saklikower; Frankfort am Main, 52-60 Taunesstrasse, Benno Lachmann; Hamburg, 6 Esplanade, Louis Segall and Leipzig, 1 Karlstrasse, Arthur Peters.

New Sunday Ordinance Test Draws Interest

Minnesota theatre owners are watching with a good deal of interest the fight in Cumberland, Wis., on the Sunday closing ordinance. Mrs. W. W. Zimmerman, owner of the Zim Zim theatre there, has been paying a $10 fine every Monday morning for running every Sunday. She has now carried the case to the higher district court to test the ordinance.

Famous Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend

The Board of Directors of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on the preferred stock, payable November 2nd, 1925, to stockholders of record at the close of business on October 15, 1925. The books will not close.

Ex-Mayor of Quincy, Mass., Building 1500 Seat House

Ex-Mayor William J. Bradford of Quincy, Mass., has started construction of his new theatre at Maple and Chestnut streets which will have a seating capacity of about 1,500. The structure is expected to be completed late in the fall.

Coast Concerns Deny Coercion Charge

West Coast Theatres and Other Respondents File Answers to Complaint Brought by Federal Trade Commission

GENERAL denial in their answers has been made by respondents to the complaint of the Federal Trade Commission charging restraint of trade and various other offenses against West Coast Theatres, Inc., West Coast Theatres of Northern California, Venice Investment Company, Hollywood Theatres, Inc., All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., Educational Film Exchange, Principal Pictures Corp., H. M. Turner, Fred Dahnken, C. L. Langley, and F. W. Livingstone, partners doing business under the name of Turner, Dahnken & Langley, Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc., and A. L. Gore, Michael Gore, Sol Lesser, Adolph Ramish and Dave Bershon.

The Commission has made public the answers of Principal Pictures Corp. and Sol Lesser, and of Herbert L. Rothchild Entertainment, Inc. Principal Pictures Corporation and Sol Lesser deny that 60 per cent or more of its stock, as charged by the Commission, or that any percent or part of its stock is owned or held by West Coast Theatres, Inc. In his joint answer with the concern, Lesser denies he is engaged in the leasing of films or the operation of theatres. All deny the charges of the Commission in so far as they further relate to combination in restraint of trade.

Among the charges brought by the Commission are that the respondents combined and cooperated themselves for the purpose of:

(1) "Hindering, restraining and preventing producers and distributors of motion picture films in other States from leasing their said films to said competitors of respondents or any of them and from shipping said films into the State of California and delivering them to said competitors, and (2) restraining and preventing competition among the respondents and between respondents and between respondents and other exhibitors in the State of California in negotiating for and leasing motion picture films to be shipped from other States and delivered to said exhibitors respectively in the State of California as aforesaid. In pursuance of and to carry out said mutual purposes respondents and each of them are alleged to have done and still do the following acts and things:

(a) "Seek by threats of withholding patronage and by actually withholding patronage, to coerce and compel, and do coerce and compel said motion picture producers and distributors to discontinue dealing with competitors of respondents and to furnish their films to respondents' theaters in all towns where respondents or any of them have competition.

(b) "Seek by similar threats and action, to coerce and compel, and do coerce and compel said producers and distributors to cease from dealing with particular competitors of the respondents, or to withhold certain pictures from said competitors for the purpose and with the effect of preventing said competitors from obtaining an adequate and necessary supply of suitable films for the operation of their respective theatres.

(c) "Seek by similar threats and action to coerce and compel, and do coerce and compel such producers and distributors to withhold from, and refrain from leasing to competing theatres for repeat runs, films that have been previously run in respondents' theatres, until after the expiration of such a long time after such previous run that said films have become practically valueless for exhibition purposes.

(d) "Seek by threats of withholding patronage and by actually withholding patronage to coerce and compel and do coerce and compel said producers and distributors to lease their films to respondents at prices arbitrarily fixed by respondents, without regard to the cost of production and distribution of said pictures, and at prices substantially less than the usual and normal exhibition values of said films in the respective towns and cities in which respondents exhibit them, and at prices substantially less than competitors of respondents would have been willing to pay for them in the same towns were they not prevented by said acts of the respondents from having an opportunity to lease said films.

(e) "Lease films which they cannot use and do not expect to use, in order to prevent their exhibitors from securing same for their theatres.

(f) "Use other cooperative and individual means to carry out and make effective their aforesaid purposes and undertakings.

"The effect and result of the above alleged acts and things done by respondents have been and now are to unduly hinder and restrain interstate commerce between the said producers and distributors on the one hand and the said exhibitors on the other hand in the distribution, leasing, transportation into the State of California and delivery to exhibitors of motion picture films; to close to both said producers and distributors and said exhibitors certain of the outlets or channels through which they would otherwise be enabled to obtain trade and pursue their respective business; and to deprive them of the advantages which they would enoy under the natural and normal conditions of competition which would exist among respondents and between respondents and the other exhibitors in the absence of the matters and things herein set out.

Warner Brothers Launch Accessory Contest

WARNER BROTHERS have inaugurated an advertising accessory contest with all of the thirty-six branch exchanges in the United States and Canada taking part. To the exchange selling the largest quantity of accessories in proportion to its allotment will go a silver loving cup. In addition there will be $500 in cash prizes to be divided among bookers and poster clerks. First prize will be $250, second, $100, and third will be made up of three awards of $50 each.

The contest started the week of September 20th and will be concluded the week ending December 12th. The winners will be announced Christmas Eve and the prizes wired the winners in time to contribute to their Christmas celebration. The bookers and poster clerks in the winning exchanges are to share equally in the prize money.

Missouri Defies the Sunday Closing Ordinance

The policy of opening on Sundays in defiance of city ordinances and smiling upon being arrested appears to be on a decided increase in Missouri. This week two exhibitors were arrested—C. R. Wilson, his wife and the operator of the Liberty theatre, Liberty, Mo., and J. W. Cotter, Moberly, Mo., exhibitor.

An old fashioned "town row," such as were common in Civil War days, is brewing in Liberty, a college town of about 6,000, among groups of the populace on the streets. For a week or more there has been a bitter fight between the "pros" and "cons" on Sunday motion picture shows. So Sunday the pastors of the Presbyterian, Baptist and Christian churches denounced Sunday shows, while Wilson was playing to a good sized house. When the case comes before the police court on September 23 Mr. Wilson will demand jury trial, he said. There is no state Sunday amusement law in Missouri.

After being arrested in the Moberly case, Mr. Cotter was released on bond and his theatre continued operation Sunday. The Moberly city council recently passed an amendment to an old city ordinance and paved the way for Sunday shows, but it was vetoed by the mayor. Moberly exhibitors still are hopeful that the council again will pass the measure over the mayor's veto.

Pasadena Raymond Robbed of $1,800

The Raymond Theatre of Pasadena was robbed during the week of over eighteen hundred dollars. The house is running two changes of Orpheum vaudeville and feature pictures weekly, a policy which was adopted two weeks ago. It is one of the West Coast-Langley chain, management of which was acquired only three weeks ago by Arthur L. Bernstein, formerly production manager for Jackie Coogan, from C. L. Langley. This is the fourth time in the past four years the Raymond has been robbed.

Three Corporations Given New York Charters

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week included the following: Open House, Inc., capitalized at $10,000, with R. J. Joseph, C. F. Collins, Jr., Jacob Rosenfeld, New York city; Goodwill Distributing Corporation, $10,000, Toby Hodes, Henry Sonenshine, Jack Ferst, New York city; John G. Jermon, Inc., $50,000, I. L. Baldwin, P. E. Jacobs, J. G. Germon, New York city.

New Problems in Exibition

Eric Thacher Clarke.

Audiences demand something more than program of pictures, declares manager of Eastman Theatre

"PARADOXICAL as it may seem, the screen offerings have ceased to be the major concern of managers of large motion picture theatres, for other forces have been set in motion to assure high-grade film fare, and audiences no longer enraptured over the 'miracle' of the silver sheet, demand something more than the feature, the news weekly and the comedy before they are willing to call it an evening."

Thus speaks Eric Thacher Clarke, managing director of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, N. Y., in discussing the new order of things in the exhibiting end of the motion picture business.

"Our connection with the University of Rochester has not proved the practical handicap that was foreseen by some prophets. It has proved a great advantage; people told us that we should find ourselves in difficulties because we would be forced to be showing 'highbrow' pictures and because we should be prevented from showing 'box office' pictures, which I take to be a polite term for sex pictures.

"Now it is a fact that the list of our biggest successes fails to show where in any single instance the slightest question of morality could be involved.

"I do not believe in prologues. What is the rationale in presenting an act based on a picture which the audience has not seen? Preludes—yes, sometimes. Take a picture like 'The White Sister' and it is easy to arrange an atmospheric prelude; the audience has preliminary knowledge to appeal to and a well devised prelude can induce a sympathetic mood.

"A carefully prepared score will enhance the feature amazingly. We go about our score preparation very carefully to suit the music to each change of mood. Usually 50 or more pieces of music are on each orchestra desk at our performances. I do not believe in music that is too well known for an accompaniment to a feature film; a popular tune or a famous song easily diverts attention from film to music, which is not the motive of picture accompaniment.

"But we have no quarrel with music and its aid to our program problem. It is the suitable act that is hard to find. This much I think I know; the successful motion picture program is not made by transplanting bodily into it vaudeville, grand opera or ballet divertisements.

"Operatic music can be used with discretion in our programs in various ways, but you cannot get an audience into the right frame of mind for grand opera in connection with pictures; the time is too limited and to the audience bent on a picture program, an act of grand opera comes as a bolt from the blue not relished, even if it is respected. And the ballet divertisement, bodily transplanted, is not successful with audiences.

"But there is possible a form of dramatic action to music and of dance pantomime that will meet our program needs, I am confident.

Michigan M. P. T. O. Will Meet October 5-6

WILL H. HAYS has assured the committee in charge of the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan that he will make every effort to be present. The meeting, the first to be held in the Western part of the state, will occur at Grand Rapids on October 5 and 6.

John M. Lovett of the Michigan Manufacturers Association is also expected to be present.

The third annual Michigan Golf Tournament for exhibitors and exchangemen will be held on October 5th in connection with the convention. H. M. Richey, general manager of the Michigan M. P. T. O., is offering a silver loving cup as the winner's trophy.

New Iowa Theatre Co. Takes Over Seven Houses

The Eastern Iowa Theatre Company, recently formed in that state, has acquired control of seven theatres. These are the Cozy at Dyersville, the Grand and Crystal at Anamosa, Cascade at Cascade, Pastime at Mechanicsville, and Princess at Monticello.

Mrs. Stella Fackenthall was the former owner of the Dyersville house and the Anamosa houses were bought from Clifford Niles, who wil lserve as one of the officials of the company. The Princess at Monticello was bought from E. T. Landis. In most cases the owners of the theatres were retained as managers for the new company.

Motion Picture Exposition in Germany This Month

The first motion picture exposition to be held in Germany will open at the large exhibition hall at Kaiserdamm, Berlin, on September 25th and continue to October 4th. The event is being arranged by the Berliner Messe-Amt. The entire available floor space for exhibits has been engaged and all phases of the art of motion and still photography will be demonstrated by organizations represented by display booths.

Paramount B. & K. Deal is Announced

Plan to Create Separate Theatre Corporation Also Officially Made Known

OFFICIAL announcement has been made of the closing of the Famous Players-Balaban & Katz deal along the lines forecast in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The statement issued by Paramount said:

"Famous Players-Lasky Corporataion decided to separate their theatre interests from their production and distribution departments. A new corporation will be formed under separate management, but will be wholly owned by the Famous Players Lasky Corporation. The theatres will thus be operated as a separate unit and will rent and exhibit both Paramount and other pictures strictly according to their merit and suitability.

"After protracted negotiations Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have been able to effect a mutually satisfactory agreement with Balaban & Katz Corporation of Chicago, whereby Famous Players-Lasky Corporation secures the advantages of the Balaban & Katz management for the new theatre corporation, working in association with those officers who have already built up the Famous Players theatre department to its present efficient standard.

"The enviable record and reputation of Messrs. Balaban & Katz as eminently successful and progressive theatre operators is generally recognized among those familiar with the film industry."

Balaban & Katz are losing no time in taking over the associate management of the Paramount theatres throughout the country, the first move in this direction becoming known in Chicago this week, when Balaban & Katz's Director of Publicity, William Hollander, Service Manager Harry Marks, and a number of Balaban & Katz's mechanical staff, left for Boston, to make preparations for the opening of the Metropolitan Theatre in that city, which is scheduled for October 15th.

The second big theatre project announced since the combination of the Balaban & Katz and the Lubliner & Trinz interests, is for a 2,500 seat theatre to be erected on Cicero Avenue, north of Belmont. Rapp & Rapp, noted theatre architects, have completed plans for the house which will front 175 feet and have a depth of 180 feet. The first theatre announced by the combined firms was the house to be erected at Washington Boulevard and West End Avenue.

Pettijohn Presides at Cleveland Session

C. C. PETTIJOHN, counsel for the Film Boards of Trade, and W. E. Wilkinson, his assistant, were in town last week and presided over a special meeting composed of the members of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, members of the Joint Arbitration Board, officers and board members of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, and officers and board members of the M. P. T. O. of Ohio.

At this meeting it was definitely concluded that the secretary of the Film Board of Trade could not act as secretary of the Joint Arbitration Board. This has been a bone of contention in Cleveland for some months.

Dillon and O'Reilley to Confer at Syracuse

The indications are that the conference between William Dillon, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., and Charles L. O'Reilly, of New York city, president of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, and others, relative to according exhibitors in the New York city zone representation in the state association, and ironing out certain differences that have existed for several months, will be held in Syracuse some time this month. Letters between Mr. Dillon and Mr. O'Reilly, have apparently crossed, with the result that they have been considerably delayed. Mr. O'Reilly has also been away on his vacation while Mr. Dillon has been in Florida.

Cleveland Gives Screen to Safety Council

The motion picture theatres of Cleveland, through the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, have donated their screen to the National Safety Council. One hundred theatres have agreed to run a 100-foot trailer which calls attention to everyday carelessness. The National Safety Council will hold its annual convention in this city the end of September.

Built Theatre with Own Hands

Small Iowa town boasts home made theatre that wins patronage through its hominess

T. W. THOMPSON, owner of the Rex Theatre of Albia, Iowa, is a man of countless trades and much ingenuity. Proof is his cozy, if not pretentious, Rex in the little town of Albia—on the direct route to Burlington and Chicago traveling from Des Moines.

Thompson built the little house with his own hands. His son Kenneth assisted him, but the genius of doing things and doing them right is the senior Thompson's. For the Rex had been many other things in the distant days, including B. V. (Before Volstead!) It had been a busy small-town saloon—it had been a livery stable in which the best horses of the surrounding country had been housed—it had been a bicycle hospital—it had been a garage before Fords were plentiful. Now it is the Rex Theatre, named after a son who fell for his country in the late war.

Here in a town of three theatres, the Rex stands forth like a beacon light. It breathes homeliness and home! It winks its home-made electric sign as dusk falls, through the summer and winter months. It is a home-made theatre, with a home-made electric sign, with a home-made projection booth—but with the same kindred spirit of wholesomeness we all know in "things" that are home-made.

Here, assisted by Mrs. Thompson who acts as treasurer and ticket-seller of the Rex, T. W. Thompson wields his wand. He purchases good film, he furnishes consistent music—and above all he extends friendliness to his patrons.

The entrance of the Rex is plain. There are several nicely arranged frames for 11 x 14 lobby photos, a place for a window card here and there—and several frames for posters, cut neatly to get the most out of them. As you enter the theatre there is a very pretty little table lamp, taken directly out of Mrs. Thompson's home.

Of the 786 seats the Rex has—seven hundred are given over to men, women and children. There is a lower and there is an upper floor. The lower floor seats seven hundred—and the upper floor eighty-six. These eighty-six are reserved for couples—and couples only!

Talking about ingenuity—it runs in the family. Kenneth the son is the one who built the home-made electric sign. He had a sign cut out of wood, under his and his father's direction, painted it to suit himself and had it hoisted in place with the assistance of a gray mule and a pulley and rope. Then he set to work putting together a device that would regulate the systematic winking of the electric bulbs.

Thompson gives much attention to courtesy and cleanliness and sincerity in welcoming and greeting his patrons. His patrons leave with a smile, and when one speaks of the Rex they may not eulogize its appearance, inside and out—but dollars to corn-husks they do eulogize the friendly Thompsons.

Pathe Buys Chaplin Re-Issue Rights

Comedian Paid $500,000 for "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside"

UNDER a contract involving $500,000 concluded this week between Elmer R. Pearson, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Charles Chaplin, Pathe has acquired the re-issue rights to four of the famous comedian's screen successes—"A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure," and "Sunnyside," are the pictures which Pathe will bring back into circulation as a result of the arrangement with Chaplin.

The payment of half a million dollars for the re-issue rights to these four pictures is equivalent to the purchase price paid by First National for the original issue of these comedies together with four others under its famous million dollar contract with Chaplin in 1917. It is the first instance in which the same price has been paid for re-issue rights on a group of comedies as was paid for their initial issue.

"It is not at all necessary to indulge in a long dissertation upon Charlie Chaplin and his magic drawing power at the box-office," said Mr. Pearson in discussing the contract. "Past and present results amply attest volumes as to the merits of these exceptional comedy subjects.

"Chaplin's professional and business career is probably the most remarkable of any man alive today. His pictures have undoubtedly played to over five hundred thousand bookings, and I don't believe anybody ever heard of any booking that was not a success. His pictures have undoubtedly played to eight to ten billion admissions and I don't suppose anybody ever heard a customer kick about the entertainment. Several exchange systems have distributed his pictures and they have all made money and friends beyond their fondest expectations.

"It is a well known fact that no matter what the competition offers it cannot make a noticeable dent in the attendance of a theatre that is playing a Chaplin picture—no matter how often the same Chaplin picture had previously played that locality.

"Just this week we closed a contract with Charles Chaplin for the reissue rights to the first four pictures made by Chaplin for First National at the same price First National paid for them upon original issue.

"We have given the matter much study and truly do not know where we or anybody else could secure anywhere near an equal amount of potential box-office value for an equal amount of money."

DIRECTORS of the Hays organization formally set the seal of approval of the film industry on the public protection plan operated by the National Better Business Bureau of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World and the forty-four affiliated local Bureaus, which they have reviewed for more than a year. The Directors of this group, the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, include Will H. Hays, Chairman, and D. W. Griffith, Adolph Zukor, William Fox, Charles Christie, Marcus Loew, Richard A. Rowland, R. H. Cochrane, Harry M. Warner, Jos. M. Schenck, Hal E. Roach, E. W. Hammons, Frederick C. Munroe.

"Whereas: The Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, through their National Better Business Bureau and affiliated Bureaus in forty-four cities, and through more than three hundred Advertising Clubs in fourteen countries, is aiding the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America in their efforts to protect the public and the legitimate advertiser in the motion picture industry, and

Whereas: The Motion Picture Producers & Distributors stands firmly for wholesome, truthful and constructive advertising and has been co-operating to this end with the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World,

"Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved: That the Board of Directors of the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America heartily reciprocate, and they hereby do reciprocate the expressions of endorsement heretofore given by the Executive Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to the effort being made by the Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America and the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World for the betterment of motion picture advertising."

M.-G.-M. Arbitration Winners

Board Favors Exchange in Controversy With Star Company of Seattle

A DECISION of interest to exhibitors throughout the entire country was handed down by the Seattle Film Board of Arbitration last week, in a case brought against the Metro-Goldwyn exchange by C. A. Swanson of the Star Amusement Company in Everett, Wash. The case centered around the claim of the Star Company that "Romola" should be supplied them on their Metro-Goldwyn contract, which called for "two King-Gish productions." The decision was in favor of the Metro-Goldwyn company.

In the hearing, the Star claimed that "Romola" should be supplied them because it was directed by Henry King, and Dorothy Gish appeared therein. It was brought out at the meeting that Metro-Goldwyn, while not specifying in their contract accordingly, had extensively advertised that they would have two King-Gish pictures during the 1924-1925 season, and it was these that were included in the Star's contract. The pictures were never made, and Metro-Goldwyn notified all holders of such contracts, in July, that these could not be supplied.

Metro-Goldwyn claimed that they knew in advance the box office value of "Romola," and would not have sold the Star Company any Lillian Gish pictures at the price the King-Gish attractions were scheduled on the contract. Their further release was signified by their request in July to the exhibitors to cancel the King-Gish pictures as originally scheduled. The decision of the Board of Arbitration was in favor of the Metro-Goldwyn company, who by their victory are generally accepted to have warded off many similar complaints from other exhibitors of the Pacific Northwest.

Court Decides Against Amador

Injunction in Suit Brought by Chaplin Sustained in Defendant's Appeal Action

THE decision in favor of Charlie Chaplin in his suit against Charles Amador and Western Features Productions to prohibit either from producing and distributing pictures which Chaplin alleged were in imitation of those in which he was the featured actor, has been sustained by the Superior Court in a judgment rendered on the appeal from the lower court by Amador and Western Features.

In its judgment the Superior Court enjoined the defendants from "producing or exhibiting pictures in which the public might be misled into thinking the featured actor" was Chaplin. The judgment also restrained the defendants from releasing a picture entitled "The Race Track" which had been produced at the time Chaplin filed his original suit three years ago.

Counsel for the defendants had asked for a new trial following the lower court restrictions, and a modification of the ruling that would permit of the releasing of "The Race Track" film. In the final order the court held that this film was made, in his belief, as an imitation of Chaplin's pictures; that this imitation inhered in "The Race Track" to an extent that would make it impossible of elimination—as promised by the defendants—and for this reason refused to modify the original judgment so as to permit the defendants to release the picture.

In and Out of Town

HOWARD DIETZ, director of publicity and advertising for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is on a short vacation.

DOROTHY GISH sailed on the Olympic late last week for England to appear in "Nell Gwynn" for Herbert Wilcox Productions.

DAVID R. HOCHREICH, president and general manager of Vital Exchanges, and his assistant, Milton Kempner, are on a tour of exchanges throughout the East and South. Canada and the Middle West are being covered by Max Goosman, assistant general manager. Hochreich and Kempner will meet J. Charles Davis, 2nd, President of Davis Distributing Division on the Coast.

SIR WILLIAM JURY, of Jury-Metro-Goldwyn, and Major William Evans, of Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, of England, arrived on the Leviathan for conferences with Marcus Loew.

HARRY RATHNER, President of Astor Distributing Corp., has returned to New York from a tour of the country and is completing plans for the production of "Child Wives." The picture will probably be made in Hollywood.

WALTER W. IRWIN, of the Railway Express Film Transport Co., returned on the Leviathan this week from a vacation in Europe.

MARSHALL NEILAN and Leeds L. Baxter, his business manager, are in town to film scenes for "Ups and Downs."

GEORGE K. SPOOR left for Chicago this week to start work on a third dimension picture at the old Essanay studio.

Winners of "Power God" Contest Named

Mary Crane of Chicago and John Battaglia of New York were the winners of the national contest conducted by the Montgomery Circulation Service and the Cloverleaf Magazines of St. Paul of roles in the Ben Wilson serial, "The Power God." The contest was conducted in sixty magazines and six hundred newspapers, the two winners to receive feature roles in the serial.

The four runners-up were Albert Stogel of Brooklyn, James Zarris of Indianapolis, Marguerite Balas of Pueblo and William Sabo of Dundee, Michigan. They will be given tryouts by Ben Wilson and if found suitable will have parts in the serial.

Production on "The Power God" is to start shortly. The stars of this serial are Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber, who have a long list of serials and other pictures to their credit.

Playhouse is Planned for Tacoma, Washington

B. Marcus Priteca is drawing plans for erection of a theatre building to be erected in Tacoma, Washington, which may cost $1,000,000. The new theatre will be modern in every respect.

Universal Acquires New Theatres

Purchase Sears Houses in Western Missouri and Others in Same Territory; Many Transactions Reported

UNIVERSAL figures prominently in the aequisition of new theatres by big companies during the week, with their activities eentering largely around the Missouri and Kansas territory. A deal was eoncluded with Charles T. Sears for his theatres in Western Missouri, ineluding the Lyrie at Boonville, Star at Nevada, De Graw at Brookfield and Auditorium at Marshall. The deal does not include the purchase of the property, which Sears still retains. Sears also has been retained as manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory.

The Royal and Crystal theatres of Atchison, Kansas, were purchased by "U" from Lee Gunnison, and the Best of Parsons, Kansas, was bought from Fees Brothers. Walter Fenny, formerly Pantages manager in Kansas City, has been plaeed in charge of the Parsons house, while Lee Jones has been made manager of the Atchison theatres. The Apollo of Kansas City was also added to the Universal string, being leased.

A persistent rumor has been eurrent that Universal would purehase the theatres operated by Capitol Enterprises, one of the largest ehains in the middle west. This, however, has been emphatieally denied by officials of Capitol Enterprises, who insist there are no grounds for the rumor.

The Stanley Company of America is making persistent efforts to purehase the Century, Garden, Parkway and New theatres in Baltimore. John J. MeGuirk and Abe Sablosky of the Stanley Company have made several trips to Baltimore to negotiate for the houses with the estate of C. E. Whitehurst and the other owners.

While details have not been eompleted for the aequisition by the Stanley Company of the Crandall houses in Washington it is said that the new eompany will be capitalized at $4,000,000 based on preferred stoek issue, in addition to whieh there will be 1,000 shares of common stoek at no par value.

It is planned under the reorganization to eonvert the stock of the various eompanies into the preferred stock of the new company, whieh will be known as the Stanley-Crandall Company of Washington. The details of the transfer are now being arranged and the exaet amount of eash that will ehange hands, and the final purehase priee will be determined within the next few days.

The announcement has been made that the Chamberlain Amusement Company of Shamokin and the M. E. Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton have eonsolidated with New York interests in promoting a large hotel and theatre at Pottsville. The theatre will seat 2,500 and will take about eight months to eomplete. It will give Pottsville one of the largest houses in the eastern part of Pennsylvania.

Loew's, Ine., has purchased the Aldine theatre, Wilmington, which for many years has been operated by the Topkis-Ginns interests. Four other motion picture houses in Wilmington which were operated by the same eompany, were reeently aequired by the Stanley Company and therefore Loew's and the Stanley Company are runnning opposition bills.

Another link was forged in the ehain of Butterfield theatres last week when the Dawn theatre at Hillsdale was sold by Nick Pappas to the Bijou Theatrieal Enterprise Company of Detroit, better known as the Butterfield organization. This addition means that the Butterfield eireuit now has a total of thirty-seven theatres in operation in Miehigan and several new houses under construction. Aetual transfer of the Dawn theatre property to its new owners will take place at midnight, October 3rd.

M. H. Jaeobs, treasurer of the Central Enterprises, operating a ehain of motion pieture theatres in New Orleans, recently annouueed that the firm will begin work immediately on a new house to be located on Washington avenue near South Broad street. The name for the new theatre has not yet been ehosen. The eontract was let through Emile Weil, arehiteet, to Charles Gilbert, eontraetor, and is for a building to eost $150,000.

What is said to be the largest theatrical lease ever consummated was annouueed reeently in San Franeiseo, by the A. J. Rieh Company for the property on Market, Hayes, Polk and Larkin streets by the Capital Company, a subsidiary of the Bank of Italy, to the Fox Film Corporation for a period of 25 years at an aggregate rental of $6,000,000. A 5,000-seat theatre is to be erected on the property with a Market street entranee, a depth of 200 feet through to Hayes street and a 150-foot frontage on that thoroughfare. Aecording to A. J. Rich, Jr., the eonstruetion of the new theatre will begin as soon as A. P. Giannini of the Bank of Italy eoncludes final arrangements with the heads of the Fox Film Corporation in the East.

Screen Advertisers Meet at Dayton Next Month

THE Fall Meeting of the Screen Advertisers Association will be held at Dayton, Ohio, on October 29th and 30th. The association members will be the guests of the National Cash Register Company and will hold their sessions at that concern's big plant in Dayton.

The Screen Advertisers Association, of which Douglas D. Rothacker of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company is president; M. J. Caplan of the Metropolitan Motion Picture Company and Elmer G. Kuhn of the Atlas Educational Film Company, vice-presidents; and George J. Zehrung, of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., secretary and treasurer, is a department of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World.

Sills Signs New First National Contract

MILTON SILLS, First National star, has signed a new contract with that company, it was announced this week. The contract is for a period of three years and will go into effect at the expiration of his present agreement.

Sills was elevated to stardom by First National some time ago. He had played featured parts in several outstanding productions for a long period. His last starring vehicle was "The Knockout" and he is now making "Men of Steel." Among the several important screen plays in which he played leading roles are "The Sea Hawk," "Flowing Gold," "Flaming Youth," "The Isle of Lost Ships," "The Spoilers," "Skin Deep" and "Adam's Rib."

Pathe Buys Chaplin Group of Comedy Re-Issues

The Pathe contract just closed marks another notable chapter in the career of the famous comedian. Back in the days of the General Film the name of Chaplin began to mean the smashing of box-offiee reeords. Chaplin's last pieture released through General Film, titled "Poliee," proved a veritable sensation.

The Mutual Film Company, seeking for a sure-fire attraetion with which to bolster up their program, signed a eontract with Chaplin the finaneial terms of whieh were so unpreeedented as to astound the entire industry. Yet the eonneetion resulted in amazing profits both for the company and its exhibitor eustomers.

At the time that First National was formed its leaders realized that to strengthen their position they were under the neeessity of contraeting a star whose box-offiee value could not be questioned by even the severest of their erities. Chaplin was their ehoiee, and again a eontraet was signed for the star's services that made the trade literally gasp with amazement. One million dollars for a group of eight pictures was the arrangement agreed to. "A Dog's Life" was the first release of the series, and it smashed reeords from one end of the country to the other. "Shoulder Arms" followed, playing to greater reeeipts than any eontemporary release. "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside" were subsequently produced and established new box-office records.

New Film Corporations Are Chartered in New York

Motion pieture companies incorporating in New York state during the past week, included the following, the names of the directors being given, as well as the amount of capitalization, when such was speeified in the papers as filed with the secretary of state: Cohen Weidberg Theatre Corporation, $20,000, Abraham and Beekie Cohen, Isidore Cohen, New York city; VanWyck Amusement Corporation, $420,000, Julius Gulkie, Ridgewood; Isaae Katz, Mitchell Kay, Brooklyn; Self-Protection Pictures, Inc., $10,000, M. R. Loewenthal, A. C. Gratz, Grace Ahearn, New York eity; Rogowsky Amusement Company, Port Chester, $10,000, Sarah, Jaeob and Samuel Rogowsky, Port Chester.

Labor Troubles Being Righted

Conferences in Many Cities Bring Settlement With Musicians and Operators

LABOR troubles between operators, musicians and exhibitors are rapidly being adjusted with every indication that in most cities they will be a thing of the past for another year, in the near future.

A faint possibility of an operators' strike is the latest development in the wage controversy between Milwaukee theater managers and their operator and stage hands. While a strike was laughed at by both sides until a few days ago, a somewhat different aspect was brought into the thing when musicians publicly stated that if the operators and stage hands wanted to strike the musicians would join in sympathy.

After a number of conferences between representatives of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago and the Musicians Union, a new working agreement has been entered into. Under its terms the musicians in theatres seating six hundred and over will receive an increase of ten per cent. The original demands of the union included a twenty-five per cent increase in wages, increase in the number of musicians in certain theatres from four to seven, and a clause whereby musicians proving satisfactory on a two weeks' tryout could not be dismissed for a year, and fifty-two weeks' work a year. The exhibitors' representative refused to consider these demands and final compromise was arrived at which left matters as they were before with the exception of the ten per cent increase.

Negotiations to settle their differences and reach an amicable agreement occupied the attention of the Atlanta Federation of Musicians and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation representatives in a series of conferences held last week, and culminated Sunday night in the signing of a contract between the musicians and Famous Players' theaters here.

According to the terms of the settlement reached, practically every demand made by the Federation of Musicians was conceded by Famous Players. The terms of the contract provide a scale of $50 per week minimum, the number of men to be not less than fifteen at all times; $10 extra for doubling, and that all men used on the stage for numbers are to receive $1 per performance additional.

Thalberg to Supervise Program

Louis B. Mayer in East Announces Fall Production Schedule for M-G-M Studios

THE Fall production schedule for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, on which several special features are listed, to be made under the supervision of Irving G. Thalberg, was announced by Louis B. Mayer on his arrival in the east for conferences with Marcus Loew, Nicholas M. Schenck, Major Edward Bowes and other officials of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, this week. In addition to discussing production matters Mr. Mayer will also discuss arrangements for the presentations of "Ben Hur" and "The Big Parade."

Mr. Mayer said that the schedule which Thalberg has mapped out is the most pretentious ever launched at the Culver City plant. One of the first pictures to go into production will be the next Marion Davies Cosmopolitan vehicle, "Beverley of Graustark," the George Barr McCutcheon story. Syd Franklin has been loaned to M-G-M to direct the production. Another unit soon to start work is the Lon Chaney company which will make "The Mocking Bird," an original story written and to be directed by Tod Browning.

Upon completion of "La Boheme," in which Lillian Gish will be starred, King Vidor will direct a picturization of "Bardleys the Magnificent," by Rafael Sabatini. This picture will be done in color with John Gilbert in the starred role. Another picture soon to be produced by Thalberg will be "The Temptress," by Blasco Ibanez. This will be a Cosmopolitan production.

Among the recent pictures which have been produced under Thalberg's supervision are "The Unholy Three," Lon Chaney's recent success; "The Midshipman," Ramon Novarro's initial starring vehicle for M-G-M; "Lights of Old Broadway," the Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies, and "The Tower of Lies," directed by Victor Seastrom and co-starring Norma Shearer and Lon Chaney.

St. Louis Company Expanding

Skouras and Koplar Concern Planning to Acquire Many St. Louis Theatres

THE St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar, on Tuesday, September 22, took over the Cinderella Theatre, 2731 Cherokee street, owned by Freund Brothers under a long term lease calling for a substantial yearly payment to the former owners.

Co-incident with the leasing of the Cinderella it was learned that the St. Louis Amusement Company plans to purchase or lease ten other prominent neighborhood theatres in St. Louis and also has perfected plans for the construction, purchase and lease of other theatres in the St. Louis territory. The deal for the ten St. Louis houses will be concluded within the next few weeks.

In furtherance of the expansion plans of the company the officers of the St. Louis Amusement Company have perfected arrangements for the floating of the $600,000 first mortgage 6 per cent real estate gold bond issue due serially from October 1, 1927 to 1935.

The St. Louis Amusement Company now operates and owns in fee simple ten moving picture houses and airdomes and in addition has attractive leases on eleven other amusement places. It has also leases on three other theatres and an airdome which are closed at present.

The properties owned in fee simple by the company recently was appraised at $1,232,500. This does not take into consideration any value accruing from the leaseholds. An audit of the company's books showed annual earnings before Federal Income Taxes of $125,451.43 after allowing $124,618.81 for depreciation.

The audit made by Ernst and Ernst, certified public accountants, covered the two-year period ended on December 31, 1924.

For the six months' period to June 30, 1925, the company had earnings before estimated Federal income taxes of $87,601.69 or the rate of $165,203 a year.

The officers of the St. Louis Amusement Company are: Spyros P. Skouras, president; Harry Koplar, first vice-president; Charles P. Skouras, second vice-president; W. A. Stickney, secretary, and Sol E. Koplar, treasurer. Recently Sam Hamburg, Jr., disposed of his stock in the company and was succeeded as treasurer by Sol E. Koplar.

In addition to their stock in the St. Louis Amusement Company, the Skouras Brothers control the Skouras Brothers Enterprises which owns the Grand Central, West and Lyric, Lyrie Skydome and Capitol theatres and is building a $4,500,000 theatre and office building at Seventh and Locust street.

Universal Buys Scenario by New York School Girl

"Signs," an original scenario written by Dorothy Grundy, eighteen-year old New York school girl, has been purchased by Universal and will be produced as a starring vehicle for Reginald Denny. The production will be started this week under the direction of William A. Seiter. "Signs" according to the announcement, "contains a highly original and diverting idea which has to do with the automobile business."

Irving G. Thalberg, production supervisor at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

Famous Players At New Peak

Wall Street Journal Reports Business 28% Ahead of 1924 for Eight Month Period—Earns $7.04 Per Share in Half Year

ACCORDING to an article in the Wall Street Journal Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's business for the first eight months of 1925 was 28% ahead of that for last year, when a new high record for profits was established. The corporation is now doing the biggest business in its history, the Journal article states with earnings for the first six months of the year at $2,051,532, equal to $7.04 a share on 243,431 shares. Earnings for the similar period in 1924 were $1,350,801, or $4.32 a share. The earnings for the full year of 1924 were $5,422,349, equal to $20.08 a share, a new high peak for the company, which the article states, will be considerably exceeded this year from present indications.

The foreign business of Famous shows a remarkable increase, foreign receipts being reported as 39% above those for the first eight months' period of 1924. The increase in foreign business is pointed out as especially notable in view of the fact that this is one of the most profitable branches of the corporation's operations.

"The financial position of the company at the end of the first half year," the Journal continues, "was stronger than at any other similar period on record. This is without giving effect to sale of new common stock, which will add over $10,000,000 to the company's resources. Cash on hand June 30 was $3,748,000 compared with $3,197,000 at end of June, 1924, while bills payable were only $2,000,000 compared with $4,450,000. Inasmuch as the middle of the year is the height of the production season, when obligations for new films are at their peak, this position is particularly good and shows the success of the company's efforts to handle their production without the aid of the banks. In former years, notes payable at this season ran as high as $6,000,000.

"Proceeds from sale of stock will go in large part into theatrical properties which will more than provide for dividends on the additional common.

"Famous Players in spite of its position as the most important producer of moving pictures in the world has always been conservatively capitalized. Expansion in the last five years has been largely out of earnings although from time to time small amounts of common have been issued in exchange for new properties. This is the first important increase in common stock since 1919.

"Title has been taken recently to the Gordon chain of 38 theatres in New England and new theatres are being acquired in St. Petersburg, Fla., London, Eng., and Paris, France. It is probable that the acquisition of other properties is planned. Income from these new properties will be large and the additional capital should produce a corresponding increase in earnings.

"The large office and theatre building being erected on the Putnam site in New York will be handled as an ordinary real estate transaction without serious drain on the company's resources or need for financing.

"In a recent statement to stockholders Adolph Zukor, president, pointed out that in the last six years over $18,000,000 has been spent by the company in fixed assets, amortization of mortgages and retirement of preferred stock.

"Earnings and financial position in recent years as of December 31 have been as follows:

Earnings	$5,422,349	$4,246,724	$4,110,987	$4,695,499
Per share.....	$20.08	$14.98	$14.72	$19.01
Cash	2,700,829	3,260,602	2,310,022	2,350,693
Bank loans.....	None	3,385,000	2,957,418	3,845,222
Current assets..	21,224,331	20,486,898	18,872,526	20,662,811
Cur. liabilities.	5,491,654	7,401,086	8,237,069	9,839,589
Work. capital..	15,732,677	13,085,812	10,635,457	10,823,222

"As Famous Players has been improving its financial position from year to year the investment qualities of its common and preferred are becoming more and more evident. In the past the only flaw in the position of Famous has been its large bank loans but now these have been cleared up. Famous has the extraordinary record of having earned a total of $90.16 a share on its common in the last five years, an annual average of $18.03 a share. In this time, only $40 a share has been paid out in dividends."

Connecticut Committee Maps Plans

Intensive Campaign Being Arranged to Seek Relief for Exhibitors From Drastic Durant Film Tax Law

THE committee of five named by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Connecticut have mapped an intensive campaign plan looking to the interest of the exhibitors in relief from the film tax law. This committee appointed at first temporarily to map a solution of the producers and distributors' difficulties has now been made a permanent one and will be ready to announce its program within the next few days. The foregoing information was given by Joseph W. Walsh, president of the Connecticut M. P. T. O.

Further discussing the present status of the matter, Walsh said:

"We feel that the sensible way out of our difficulties is to try to convince the officials of the state that the law has miscarried and placed the burden where it was never intended. The M. P. T. O. has at all times since the trouble started tried to maintain an even balance and find the solution of the problem in a sane, constructive way.

"I want to express my appreciation to the members of our state organization for the manner in which they have conducted themselves and for the splendid united front they are presenting in the face of the most troublesome times that the industry has ever seen in Connecticut."

Various members of the Connecticut Legislature have come forward with statements that the Durant law was passed under a misapprehension. Among these is Mrs. Mary M. Hooker, representative from Hartford, who said:

"I am in favor of revising the Durant film tax law at the next regular session of the Legislature. I feel that when the measure passed it was misunderstood. I voted for the bill under the impression that it would affect New York, not Hartford and Connecticut in general. As I believe the workings of the act were mis-interpreted I am wondering whether or not it can legally stand as a law."

Answers to a questionnaire sent legislators by the M .P. T. O., querying them on their attitude toward the law, are already coming in. Senator Samuel C. Doty from the first district expressed himself as being sold on the Durant tax because the law would "make the wealthy motion picture companies stand the bills." He voted for the measure because the distributors "could well afford to pay taxes to the state of Connecticut."

William H. Mead, secretary of the Hartford Chamber of Commerce, attributes the passage of the bill to the reputed prosperity of the picture industry. He feels the producers and distributors lost out because of the widespread reports concerning the high salaries paid stars and executives of the busines sand that pictures therefor were probably considered a lucrative source of revenue to the state.

Exhibitors are having more than their share of troubles because of the withdrawal from the state of exchanges. Edward J. McMahon, one of the owners of the Empire in Hartford, has said there will be a raise in prices at the Empire in case the tax law is not killed. The house, which changes daily during the warm weather, is having difficulty especially in securing its short subjects as per bookings. Inability to get paper on time is another hardship. Occasionally film booked fails to put in an appearance on time and some unannounced picture must be used. When the exchanges were located at New Haven these matters were easily righted, but now it is necessary to get relief from New York and Boston.

Find Second Skeleton in Gillis Theatre Debris

The skeleton of still another body, making the second within two weeks and a total of six, found in the abandoned ruins of the Gillis theatre, Kansas City, destroyed by an explosion June 25, has caused an active investigation to be launched by city authorities to determine if any more bodies remain undiscovered. The body found this week was about six feet from the one found last week, near the balcony ruins, and as yet has not been identified.

Sponsoring New Florida Studio

H. P. Carver Heads "Studio Park" Development; Was in New York Conferring With Picture Men

H. P. CARVER, former general manager of Cosmopolitan Productions, has become associated with the organization which will erect a large motion picture studio near St. Petersburg, it was announced this week. The new film development in Florida is known as "Studio Park," located in Pinnollas County, about two miles from St. Petersburg.

James Sayles, formerly advertising and publicity director for the Hearst motion picture enterprises, is another well known figure who is now identified with the studio undertaking on the Florida West Coast.

On a recent visit to New York for conferences with motion picture men, Mr. Carver said he received assurances from many producers that they would welcome the facilities which a well equipped studio in Florida would offer . He stated the Studio Park development had progressed far beyond the stage of projected enterprises, asserting that the tract of six hundred acres which will be developed as an ultra residential community have been cleared and that work soon would be started on the erection of a modern motion picture studio. Owing to its location, he said, Studio Park will afford adequate transportation facilities essential for a producing center and that the plant that has been planned will provide the necessary modern equipment for the efficient production of motion pictures.

Judy King and Tom Wilson in Cast With Mix

Judy King and Tom Wilson have been added to the cast which will be seen in support of Tom Mix as the star of "The Best Bad Man," his next production for Fox. The picture is being made under the direction of J. G. Blystone. Others in the cast are Clara Bow, Paul Panzer, Cyril Chadwick, Buster Gardner, Tom Kennedy, and Frank Beal.

Cast Completed for "Rocking Moon"

Metropolitan Pictures has completed the cast for "Rocking Moon" with the addition of Rockliffe Fellowes, Laska Winters, Luke Cosgrave and Eugene Pallette, who will support John Bowers and Lilyan Tashman in the featured roles. George Melford will direct and the picture will be a Producers Distributing Corporation release.

New Wanda Wiley Comedy is Released

"Cupid's Victory," second of the Wanda Wiley Century comedies of the season, is released this week through Unsiversal exchanges. The picture was directed by Charles Lamont, and in the cast with Miss Wiley are Earl McCarthy, Tony Hayes and a bevy of Century beauties from the Century Follies Girls.

Fanny Hurst Story Ready for Production

Walter Woods and Frances Agnew have completed the script of "The Mannequin," Fanny Hurst's $50,000 prize story, and work is now being rushed on the construction of the sets at the Paramount studio in Hollywood. Actual production is scheduled to start within a week.

Paramount Starts "Song and Dance Man"

Paramount has started production on a screen adaptation of George M. Cohan's stage play "The Song and Dance Man" with Herbert Brenon directing. The cast is made up of Tom Moore, in the title role; Harrison Ford, Bessie Love, George Nash, Norman Trevor, William B. Mack, and Josephine Drake.

Marian Warren Engaged to Act for Universal

Marian Warren, stage actress who has played in stock, vaudeville and on the musical comedy stage, has signed a contract to appear in Universal pictures. Miss Warren will make her screen debut in one of Universal's forthcoming features.

Novel Bought by Fox Goes Into Fifth Printing

The Century Company, publishers, announces that "The Chicken Wagon Family," a novel by Barry Benefield to be adapted to the screen by the Fox company, has gone into its fifth printing. The photoplay based on the book will be offered by Fox in January.

Gilda Gray Returns From Europe, to Start Film

Gilda Gray returned this week from France on the S. S. Paris and will soon start her first starring photoplay "Aloma of the South Seas" at the Paramount Long Island studios.

William De Mille Writes Photoplay Story

William de Mille has written an original story, tentatively titled "Magpie," which he will produce as his next for Paramount instead of "Polly of the Ballet," previously scheduled as his next work.

Sally Rand Joins Rod La Rocque Cast

Will Add More Eastern Units

Rowland Says First National Will Continue Extensive Production at New York Studios

THE original intention of First National to produce extensively in the east, announced when several units were transferred from the West Coast to New York under the supervision of Earl Hudson, will be carried through, Richard A. Rowland, general manager of the company, said on the eve of his departure last week for Europe.

Mr. Rowland also announced that A. L. Rockett has succeeded Herman Bruenner, recently resigned, as general business manager of the Eastern studios. The appointment he said was requested by Earl Hudson when Bruenner gave notice three months ago of his intention to resign. At that time Rockett was on the Coast acting as West Coast representative during the absence of John McCormick in Europe.

The present slacking for four of five weeks at the First National plant in New York, Mr. Rowland said, is necessary to allow the scenario department to prepare stories ahead so that the production units may have time for preparation between the finishing of the scripts and the commencement of camera work. "During the coming year," he declared, "production both in the east and in the west is to be gradually expanded. Our eastern scenario department is being materially strengthened. Among the acquisitions to this department recently are Olga Printzlau, John Fish Goodrich, Charles Whittaker, Jane Murfin and Harvey Thew."

This week will see the completion of production of "The Scarlet Saint," a picture being directed by George Archainbaud at the Eastern studio with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes in the co-featured roles. "The Unguarded Hour," a Milton Sills starring vehicle, with Doris Kenyon featured, was completed last week. According to Rowland's plan the next cycle of three pictures to be made at that studio are to go into production between October 1 and October 15. These are to be "Men of Steel," with Milton Sills starred; "The Lunatic at Large," a comedy, starring Leon Errol and "Mismates," a screen version of the Myron C. Fagan play, probably with Doris Kenyon in the leading role.

The second cycle will be begun, stated Rowland, immediately following the completion of those three, and will include "The Savage," with Lloyd Hughes, "The Boss of Little Arcady," an adaptation of Henry Leon Wilson's story, a screen version of the famous musical comedy "Mademoiselle Modiste." The following series will include a special "Atlantis," an original fantasy by Earl Hudson.

Report New Territorial Sales

Sax Announces Additional Contracts for Gotham Product; Levine on Exchange Tour

AMONG the independent distributors announcing new sales this week is the statement from Sam Sax, head of Lumas Film Corporation, distributors of the Gotham Productions, that he has closed contracts with the H. Lieber Co. of Indianapolis and Progress Features of Salt Lake City and Denver.

These deals cover the distribution rights for the Gotham program of twelve features. Both companies distributed the Gotham product for last season. The Lieber Co., represented by John Servas, took over the Gotham pictures for the state of Indiana, while George Mayne, representing Progress Features, signed the program for the states of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Southern Idaho.

Nat Levine, recently returned from a general sales tour in the middle west and south, closed contracts for the distribution of Sam Bischoff's comedy output, to the following independent exchanges: Tom Brannon, of Eltabran, for Atlanta; Bill Underwood, of Specialty Films, for Dallas; Bobby North, of Bond, for Upper New York State; Ben Amsterdam, Masterpiece, Philadelphia and Washington; Harry Lande, Lande, Pittsburgh; Benny Judell, Judell Film Co., Chicago; Elmer Rhoden, Midwest Film Exchange, Kansas City; H. He will organize the publicity and advertising departments for each of the fourteen theatres now being operated by Warner Bros.

P. A. Powers Heads Board of Directors of Reorganized Associated Exhibitors

FURTHER Details of the reorganization of Associated Exhibitors were made known this week. Oscar A. Price is the new president of the organization, which will be completely divorced from Pathe, it is announced, except for the physical handling of film.

At the instigation of the banking interests involved in the purchase of the company, P. A. Powers has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Directors with the other members of the board consisting of Elmer Pearson, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe; Oscar Price; W. B. Levy, R. M. Hamilton, Henry Kelly and Harold Donnegan. W. B. Levy was made treasurer of the corporation, while R. M. Hamilton was elected secretary.

John S. Woody was made general manager and placed in charge of the company's affairs. Jay A. Cove remains general sales manager.

Plans are now on foot to enlarge every department in the organization and to install new departments to handle the work formerly done by Pathe. The home office quarters will be increased to allow for the installation of art, advertising, publicity and exploitation departments.

The releasing program for the coming season will number thirty features. Several specials will be added. Selling plans remain as they were originally started by General Manager Woody.

Warners Start Two Features

"Lady Windermere's Fan" and "Nightie Night Nurse" Under Way on Coast

WORK was started during the past week on two of Warner Brothers important productions. They are "Lady Windermere's Fan" and a new Syd Chaplin picture, "Nightie Night Nurse."

"Lady Windermere's Fan" is to be an Ernst Lubitsch production adapted from the Oscar Wilde classic, which enjoyed a tremendous stage success for many years. The principal roles are taken by Irene Rich, Ronald Colman (by arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn), May McAvoy, Edward Martindel, Bert Lytell, Helen Dunbar and Carrie Daumery. The scenario was prepared by Julien Josephson.

Charles Reisner, who seems to be achieving as much success as a director as he did as an actor, is handling the megaphone on "Nightie Night Nurse," the new Syd Chaplin vehicle.

Plans are being completed for two other productions to get under way in the near future at Warners' west coast studios. Julien Josephson is writing the scenario and Louis Milestone has been selected to direct Gilette Burgess', "The Cave Man," Matt Moore's next Warner picture.

"The Night Cry" will be the next starring vehicle for Rin-Tin-Tin, the Warner wonder dog. Both story and scenario are by Phil Klein and Edward Meagher. The director has not yet been assigned.

John Barrymore will complete his work in "The Sea Beast" within the next three weeks and will immediately start "Don Juan," which is being prepared by Bess Meredyth and Maude Fulton. "The Sea Beast" is being directed by Millard Webb.

Editing is under way and the picture will be rushed to the theatres for early release. George Marion, Jr. has been engaged to title "The Eagle." Valentino plans to take a trip to Europe as soon as the finishing touches have been put on the picture. He will visit England, France and Italy, returning to the United States as soon as a suitable story is found.

Production is Resumed at Whitman Bennett Studio

Following a period of idleness during which new equipment was installed the Whitman Bennett Glendale Studio has resumed activities as a production center with three units making features for the Golden Arrow program about to begin camera work. Major Maurice Campbell started work on a feature as yet untitled, while Mr. Bennett is due to begin soon the production of a feature he will direct and Jane Novak is ready to start the second of a series that she will make for Arrow.

Wellman Replaces De Sano With Schulberg

William A. Wellman has been signed by B. P. Schulberg to take the place left vacant on the directorial staff by the resignation of Marcel De Sano, whom ill health compelled to retire temporarily from the picture field. Wellman's first Preferred picture will be the screen version of Wallace Irwin's novel, "Lew Tyler's Wives." The direction of this picture was originally assigned to De Sano. Camera work will start as soon as the cast is selected.

Training Camp Feature Made by M-G-M for Government

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will turn over to the Government a six reel feature film of incidents in connection with the recent Military Training Camp at Del Monte, California to stimulate interest in the National Defense Program. Thirty-three reels of air, land and sea maneuvers were recorded by the camera.

Colonel William J. O'Loughlin, training officer in charge of the recent Del Monte camp, and Major Horace G. Foster of the Presidio, San Francisco, have arrived at Culver City to supervise the editing and titling of the film. Upon completion of the picture it will be turned over to Major General Davis, Adjutant General of the American Army to be shown throughout the country to stimulate interest in defense and especially in annual training camps.

Texas Welcomes Richard Dix on Location Trip

Richard Dix and the unit producing "Womanhandled," his next starring vehicle for Paramount, received a hearty welcome upon his arrival at Houston, Tex., last Monday. Dix made his first appearance as a leading man with a stock company in Dallas several years ago, and his return to the state was greeted by a "welcome home" celebration in which 2,000 admirers of the star participated.

The incoming party included Director Gregory La Cava, Esther Ralston, who will play the leading feminine role, Margaret Morris, a new screen find, Edmund Breese, the veteran character actor, and others.

"Agony Column" Next for Monte Blue

Monte Blue's next starring vehicle for Warner Brothers will be "The Agony Column," an adaptation from the Earl Derr Bigger's Saturday Evening Post story. E. T. Lowe, Jr. is writing the scenario and Erle Kenton will direct.

Two Added to Cast for "Free Lips"

Director Hobart Henley has added Gwen Lee and Antonio D'Algy to the cast of "Free Lips," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production in which Norma Shearer is starred. It is a Carey Wilson story and Lew Cody has the leading male role.

Einfeld Promoted by First National

S. CHARLES EINFELD has been appointed by First National to the position of director of the exhibitors' service division, made vacant by the recent promotion of C. F. Chandler as director of advertising publicity for First National.

Einfeld has been in the company's service division ever since 1919 and at the time of his present appointment was assistant to Chandler. He also holds an executive position with the Leo Brecher chain of theatres in New York City.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"Old Home Week" Tied Up With Issue of Life

Wm. N. Robson, Paramount's Exploitation representative, sends in a story of an exploitation campaign put on by Carl Maple, manager of Barney's theatre at Point Marion for "Old Home Week" that shows how timely events work to the benefit of the live showman who is willing to think as well as work.

The week he played "Old Home Week" was the week "Life" came out with an "Old Home Week" number. Everything in it was made to order for the exploitation of "Old Home Week."

Maple bought up all the copies on the news stands not only in Point Marion but in surrounding towns. To make sure he missed none he sent several of his assistants over the same trail. The publicity this aroused itself was substantial as all the drug stores, news stands, etc., told all who inquired for "Life" of the "crazy fools" from Barney's theatre buying them all up.

With a rubber stamp Maple said on every page of these copies of "Life" "See Thomas Meighan in 'Old Home Week' at Barney's theatre." Then he put them in each barber shop, waiting room, soda fountain, restaurant and every place in town where people congregate, with a result that was all that he could desire.

Dignified Campaign Given "Winds of Chance" Run

"Winds of Chance" opened a fortnight's engagement at Warner's theatre in New York City recently. The exploitation campaign was concentrated on the week prior to the opening and was characterized by dignity and restraint.

The opening gun of the campaign was a co-operative tie-up with Frank Munsey's Evening Telegram-Mail which started publication of the serialization of "Winds of Chance" simultaneously with the opening date. Realizing the value of the serial and the following of Rex Beach as circulation boosters, The Telegram-Mail instituted a vigorous advertising campaign in its columns, giving due credit to First National and Frank Lloyd.

The publication will continue in daily installments for forty consecutive days.

A tie-up was next arranged with Hearst's Daily Mirror in connection with their distribution of "Uncle Sam's Lucky Two Dollar Bill." This stunt, frankly fathered by the Hearst paper as a circulation booster was the talk of the town from its inception. The Mirror daily distributed two dollar bills, and then announced prizes of $50.00 each for those bearing the numbers published in its columns. The theatre was one of the chief distributing points of the "lucky deuces," due mention being made daily of the theatre and "Winds of Chance."

Arrangements were next consummated with Gimbel Brothers broadcasting station WGBS and Colonel William Green's famous station WMAF at South Dartmouth, Mass., for the broadcasting of a personal appearance of Ben Lyon, one of the featured principals of the cast of "Winds of Chance."

This radio hook-up had a double-barrelled value as the South Dartmouth station acted as a preliminary campaign for the Boston engagement which opened at Symphony Hall the following week.

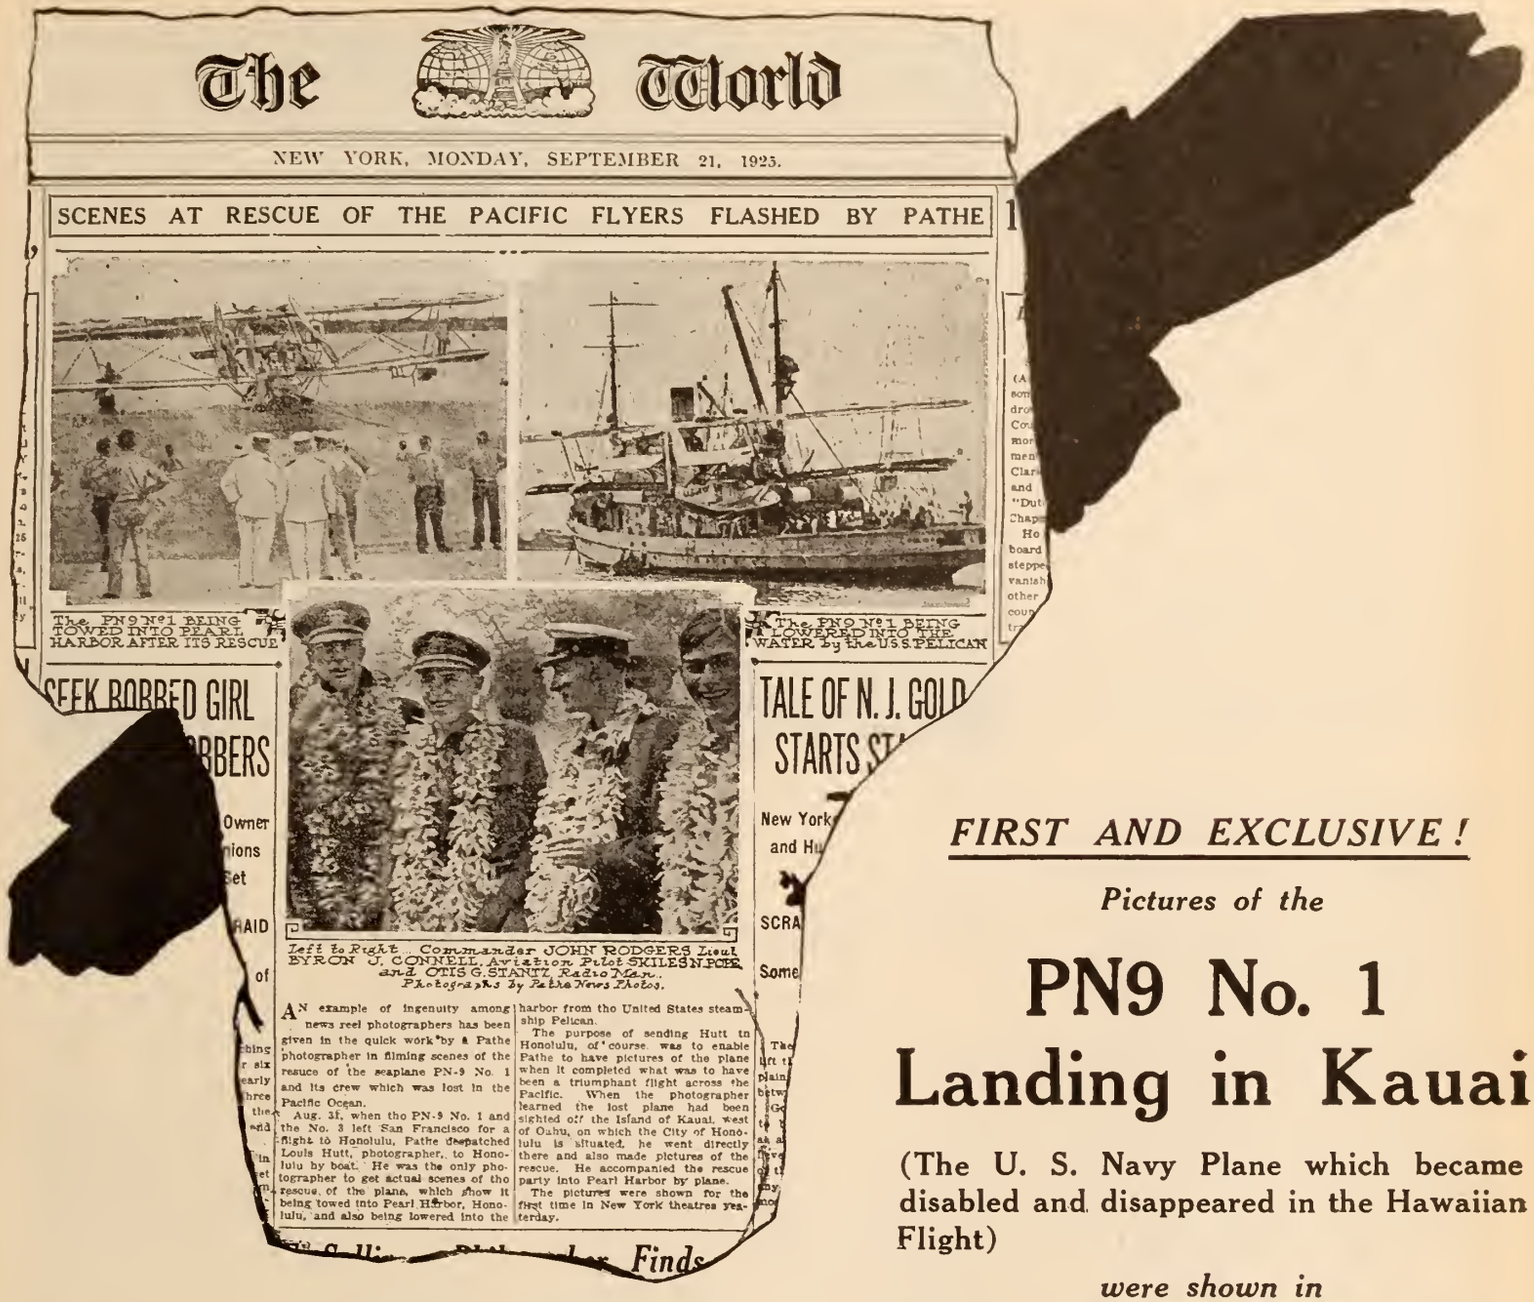
"I'll Show You the Town" Given Photo Contest

The amateur photographers of Toledo, Ohio, were out to win the $50 camera and carrying case which the Gross Photo Supply Company offered as a prize for an "I'll Show You the Town" contest at the instigation of A. J. Sharick, exploitation man from Universal's Cleveland exchange, when the picture was about to play the Temple theatre. The contest was for the best set of photographs by an amateur photographer showing the main points of interest of Toledo.

The Chamber of Commerce became so interested in Sharick's contest that the secretary appointed a special committee to decide which set of views was the best. All three newspapers gave publicity to the stunt.

The kodak store mailed out 1,000 cards telling about the contest and incidentally something about the picture. They also gave a big window display with the prize camera the center attraction.

In a corner of the Temple's lobby, Sharick and Manager Fred Walters arranged a very clever display. A triangular lobby stage draped with curtains was set with a miniature 24-sheet board at one side and cut-out figures of Denny and three girls walking along in front. Cut-out trees, miniature yellow taxis, and a toy aeroplane in the sky completed the novel set.



Mail Trucks Placarded for "The Air Mail" Showiing

Every mail truck in Fresno, Cal., and every U. S. Mail letter box in town was placarded for the showing of "The Air Mail" at the Kinema theatre. The mail trucks carried banners covering the two sides of the machines reading, "The Air Mail—Neither snow nor rain, nor wind, nor night can stay the pilot in his flight." On the letter boxes were regular window cards for the production.

On the canopy in front of the theatre Manager Purkett had a small airplane displayed which was visible for several blocks on either side of the theatre.

SCENES AT RESCUE OF THE PACIFIC FLYERS FLASHED BY PATHE

The PN9 No 1 BEING TOWED INTO PEARL HARBOR AFTER ITS RESCUE

The PN9 No 1 BEING LOWERED INTO THE WATER by the U.S.S. PELICAN

AN example of ingenuity among news reel photographers has been given in the quick work by a Pathe photographer in filming scenes of the rescue of the seaplane PN-9 No. 1 and its crew which was lost in the Pacific Ocean.

Aug. 31, when the PN-9 No. 1 and the No. 3 left San Francisco for a flight to Honolulu, Pathe despatched Louis Hutt, photographer, to Honolulu by boat. He was the only photographer to get actual scenes of the rescue of the plane, which show it being towed into Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, and also being lowered into the harbor from the United States steamship Pelican.

The purpose of sending Hutt to Honolulu, of course, was to enable Pathe to have pictures of the plane when it completed what was to have been a triumphant flight across the Pacific. When the photographer learned the lost plane had been sighted off the Island of Kauai, west of Oahu, on which the City of Honolulu is situated, he went directly there and also made pictures of the rescue. He accompanied the rescue party into Pearl Harbor by plane.

in New York, Chicago and Newark on Sunday, Sept. 20. Prints for the rest of the United States were shipped to the rest of the country the same day.

So great was the speed with which these most fascinating and timely pictures brought to New York, that the metropolitan newspapers used enlargements from the film for their first pictorial record of the event.

The PN9 No. 1 landed at Kauái, Hawaiian Islands on Sept. 11. Pathe News cameraman Hutt flew to meet her when she arrived, the only news cameraman on the job.

Only nine days later, the pictures were on the screen, many thousands of miles away.

PATHE NEWS WAS FIRST. THERE WAS NO SECOND!

Elaborate Style Revue is "Slave of Fashion" Aid

An elaborate fashion revue held under the auspices of Peggy Hamilton, fashion expert of the Los Angeles Times, was the outstanding feature of the campaign recently waged on "A Slave of Fashion," by Bert Lennon, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, in Los Angeles where this picture played at Loew's State. Twelve models and two pages assisted Miss Hamilton, more than $57,000 worth of gowns and furs loaned by local merchants being displayed. Director Henley acted as master of ceremonies. Press notices were contributed by the Los Angeles Times.

Several thousand copies of a letter written by Norma Shearer to the Schuck Dry Cleaning company commending their service were mailed out by the company and a copy enclosed with every package delivered. Twenty-six Owl Drug stores featured "A Slave of Fashion" sundaes and distributed cards exploiting them to their patrons. Soda clerks wore badges recommending these sundaes, which proved popular. One of the leading jewelry firms, Feagan and Company, devoted three windows to displays of solid gold frames in which pictures of Miss Shearer were mounted.

"Fast Express" Tickets as Retail Tie-up Medium

Joseph W. Springer who owns the Strand theatre in Elizabethtown, Ind., has found an excellent means of starting a new chapter play off. He tried it on "The Fast Express."

In a co-operative arrangement with the merchants of his town he sells them tickets for the first episode of the serial which they in turn give away to their customers. Since he charges only one cent a ticket for these, the merchants feel free to give them away with all purchases of ten cents or more. While the charge is small, it enables Mr. Springer to pay out on his show; the stunt gives the customers practically a free show and at the same time generates much good will for the merchants.

Clever window display for "Beggar on Horseback" (Paramount) by Manager Walter League of the Strand theatre, Memphis, in a music store. Each song featured centered about a "dream" idea, tying up with the dream sequence of the film.

Smashing "Shore Leave" Stunt

Loew's Warfield in San Francisco Makes Navy Tie-up During Diamond Jubilee Week

LAST year, when Loew's Warfield theatre, San Francisco key house of West Coast Theatres, Inc., played "Classmates," they secured the co-operation of the U. S. Army in putting across a splendid and spirited stage presentation which was calculated to stir patriotism and an added admiration for Uncle Sam's army. The idea went across beautifully.

This year a combination of events and circumstances again lent themselves to the West Coast people and a new high mark in interest and enthusiasm was created.

"Shore Leave" was booked into Loew's Warfield from September 5th to the 11th —day and date with the Diamond Jubilee, the biggest celebration San Francisco, a city which prides itself upon civic celebrations, had ever staged. Hundreds of thousands of visitors swarmed into the city and parades, fetes, and carnivals were hourly occurrences.

The U. S. S. "Savannah," mother ship to the division of submarines in the Pacific, had been ordered to dock at San Francisco to participate in the celebration and as the big battle cruiser, leading the flotilla of submarines, swung into the harbor of the Golden Gate and dropped anchor off California City to coal for its stay, Frank Whitbeck, publicity director of West Coast Theatres, Inc., climbed aboard a power boat and sped down the bay to greet Captain John R. Thompkins, the commander, and invite him to participate with the theatre in bringing home a rousing "Navy Week" at Loew's Warfield—to thoroughly sell the idea of the navy to the thousands of visitors from inland points who were to be in the city for the celebration.

Captain Thompkins, seeing the possibility of navy propaganda by appearance of the 30 piece band from the Savannah upon the stage of Loew's Warfield before approximately 100,000 people, agreed to the press agent's proposition and sent his organization to Loew's Warfield for the first three days of the seven day engagement.

Fanchon and Marco conceived a splendid presentation with the band on stage and with the addition of the "Wings of the Fleet," the two reel educational film of navy aviation sponsored by the Naval Board of the United States, Loew's Warfield theatre was able to put across a smashing week.

Co-operation such as this builds for a better and finer understanding between the theatre management and the federal and city governments and even though many cities are not situated as well as San Francisco in matters of this sort an effort can be made to bring the theatre into closer contact when pictures such as "Shore Leave" or "The Midshipman" are available.

"I'll Show You the Town" Aided by Ballyhoo

At the Liberty of Puyallup, Wash., with the aid of Frederic Babcock, Universal exploiteer out of the Seattle exchange, Manager Mike Barevic stepped on "I'll Show You the Town."

A man on horseback was secured to gallop through the streets and countryside round about Puyallup. Signs hanging from his saddle proclaimed that he was hurrying to see "I'll Show You the Town" at the Liberty theatre.

Manager Latts of the Royal theatre, Ashland, Wisc., was the creator of this attractive parade stunt for "Classmates" (First Nat'l). The can non, soldiers and cadets on the truck were the talk of the town.

Collegiate "Freshman" Stunts

Feature Comedy at Colony, New York, Given Lively Prologue and Displays

THE run of "The Freshman" at the B. S. Moss Colony theatre on Broadway, New York City, opened recently after an intensive campaign. The Moss management has surrounded the feature with an elaborate prologue entitled "Campus Capers," produced under the personal supervision of George Choos and featuring Jack Broderick and Betty Felsen, Hill's Blue Devils orchestra, Seamon Krevoff, five members of the "University of Southern California Trojans" — Clark, Eaton, Scott, Shutts and Magee—who appear in the Lloyd picture in the scenes staged at the University, and the famous Colony ensemble. This merry musical melange was staged by Harry Shaw. Lighting effects are by J. De Rosa, scenic art is by Nat Eastman, costumes were provided by Textile Mills, Hilton Company and Tams. Jack Glogan arranged the music.

In keeping with the type of the picture the opening overture is "Jolly Fellows" by Suppe, rendered by the Colony Melody Masters, with Dr. Edward Kilenyi and E. Chas. Egget as associate directors. John Priest is at the Colony Grand Organ console.

The lobby was decked with extensive displays of paintings of Lloyd in character as "The Freshman" and punch scenes from the picture. As a ballyhoo, a sightseeing bus was employed. Three large cutouts were perched on the roof and colorful streamers hung along the sides. With a full crew of "college boys," garbed as Lloyd appears in the campus scenes of the picture, cheering through megaphones and waving Harold Lloyd flags, the bus was driven practically all over the city.

A special painted sign of twenty-four sheet size was placed high on the front of the Colony some time previous to the opening of the picture, and an extensive poster campaign was worked out with good displays in the most advantageous locations throughout the city and vicinity. Extensive advertising was carried in the daily newspapers.

Pioneer Oregonians Free to See "Iron Horse"

The Morning Oregonian, published at Portland, Oregon, recently acted as host at a theatre party to all pioneer Oregonians who came to that state by rail between the years of 1869 and 1885. The guest party was arranged with Jensen & Von Herberg and J. J. Parker, proprietors of the Majestic theatre, as part of the exploitation of the feature "The Iron Horse."

A booth was erected in the Oregonian offices, where those eligible to be guests were invited to register. The registrations were afterward checked up, and tickets for the opening sent to those who qualified. The Oregonian played the matter up prominently in front page stories, and also announced that guests would not even be required to walk to the theatre, but would be driven in cars which would line up in parade formation and make a short tour of the downtown streets before the performance.

The Oregonian made much of the event, due to the fact that at that time, the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific forged the connecting link across the continent in 1869, that veteran news sheet was already in its 19th year.

The pioneers who attended the guest performance were not only carried to the theatre in cars, but returned to their homes by the same means.

Miniature Lobby Display on "Night Life of N. Y."

"Night Life of New York," playing the Stratford theatre, Poughkeepsie, received novel and effective exploitation at the hands of Manager Ed. A. Zorn, in the form of a mechanical display in the best window location in town.

This consisted of a hand-painted night scene of New York, cut out from beaverboard. The startling thing about the exhibit was its air of realism created by the tiny elevated trains running back and forth, and by the constant flow of traffic in the streets, an effect arrived at by keeping the toy street car and automobiles in constant motion.

Short Subjects and Serials

Sennett Studios Still Busy Making Pathe Comedies

Though the Sennett comedy units worked without let-down during the summer months that company is about to enter upon a very busy production schedule for the fall season.

Among the directors now starting new comedies for the Pathe program are Eddie Cline, who is filming a yachting comedy starring Alice Day; Lloyd Bacon, who is directing Ralph Graves in a two-reeler in which Thelma Parr and Marvin Lobach have the principal supporting roles; Gil Pratt is in charge of a unit making a comedy featuring Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde and Natalie Kingston; and Harry Langdon has started a comedy in which he will be seen as a henpecked husband. Harry Edwards is directing Langdon.

Red Seal Pictures and Max Fleischer, cartoonist, have signed a new three year contract whereby Red Seal will distribute the entire film output of the Fleischer Studios, including the "Out-of-the-Inkwell" cartoons, "Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes," "Marvels of Motion" and "Film Facts" series.

"Your Own Back Yard" is the title of the latest "Our Gang" comedy, produced by Hal Roach for Pathe. The above scenes are taken from the picture.

Scenes from "All Aboard," a two-reel comedy based on "The Married Life of Helen & Warren" stories by Mabel Herbert Urner. Produced by Fox with Hallam Cooley and Kathryn Perry in the name roles.

Izard Returns From Europe

Managing Editor of Kinograms Back After Extensive Tour in Interest of News Reel

FORREST IZARD, managing editor of Kinograms, the news reel released by Educational has returned from an extended trip abroad. Mr. Izard completed arrangements for the extension of Kinograms' foreign service and staff of camera men abroad. Among the arrangements which he completed is a contract with one of the leading "Gazette" producers of the British Isles whereby their product and staff of camera men, numbering twenty operators, are available for Kinograms. This includes service from England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales and nearby islands.

For Continental Europe Mr. Izard first established a main office or clearing house in Paris which serves as a main shipping point for all news reel negative from Europe (except England), Turkey, Asia Minor, Africa, Arabia and India. Points in the Orient such as China and Japan will continue to ship across the Pacific. The Paris office consists of a manager, Mr. Louis Dansee, and a staff of cameramen who cover Belgium, Austria and Switzerland as well as France.

Another most important affiliation was made in Germany with one of that country's leading news reel producers whereby Kinograms is assured of full and prompt service of all news events, and special news features from Germany, Holland and Russia. Another contact was made in Stockholm giving Kinograms full service in Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark.

Mr. Izard then journeyed to Rome, where a staff was organized to cover fully Italy and Greece. Special staff representatives were also secured in Spain, Portugal and Malta.

Other foreign points are being built up as rapidly as possible. Contacts already in existence include Japan, China, South and Central America, Mexico and Australia. A complete Canadian staff has always been a complement of the Kinograms' domestic staff.

Joe Rock Producing Four F. B. O. Comedies

Joe Rock, comedy producer who is making Blue Ribbon and Standard Comedies for F. B. O. release, now has four productions in work. "A Ton of Fun," the third Standard comedy, and "Salute," second Blue Ribbon comedy with Alice Ardell in the featured role, are in the cutting room; while at Universal City Rock's trio of heavyweight comedians, "Tiny" Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Karr, are working on another comedy under the direction of Jimmy Davis.

Rock will return to the screen in the leading comedy role opposite Alice Ardell in her next Blue Ribbon picture. Standard is also ready to begin camera work on the second of the "Unnatural History" comedies, which are being produced at the Bray Studios.

Completing New Stage at Educational Studio

The new stage being erected at the Educational studio in Los Angeles is nearing completion and will soon be ready for use by the comedy units under the charge of Jack White. The stage measures eighty by one hundred and twenty feet and is said to mark a new departure in studio construction.

Brook Loaned by Warners to De Mille

Clive Brook has been loaned by Warner Brothers to Cecil B. De Mille for the role of Valdar in "Three Faces East," an adaptation of the successful stage play. Rupert Julian is directing the picture from the scenario by C. Gardner Sullivan. Jetta Gondal and Robert Ames have important roles.

International Cast in New Clyde Cook Comedy

The comedians who support Clyde Cook in "Moonlight and Noses," his first Hal Roach two-reeler for Pathe, hail from so many different parts of the globe that the picture is said to have an "international cast."

Cook, himself, is from Australia, while Stan Laurel, who directed the picture, came from England with the original Charley Chaplin vaudeville company. Tyler Brook, juvenile hero in the film, was born of French parents. Fay Wray, the leading lady, was born in Canada, Jimmy Finlayson, seen in a character role, was born in Scotland, and Noah Young, the heavy, is a product of the West of these United States.

Taurog Completes New Lige Conley Two-Reeler

Prince, Vera James and Howard Enstedt. William Crinley will direct the production.

"Failure" by O. Henry is Completed by Fox

The Fox comedy unit making "Failure," an adaptation of the story of that title by O. Henry, has completed camera work on the picture, a two-reel offering. The leading roles are played by Harvey Clark and Kathryn McGuire. Daniel Keefe directed the production.

Helen Forster is Lead for Lupino Lane

Helen Forster will make her next appearance in an Educational comedy starring Lupino Lane. Miss Forster scored a personal triumph recently in the leading feminine role in "The Tourist," which starred Johnny Arthur.

Billy Dooley in scenes from "The Misfit Sailor," his first comedy, produced by Christie and released on the Educational Program.

A trio of scenes from "Dry Up," a two-reel Century Comedy released by Universal.

Clyde Cook's Pathe Debut Soon

Schedule for Week of October 4 Brings First of New Hal Roach Comedy Series

CLYDE COOK, English comedian who has starred in vaudeville and pictures in this country, will make his debut as a Pathe star on that company's program of releases for the week of October 4th, when the first of a series of two-reel comedies produced by Hal Roach, will be offered. Other important short subjects listed on the program for that week are the second chapter of "Wild West," current Pathe serial, a Grantland Rice "Sportlight" reel, "Aesop's Film Fables," Pathe Review No. 40, and the regular issues of Pathe News.

"Moonlight and Noses" is the title of the vehicle which presents Clyde Cook. It presents the comedian in the role of a burglar who is captured and who is offered freedom if he will obtain a corpse for a professor who wants to prove one of his pet scientific theories. The picture was directed by Stan Laurel, former star comedian who is now devoting his talents to the filming of comedies for Hal Roach. Those who appear in support of Cook are Noah Young, Fay Wray, Jimmie Finlayson and Tyler Brooke.

"On the Show" is the title of the second chapter of "Wild West" produced on the 101 Ranch in Oklahoma with the Miller Brothers' Wild West Show supporting the stars, Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson. This episode presents the various child characters introduced in the opening chapter as grown-ups, and the circus lot and big top provide most of the background for the two-reels.

"Outings For All" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. Pathe Review No. 40 features a prominent Broadway star, Ann Pennington, in one of the three subjects comprising the reel. Miss Pennington appears in a dancing novelty made by Alvin V. Knechtel's "Process camera" which presents the former Follies star "Charlestoning" in multiple action. Other subjects in this issue of the Pathe Review are: "A Gem of the Jura," Pathecolor scenes of Salina-les-Bains, and "The Rock of Ages," revealing scenes of mining in the world's greatest quarries at Barre, Vermont.

"The Lion and the Monkey" is the new release of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series.

Del Andrews Will Direct "Andy Gump" Series

Samuel Van Ronkel, producer of "Andy Gump" comedies for Universal release, has signed Del Andrews to direct the forthcoming series. The first of the new productions now being made is titled "Min Walks in Her Sleep."

"The Movies"

(Educational-Hamilton—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LLOYD HAMILTON has a comedy here that is very good in spots, but is rather spotty. There are some good gags in it that are bound to bring laughs, but for the most part it is the usual Hamilton material. It is a bit unusual for this comedian to be seen in a straight makeup, as he is in parts of the picture. Some double exposure shots show him in his street attire and as a double for himself in the movies.

The story is somewhat above the average for this type comedy and permits Hamilton to run full scope of his comedy talents. He leaves home, a small towner, admonished by his mother to keep his neck clean and to keep away from the movies. And then he wanders into Hollywood and is drafted into the service as a picture actor when Hamilton of the comedies injures his foot and it is necessary to get some one to finish the picture for him.

There is some good comedy when he gets on to the set for the first time and meets up with the leading lady in a love scene that is interrupted by the arrival of his big brother in the cast. Big brother proves to be a giant with whom Hamilton has had a run-in early in the picture and who is seeking revenge. There is a wild and humorous chase when big brother discovers his late adversary.

The Cast

A Country Boy.....Lloyd Hamilton
An Actress.....Marcella Daly
The Villain.....Arthur Thallasso
The Director.....Frank Jonnasson
A Traffic Officer.....Glen Cavender

A Hamilton comedy written and directed by William Goodrich.

The Story.—Hamilton a country boy leaves home for the big city and immediately gets into difficulties with a Giant, whom he outwits and turns over to a policeman. Lloyd then wanders into a motion picture studio just at a time when the star of the picture is disabled. He is impressed into the service to double for the star and in the midst of a love scene is interrupted by the giant, who is a member of the cast. Lloyd makes his getaway after an exciting chase and is welcomed back to the family home.

Summary.—This is a good two-reel comedy with a story well above the average and one that shows Hamilton off to the best advantage. It should go well in any house where the short subject is appreciated.

"Uncle Tom's Gal"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

EDNA MARIAN is the star of this brezzy little release, which seems to us about the best we have seen her in. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" in burlesque form makes its appearance once more, this time as a movie being made by an itinerant film company, with Edna as the simple country miss who takes the place of the leading lady when that person fails to put in an appearance.

Many of the gags are rather fresh and lively, and the whole should be good for a generous quota of laughs. The part involves just the sort of foolery that Miss Marian does to best advantage, and the mechanical props provide her with several ludicrous moments.

There is more continuity than usually obtained is two-reel releases of this sort, and it builds up to a suitable climax.

The Story.—Dolly, a farmer maiden longs to become a screen star. A visiting film company wants to shoot "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on the farm and she gives permission. When the leading lady fails to arrive, Dolly is cast and Little Eva, Topsy and Eliza. Various laughable sequences occur in the filming of the venerable classic along somewhat unique lines. At the end of the day, Dolly draws all of the undeveloped film from the camera magazines, hoping to see her "pitcher," thus ruining the most original version of the "Tom" show ever screened.

Summary.—Fairly original and thoroughly amusing slapstick comedy, with plenty of action and an abundance of laughable gags.

"Love and Kisses"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

ALICE DAY seems to be specializing in "Peg O' My Heart" roles in the two-reel comedies presented by Mack Sennett. For she is again the poor girl who is really rich and who is first received very cooly into the home of some social climbers and then made a great fuss over when they learn that her father has struck oil in Oklahoma.

The plot is about the efforts of the family to land a rich youth for their daughter and Alice for their somewhat worthless son. In places the play is too plotty, but once Eddie Cline, the director, dispensed with that and cleared the way for some of his gags, "Love and Kisses" started to come to life, and as it now stands, the work rates as an amusing and diverting film, capable of injecting merriment into any program.

Mis sDay seems more facile in action comedy than she is in the situation play. She performs with telling effect when there is a gag to put across, but when characterization is called for, she appears to be quite unimpressed with its importance and appears impatient to reach the "laugh" which is the proper goal and destination of these pictures she is making for Pathe. In this offering she has the able support of Raymond McKee, Sunshine Hart, Jack Cooper, Barbara Tennant and Vernon Dent.

There are several diverting incidents toward the end, which offers a laughable satire of the conventional "movie" wedding in which the heroine is being married to the villain while the hero contrives to arrive on time to prevent the disastrous pronouncement of the officiating clergyman or justice. The action picks up here and the incident is broadly amusing.

The Cast

Matchmaker.....Sunshine Hart
Her Daughter.....Barbara Tennant
Her Son.....Jack Cooper
The Girl.....Alice Day
The Boy.....Raymond McKee
Butler.....Vernon Dent

The Story.—The hero is being sought as a husband for a girl who has been seeking husbands for years. He nearly "falls" when he meets Alice, who has just come from the west and who at first is taken as the new servant. Alice is differently regarded when it is learned that her father has made millions in oil in Oklahoma and the matchmaking mother tries to force a marriage betwecn Alice and her son. It nearly succeeds, but the hero frames a situation and stops the wedding ceremony, which has been subject to several delays, as when the justice drops his glasses and cannot read the contract, a situation which bccomes worsc when the groom's mother proffers her lorgnette which so distorts the print and dizzies the justice that he falls backward through the window and into the courtyard where the action comes to a fast finish.

Summary.—A "situation comedy" which moves slowly at times but picks up well toward the climax and at that point succeeds in producing several hilarious bits. It should score as a satisfactory comedy offering in the majority of houses.

"Your Own Back Yard"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS new "Our Gang" comedy from the Hal Roach studios amounts to a starring vehicle for Farina—and of all the screen comedians none can carry more blithly the burdens of stellar honors in a film. The climax of the play gives the picture a rating as first-rate comedy, one that will register strongly with any audience.

Assisting Farina are Mickey Daniels, Jackie Condon, Joe Cobb, Mary Cornman, Johnny Gray, and H. M. Walker, whose titles are one of the best things about "Your Own Back Yard."

Bob McGowan, the director of the "Our Gang" pictures, has contrived a series of gags of certain appeal to supply his stars with acting material. There are a couple of "Joe Millers" brought in to help things along. There is the one about the bet of a cent that a boy can eat an ice cream cone right before its owner without the latter seeing him, with the bet lost and the forfeit cheerfully paid.

But "Your Own Back Yard" is better than these items—much better when the time arrives for Farina to come into sudden wealth—he falls asleep in a "blind man's chair" with the tin cup in his hand. With the proceeds he buys a dandy outfit of clothes and an express wagon full of toys and struts on by the pals who threw him down because his pet goat ate a radio set and a bicycle. Some good "chase action" is introduced when the cops are called out to shoot three dogs declared mad by a woman who sees them after the Gang have tried out some tooth paste which has been donated by a sample dispenser. "Your Own Back Yard" is a corking good comedy.

The Cast

Farina, Mickey Daniels, Mary Kornman, Jackie Condon, Joe Cobb, Johnny Gray.

A Hal Roach comedy directed by Robert McGowan.

Story—Farina is "in bad" with the gang because his goat ate a radio set and a bicycle. Also he is ordered to remain in his own back yard by his mother. But he slips out when he finds a nickel and buys an ice cream cone. Further adventures lead him to sit in a chair belonging to a blind beggar. He holds the tin cup and goes to sleep and upon awakening finds the cup filled with coins. Farina thereupon buys some new clothes and a lot of toys. He starts for his own back yard in grandeur, scorning the pleas of the Gang for a chance to play with him now that he is rich.

Summary.—A corking good "Our Gang" comedy with Farina in the star role. It is a finely presented and cleverly acted piece treating with the triumph of a little "down and outer" who becomes wealthy and sort after by those who scorned him when he was "poor."

"My Bonnie"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

THIS "KO-KO Song Car-tune" produced by Max Fleischer presents "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean" in a novel and interesting manner. The device to indicate the beat of the tune and the several bits of amusing cartoon effects should make it a popular reel and successful as an inducement to audience singing. They will all join in the song when this is flashed on the screen if there is any song in them. The words of the song are shown and the time is indicated by having a little ball or disk bounce from one word to another in beat. It is a very ingenious device for directing choral singing and the reel should be hailed as an entertaining novelty in any theatre.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"A Misfit Sailor"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a comedy with a lot of humor-situations and a story that should provoke many a laugh in the progress of the two reels. Billy Dooley and Vera Steadman are the featured players and Dooley proves himself a comedian of no mean ability. He is really funny without overdoing it. Miss Steadman also gets everything possible out of a part that does not call for too much. Eddie Baker of the supporting cast is particularly good in the role of the hard boiled sailor, who steals the parrot from the cage given Dooley to deliver to the Senator's beautiful daughter and substitutes a brick in the cage in place of the parrot.

This incident provides the comedy for the picture and it waxes fast and furious when Dooley arrives at the house, following the arrival of Baker, in the midst of the party. Dooley presents the wrapped up brick in the cage after Baker has presented the real parrot. Baker meantime explains an accompanying note by apprising those present that Dooley has irrational fits and can only be subdued with cold water. As may be imagined, water buckets and a hose figure prominently with the guests at the house all but having to tread water to make their escape.

The Cast

A Gob.....Billy Dooley
Gunner George.....Eddie Baker
Patricia.....Vera Steadman

A Christie Comedy by Frank Roland Conklin; directed by William Watson; photography by Paul Garnett and Frank Sullivan.

The Story.—Dooley is entrusted with the delivery of parrot to the Senator's daughter. Baker sees a photo of the girl and decides to deliver the parrot himself. He steals the bird from the cage and substitues a brick. Arriving at the house he presents it to the girl at the height of a party. Dooley arrives later and presents the cage containing only the brick. Baker tells the hostess of Dooley's occasional fits of insanity and that the only cure for them is to hurl cold water on him. This is done on frequent occasions, but Dooley emerges triumphant and with the complete admiration of the Senator's daughter.

Summary.—A fast moving comedy full of humorous situations and well acted and well directed with a story well above the average. It should go well in almost any type house.

"Moonlight and Noses"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

CLYDE COOK'S debut as a Hal Roach star is auspicious and there is good fun in the occasion for the screen patron. There are laughs, and plenty of them, in "Moonlight and Noses." Equally notable is the fact that the laughs are of a sort which promises well for the future works of this comedian under his present regime, which places Stan Laurel in the position of his director.

Laurel and Cook are of the same school of acting, and from this picture we assume that the actor understands the director and conversely the director has a deep understanding and appreciation of the kind of work the actor can do best.

The director must receive a large share of the applause due the sponsors of this comedy, which we think capable of scoring as a thoroughly entertaining number for any theatre. Laurel has done something notable in devising a new type of "spook" comedy. These are new "ghosts" for the comedy and the plot is built of amusing stuff, even though it does employ a rather grisely premise in the incident dealing with the attempted robbing of a grave in order to receive a reward from a doctor bent upon proving a theory concerning water on the brain. A title assures us that the doctor "could not tell water on the brain from rain on the roof."

The comedian's acrobatics and comic expressions find a wide scope for their activities in the series of gags invented for "Moonlight and Noses." The scene where he believes he is carrying a corpse in a sack on his back when in reality it is a very live suitor for the hand of the doctor's daughter, and also his experiences on the dissecting table, where he dons a suit of armor to protect him from the keen edge of the operator's instruments, are hilarious pieces and they are accompanied by a number of equally amusing items.

Cook is ably supported by Noah Young, Fay Wray, Jimmie Finlayson and Tyler Brooke. "Moonlight and Noses" offers the exhibitor an opportunity to book a two-reel comedy he can bank upon to amuse and win the applause of his patrons.

The Cast

Burglars.....Clyde Cook, Noah Young
The Doctor.....Jimmie Finlayson
The Girl.....Fay Wray
Her Sweetheart.....Tyler Brooks

A Hal Roach comedy directed by Stan Laurel.

Story.—An eccentric doctor captures two burglars who enter his house. He promises them freedom and a reward of $1,000 if they will go to the cemetary and obtain for him the body of a man whom the doctor contends died of water on the brain. They agree. A suitor for the hand of the doctor's daughter, who has been forbidden to enter the house, passes himself off as a corspe and is carried to the doctor. The suitor escapes and in order to obtain the reward Cook is forced to act as the "body." An attempt to carve him up leads to the greatest activity on the part of the "body" to escape the knives and saws of the doctor.

Summary.—Though it employs scenes in a cemetery and an attempt to steal a corpse, this comedy avoids all traces of the offensiveness that might easily arise in depicting such situations. It is a "spook" comedy with an entirely new twist and novel gags. The acting, directing and production are first-rate and the picture superior in conception and execution to the average two-reel comedy.

"Westward Ho"

(Universal-Blue Bird—One Reel)

CHARLES PUFFY, the rotund comedian is the hero of this one-reeler in which he is seen to good advantage. It is the wildest kind of slapstick but should be good for a few laughs.

Puffy, on a world walking tour makes an impressive entrance into the town when he is thrown from the rear of a speeding car and bumps into Gopher Gus, the bad man, knocking the latter out. He becomes a hero and is idolized by the fair and much sought Mildred, only to encounter a second bad man, who gives him chase. Puffy mounts a broncho and a wild ride follows. It terminates when he is thrown over a fence and in his fall knocks out both of the bad men, who flee from him in terror. The girl again hails him as her hero and they proceed on their way to the minister.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"A Runaway Taxi"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THRILLS are the goal of these "Stereoscopik" films produced by Ives-Leventhal, and here are some new thrills for the screen patrons. "The Runaway Taxi" is the name of a strip of stereoscopic film which presents a series of sensational effects. The spectator is given a ride in a runaway taxi and experiences all the chilling sensations which might come from a mad dash through traffic in the city and around the curves of a country road winding through a mountain. To furnish a stirring finish there is a repetition of the scenes taken in a roller coaster, the subject of one of the former pictures in this series. It should succeed for the novelty has not yet worn off these realistic screen adventures.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Invention"

(Herrick-Davis Dist. Div.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

PROVING once more that a story may be told clearly and logically without the aid of subtitles the sponsors of this production, one of the "Fragments of Life" series, have turned out a picture that takes its place with the best of the "short features." It is a distinct departure from the usual run of two-reelers in that the entire plot is unfolded without a single written line of explanation but, owing to a compact script and the fact that the cast embraces only four characters, the spectator need have no fear of experiencing a "what's it all about" feeling after the final fade-out.

The theme is one of those "Comedy of Errors" affairs in which the hero, a hard-working inventor in a small town, is hounded by the "wide-awake" constable due to a mistaken idea of the marshall's that the aforementioned inventor is the perpetrator of a bank robbery; the reason for his suspicion being the fact that he observed the embryo Edison examining fire-arms just before the hold-up.

The cast all turn in creditable performances, the work of Elinor King and Reginald Simpson, who are featured, being worthy of special mention. Miss King has a likeable screen personality in addition to which she can act though in this instance she seemed hampered by the director who evidently has a flair for violent gestures as regards expressing emotion.

The Cast

William Calhoun, Harry Stone, Elinor King and Reginald Simpson.

The Story.—Simpson, a young inventor and sportsman, has nearly completed a new process of colored photography but lacks the necessary funds to complete it. Meeting his sweetheart, Elinor, he shows her a shotgun in the window of a hardware store, and is observed by the sheriff. The local bank is held up and the sheriff conceives the idea that the inventor is the bandit and gives chase. Simpson is warned by Elinor and they start for his laboratory with the sheriff in hot pursuit. On arriving they find a tramp has broken in and wrecked the plant but has accidently completed the inventors process. They arrest him and discover he is the bank robber so all ends well.

Summary.—A distinct novelty owing to the absences of subtitles. It is a well told story and the cast is uniformly good.

"Ko-Ko on the Run"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

A RACE between the well-known "Ko-Ko" and a fat boy furnishes the plot for this Out-of-the-Inkwell cartoon reel made by Max Fleischer. The fantastical is exploited in several novel situations. In one instance "Ko-Ko" is supplied a donkey to aid him in covering the course, the animal being drawn on the run as it were with the back and head speeding along even before the cartoonist completes the lines which form the legs. The cartoons are blended with photographed images and there is a surprising bit when "Ko-Ko" is shown dancing on the eyelid of his creator, Mr. Fleischer. This seems a marvelous trick and will no doubt stir considerable wonderment in the theatre.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Story Teller"

(Educational—One Reel)

THIS Lyman H. Howe tale is as well presented as those of the series that have gone before. It is related by a fisherman to his boy as the pair are fishing from a bridge. The elder fisherman relates experiences he has had fishing in different parts of the world. This provides the opportunity for displaying a number of beautiful pictorials, as well as several educational and interesting details of exploits in many different countries.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Bad Lands

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5833 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS picture goes back to the old frontier days, presenting Harry Carey as an Indian fighter in one of the best Westerns yet filmed as a vehicle for this popular star. It's a colorful production in the true sense of the phrase, with cunning redskins, fair women, U. S. cavalrymen and a scout hero played up to the limit in the rousing events which go to the making of a genuine thrill melodrama. The Indian fighting scenes are intensely realistic and it would be a peculiarly cold-blooded critic who couldn't get excited when the attack of Fort Sumner and the burning of Porterville is flashed upon the screen.

From a strictly spectacular standpoint this feature registers big, but it must also be conceded that the director has managed to instill an unusual amount of straight human interest into the story.

THE CAST

Patrick Angus O'Toole.....Harry Carey
Colonel Owen.....Wilfred Lucas
Captain Blake.....Lee Shumway
Hal Owen.....Gaston Glass
Charlie Squirrel.....Joe Ricksen
Mary Owen.....Trilby Clark

Author, Kate Corbaley. Director, Dell Henderson. Photographed by Sol Polito and George Benoit.

SYNOPSIS. Sergeant O'Toole finds Indians attacking wagon train, joins fight and at conclusion he and boy named Freckles are only survivors. At Fort Sumner O'Toole discovers Captain Blake forcing unwelcome attentions of Mary B. Owen—and beats him up. Through Blake's plotting O'Toole is suspected of robbing the mails and imprisoned. Indians attack the fort and O'Toole heads the defense, which is maintained successfully until cavalry arrive and scatter savages. O'Toole's name is cleared and he wins Mary.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Indian attack on wagon train. Burning of Porterville. Assault on Fort Sumner and scout's perilous journey through enemy lines to obtain cavalry assistance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Harry Carey and Trilby Clark. Make it plain that this is an unusual Westerner, blazing with color and thrills, and giving an accurate outline of strenuous life in the old frontier days.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. An unusually high-class Western, action taking place in frontier days. Indian fighting scenes particularly realistic and colorful. Impressive melodramatic effects, appealing romance. A good box office attraction.

Trilby Clark in the Producers Distributing Corp. release, "The Bad Lands."

The Bad Lands (Producers Dis. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

A STIRRING tale of old frontier days, when Indians were on the warpath and U. S. cavalrymen fought as the savages, is outlined in "The Bad Lands" scheduled as the principal attraction on the screen of the ..... Theatre on ..... Harry Carey appears as the lead in one of the best roles of his brilliant career, to which he does full justice, with beautiful Trilby Clark winning all hearts

The story deals with the adventures of a dashing sergeant of the U. S. regulars, renowned for his clever scouting work, who is double-crossed by a villain, but clears himself

CATCH LINES

A Red-blooded tale of Frontier Days, a gripping story of men fighting a painted menace, a love theme of tenderness and beauty.

Harry Carey has one of his most thrilling roles as the man who overcomes obstacles of disgrace and lack of rank to save Fort Sumner for civilization.

With This Ring

(B. P. Schulberg Prod.—5333 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS one registers as a good picture for cosmopolitan audiences with some excellent South Sea Island sequences and capable acting by the cast, especially Alyce Mills, Donald Keith and Lou Tellegen.

Though possessing good entertainment value for certain classe it misses being placed in the "above the ordinary" class due to the director's insistence on dragging sex into every possible sequence with the result that it will not prove a good buy for houses catering to family trade.

With better treatment this story could have been made into a production that would stand out from the ordinary run of pictures as the story has fine possibilities.

THEME. Melodrama in which boy and girl, shipwrecked on an Isle in the Pacific become man and wife before God, with many ensuing complications after their rescue.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The marriage before God. The fight between Keith and Dick Sutherland on the island. The sequences in which the wife is harrassed by the elder Van Buren.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of the featured players-Alyce Mills, Donald Keith and Lou Tellegen. Put on South Sea Island dance as prologue.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in second run and houses catering to the younger element. Not so good for family consumption.

SUMMARY. A fair offering that will probably entertain the younger folks but which, due to director's flair for exploiting sex, won't get by with either the intellegentsia or family trade.

THE CAST

Cecilie Vaughn.....Alyce Mills
John Wendell.....Forrest Stanley
Rufus Van Buren.....Lou Tellegen
Donald Van Buren.....Donald Keith
The Portuguese.....Dick Sutherland
Luella Van Buren.....Martha Mattox

From the novel by Fanny Heaslip Lea. Directed by Fred C. Windermere.

SYNOPSIS. Donald Van Buren and Cecilie Vaughn, wrecked on an island become man and wife before God. Attacked by a mad Portuguese Donald is stunned and Cecilie, believing him dead leaves the island with a rescuing party. She goes to Donald's brother who refuses his help but offers to 'keep' her which she refuses. Donald's lawyer offers his hand which she accepts, as a measure of protection, on the lawyer's promise not to demand his nuptial rights. Donald is rescued and returning home finds Cecilie and the lawyer who returns her to him.

With This Ring (B. P. Schulberg)

PRESS NOTICE

A PICTURE of outstanding merit "With This Ring" will be the big screen attraction the ..... Theatre on ..... It is a heart-stirring tale of struggles of a woman, forced by circumstances to wed before God, to carry on and care for a child after the supposed death of her husband.

Alyce Mills, an actress of rare charm and personality portrays the role of the wife with an emotional fibre that is the acme of acting. The part of the husband is played by Donald Keith who gives an excellent performance.

CATCH LINES

Though believing her husband dead she nevertheless strove to rear a child without restorting to a sordid arrangement with the husband's brother.

You will experience nervous tremors up and down your spine during the fight scene between the husband and the mad Portuguese.

Makers of Men

(Bud Barsky Prod.—5500 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

HARDLY strong enough to stand a week-run test, this picture will do nicely for the daily change houses, or can be utilized as half of double bill. It isn't badly acted and most people will feel a certain amount of sympathy for hero Jimmy Jones, whose nervous weakness made a coward of him in civilian life, until he went to war and developed a tough spine, with the aid of a sergeant buddy and familiarity with danger and death. The picture's worst fault is its tangled continuity, due to the frequent use of cut-backs, and having the tale related by one of a group of rustics, instead of making a straight yarn of it.

Kenneth MacDonald furnishes a good character sketch of Jimmy Jones, but chief dramatic honors go to Clara Horton, as the heroine, and J. P. MacGowan, whose portrayal of the canny sergeant, the chap responsible for the hardening of Jimmy's physical and mental fibre, stands out as a bully bit of acting. The photography is O. K., but as much cannot be said for Forrest Sheldon's direction, which fails signally in bringing out the story's best points.

THEME. Heart drama with hero whose weak character becomes developed and strengthened by war experience, returns home a new man and wins the girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Jimmy Jones' first meeting with Sergeant Banks, his experiences abroad, his return home. Scene where he man-handles rival. The romance and happy ending.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Kenneth MacDonald, J. P. McGowan and Clara Horton are all well known and worth featuring. You might be able to interest your local American Legion Posts in this tale of a returned soldier. Play up the romantic interest, comedy touches and acting of principals.

SUMMARY. Drama with heart interest, few melodramatic punches, chief character, chap who gets courage through war experiences. Has some comedy value. Plot rather poorly developed, continuity bad. Picture will get by as attraction for daily change houses, or half of double bill.

THE CAST

Jimmy Jones.....Kenneth MacDonald
Lillian Gilman.....Clara Horton
Sergeant Daniel Banks.....J. P. MacGowan
Hiram Renfrew.....William Burton
Steppling.....William Lowery
Shiftless Poole.....Ethan Laidlow

Author, William E. Wing. Director, Forrest Sheldon.

SYNOPSIS. Jimmy Jones is the victim of a nervous trouble which causes him to start and tremble at any unexpected noise. Although he cannot help this weakness, try as he may, the townsfolk made no excuse for him and he is generally looked upon as a coward. To make matters worse, the girl he admires, Lillian Gilman, shares in the popular opinion. War breaks out, Jimmy goes to France. Under the tutelage of Sergeant Banks he forgets his nervousness, returns home a new man, whips his rival and wins Lillian.

J. P. McGowan, who appears in "Makers of Men" a Bud Barsky production.

Makers of Men (Bud Barsky Prod.)

PRESS NOTICE

"MAKERS OF MEN" is the attraction scheduled for the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. This is a story with a great deal of heart interest, the hero a young fellow who suffers from a nervous complaint which makes all the townsfolk, as well as the girl he admires, look upon him as a coward. But war breaks out and Jimmy goes to the front. There, under the tutelage of Sergeant Banks, who doesn't know what fear is, Jimmy developes into a new-man.

. Kenneth MacDonald plays the hero, with pretty Clara Horton as the girl. Others in cast are, J. P. MacGowan, William Burton and Ethan Lowery.

CATCH LINES

It isn't always safe to mistake a timid man for a coward. Jimmy Jones was nervous, but he proved there was fighting stuff in him at the finish!

The Fighting Heart

(Fox—6978 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LOOK like a reliable program attraction! Director John Ford has managed to put over a double audience appeal, those who like the strenuous, scrapping stuff will find it here in abundance, while on the other hand the story registers well from the human interest standpoint. Its hero not only proves himself a capable man with his fists, but wins a moral decision, for he combats successfully against the curse of heredity, his forefathers having been notorious for their heavy drinking habits. But he comes out victor on the hootch issue, and as a rough-and-tumble scrapper registers in the top-notch class. As a ring artist he doesn't do so well and we are offered the very unusual sight of a screen hero taking the count before a gloved opponent. But this untoward event is balanced nicely later when the defeated boxer whips his conqueror in a go-as-you-please gutter battle. George O'Brien is excellent in the hero role, Victor MacLaglen, a perfect example of a champion pug, Billie Dove charming as Doris, and the support is adequate.

THEME. Melodrama with hero who overcomes drink heredity handicap, is whipped in glove contest, but beats conqueror in street fight, achieves success and wins girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Contrasts of small town and Broadway atmosphere. The swift action. The ring and street fights. Romantic lure. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature George O'Brien, Billie Dove and Victor MacLaglen. Stress story's romantic interest and play up the fighting scenes to the limit.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for the neighborhood and small houses.

SUMMARY. A likely program attraction. Registers a number of good melodramatic punches, fighting stuff is capital and there's a lot of sympathetic interest aroused in hero's behalf. Plot rather out of the ordinary, acting first-class.

THE CAST

Denny Bolton.....George O'Brien
Doris Anderson.....Billie Dove
Jerry.....J. Farrell MacDonald
Soapy Williams.....Victor MacLaglen
Helen Van Allen.....Diana Miller
Grandfather.....Bert Woodruff
Town Fool.....Francis Ford

Author, Larry Evans. Director, John Ford.

SYNOPSIS. Denny Bolton's family has produced a large crop of men drunkards. Knowing that the townsfolk look down upon him, and that even his sweetheart, Doris Anderson, distrusts him, Denny heads for New York. Having licked soapy Williams, pugilistic champion, in a street fight, Denny tackles him in the ring. But he loses, due to lack of training. Later he trades wallops again with Williams outside the ring and thrashes him soundly, going back triumphantly to Doris.

George O'Brien, who is starred in the Fox production "The Fighting Heart."

The Fighting Heart (Fox)

PRESS NOTICE

AS its title indicates, there is lots of fierce battling in the story of "The Fighting Heart," billed as the main attraction on the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. Fans who rejoice in sharp fistic encounters within and outside the ring, will find plenty to satisfy them in this picture. But there is also a strong human interest angle and tender romance.

The Hero leaves his small-town home because of the bad reputation all the men-folks of his family have earned through hard drinking. Even the girl he loves distrusts him. In the big city he becomes a professional fighter, loses to the champion, but evens matters up by whipping him in a straight fist fight. Things finally break well for him and he finds happiness with the girl.

CATCH LINES

This man fought successfully against the handicap of a bad reputation earned by his ancestors. He won a moral fight, lost one in the ring, but proved himself an efficient scrapper by thrashing his conqueror.

A Daughter of the Sioux

(Davis Dist. Div.—Five Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

A FAST action production of the "western" type is this starring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber in which Wilson also did the directing turning in a good bit of work in both roles. This is the type of picture that goes over with the youngsters as well as the old folks.

It is really a "two in one" proposition as the explanation of the heroine's true identity consumes a lot of footage in the telling but it is all very interesting and that part of the explanation dealing with the fording of the river by the prairie schooners is one of the best bits of photography and direction yet seen by this reviewer.

The supporting cast, consisting of Robert Walker, Fay Adams, William Lowery and Rhody Hathaway, contribute excellent performances in their respective roles. It is a good bet for the second run and neighborhood houses and you may tell your patrons that it's fit for the entire family to view.

THEME. Western historical drama dealing with the efforts of the early settlers to prevent being annihilated by Indians. There's a romance thrown in for good measure.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The superb horsemanship of Neva Gerber. Ben Wilson's capable acting and direction. The fight at the top of the cliff between Wilson and Walker. The fording of the river by the prairie schooners. The Indian attack on the settlers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber as they are well known among the fans. Have man dressed in Indian costume walk up and down in front of the house.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business in second run and neighborhood houses. Good bet for the entire family.

SUMMARY. A fast action story with good performances by the entire cast. The direction is good. Mountings and photography are first rate.

THE CAST

John Field.....Ben Wilson
Nanette "Daughter of the Sioux".....Neva Gerber
Eagle Wing.....Robert Walker
Trooper Kennedy.....Fay Adams
Big Bill Hay.....William Lowery
Major John Webb.....Rhody Hathaway

Author, Brig. General Charles King, U. S. A. Adapted by George W. Pyper. Directed by Ben Wilson, assisted by Archie Ricks. Photographed by William Fildew.

SYNOPSIS. John Field, Government surveyor, suspects that Nanette, known at Fort Frayne as the "Daughter of the Sioux," is giving information about the fort to the Indians. Eagle Wing, a renegade Indian, incites the Indians to attack the settlers. Field follows him and a fight ensues in which Field emerges the victor. Nanette, recognized by an old scout as a white woman, confesses to Eagle Wing being her foster brother—also stating he is the son of 'Big Bill' Hay. Field, learning Nanette is white declares his love for her which she reciprocates.

A Daughter of the Sioux
(Davis Dist. Div.)
PRESS NOTICE

A DRAMATIC story of frontier life in this country will be unfolded on the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. It is replete with tense situations and moments fraught with suspense. Ben Wilson, as the Government surveyor gives a performance that will be long remembered. Neva Gerber, as the heroine, gives a wonderful exhibition of horsemanship in addition to a marvelous characterization of an Indian squaw.

There are many thrilling fight scenes incorporated in this tale of the hardships endured by the early settlers.

Robert Walker, Fay Adams, William Lowery and Rhody Hathaway complete the cast.

CATCH LINES

Racial prejudices had no terrors for Field—he loved Nanette though he thought she was of Indian blood.

Although positive of her guilt he, nevertheless, tried to shield her.

Let's Go Gallagher

(F. B. O.—5182 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

TOM TYLER, new F. B. O. cowboy star, makes his debut in this picture, and looks as though he is destined to forge to the front rank of screen heroes engaged in furnishing amusement for the countless admirers of Western features. Physically, Mr. Tyler is certainly "the goods;" over six feet, built like a Hercules and as nimble as a cat. They've given him a regulation Western plot, with lots of riding and fighting to do, and he acquits himself well at all times. The film is chock-full of exciting situations, the thrills are numerous and a side-line of timely comedy balances the melodramatic sweep of the story nicely.

Wherever the fans like Western pictures this one should get the money, as it amply fulfills the demand for open-air romances and fast furious action. The photography throughout is of excellent quality, including a wealth of fine exteriors, with some remarkably attractive long shots. Barbara Starr plays the heroine role of Dorothy Manning with vivacity and charm, Alfred Huston gets the laughs by a clever portrayal of the hero's rheumatic pal, Bendy Mulligan, and the support as a whole is capital.

THEME. Western melodrama. Cowboy hero becomes foreman of girl's ranch, defeats schemes of cattle-rustlers and wins her for wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Tom Tyler's riding and fighting stunt work. The fast action. Hero's rescue of little boy and dog from being killed by train. Scene in which he saves Dorothy from death in runaway.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost personality of new star, mention that he was selected out of one thousand other candidates by F. B. O. for Western pictures. You can praise the feature as melodrama of the kind that makes the spectators wild with enthusiasm over its forceful appeal.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where Western melodrama holds the patrons.

SUMMARY. Western melodrama introducing new star in person of Tom Tyler, who works fast and looks like a real attraction for the box office. Plot has nothing very new to offer but moves briskly, is alive with thrills and should go over O. K.

THE CAST

Tom Gallagher.....Tom Tyler
Dorothy Manning.....Barbara Starr
Black Carter.....Olin Francis
Thug Peters.....Sam Peterson
Bendy Mulligan.....Alfred Huston
Little Joey.....Frankie Darrow

Author, Percy Heath. Directed by Robert De Lacey and James Gruen.

SYNOPSIS: Tom Gallagher, cowboy, looks for job at Dorothy Manning's ranch, is made foreman and incurs enmity of Perkins and latter's cattle-rustling bang. Perkins obtains a mortgage on the ranch and has Dorthy kidnapped. Tom comes to her aid and gets to ranch with the money necessary to pay mortgage and keep Perkins from taking possession. The discovery of oil on the property ends Dorothy's financial troubles and she weds Tom.

Tom Tyler, new F. B. O. Western star, who appears in "Let's Go Gallagher."

Lets Go Gallagher (F. B. O.)
PRESS NOTICE

TOM TYLER, a new star, appears in the leading role of "Let's Go Gallagher," an exciting Western melodrama which comes to the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. Critics all over the country hail Mr. Tyler as one of the finds of the season. He is a big fellow, as active and powerful as he is good-looking, and shows to great advantage in this film. He is seen as a youthful cowboy who becomes foreman of a ranch run by a girl, defeats the schemes of cattle-rustlers and others who try to obtain her property, and weds her.

There's action and thrills in every foot of this feature. Barbara Starr is the heroine, with Olin Francis, Sam Peterson and Alfred Huston in support.

CATCH LINES

The build of Hercules, the horsemanship of a cowboy champion and dynamic personality—these are the characteristics of the new star—Tom Tyler.

The farm was gaily decorated with Japanese lanterns and a huge bonfire was used for the roast. There was music'n verything.

Florida

THE past week marked the opening of the Fall Season. All of the theatres used extra space in the papers and built up special lobbies. The most elaborate of these special displays was the lobby arranged by Manager George B. Peck, of the Strand, Tampa. The entire lobby was covered with wall boards, attractively gotten up with hand painted floral designs and the words "Opening of the Fall Season" spelled out with electric lights.

The Victory, Tampa, opened the fall season with Keith Vaudeville the first three days of the week. Manager Jno. B. Carroll was called away by sickness in his family, and George Peck, of the Strand officiated for him. Peck was right there with his bright smile and glad hand to greet the regulars and make them feel they were appreciated.

John S. Jackson, who operates the Jalms in New Port Richey, has opened a house in Odessa. This is a saw mill city and there are over two thousand workmen on the pay roll, so it looks like he picked out a live one.

The Greystone Casino in Kissimmee is being re-modeled and it is stated that the seating capacity will be nearly doubled by the new arrangements.

Cecil A. Ross has sold his string of three houses in Apopka, Mount Dora and Tavares to Jas. O. Dean. Mr. Dean is planning to make a number of changes in the houses to make them more attractive to the winter visitors.

Somewhere in Tampa, someone is having a fine time smoking up several thousand cigarettes and cigars that were stolen from the stand in the lobby of the Central theatre. The hasp and padlock was pried from the door and the place ransacked. Beside the smokes a small amount of change that was left in the cash register was taken.

The Rivoli gave away the Ford touring car last Tuesday night and Manager N. V. Darley says he never had any idea the Rivoli would hold so many people. Seemed like everybody in Ybor City was there. The stunt proved so successful that Mr. Darley is thinking of giving away another.

The Italian Club Theatre, Ybor City, is putting on musical acts with their picture programs. The people seem to like the stunts and good business is the rule.

A. Juran, manager of the Casino in West Tampa and Ybor City, has had both houses repainted and decorated. New lobby display frames have been ordered also.

Fred L. Freeman, who operated the Grand in Lake City for several years, has sold his house there and bought the Alimar at Live Oak from C. C. Price. After a needed rest Mr. Price is going to return to South Florida and get back in the game.

Philadelphia

W. A. V. MACK, local manager of Pathe, who was recently tendered a farewell dinner at the Rittenhouse Hotel, has been succeeded by Miles Gibbons from the New York office of Pathe. Mr. Mack has been promoted to Short Subject Manager of Pathe, in charge of the thirty-four offices in the United States. Mr. Gibbons assumed his new duties on September 14th.

Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, who has been associated with the Stanley Company for many years and has a controlling interest in a large number of motion picture theatres as well as three of the leading legitimate theatres in Philadelphia, will return to his office in the Stanley Company building at 1916 Race Street the latter part of October. Mr. Nirdlinger, who has been in Paris for about two years, will sail on the "Majestic" from Cherbourg on October 14th.

Leon Behal, well known to theatre men in this territory, has opened the Ben Frankin Film Exchange, at 1318 Vine Street. The new exchange will distribute short subjects only.

It is understood that work will start immediately on the erection of a new theatre to be built for William Freihofer at 4700 Frankford Ave., this city. Messrs. Hodgens & Hill are the architects and the contract has been awarded to the George Kessler Contracting Co., which recently completed the Colney Theatre, 5th St. and Olney Ave.

Superseding the plans of Famous-Players-Lasky for the acquisition of Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Pennsylvania, a contract has been closed between the two companies whereby the latter will play all Paramount releases in the Victoria Theatre at Harrisburg and the Capitol and Hippodrome Theatres in Reading.

Abe L. Einstein, publicity director of the Stanley Company, has returned to his duties in this city after having given more than a fortnight of his time to the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant. Mr. Einstein found this year's Pageant one of the most turbulent enterprises with which he was ever associated. He was in charge of publicity and some of the general arrangements for the Pageant.

Abe Resnick, who has been manager of the Grand Theatre and also of the Jackson Theatre, has been appointed manager of the Grant Theatre, 40th & Girard Ave.

Leo Hannan, assistant booker for First National's local office, is spending his vacation on a motor trip through Canada.

Dembow Brothers recently purchased the Coulter Street Theatre, Germantown, for an amount said to be $45,000.

YOU MEN who are tired of the usual convention places

HERE is a different, better, much more interesting and enjoyable convention site—famous French Lick Springs Hotel, the home of Pluto Water, known the world over as America's premier health and recreation resort. A less expensive place, too—meals and room are included in the moderate rate you pay at French Lick Springs; and you avoid the heavy theatre, restaurant, taxicab and other entertainment bills that other convention sites require of you. Doesn't that picture the sort of place your organization would do well to choose next time?

There is renewed health for you here in the bubbling natural waters of the Pluto, Bowles and Proserpine Springs. Severe winter is unknown in this semi-southern Cumberland foothills region. Golf is played on the two 18-hole French Lick Springs Hotel courses long after weather stops all thought of golf elsewhere. And this superb, perfectly appointed and equipped metropolitan hotel affords other diversions in abundance.

Ready now, too, is the large new wing containing, among other features, a well-ventilated daylight ground floor convention auditorium flexibly arranged so that meetings of any size from 50 to 1500 persons can be held without leaving the hotel.

Everyone intends to visit French Lick Springs some day. Your next convention is your opportunity to do so. Write now for illustrated booklet with detailed convention information. Address Convention Secretary, French Lick Springs Hotel Co., French Lick, Indiana.

Seattle

ANNOUNCEMENT was made public last week of the appointment of C. M. Hill as manager of the Metro-Goldwyn branch office in this city, succeeding Seth D. Perkins, who has been made a sub-District Manager with jurisdiction over the Metro-Goldwyn offices in Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake City. Mr. Hill was associated with the Paramount forces in Portland for seven years, and has more recently been connected with the Vitagraph exchange in Los Angeles. He assumed his new duties in this territory early in September.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Potter, owners and operators of the Clinton Theatre in Portland, last week announced the opening of their new Moreland Theatre in that city. The house is situated at Milwaukee and Bybee Streets, in one of the larger residential districts. It will be operated as part of the Multnomah Theatres Circuit of that city.

Moving of the film and office equipment of the Educational Pictures Exchange to new quarters at the corner of Third and Virginia was completed last week, and Manager J. A. Gage is now proudly entrenched in his attractive new space, formerly occupied by the L. K. Brin enterprises. The new Educational office is elaborately decorated in a light green and mahogany color scheme, and is one of the show places of Film Row.

Charles W. Harden, manager of the United Artists exchange, recently announced the appointment of H. M. Glanfield as sales representative in the local territory. Mr. Glanfield was formerly associated with various concerns in this city, and more recently has been connected with the First National exchange in Portland.

R. C. Hudson, assistant manager of the new Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange in Portland, and R. A. Tracey, cashier of the same office, spent several days in this city recently in conference with W. H. Drummond, manager of the local P. D. C. office. Several conferences relative to fall plans were held, despite the disruption caused by the preparations for moving the local office to new quarters at 308 Virginia Street, the location formerly occupied by the Educational exchange.

After a closed summer season, the American Theatre in Spokane has again resumed operation under a combined motion picture and musical program policy.

Louis Goldsmith, one of Seattle's leading suburban exhibitors, last week announced that he had sold his Society Theatre of this city to W. P. Ackles, former owner and manager of a downtown second run theatre several years ago. Mr. Goldsmith, who has owned and operated the Society for many years, has as yet announced no plans for the future, but at present is enjoying the use of a brand new motor car around the streets of this city.

Edwin B. Rivers, former advertising and publicity manager for C. W. McKee's Heilig Theatre, and more recently manager of one of the West Coast Theatres in Southern California, returned to this territory last week to assume the office of general manager of the John Danz Circuit of theatres. He will soon occupy offices in the Capitol Theatre, from which location he will direct the activities of Mr. Danz's rapidly growing string of houses.

The Anzier Theatre, Seattle's suburban photoplay house catering to the colored trade, last week was purchased by F. S. Barkus, formerly connected with the West Coast circuit in California, according to announcement made by Roy Cooper, former owner. The house will continue under the same second run policy, with four changes weekly.

Arthur Bishell was announced last week by L. K. Brin as manager of the Connell Theatre in Aberdeen, now operated by Mr. Brin in the interests of the Warner Brothers. Mr. Bishell was formerly general manager of the Will Starkey Amusement Company of Spokane, operating houses in that city and in Montana towns.

Al Rosenberg, owner and manager of the De Luxe Feature Film Exchange, last week announced the appointment of A. A. Bruce as sales representative for DeLuxe in the Eastern Washington territory. Mr. Bruce has been associated on Film Row for several seasons, and has just recovered from a severe illness that has kept him off the road for several weeks.

Frank Graham and A. H. St. John recently announced that they had just purchased the interests of Messrs. Cormier, Fitzgerald and Robertson of the Twin Cities Theatres Company, and hereafter will own and operate the entire string of seven houses in the Chehalis and Centralia territories. The agreement was to become effective early in September, it was announced.

J. I. Lowenstein, president of the newly incorporated Elbe Theatres, Inc., owning and operating theatres in Aberdeen, Astoria and Ellensberg, recently opened general offices in the American Bank Building of this city. L. K. Brin, representing the Warner Brothers organization, is in complete charge of booking attractions for these houses.

Fred McConnell, short subject sales manager for the Universal Film Company, from New York City, left this territory last week after several days spent here with Manager L. O. Lukan and his staff. Following his visit here, Mr. McConnell was scheduled to stop off at the Portland exchange, en route to Universal City for a brief visit.

Jack Sullivan, manager of the Fox Film Exchange, last week announced the appointment of H. Lawrence as publicity and exploitation manager of the local office. Mr. Lawrence was formerly associated with Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles, and also has been connected with First National and Metro-Goldwyn in Los Angeles in exploitation capacities. His duties in this territory will include assisting exhibitors of the smaller cities to properly advertise and exploit their Fox pictures.

Central Penn

THE twentieth anniversary of the entrance of the Wilmer & Vincent interests into the theatrical life of Reading was celebrated in the company's four theatres in that city during the week of September 14.

Two of the company's Reading theatres, according to claims of the management, have the largest seating capacity of any theatres in that city. In addition to these theatres, Wilmer & Vincent, with Nathan Appell, of York, operate the Orpheum in Reading, having controlled a lease on this house since twenty years ago.

In connection with the Reading anniversary celebration Wilmer & Vincent pointed out that the firm now operates about 40 theatres, having acquired, since its first entry to Reading, theatres in Allentown, Harrisburg, Easton, Altoona, Norfolk, Richmond and Savannah. Sidney Wilmer and Walter Vincent, the original members of the firm, which was formed in Utica, N. Y., in 1901, are still at its head.

The managers of the four Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Reading are: Frank S. Micklay, Rajah; Joel L. Levy, Capitol; William Masard, Hippodrome, and James Kelly, Orpheum. C. Floyd Hopkins, director of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg, is also in general charge of the company's interests in the district embracing Reading.

The Victoria theatre, Mahanoy City, has re-engaged the Slowitsky orchestra for the Fall and Winter season.

Since his acquisition of the Strand theatre, Shenandoah, Lou Berman, of Philadelphia, has installed as manager, Nash Weil, who formerly managed the Rialto, in Washington, D. C.

Confusion was averted through the cool-headed action of the attaches of the Majestic theatre, Pottsville, in quietly informing the patrons when a slight fire occurred in the theatre recently. The house was emptied quickly and without the trace of panic. The flames were caused by a film igniting, and they were quickly conquered by a fire company.

The Victoria theatre, Mount Carmel, has a new organist in the person of George Gross, formerly with the Wilmer & Vincent circuit in the Rajah theatre, Reading, and elsewhere.

The Victory theatre, DuPont, has been added to the chain operated by Louis Marinos.

The management of the new $500,000 Strand picture theatre, opened by the Nathan Appell interests in York, on August 27, has begun the publication of a weekly four-page news folder, relating to the news of the theatre and coming attractions.

Announcement is made that new pipe organs are to be installed in the Refowich theatre, Freeland, and in the Elks theatre, Mahanoy City. Eugene McAtee is manager of the latter house.

Baltimore capitalists who were said to have been considering the erection of a new picture theatre at Frackville, in the Pennsylvania coal mining regions, are now reported to have abandoned the project

Mrs. Florence Ackley Ley, director of the Community Service Bureau maintained in Harrisburg by the Wilmer & Vincent theatres of that city, is recovering from a recent severe illness to the extent that she is now able to be out-of-doors again.

Sydney J. Gates, manager of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, has announced the appointment of Girard Newkirk as assistant manager of this picture theatre.

A number of boys who made a practice of sneaking their way into the Strand theatre, Easton, without paying, were recently arrested and fined $2.50 each. The management took this step in order to break up the practice, and apparently has succeeded.

E. S. Noreen, of the Rex theatre at Hutchinson, Minn., was in the Twin Cities the other day.

The Sandon brothers operating the Sandon in Jackson and the Sandon in Blue Earth have been visiting in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis distributors were called upon by J. Diener for the new program of his Capitol theatre at Dubuque, Ia. The theatre has just been reopened by Mr. Diener after being renamed. It was formerly the Family.

Finkelstein & Ruben are said to have taken over the Palace theatre at Mandan, N. D., from Joe Maitland.

Fox recently closed a sales conference in Minneapolis. E. T. Gomersall and Don Nairn, the manager and his assistant, were cast in the role of orators and among those who told them what was going on in the territory were F. G. Hallowell of Jamestown, W. W. Adams of Sioux Falls and Ray Stewart of LaCrosse in addition to those who make their headquarters in Minneapolis, Frank I. Mantzke and Jack Raper.

Harry Olin of the Orpheum Theatre at Grand Forks dropped in at Producers' office last week.

Cecil Mayberry, district supervisor of Producers', was in Minneapolis for a couple of days again last week.

Max Weisner of the Badger theatre, Milwaukee, was a weekend visitor in Minneapolis, combining business with more business.

Floyd Lewis of Chicago, supervisor for Associated Exhibitors is here picking out a new assistant manager to take the place of Charley Howard.

Harry Bailey, manager of the Pathe exchange here, has just returned from a trip on the Northern border of Minnesota, attending to business in that locality which was formerly considered hopeless wilderness but which is now taking on a development that centers around International Falls and the Rainy Lake.

Fred H. Knispel stopped in Minneapolis for a few days on his way back to Chicago after a trip through the Northwest for Producers Distributing corporation. He is assisting Cecil Mayberry as division man. They are in Chicago now taking part in the sales meeting of district men from all over the United States.

J. R. Banty of the Majestic theatre, Rhinelander, has been stopping in Minneapolis. He says that Wisconsin is getting its share of the film business this year with general conditions encouraging.

John Pillar of Valley City spent nearly a week here arranging for the program of his new theatre there. Pillar has done something that probably has never been done in the United States before. He has persuaded the whole town of Valley City to take a holiday on the occasion of the opening of his house.

Lloyd Willis, special representative from the New York office has been a guest this week at Warner Brothers office in Minneapolis.

T. A. Burke, Warner manager, has just returned from a swing around the key center towns in the district.

Earl Lorentz has completed his first week on the Paramount staff. He invaded Wisconsin through the port of Hudson and is said to have made good progress.

The Minneapolis Paramount office is bursting buttons off its chest this week. Out of 40 district offices in the United States it stood second in the annual contest. Manager A. V. Leak was congratulated by his company.

Not only that but Leak's staff boasts the champion of all the Paramount salesmen and another salesman who stands third in the United States. The champion is Fred B. Benno whose work in the North Dakota territory won the honor of placing first among 173 in the United States. F. W. Thayer, another North Dakota man, was in third place on the list.

The Garrick theatre of Hawley, Minn., has broken away from the McCarthy circuit and is operating independently once more.

Sid Heath of Wells is burnishing up the Pastime theatre at Mapleton which he recently took over and expects to make it one of the finest theatres in the district so far as service and appointments go.

Clinton & Meyer have given over the Two Harbors theatre to independent management.

Bill Biesel of United Artists is getting well underway his exploitation program for the territory.

Jack Hellman came back with a prize from his Greatest Movie Season ball in Sioux Falls, S. D., not long ago. He was master of ceremonies for the event which raised $700 for the town band. One of the stunts arranged by himself with H. J. Chapman, Ted Mendenhall and Harry Weinberg assisting was a star impersonation contest. To make it a success they all entered and the vote of the fans gave Jack the prize for his impersonation of Larry Semon. Hellman is exploiteer for Paramount.

Minneapolis may have a new first run picture house. Alexander Pantages, head of the Pantages circuit with its chain of vaudeville theatres, is said to be about to include this city with Milwaukee, Omaha, Des Moines and others in a string of first run movie houses that will eventually be extended throughout the country. The first theatre of this string is to be built in Seattle.

Lee Marcus, sales manager of Film Booking Office is on a tour of inspection of the company's offices in Des Moines, Omaha, Sioux Falls, Minneapolis and Milwaukee. He was in Minneapolis Thursday. Max Weisfeldt, district manager, accompained him throughout most of the tour.

Universal held more of its famous theater parties for managers and owners last week and this. Fairmont entertained on the 15th Owatonna on the 18th and Devils Lake on the 22d.

Howard Whelpley, former manager of the Rex and Lric theaters, Virginia, is now in charge of the Doric at Duluth. H. E. Billings, late of the Garrick, has been given charge of the Virginia houses recently taken over by F. & R.

Cleveland

THE management of the Weber theatre, Dover, changed hands last week, when Messrs. Sinkovetz and Lewis sold the house to Messrs. Frankel and Malott. This is the second house that Frankel and Malott have acquired in this territory within the past few weeks. The other was the Windsor at Canton. It is said that they are forming a chain of picture houses in northern Ohio.

F. L. Olds has sold his Opera House in Middlefield and his Opera House in West Farmington to Garland Shetler. Shetler is associated with Old in the management of a Middlefield newspaper.

Frank Zambrini has acquired an active interest in the Progress Pictures Company, in association with J. S. Jossey. Zambrini now has an interest in five offices, namely Chicago, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Cincinnati and Cleveland. Jossey will continue to remain in Cleveland as head of the Cleveland office.

H. A. Bandy, formerly First National division manager for the central states, and now representing First National in England, has been heard from. Bandy was in Ireland at the time he wrote to his Cleveland associates and says it's very fine over there.

James R. Grainger, Fox general sales manager, paid local exchange manager Ward Scott a short visit one day last week on his way to New York.

Jack Tierney, Pathe film and poster room inspector, was here to give the local Pathe exchange the once-over but failed to find anything that needed correction.

San Francisco

POLICE were stationed in the State Theatre in Oakland Sept. 4th to prevent a possible panic when a fire broke out on the roof of the structure. The audience, did not learn of the fire however, and the performance went on without interruption. The fire, starting in the ventilator system in the basement of the building, damaged the roof and one wall to the extent of approximately $1500. The blaze is supposed to have been caused by a faulty electric motor.

Homer Curran, owner of the Curran Theatre, returned recently from his summer abroad.

Leo Laughlin, popular house manager of Loew's Warfield theatre recently returned from his vacation in Catalina Island. All were pleased to see him back again.

The first week in September some robbers entered the Alexandria, one of the Pacific Coast's largest residential motion picture palaces, and after gagging the janitor early in the morning, attempted to open the safe, but to their embarrassment they could not do so and were forced to leave the theatre.

Albany

FEW changes of any importance are occurring these days along Film Row. Richard Melvin, who has been with the Fox Company for the past seven years, including periods in Kansas City and Cincinnati, arrived in Albany last week, to become a salesman out of here. George A. Roberts, of Buffalo, district manager for Fox, was in town during the week and in company with James Dermody, made a tour along the southern tier.

Many exhibitors and others will be interested in knowing that N. I. Filkins, one of the veterans in the business, is now residing in Syracuse, and running a printing establishment that specializes in theatrical and motion picture work.

William Tweedy, who runs the Star theatre in Mechanicville, has been confined to his home for the past three weeks with a most severe attack of hay fever. Mr. Tweedy's theatre has about 600 seats, and while it has no particularly advantageous location, it has always been a good drawing house. The severe storm which swept over this section last Saturday night, however, gave Mr. Tweedy and his assistants more than a half hour of worry. Transmission lines went out of service on two occasions, leaving the house in darkness for fifteen minutes and then again for thirty-five minutes.

Charles Sesonske, of the Grand theatre in Johnstown, was among the exhibitors who attended the Film Board of Trade's outing. While Mr. Sesonske and Frank Empsall have been leasing the Grand, they have now bought the house and Mr. Sesonske will continue at its head.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Silverman, of Schenectady, took a day off last week and attended the outing.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Buettner have a novel way of spending their odd hours. They reside in Cohoes, where Mr. Buettner has his theatre. Late each afternoon they may be seen driving along some country road, with Mrs. Buettner scanning the fields with glasses on the lookout for woodchucks. The other Sunday, Mr. Buettner shot not less than thirty-five. The Buettners have been away on an automobile trip, circling through New England for ten days with not a day of rain.

Claude Wade, of North Creek, was probably the most interested exhibitor in all New York state in the outcome of the recent fight in New York, when Slattery of Buffalo dropped under the blows of his opponent in the eleventh round. Slattery did his training a few miles from North Creek and a warm friendship developed between Wade and Slattery.

B. J. Straus, of the Palace in Saratoga, announces that he has dropped admission prices to 25 cents, and that the program is changed four times during the week. During the month of August, the Saratoga houses boost their prices and at the same time show some of the biggest pictures that can be secured. But from September on, the months bring only the ordinary run of business, with the exhibitors looking forward to another summer.

Last week was a banner one for Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hellman, of the Royal theatre in Albany, for not only was their daughter home for a few days, but their gifted son-in-law, Jack Little, broadcast his latest songs, including "Normandy" from WGY in Schenectady and WHAZ in Troy. Mr. and Mrs. Hellman rigged up the radio in the theatre and gave their patrons the selections as they came through the air.

Ben Davis, who is now living at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany, and who was connected for some years with the Schines in Gloversville, is now in hopes of being able to purchase a motion picture theatre for himself.

William Dillon, of Ithaca, president of the New York State M. P. T. O., has invested $150,000 in Florida real estate in the vicinity of West Palm Beach, according to word that has reached Film Row.

Ben Apple, who recently disposed of the King theatre in Troy, has started in selling real estate in Florida, according to postcards that are now reaching here. The last one came from Palm Beach. On it, Mr. Apple said that he had met Charles Walder, former manager of the Fox exchange in Albany, on the second day after his arrival.

George Trembly is making a good record these days in his new position as manager of the reopened American theatre in Troy. It must be admitted that Mr. Trembly is on the job for he appears each morning about nine o'clock and remains until 11:30 at night.

Illustrated songs on Monday and Tuesday nights are being used by Jacob Rosenthal, of the Rose theatre in Troy, as a means of bolstering up business Mr. Rosenthal recently played the part of host to 200 or more boys and girls who had been declared winners in the inter-park contests in baseball, track, swimming, basketball and other events.

There was a great baseball game on Sunday between employees of the Troy theatre and a team made up from those who work at the Mark Strand in Albany. The game was a part of an outing held on the Williams farm. Ben Stern did the twirling for the Troy crowd, with Joe Wall behind the bat. At the end of the game, no one seemed to know exactly what the score was.

The Griswold, in Troy, managed by Jake Golden, a former newspaper man, has been drawing big crowds each Monday night with Charleston dance contests along with the pictures.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McNamara of Valatie, were along Film Row during the week, with Mrs. McNamara doing the booking. Business was reported as being good.

Children's Saturday morning movies will be held this fall and winter at the Strand in Schenectady and the Avon in Utica, through arrangements just completed last week. Jason Joy, of the Hays organization, was in town two or three weeks ago arranging matters.

Allan Hawley, former husband of Wanda Hawley, the actress, and a resident of Troy, died Saturday at the summer home of his mother near here, after a long illness. He was thirty years of age. He was identified with the motion picture interests in Hollywood for ten years or so, but several months ago his health failed and he returned to the home of his mother.

Harry Berinstein, of Elmira, was in town last week attending the unveiling of a monument erected to the memory of his father and mother. Mr. Berinstein remained over for two or three days as the guest of his brother, Julius, who has houses in Troy, Albany and Schenectady.

Atlanta

THE newly completed Charlotte Theatre opened on Labor Day in Charlotte, N. C., to excellent business and many congratulations from the many friends of the management.

The theatre is operated by the Sunset Amusement Company, and will be under the management of Harry K. Lucas, well-known in southern film circles. It is a motion picture house entirely, and has a seating capacity of about 750.

Due to the long drouth under which practically the entire South has suffered for the last four months, which has caused farmers and many industries to experience serious losses, the Georgia Railway and Power Company of Atlanta recently asked all theatres to cooperate with them in an effort to so conserve on light that a further cut in power consumption will not become necessary.

Fred Martin, Liberty salesman who was taken ill several months ago in Chattanooga and has only recently been moved to an Atlanta hospital, is still in quite a serious condition after having survived several operations.

W. M. Minder, F. B. O. representative in Alabama and Tennessee, returned to the city this week from Birmingham.

Henry Hury of Birmingham, Ala., reopened the Frolic Theater (colored house) there last week after having closed for a short time to redecorate the house.

Bill Specht, Tennessee representative for Liberty Film Distributing Corporation, was in the city last week leaving Tuesday to resume his work in his territory.

"Shag" Jordan, popular Georgia salesman for Universal, came in town for the week-end, leaving again Tuesday morning.

Carl Bausch, recently connected with the Columbus theatres, is now with F. B. O. He will work out of the local office as salesman, although his territory has not yet been assigned. Mr. Bausch will take up his new duties next week.

J. R. McIlheran, secretary-treasurer and manager of the Theater Supply and Equipment Company, returned this week from Florida, where he attended the opening of the new Capitol Airdome Theater in St. Petersburg last week. The house is reported to have cost $35,000, and John Gillooley is manager of the new theatre.

C. B. Ellis, branch manager of the Jacksonville F. B. O. office, was in the city last week for a few days on business. He returned to Jacksonville the latter part of the week.

Frank Rogers, Liberty's Florida representative, was in town for a few days during the week, returning to his territory with plans for an intensive sales campaign for the Fall.

O. K. Bourgeois, local manager for Associated Exhibitors, has returned to Atlanta after having spent a week in Florida on business.

H. B. Vinson, resident manager of Universal's four theatres in Orlando, Fla., the largest of which is the Beacham Theatre, was in Atlanta for several days last week transacting business with the company.

Ira P. Stone, branch manager of Vitagraph-Warner Exchange, left Monday night for Birmingham and Bessemer, Ala. He is expected to return to the city the end of the week.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH M. SEIDER'S occasional few hours absence from his office during the last week or so is explained by the fact that he is placing his two boys, Daniel and Henry, aged eleven and eight years, respectively in the Kohut School for Boys at Harrison, N. J. Daniel, who has been sick of late, has entirely recovered and both boys will leave for school this week Wednesday, accompanied by their father. Any one who has had the experience of sending children off to school will appreciate Joe's efforts in getting together the two outfits. Mr. Seider will place his Brooklyn home on the market and in the future will take up his residence at the Hotel Robert Treat in Newark.

Charles Hildinger and William Keegan of the Hildinger Circuit of New Jersey are back in their Trenton homes after spending the summer in Belmar, N. J.

Leon Rosenblatt has reopened his Lyceum theatre at Bayonne, N. J. This house has been closed during the summer months.

The next meeting of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey will be held at Asbury Park on September the 24th where the attending members will be the guests of Messrs. Hildinger, Keegan and Newberry.

E. Thorton Kelly, who operates the Grantley theatre at Palisades, N. J., and who has recently been elected an assistant director of the M. P. T. O. of N. J., has returned from a trip through the west. Mr. Kelly will attend the meeting this week at Asbury Park.

Joseph Seider has received a post card from A. A. Adams, who is vacationing in Greece, accompanied by Mrs. Adams. Joe says that the post mark of the town that the card was mailed from is "Greek" to him. Mr. Adams is the proprietor of the Newark Theatre, Newark, N. J.

J. B. Fox who operates a string of theatres over in Jersey has recently recovered from a bad attack of hay fever.

Several more September openings are reported for local theatres. Keeney's Bedford and Bay Ridge houses are open again and will continue their usual policy of vaudeville and feature pictures. The Plaza theatre located at South Jamaica and under the management of Baker and Craft opened about ten days ago. The Plaza is a brand new 600 seat house.

Somer's Highway theatre, Brooklyn, has had its name changed to just "Highway" and the house had its reopening on the 14th of September.

Joe Finger has put his American theatre, Fort Hamilton Ave., Brooklyn, on full time. The American has been running three days a week.

There are also several closings in order about town. The Victoria on St. John's Place, Brooklyn has definitely closed its doors on the expiration of the lease. A banking company is the owner of this property and they will convert the building to another use. The Auditorium at Ocean Grove, N. J. has closed its doors after a prosperous summer season and will not open again until next year. It is reported that the management will then adopt a policy of showing a pre-release of super-specials.

George H. Engelage has closed the Bijou theatre at Rockaway Point until next season and has already started on his usual winter pilgrimage to Florida.

Albert Delia, formerly connected with the Electra theatre on Third Ave., in the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn, had bought the Park theatre at 941 East 180th street, New York City and will close it for a short time in order to effect improvements and to renovate the entire house.

The residents of Gerritsen Beach will have motion picture entertainment for four days a week at the Gerritsen Club. This is a Community project.

The New Classique theatre at Marcy Ave. and Fulton St., Brooklyn and owned by John Cappadona had a little scare the other day when a fire started in the projection room. A complete show was burned up.

William "Bill" Hermann, Manager of Universal's "Big U" has forsaken North Asbury for his winter quarters in New York. Bill will undoubtedly be missed by the remaining travelers on the Jersey Central, with whom he had been commuting—or will he be missed? They say that Bill's bridge game is pretty good.

Charles Stombaugh, manager of the Pathe Newark branch has been vacationing with Mrs. Stombaugh and friends up in the Adirondacks.

Moe Saunders, booker for the New York Fox Exchange, is the proud father of a brand new baby boy. Moe, with the rest of the Fox Sales staff held a big party at the old Fox exchange on 45th street and during the evening Moe was presented with a handsome cover for the kids go-cart.

Harry Buxbaum, popular manager of the local Fox Exchange and Charlie Schwartz, prominent Brooklyn exhibitor, are becoming keen competitors for honors at golf, which by the way has come to be recognized as the standard form of relaxation for the harried captains of our industry. Mr. Schwartz was recently in receipt of a letter signed "Bronco," presumably from Mr. Buxbaum's young son and to the effect that his father had stated that Mr. Schwartz's game wasn't any good. However, the report is that Mr. Schwartz has the edge.

The sales staff at the Fox exchange are still preparing their appetities for that "Million Dollar" dinner which has expanded to a "Two Million" affair. Maybe they will make it a three million one before they get through.

E. Solkin who operates the Eagle theatre at 103d Street and 3rd Ave., New York City has bought the building next door to the Eagle and will increase the seating capacity from 600 to 2000. The theatre will also be completely renovated and extensive improvements made throughout.

Walter Reade, of the Walter Read Enterprises of New York and New Jersey has returned from his summer residence at Deal, N. J.

Two more local theatres are opening this week. The Arcadia at 59th St. and 3d Ave., will start on Wednesday, the 24th and the Inwood located in the Dyckman Heights section will have its opening on Friday, the 26th.

Denver

FRANN HARRIS, new Western District manager for Pathe, spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week in Denver visiting Mr. C. M. Van Horn, manager of the local branch of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Mr. Harris left Thursday evening for New York City to attend a conference which will be held there September 24th for all district managers of Pathe.

The State Theatre, Denver's most gorgeous motion picture theatre was officially opened Friday night, September 18th, with the brilliance pomp and ceremony which usually accompanies an occasion of this kind. The management of the theatre carried out all statements in regard to giving Denver a grand and glorious opening of one of the most beautiful and high-class theatres in the West. The remodeling of the theatre was under the personal direction of Harold Horne who has been directing a hundred workmen for the past two weeks. The result has been the change of an ordinary second-run ten cent theatre into an extremely elaborate and high-class amusement house. Some of the new features which greeted the first-night audience was the large tapestries on the walls and an ascending organ console. The opening night was strictly an invitation affair, some of the leading citizens and officials of Denver and the State of Colorado being among those present.

W. G. Seib, manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., of Salt Lake City, and his bride, formerly Mrs. Doris Tinge, motored to Denver last week for a honeymoon vacation. They were married at Salt Lake September 2d. Mrs. Seib was formerly secretary of her husband in his office at Salt Lake. Mr. Seib, or better known as Bill in and about these parts, was formerly employed in the old Denver office of Pathe on Walton Street during the days of Ward Scott. The bridal party was accompanied to Denver by Mrs. Larry Barrett, a sister of the bride.

Messrs. Brown and Waterson spent last week in Denver purchasing equipment for a new 350 seat house in Rapid City, South Dakota. The opening of the new theatre will take place about November 1st, and from all indications it will be high-class and up-to-date in every sense of the word. Mr. Brown is an old theatre owner and manager in South Dakota, having just recently operated the Colonial Theatre at Aberdeen, South Dakota.

Ben Fish, special representative for Pathe, is back in Denver for a few days after spending two weeks in New Mexico and Southern Colorado territory.

Albert Haehnel, decorator from Salt Lake City, plunged thirty feet from a scaffold in the Avalon Theatre at Grand Junction, Colorado, landing on the seats. He died a few moments after the fall. The Avalon Theatre is the largest theatre in Grand Junction, containing some 1,500 seats. It is managed by Walter Walker.

Arthur L. Janisch, who for the past year has been associated with the local branch of Universal, as publicity manager, has resigned. He has accepted a position as publicity manager for First National office in Portland, Oregon. Mr. Charles Lounsbury, formerly on the editorial staff of the Denver Post, has succeeded Mr. Janisch as publicity manager of the local Universal office.

F. M. Drexel, owner and manager of the Crawford Theatre, Crawford, Colorado, was a visitor in film row last week. Mr. Drexel says this is his first visit in Denver for over a year. He states that the honey business and the picture business is in first class condition. Mr. Drexel is known as a honey man in Crawford as well as a movie man.

C. Leslie Barnard, former dramatic editor of the Denver Post, is now associated with the management of the new State Theatre in Denver, in charge of the publicity department. Mr. Barnard has been with the Denver Post a comparatively short period, having succeeded Frederick Babcock a few months ago. Mr. Barnard, because of his thorough and interesting criticisms which appeared on the dramatic page of the Denver Post was soon recognized as one of the leading critics in the West.

All theatre managers of the Black Hills Amusement Company held a business meeting in Sheridan, Wyoming, Friday, September 18th.

Charles R. Gilmour, manager of Warner Brothers, made a hurry trip to Pueblo, Colorado Springs and Albuquerque, New Mexico, last week with very good results.

Kansas City

THE northeast corner of Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets, "big corner" of Kansas City's movie row, was bought last week for $45,000 by Dr. Nathan Zoglin from Milton Tootle of St. Joseph, Mo. The building will be remodeled into a modern two-story affair, the present tennants, the Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., having already arranged for space in the new building.

The Metro-Goldwyn trackless train, which passed through Kansas City the other day, was in a ditch near Emporia, Kas., having ran off the concrete road, according to reports reaching Kansas City. No one was injured, however.

The management of the Alamo theatre, Kansas City suburban house, by turning the theatre over to the American Legion Tuesday night, the proceeds going to disabled veterans, received liberal publicity in Kansas City newspapers.

Last Tuesday was an eventful day in Chillicothe, Mo. It marked the first of a series of trade showings in smaller towns by Universal. More than 150 exhibitors attended and newspapers "splattered" their front pages with the event. Among those in attendance were: George H. Clarkson, Eversonville, Mo.; C. A. Sunk, Ravenwood, Mo.; F. C. Bingham, Galt, Mo.; Mrs. Minnie Newton, Missouri City, Mo.; T. R. Sullivan, Miami, Mo.; J. W. Baird, Pattonsburg, Mo.; Mrs. Fay Barr, Hale, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brisco, Hale, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Summers, Unionville, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Gladdish, Higginsville, Mo.; J. B. Carter and J. B. Moore, Carter, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Casper, Laredo, Mo.; Mrs. W. P. Wood, Laredo, Mo; E. W. McClelland, Gilmon, Mo.; F. W. Silverman, Princeton, Mo.; Sam Minnich, Marciline, Mo.; K. H. Waldin, Hardin, Mo.; Dr. C. D. Weakley, Hardin, Mo.; H. T. Chelton, Norborne, Mo.; Marvin Beery, Hardin, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. C. Logan, Cainsville, Mo.; H. H. Ingan, Ludlow, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Pope, Mendan, Mo.; E. A. Dickerson, Bogard, Mo.; Hugo Martin, Meadeville, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Wigfield, Chillicothe, Mo.; I. J. Aye, Wheeling, Mo.; Mrs. Nancy Dowell, Gilham City, Mo.; Edwin L. Dwyer, Kansas City, Mo.

There was no mistake about increased business with cool weather along Kansas City's movie row last week. W. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, returned from a trip to Leavenworth, Kas. He then announced that the Kansas City office would undergo a complete remodeling.

H. F. Butler joined the Kansas City Vitagraph-Warner sales force, while J. J. Gilmore, Fox exploiteer from the home office, had a busy week in the territory.

Russell Borg, Educational booker, returned from a vacation just in time to find work at its thickest.

Sherman S. Krelberg, general manager of Chadwick Pictures Corporation, was a Kansas City business visitor.

J. J. McCarthy, former First National salesman, again has joined the sales force of that company in Kansas City. C. A. Schultz and C. W. Allen, manager and assistant manager, respectively, of the P. D. C. branch, made a hurried business trip to Omaha.

Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, blocked sidewalk traffic last week displaying his new Elgin watch which he won in the Universal managers sales contest.

Fred Young, F. B. O., Des Moines, Iowa, manager, was a Kansas City visitor. Lou Nathanson joined the Universal sales force as special representative, while Bert Edwards, formerly with First National, now is with Associated Exhibitors.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: D. L. Zimmerman, Leland theatre, Troy, Kas.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; Ben Levy, Hippidrome, Joplin, Mo.; Edward Frazier, Strand, Pittsburg, Kas.; Walter Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.

The Gayety theatre of Richmond, Mo., which has been closed, has been re-opened by E. J. Lime and Guy Cooper of Kansas City, while C. A. "Bones" Smith, former secretary of the M. P. T. O., Kansas-Missouri, has been named as manager of the Electric theatre, first run house of Kansas City, Kas. He formerly was manager of the Tenth Street theatre, Kansas City, Kas.

Not until after he had been honeymooning in Kansas City for two weeks was it discovered that J. B. Tackett of the Tackett and Southtown theatres, Coffeyville, Kas., had taken a bride unto himself. Then it "was" a honeymoon.

The Royal theatre, down town first run house of Kansas City, owned by Paramount, has changed its opening policy from Sunday to Saturday. The Pantages and Liberty theatres, other first run houses, already have adopted that policy.

Baltimore

ED HEIBER has resigned as Baltimore representative for Universal Film Corporation and has become associated with Warner Brothers, Inc., to cover the Virginia territory.

So popular has the Charleston contest proved at the Capitol Theatre, operated by the Associated Theatre Company of which J. Louis Rome is general manager, that a similar series of contests has begun at the Apollo, also controlled by the company. At each playhouse the series cover a period of five weeks with three of the most popular couples in the finals. They are held on Monday nights at the Capitol and on Wednesday nights at the Apollo.

Starting with the week beginning Monday, September 21, the Capitol Theatre, controlled by the Associated Theatres Company, began to distribute window cards again. About 200 were given out during that week.

The Garden Roof, located over the Garden Theatre and operated by Thomas J. Tobin for the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests, reopened to the public on Saturday night, September 12. While it was closed during the summer, extensive redecorating was done and a special dias like a sea shell was made for the orchestra to sit in.

About 350 patrons had to leave the New Preston Theatre, 1108 East Preston street, one night recently when C. Robert Moore, the operator discovered a small blaze in a reel of film in the projection room.

The audience was warned by Gustav Beck, housemanager of the theatre and while they were leaving in an orderly manner Miss Bessie Westguard, the pianist, kept on with her music.

An alarm was turned in and the fire was soon extinguished with very little damage resulting. This house is controlled by Arthur B. Price.

Baltimore's oldest film exchange will be vacated by an order from Charles H. Osborne, head of the Bureau of Buildings, which was issued after a complaint had been made by Walter R. Hough, president of the Fire Board.

This exchange is located on the second floor of the building at 412 East Baltimore street, in the downtown section. It is the Federated and operated by Peter Oletzky, who also operates the Comedy Theatre on the first floor of the same building and the Waverly Theatre, 3211 Greenmount avenue.

According to Mr. Hough, in his report to the Board of Zoning Appeals, one of the "most serious fire menaces of the city" was constituted by the exchange.

The offices of Harry Van Hoven advertising manager of the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests, on the third floor of the Century Theatre Building, have been completed almost and the carpenters will soon have finished their work. Mr. Van Hoven now has a reception room where his secretary does her work and receives callers and then there is another office where Mr. Van Hoven can conduct his own work and receive visitors quietly.

Improvements to cost about $10,000 are to be made on the Brodie Theatre, 1118 Light street, owned by the Riviera Amusement Company. The renovations will include an entire new front with interior improvements. The alterations are being made from plans by A. Lowther Forrest, architect. The work is being done by the Mervis Construction Company. This theatre has a seating capacity of 700 and was built in 1910. It is located in a South Baltimore neighborhood section.

A steel and concrete moving picture theatre measuring 138 by 135 feet is being constructed by J. A. Hincher at Richwood, W. Va., with a seating capacity of 615 persons. Plans were drawn by Levi J. Dean, architect. Huntingtown, W. Va.

Several locations are being considered now in Huntington, W. Va., on which to build a playhouse by the United Theatre Enterprises of which A. B. Hymen, is president, it is said. The plans call for a theatre with a seating capacity of 3,000 persons, it is understood and it is claimed that Keith vaudeville will constitute the main part of the program.

Des Moines

WILLIAM YOUNGCLUAS has bought the Amuzu Theatre at Scranton. He is also owner of the Majestic Theatre at Jefferson and will operate both theatres. G. J. Connors has bought the Alamo at New London. Mr. Johnson of Yanktown, S. D. has bought the Grand Theatre at Estherville. He bought the house from F. H. Graff.

The theatre at Red Oak, Iowa, is on the market. Mr. H. Simons, owner of the Red Oak theatres, is planning to move to Florida and wants to sell out.

Jack Nixon who came to Iowa following the boycott of Connecticut by the film men was formerly associated with Metro-Goldwyn at New Haven, Conn. He is now covering southern Iowa in the territory formerly covered by Harry Herman, serving Metro-Goldwyn. He ran into a goodly chunk of Iowa mud last week, which was a bad shock after the paving about New Haven. He spent eleven and a half hours making about forty miles and finally broke a wheel two and a half miles out of Libertyville. After his car was hauled back to town he made the rest of the week's run on the train. He plans to go back after the car this week. But he has nothing pretty to say about Iowa mud.

B. A. Mitchell, of Lynnville, may not open his theatre this fall, he states the business last year was not satisfactory. His house, the Isis, has been closed all summer while he was on the road, booking a merry-go-round at the state fairs, etc.

Park Agnew, booker for Metro-Goldwyn, has bought a theatre. He has purchased the theatre at Carlyle, Iowa, and will name it the Metro. Metro-Goldwyn pictures will be featured. On Wednesdays and Saturdays, Mr. Agnew will have charge of the picture shows of the theatre and will also continue his duties as booker.

W. H. Gilbert, who was owner of the Princess Theatre at Stewart, Iowa, died on September 9 very suddenly after an attack of heart trouble. Mr. Gilbert was located at Stewart for the past year. Mrs. Gilbert will operate the theatre for the present.

B. A. Voltsey, owner of the Unique Theatre at Bussey, has added another theatre to his string. He is opening up a house at Tracy but has not yet given the new theatre a name.

Mr. Boeke, banker of Hubbard, Iowa and also owner of the Opera House there has sold the theatre. Mr. E. O'Hara, owner of the Orpheum at Fairfield, has also sold. Mr. Pederson who had the Princess Theatre at West Union has sold his house to Pace and Bauma of Pocohontas. Mrs. Coinder has sold the Victory Theatre at Fairfield. Mr. Hoffman is the new owner.

C. R. Coons, who has built a new theatre at Seymour, opened the house last week. The theatre is very good looking, cost between six and seven thousand and will seat 275. The theatre has been named the Lyric.

Joe Jacobson, salesman for Pathe, is now pretty well recovered from his bad spill two weeks ago.

R. S. Ballentyne, manager for Pathe, and E. L. Meyers, associate manager, made a trip to Chicago for the sales conference.

Callers in Movie Row were Mr. and Mrs. Byron Watson of Knoxville and R. C. Metzger of the Strand at Creston.

The Strand Theatre at Des Moines, of which Jess Day is manager for the A. H. Blank Enterprises, has put in a staff of seven boy ushers. Girls have always been ushers for the Strand before this. Hubert Schrodt is head usher for the Strand. The new uniforms have blue trousers with a gold stripe, maroon vests and a royal blue jacket.

The girl ushers at the Capitol have also come out in new uniforms, much like those of the boy ushers at the Des Moines Theatre. They have red skirts and jackets, a black vest and red caps.

Motion Picture News wishes to make the following correction in regard to Jack Nixon's transfer and the following is taken from Mr. Nixon's letter: "In your issue of September 19th, you have under the Des Moines, Iowa page, information regarding Jack Nixon's transfer as follows: "Mr. Jack Nixon who was transferred to Des Moines from the office at New Haven, Conn., is serving Pathe on the sales staff. He takes the place vacated by Mr. Hermann who is now managing the Orpheum Theatre at Clinton for A. H. Blank Enterprises."

"The error is I'm not with Pathe, but with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation. Since there is a little difference selling comedies and Metro-Goldwyn Quality '52' I will appreciate you making the necessary change in your next issue, because when I walk into an exhibitor, he will try to buy comedies instead of Metro-Goldwyn pictures."

"Mr. Hermann is not managing the theatre for A. H. Blank Enterprises but is managing the Orpheum Theatre in Clinton, Iowa, for Frank Amusement Co."

Cincinnati

LAW'S Hollywood theatre, Portsmouth, O., the latest addition to the city's theatres, formally opened its doors to the public on September 6th. The policy is pictures and vaudeville.

Manny Naegel, assistant city salesman for Famous Players, made his first trip into the surrounding territory last week.

Ned Depinet, sales manager for Universal, paid a visit to the local exchange, taking up matters of sales importance with Fred Strief, branch manager.

Danny McNutt, manager for Libsons' State theatre in Dayton, O., is making good at his job and is very happy in his surroundings. The writer paid him a visit last week and found Danny hustling every moment of the day. This is an old trait with Danny for we worked together at the Capitol, Cincinnati, in the Asher regime.

The Universal theatre party at the Grand theatre, Ironton, O., on September 16, turned out to be a huge success. Many prominent exhibitors from Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia attended, among them: George Laws and wife of the Hollywood, Portsmouth, O.; Chas. Triebel and daughter of the Pastime theatre, Maysville, Ky.; Wm. Maddox and wife O. H., Ripley, O., and Ed. Burns of the O. H., Bainbridge, O. L. J. Frecka, manager of the Grand, entertained his guests in royal style and everyone was much pleased with the party.

J. M. McCoy of the Lamox theatre, Wilmington, O., spent several days around the various exchanges.

J. F. Robertson of the Dreamland theatre, Blanchester, O., was seen around film row last week booking pictures for the near future.

Ben. C. Almond, of the Garden theatre, Westerville, O., Princess theatre, Plain City, O., and Kingdome theatre, Grove City, O., paid a hurried visit to Cincinnati last week booking pictures and purchasing supplies for his chain of houses.

C. M. DeWeese, owner and manager of the Majestic theatre, Sidney, O., was a visitor to film row last week.

W. E. Parks, manager of the Grand theatre, Lancaster, Ky., spent a few days in the city with the various film managers.

A. W. Jordan of the Jenkins theatre, Jenkins, Ky., was another exhibitor at film row last week.

Frances Brown, Myrtle Freeman and Marie Dorsel of the local Paramount exchange office force, will leave the company this week. The first two to get married and the last named to open a Modiste Shoppe. Wonder which is entering the right business.

I. Lisbon announces that the Strand theatre, Cincinnati, will enter upon a new policy on Sunday, September 27. An orchestra is to be installed in the theatre under the direction of Theo. Hahn, Jr., general musical director for the Libson houses, with Harry Wiltsey conductor of the Lyric theatre orchestra wielding the baton. An advance in prices will also be effected.

Chester Leowe, assistant district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, was in the city last week making arrangements for a school for film salesmen. He will come back soon to start the school on its merry way.

L. O. Davis of the Virginia Amusement Co., Hazard, Ky., was in the city last week and it is said that he was splendidly entertained by Ralph Kinsler of F. B. O. and Levitt Bugie of Dwyer Brothers.

Andy Hettesheimer, genial manager of the Orpheum theatre, made his first appearance at the exchanges in six months. He has been very ill during this time but his health is much improved and his complete recovery is being looked forward to with a great deal of pleasure by all film men and the members of the Stage and Screen Scribes of which Andy is an active member.

Chas. Gross of the Columbia theatre, Dayton, O., drove down the other day and booked several pictures while here.

Colvin Brown, one of the heads of the distribution department of F. B. O., spent several days with Ed. Booth, local manager.

A. M. Potts, owner of the Eastland theatre, Maysville, Ky., is building a new theatre in his city.

J. Barbour Russell of the Washington theatre, Maysville, Ky., was in the city last week booking several large features for his house.

Ralph Kinsler of F. B. O., has collected the insurance on his broken finger which he sustained while cranking Bugie's Ford. The bandages are all off and Ralph is now looking for another Ford to crank.

Homer Guy of the Apollo theatre, Dayton., was in the city last week purchasing new equipment.

Bill Kunzman, representative for the National Carbon Co., and motion picture engineer, was in the city last week visiting his old friends in the film industry.

Milwaukee

H. D. Charness, formerly of the Chicago office of Progress Pictures Co., and one of the pioneer salesmen of that organization, has been transferred to the Wisconsin territory, in which he will operate out of the Milwaukee office. P. G. de Courey Odeam, formerly affiliated with Paramount and Warner Bros., has also been added to the staff of the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures, and is at present hitting the high spots in the state.

Art Deasuarmeaux, manager of the Strand Theatre at Madison, has been dubbed "The Speed Boy" by the Milwaukee exchange men who have visited him in recent weeks. Art has a mania for screening pictures at top speed, and several of the boys who individually dropped in on him recently, have come back with tales of seeing reel after reel raced through on his special projection machine. Art does everything that way,—fast but thoroughly,—and the excellent box record of his house gives testimony of the effectiveness of his methods.

Eddie Weisfeldt, production manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre, is sporting a brand new Wills St. Clair coupe. Eddie is one of the hardest working men affiliated with Milwaukee picture houses, and everyone wishes him much pleasant recreation in his "wonder car."

Pat Dowling, press agent for the Christy Film Co., spent the past week end at the Milwaukee Educational exchange, getting the stage all set for properly exploiting his company's product.

Henry Goldman, manager of the Colonial Theatre at Green Bay, has announced that his remodelled house will be opened as soon as the new chairs have been received and installed. Original plans called for having the theatre in operation again by now, but delays in obtaining the seats have postponed the re-opening dates. Film men who have seen the interior of the house since the contractors finished their part of the job, declare that it is one of the finest theatres in that section.

Leon Goetz of Goetz Bros., operators of a chain of picture houses in various Wisconsin cities, visited with Milwaukee distributors during the past week. He reports business as being good at this time in all the Goetz houses.

Frank Fisher of the Fisher Theatre Co., of Madison and Fond du Lac, was another prominent operator, who honored the Badger metropolis with his presence during the past week. He was accompanied by Sam Miller, who buys the films for the Fisher theatres. Both spread optimism.

J. G. Frackman, manager of the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures Co., has just returned from Chicago.

Ernst Hoefer, operating the Gem and Rex Theatres at Sheboygan, took time out for a Milwaukee stop-over en route to New York to bring his family back from a vacation in the family motor.

Ed Prinzer of the Fond du Lac Theatres Co., also stopped here while on his way back to his headquarters after a visit to Chicago. Like the other visiting exhibitors of the week, Ed has great hopes for the coming season.

Heinz Roemheld's Clown Week took its place this week as the first big stage presentation at the Alhambra Theatre since its acquisition by Universal. Heinz first became a drawing card in Milwaukee while concert master at the Wisconsin Theatre. After a summer in the East he has been brought back as director of presentations at the Alhambra. His first big offering is being well received.

Max Stahl, manager of the Milwaukee office of Educational, has just returned from a two weeks' trip through the northern Wisconsin territory, where he found business good practically without exception.

Fred Martin, formerly covering Northern Wisconsin for Fox, has resigned to join the Chicago force of United Artists. His friends in the territory regret his leaving the state.

The feminine element among Wisconsin exhibitors was represented in Milwaukee's film row this week by Mrs. Kelly, manager of the Badger Theatre at Reedsburg who paid a business visit to the city.

Gerald T. Gallagher, formerly manager of Universal's Cameo Theatre at Pittsburgh, Pa., has been definitely assigned as exploitation expert for the Milwaukee branch of the Fox Film Corporation. The Milwaukee branch has been established for only a few weeks, prior to which the local office was a sub-station of the Chicago branch. The advent of a permanent exploitation expert at the Milwaukee office is heralded by Manager John Lorentz as one of the many features that will be offered here for the convenience and profit of Wisconsin exhibitors.

Owen McKivett, operator of the Bijou Theatre at Racine, Wis., paid one of his rather frequent visits to the Milwaukee exchanges last week. McKivett is a frequent but ever welcome figure on the local "Rialto."

Ed Harris, who runs the Princess and Columbia Theatres at Peoria, Ill. stopped off to visit his old friend J. G. Frackman, manager of the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures Co., on his return trip to Peoria from a vacation spent in Northern Wisconsin with his son. They were

Lee Marcus, general sales manager for F. B. O., spent Friday of last week at the Milwaukee office conferring with local officials. He was accompanied by M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager, who remained in the city and on Saturday conducted a sales conference attended by the following members of the local F. B. O. staff: Sam Abrams, manager; Art Roberts, assistant manager; Dick Scheinbaum, Carl Ebert and Art Schmitz. An elaborate program for further boosting F. B. O. interests in the Milwaukee and Wisconsin territory.

Letters have been received by several local film men during the past week from Walter Hickey, formerly traveling the Wisconsin territory for Warner Bros. Walt is now selling real estate in Florida and judging by the letters, is knocking 'em dead. Figures used in the telling about his recent biggest deals looked like telephone numbers.

Lou Holz, formerly manager of the Lorraine Theatre, Milwaukee, has tendered his resignation and plans to indulge in a several weeks' trip through the Northland. Although he has made no definite plans for the future, he is bound to get back into the picture business, which has engrossed his attention for many years past and in which he established a reputation as one of the most resourceful managers of neighborhood theatres in this section. His specialty for the past ten years has been the rejuvenation of business in houses which no one else could operate successfully.

Rapid progress is being made in the remodeling of the Idle Hour Theatre in Milwaukee, and Max Krofta, manager, has announced that it is soon to be reopened to the public. An entirely new front is being constructed and extensive changes are being made on the interior.

New pep was instilled into the Milwaukee office of Progress Pictures Co., by the announcement that Frank Zambreno, president of the organization, had taken over the Progress Pictures exchanges of Cleveland and Cincinnati, formerly operated independently of the organization by the same name in Chicago, Milwaukee and Indianapolis. The merger makes Progress Pictures one of the largest state rights organizations in the country.

John Herzinger, prominent exhibitor of Neenah and Menasha, Wis., has set out for the hunting regions in the northern part of the state. He is an inveterate sportsman and will no doubt strike terror into the wild life of Northern Wisconsin.

Charlie Lundgren, manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation, has returned from Chicago, where he attended the district meeting of P. D. C. managers held at the Congress Hotel. He is highly enthusiastic about the plans for the coming season.

Eddie Prinzer of the Fond du Lac Theatres Co., of Fond du Lac, Wis., was among the prominent exhibitors who made the rounds of the Milwaukee exchanges during the past week.

Dan Roche, exploitation agent for the Producers Distributing Corporation, working out of the Chicago offices, is at present making a trip through the state of Wisconsin.

Frank Cook, operator of the Bijou Theatre at Appleton, Wis., spent several days in Milwaukee setting dates for his fall films. Frank is one of Wisconsin's pioneer exhibitors.

The Allis Theatre at West Allis, Wis., a suburb of Milwaukee, is soon to be reopened after being extensively remodeled, according to Eugene Felon, manager. The house will be one of the most attractive in West Allis when the contractors take their last scaffoldings and paint cans from the premises.

Ed Gavin, formerly with Universal has joined the sales force of the Walter Baier Film Exchange of Milwaukee, and is soon to make his first rounds of the state in his new capacity.

Al Segals, shipping clerk at the Milwaukee branch of P. D. C., has been most generous with cigars lately. Al is the proud papa of a brand new baby boy.

J. S. Wolf, district auditor for P. D. C., has left Milwaukee after spending four weeks in intimate contacts with the books of the branch. He has gone on to Chicago, where he will remain for some time.

The new Barton Organ that is being installed in Saxe's Strand Theatre at Milwaukee will be dedicated during the first week in October, according to Stan Brown, manager. During the interval between the removal of the old organ and the completion of the new one, a three piece string orchestra is supplementing Joie Lichter's Record Makers in furnishing music during the showing of films.

Charlie Oasis, manager of the Grand Theatre at Racine, Wis., dashed into the Milwaukee film exchanges on business during the past week. A little pleasure was, of course, mingled with the business.

Henry Goldman, manager of the Colonial and Grand Theatres at Green Bay, Wis., also looked up his Milwaukee friends last week. He states that the Colonial will soon be re-opened, after undergoing complete remodeling.

A new theatre is being contemplated for Benson, a suburb of Omaha, by the Metcalfe company, which is platting the former Country club.

Eighty exhibitors from Nebraska and South Dakota gathered at Pierce, Nebr., for the second party to be given by Universal, and Joe Douglas, manager at the Strand theatre at Pierce.

The president and secretary of the Commercial Club, Frank Pilger and Arnold Stienhraus, assisted Mr. Douglas in putting over the party. The town band turned out and headed a procession up the main street to the Pohlman hotel, where the banquent was held.

A new 1200-seat theatre which will cost $250,000 according to reports, is going to be built at Grand Island by Universal.

Buffalo

J. BERKOWITZ, manager of the Buffalo office of First Graphic Exchanges, has returned from a trip to New York city.

"Jimmy" Grainger, general sales manager of the Fox Film corporation was in Buffalo last week end. During his visit he held a sales conference at the Buffalo exchange during which he pumped three or four ton of TNT enthusiasm into the boys all of whom promised Jimmy to break all former records at the local exchange. The fellahs at Fox, by the way, have fallen for bowling and one night this week the Fox team assembled at the Central alleys for practice. In the gang were Emmy Dickman, Carl Fahrenholtz, Clarence Ross, O. T. Schroeppel, Norman Sheehan, brother of General Manager W. R. Sheehan, Tom Stapleton and Moe Grassgreen. Otto Schroeppel bowled the high mark and Carl Fahrenholtz got the booby prize, the last hair from Emmy Dickman's head. Now the Fox bowlers are ready to challenge any other exchange in town.

It is reported that Vassiladis Brothers who operate the Clinton-Strand have taken over the Linden theatre on Jefferson street, Buffalo. Rumor also has it that they have leased the Central Park. Both are community houses.

John M. Sitterly, after a try at the auto sales game, is back on Film Row again as a member of the United Artists' sales force. John is one of the veteran fillum men in this neck of the woods.

Charles W. Anthony has resigned from the Buffalo staff of Warner Brothers. Mr. Anthony was manager of the local Vitagraph exchange for several years. He expects to announce future plans on his return from New York city where he has gone for a few days.

The Cataract Theatre corporation of Niagara Falls, N. Y., operating the Strand and Cataract theatres, has declared the semi-annual dividend of eight percent.

The members of the boards of directors of the Buffalo and Albany zones of the M. P. T. O. of N. Y. will meet with the officers of the Producers and Distributors of America in New York city, October 5 to discuss arbitration matters.

The Amendola theatre, another of the houses in Niagara Falls which is paying the increased scale asked by the various unions, as well as the Ritz theatre, are cooperating with the unions through the issuance by the members of the unions of a Special Courtesy Ticket with which if presented at either theatre before October 1 the holder can obtain an additional seat with one paid admission. This ticket is inserted in the ad placed by the unions.

Ben Wallerstein, manager of the Broadway theatre, Buffalo, has a new one. He is putting on "Moonlight Shows." Or perhaps they are nolight shows. Last week at the height of the picture presentation and on several evenings, all the lights in the house went out. Everyone swore, including Ben. But it seems there was no kick from the shieks and shebas. Seeking light on the subject, Ben went before the electric officials who promised to push more water over Niagara Falls to get more power to get more light for the house that Ben built.

J. W. Straub and F. N. McCullough are reported to be interested in a new theatre to be built in Oil City, Pa. Plans call for the utilization of the vacant McGuigan lot on Elm street and the Straub and Cunningham property.

Colonel Howard F. Brink, manager of the Buffalo Educational exchange, never was an admiral but he knows how to navigate that I'il old bus of his through water puddles up to the roof. The colonel encountered many of these young floods down state last week when he visited Syracuse and Rochester.

Fred M. Zimmerman, manager of the Producers Distributing corporation office in Buffalo returned to town last week end from a down state tour nursing a beautiful cold caused when Fred got caught in some of those cloud bursts.

Well, Charlie Bowe, manager of the Frontier has gone and done it. Yep, stepped right up to the parson and said "I do!" Charley's back from his honeymoon looking as spry as ever and all set for a busy season at the popular Buffalo westside neighborhood theatre.

Again this season the Rochester Parents' and Teachers' association will cooperate with the Eastman theatre in presenting the special-Saturday morning movies for children. Although each program has been carefully selected and reviewed by the representatives of national welfare organizations, it will be subjected to an additional local scrutiny before going on the screen. Each week a committee from the Parents and Teachers association, headed by Mrs. Charles Thomas, president, who will review the program selected for the coming Saturday morning and will make such suggestions and recommendations as seem proper. The first of the Saturday morning performances was given Saturday, September 19 and there was a great outpouring of youngsters on hand. These Saturday morning shows are not a commercial enterprise, but were arranged for the sole purpose of providing specially selected programs for juvenile tastes. They will be continued every Saturday this fall and winter. All admissions are 10 cents.

Chicago

J. A. WEECE of Metropolis, Illinois, has sold his theatre interests to Louis K. Brenner. Mr. Brenner has formed a company which will be known as the Elite-Kozy Theatre Company.

Cooney Brothers expect to remove their offices to 1404-10 Straus building this week where the headquarters of the American Theatres Corporation will also be located. The latter corporation is the booking circuit recently organized with Joe Hopp as general manager, and of which Cooney Brothers are reported to be members.

After remaining in his Chicago headquarters for two weeks, Divisional Manager Aiken of Pathe is again out on the road and when last heard from was visiting Detroit.

City Clerk Huff of Galesburg, Illinois, who operates the Empress theatre of that city, is going on a three months' vacation to California where he will be accompanied by his wife. Mr. Huff is said to be Galesburg's most popular citizen and the recent election, in which he was elected city clerk by a twenty to one majority, bears out the assertion.

Manager Jimmy Gillick of Pathe Exchange, espects to move into his company's handsome new building at 1021 S. Wabash avenue on November 1st. Mr. Gillick states that the building is scheduled to be completed by October 15th, but in order to avoid any possible slip up the moving date has been set two weeks later.

H. A. O'Brien, Metro-Goldwyn salesman, has had additional territory assigned to him and will, hereafter, cover Central as well as Northern Illinois.

Frank Evans is rushing work on his handsome new Hinsdale theatre with the expectation of having it ready to open the last week in September.

William Pearl of the Pearl theatre, whose fine new theatre in Highland Park is rapidly nearing completion, plans to open its doors to the public by the end of the month.

Special Representative Floyd Lewis of Associated Exhibitors, who makes his headquarters in St. Louis, was in Chicago for a conference with Manager Harris this week and then went on to Minneapolis.

S. J. Gregory of the S. J. Gregory Company, was in New York this week seeing his mother and father off on a trip to Greece. Mr. Gregory expects to be back at his desk the first of next week.

Pat Dowling, short subject representative for Christy, and Carroll Trowbridge, feature representative, met in Chicago Monday, Mr. Trowbridge coming from New York and Mr. Dowling from the coast. While here Mr. Trowbridge conferred with Manager Lorch of Producers Distributing Corporation, which handle the feature productions, and Mr. Dowling took up sales plans with Manager Dave Dubin of Educational, distributors of the short subjects.

A. E. Alger of Urbana, has taken over the Rialto theatre at Bloomington, Illinois, and has appointed Tom Larson, manager of his latest acquisition. Other houses operated by Mr. Alger include the Majestic at Paxton, the Central at Fairbury, Colonial at Urbane, Park at La Salle, and the Peru at Peru, Illinois.

Thomas Fox of the Star theatre, Bradford, Illinois, reports business good and that indications for a profitable winter are excellent. Mr. Fox recently was in Chicago and booked a number of pictures.

Frank Thomshack, secretary of the American Legion Post at Loda, Illinois, has been giving the people of his town free movies all summer, through the courtesy of the Business Men's Association, and this fall expects to move from an airdome into the Legion Hall and continue the shows.

The Echo theatre at Des Plaines is being remodelled, redecorated and enlarged to one thousand seats. A feature of the remodelled house will be a new organ which is being installed at the present time.

The Majestic Theatre at Belvidere, Illinois, reopened on Labor Day and is now operating on a seven day schedule.

M. D. Martin of Mineral Point, Wisconsin, advises us that he and E. S. Perkins have sold the Alamo Theatre at New London, Iowa, to J. O'Connor of Chesterton, Indiana.

I. Maynard Schwartz, who has been visiting New York since his resignation as manager of Educational's Chicago exchange, on his return stated that it is his intention to open the short subject exchange on Wabash Avenue as soon as he can secure a desirable location.

Mr. Schwartz in point of service, if not in age, is one of the old timers on film row and enjoys one of the widest acquaintances of any film man in Chicago. Five years ago he opened the Educational exchange in this city and continued as manager until his recent resignation, all that time being in close touch with the distribution of short subjects.

Sam Katz of Balaban & Katz, returned from New York the first of the week, after negotiations had been concluded for the operation of the Paramount Theatres by Balaban & Katz. Mr. Katz, however, only remained in Chicago for a couple of days, going back to New York an Wednesday.

Clyde Elliott of the Evanston and Hoyburn Theatres of Evanston, has recently opened the Riley, formerly the New Lyric, at Fort Wayne, Indiana.

M. Whitmoyer is now selling for Security Pictures. Mr. Whitmoyer was formerly connected with Renown.

Clyde Quimby will reopen his Allen Theatre in Fort Wayne as a second run house. This follows the reopening of the Strand, which will be operated under a big picture policy. The Strand, during the summer, had been completely redecorated and refurnished, and presents a very handsome appearance. The other Fort Wayne houses operated by Mr. Quimby include the Jefferson, Palace and Colonial.

Samuel Abrahams, popular owner of the Gold Theatre, returned from a three month's trip to the Holy Land last week, and reports having had a very enjoyable vacation. The object of Mr. Abrahams' long journey was to visit his father, who lives near Jerusalem, whom he had not seen for several years.

Renown sales staff surprised manager Jerry Abrams with the announcement that they are putting on a "Jerry Abrams Week" on the west and north side starting November 8th and on the south side starting November 5th. The boys completed all their plans including preparation of necessary paper, announcements, etc., before passing the word to Mr. Abrams.

The Midwest Film Golf Tournament, which was scheduled for September 18th, has again been postponed and will be played on October 2nd at Olympic Fields. The change in the date was made necessary by the holiday which came on September 18th, and which was overlooked by those in charge of the tournament at the time the date was originally announced.

Jimmy Scofield, who is well known in this territory, where he formerly worked as a salesman, has returned from a state on the west coast and has taken a position with United Artists covering northern Indiana territory.

John Flinn of Producers Distributing Corporation, was a Chicago visitor this week.

V. T. Lynch, Charles L. Casanave and Jack Miller, were among Chicago exhibitors visiting New York last week.

Lyman Ballard, Wisconsin representative for United Artists, was in the city Saturday for a conference with Divisional Manager Cress Smith.

Houston

ABE SILVERBERG, manager of the Crown and Folly theatres, has announced an extensive re-modeling program for the Crown theatre. When completed it will be one of the most modern western theatres in this city. He plans to re-decorate the entire interior and rebuild the back of the theatre adding several rows of seats. The lobby will be entirely new and will be finished off with bright colors, new special built lobby frames are being made to replace the old type frames now in use. Two new type B Powers machines were instaled in the Crown less than a month ago.

Ed Bloomingthal, south Texas representative for F. B. O. was in town for several days last week. Mr. Bloomingthal has just returned from the Rio Grande Valley and reports that the recent rains have improved business throughout his territory.

Wm. Horwitz, Jr., owner and manager of the New Texan and Iris theatres, has just completed the job of hanging over 100 heads, mounted, and old fashioned guns in the lobby and alongside the stair cases of his Texan theatre. Mr. Horwitz says that he knows no better way to carry on the name than this method of interior advertising. The Texan was thrown open May 1, 1925 and has enjoyed a sensational run since that time. It is the only popular price theatre in Houston with an orchestra.

Bill Branch former publicity man throughout Texas writes from California that he will book several road productions through Houston and other Texas towns this season.

Mrs. Milton S. Gross, of Beaumont and Port Arthur, has arrived in Houston to open an office for the winter season. It will be located in the Auditorium Building.

Curtis H. Dunham stopped off in Houston enroute from Galveston to San Antonio.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Unholy Three"—M-G-M., Garrick, Minneapolis

Tribune: "A better crook drama than 'The Unholy Three' has not been filmed. This picture should please a greater percentage of its audiences than any photoplay shown locally for weeks. One must hark back to 'The Green Goddess,' 'Wild Oranges' and 'He Who Gets Slapped' to find a film comparable to 'The Unholy Three' in its thoroughly sustained interest, its restless suspense and its refreshing uniqueness of plot and characterization."

Star: "Those who saw Mr. Chaney in 'The Miracle Man,' 'The Penalty,' 'He Who Gets Slapped' and 'The Hunchback of Notre Dame' will want to see him again in 'The Unholy Three,' which is one of the cleverest characterizations of his screen career. The film has a series of absorbing love scenes which mingle with the high-tensioned crook episodes and with the numerous thrilling incidents that are part of the plot."

"Unholy Three"—M-G-M., Tower, St. Paul

Pioneer Press: "Here is a picture which may legitimately claim distinction, because it depends for effectiveness on none of the stereotyped devices with which experience has made us familiar. It is unique in the structure of scenario, daring in its characterization and for the most part unchangingly consistent in the development of its extraordinary story. The picture has the merit of setting appropriately the unusual talents of Lon Chaney. 'The Unholy Three' should not be missed by those who are interested in moving picture developments."

Daily News: "'The Unholy Three' is unquestionably one of the best melodramas ever put on film. For one thing, it has a novel, enthralling story — an ironic really suspensive tale of crime. Unlike most of the movie melodramas, 'The Unholy Three' contains little or no unbelieveable, rough-and-tumble action. It is simply and thoughtfully directed by Tod Browning and superbly played by Lon Chaney, a giant and a first-rate little actor as the third and tiny member of 'The Unholy Three.' It is a first-rate picture, vastly superior to the run of films."

Del Lord, comedy director who has signed a new contract with Mack Sennett to direct pictures for the Pathe program.

"Never The Twain Shall Meet"—M-G-M., Warfield, San Francisco

Examiner: "Here is that South Seas' glamour in sizeable chunks on the screen at the Warfield. For two days the crowd have been piling into see it. The background is smitingly volcanic. Not before in any photoplay has the life of the South Seas, in its gorgeous aspect, been so well transcribed to the films."

Call: "Beautiful Anita Stewart is the central figure of this most absorbing picturization of the famous novel by Peter B. Kyne. Never, it can safely be said, has Miss Stewart appeared to better advantage. The same can be said for Justine Johnstone, Bert Lytell, Huntly Gordon and George Seigmann. The outstanding feature of the production, however, is not so much the fine acting or the dramatic story, but the glorious photography—most of which was done on the islands of Tahiti and Moorea. There are a thousand and one South Sea 'shots' which provoke gasps of awesome ecstasy on the part of each audience."

News: "'Never the Twain Shall Meet' reaches the zenith of atmospheric treatment carried in a solid body of downright entertainment that is a positive delight. Maurice Tourneur directed the players through the intriguing action of the Kyne story. He took them to the South Seas where he found many beautiful scenic backgrounds. He made real actors out of the natives, a novelty in itself and which adds materially to the realism of the pictured events."

Herald: "In 'Never the Twain Shall Meet' the Warfield is presenting a screen drama no San Francisican should miss. The scenes are laid in San Francisco and the South Sea Islands, and the photography is something to shout about. The unfolding of the age-old story of the impossibility of the east meeting the west is achieved in a novel and most interesting manner. The cast is as fine as any seen on a local screen in a year."

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O, Rialto, Washington

Herald: "Personally I rather had the sneaking notion that 'Greater Movie Season Week' was going to be just so much pretzel dust. Then Lee Somers told me to cover 'Drusilla With a Million' down at the Rialto; and now I'm willing to publicly kiss Will Hays' fingertips in the lobby of the Rialto Theatre any day at high noon by way of contrition. For 'Drusilla' is a knockout—a wow, in other words."

John Ford who directed "Kentucky Pride" for Fox.

News: "There is a climax that actually brought the customers to their feet."

Star: "A throbbing love story woven into the plot brings the main characters together in an intensely dramatic climax with one of the most effective bits of staging ever witnessed. Mary Carr gives a perfect characterization from her first careworn smile, with which she walks straight into the hearts of her audience, to her last radiant beam, which capitulates the judge and routs the opposing lawyer in the thrilling court scene."

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Eastman, Rochester

Herald: "It is difficult to establish the relative place of this new picture among the star's achievements, for each one of his pictures seems to be the best he has done. Judged by the number of laughs this picture certainly measures up to any of the star's previous successes. Anyone who understands anything about football and most of those in yesterday's audience seemed to have at least an inkling of the game, can realize the ludicrous possibilities of the football arena."

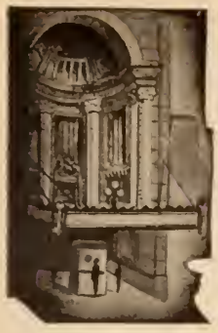
Democrat and Chronicle: "The reviewer enjoyed 'The Freshman' even better than 'Safety Last.' In both productions there are provided materials, commonly called in producing circles 'Gags' that are about of equal merit. To the youth of the land, who are the most devoted patrons of the bespectacled comedian, the college background of the new production will, very likely, make a great appeal. Then, to replace the hair-raising stunts that thrilled millions in 'Safety Last,' Lloyd's directors have introduced into the plot of 'The Freshman' the more dependable dramatic element of pathos. Lloyd comedy, always cleanly and inoffensive to every class of patron, with this commendable quality of heart appeal added, is just about 100 per cent entertainment for the average class of movie patrons."

"Off the Highway"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Forum, L. A.

Daily News: "'Off The Highway,' is a photoplay abounding in atmosphere and color and possessing a strangely haunting theme. This picture is a notable achievement for many reasons; the first being the work of William V. Mong. This veteran plays a dual role and the double exposures that result are the most remarkable I have ever seen."

Times: "'Off The Highway' is interesting and unusual. William V. Mong plays the dual role and he gives a fine performance—finished and convincing. Charles Gerrard is unforgettable as the sleek hypocrite. His scene with Mong, where he piously explains his aims in life, is one of the cleverest pieces of acting seen on local screens for a long while."

Examiner: "'Off The Highway,' showing this week at the Forum is well named. It is quite out of the beaten path . . . the points of the story have been skillfully brought out. William V. Mong plays the dual role splendidly."



Herald: "A gripping story totally different from any heretofore seen on the screen. Forman has taken this novel of the queer life of Caleb Fry and made an entertaining study of human nature. The realism of some of the sequences remind one forcibly of some of Poe's immortal hair-raisers."

Record: "While the character acting of William V. Mong dominates the picture, the photographic work, which allows Mong to shake hands with himself, pass in front of himself and change clothes with himself is uncanny."

Fabian Opens Large Theatre in New Jersey

Mosque, Part of Salaam Temple, Has 3,500 Seats and Elaborate Appointments

THE theatre that lays claim to being the largest and finest in New Jersey, the Mosque, was opened in Newark recently. Stupendous in size and marvelously constructed, the Mosque measures favorably in comparison with the largest theatres of the country. The large auditorium contains 3,500 seats, a capacity that is said to be only surpassed by a few theatres in this country.

The Mosque is expected to boom big business on the southern portion of Broad street where it rises majestically near the busy intersection of Clinton avenue. The residential mansions of this part of the city have given way before the encroaching development of the automobile industry and the theatre is expected to send realty values up 100 per cent. The entire section was decorated by the business men welcoming the coming of the playhouse.

Architecturally, the Mosque is one of the distinctive achievements of the city. The entire building was designed by George W. Backoff, Frank Grad and Henry Baechlin, architects. The outside follows the Greek manner and the auditorium is modern Greek in treatment.

The building, which is 116 feet wide on Broad street and 476 feet deep, is known as Salaam Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. It contains besides the huge theatre, a ballroom, a grill, a banquet hall, lodge rooms, stores, and concessions. The theatre was leased from the shriners by Jacob Fabian for a long period of years. This theatre is the twentieth he now controls in New Jersey.

The grand foyer of this fine temple of entertainment is 131 feet long by 52 feet wide. On the extreme left is the ladies retiring room, in the center the hostess' quarters and the checkroom, and on the right, the gentlemen's room. Three dormitories lead from the foyer to the auditorium. From the end of the foyer to the curtain line is 175 feet. The balcony is reached by two spacious stairways in the foyer.

Flanking each side of the auditorium are two colonades with five openings. These apertures can be utilized as loges if necessary. A huge chandelier hangs from the center of the dome which is sixty-five feet in diameter. The chandelier weights two tons.

The proscenium is 67 feet wide and 34 feet high. The depth of the stage, from the curtain line to the rear wall, is 45 feet thus giving ample room for prologues and stage presentations. From this wall to the street, there are an additional 30 feet which are used as scene dock. There are nineteen dressing rooms, a property room, showers and toilets, and a musician room and library also back of the stage.

More than 1,000 seats are lodged in the lone balcony. The sight line of this section to the front of the stage is 50 feet. The balcony, which has two promenades, is reached by three elevators which stop at the upper and lower levels. The exits are through fire towers on each side of the building.

The expansiveness of the theatre is seen in the arrangement of seats. Comfort was the first consideration. There is no jamming of seats and a stout person can be as comfortable as a long shanked one.

The orchestra pit is roomy enough to accommodate 100 musicians. In its entirety, the theatre has 2½ more space area than is required by the fire laws. The illumination is by indirect lighting.

Crowds flocked to the Mosque on the opening day. Long queues stood before the ticket booths throughout the showing and police help was necessary to hold the people.

The theatre is controlled and directed by Mr. Fabian. H. M. S. Kendrick is the manager; A. Gordon Reid, director of production, and J. E. Firnkoess, director of publicity. Mr. Fabian's policy will be first run pictures with appropriate scenic and stage presentations.

The organ is a four manual, and the projection is of the latest models. A 40 piece orchestra is part of the house staff.

How to Maintain Attractive Appearing Lobby Display Frames

By W. F. LIBMAN of Libman Spanjer Corp.

THE value of an attractive lobby, the psychology of lighting, as well as the effect of beauty upon the eye and mind, have all been touched upon in preceding articles.

The descriptive detail, and the individual merits of the various types of frames have also received attention. It would seem then that it would be quite in order to go into the construction and material used in these frames and cases that form so important a basis for all lobby background and design.

As the writer pointed out in the first article, the question of atmospheric conditions and elements play a most important part in the life and upkeep of all exterior work on theatre fronts and lobbies.

It is necessary wherever wood is used, particularly for exterior purposes, to cover the wood surface with some medium of protection. This protection may take the form of paint, varnish, shellac or similar bodies, depending entirely upon its decorative purpose or location.

Wood of every kind is porous, some more so than others, depending upon its species, firmness and growth. When once these pores or tiny openings, that correspond to the pores of the human skin, are exposed to rain, sand, dirt and sunshine they become infected so to speak, either one or the other form of disintegration or rot then takes place. Dry rot usually occurs, where moisture without air prevails, while damp rot occurs where animal or vegetable life accompanies the moisture.

These facts are touched upon merely to show the need for proper wood covering, and should in no wise be regarded as negativing the value of wood for construction or design.

The most expensive material that can be used for construction or ornamentation is bronze. Here we have a practically indestructible medium, as is evidenced by the fact that instruments and utensils fashioned from this metal are constantly being dug up on the sites of ancient and buried cities, the metal in all cases being untouched by its long interment. But while in the writer's opinion, nothing is better than bronze for the purpose of building accessory, yet its price is almost prohibitive for theatre use; a fact which can be easily checked up by pricing just an insignificant looking little bronze ornament in a convenient art shop.

Next in the metallic line we find brass and copper, both of them high in value when used in solid cast or moulded form, or high in upkeep if constructed in sheet form when almost daily polishing or burnishing is required to keep up appearances of attractiveness.

Then comes iron, which unless constantly painted, which also spells upkeep, or maintenance, is particularly susceptable to atmospheric conditions. Unless carefully and frequently covered with a suitable paint, iron either peels or flakes in unprotected spots, causing a shabby and rundown appearance, or else corrosion takes place and causes a rapid destruction of joints, ornamentation and surface.

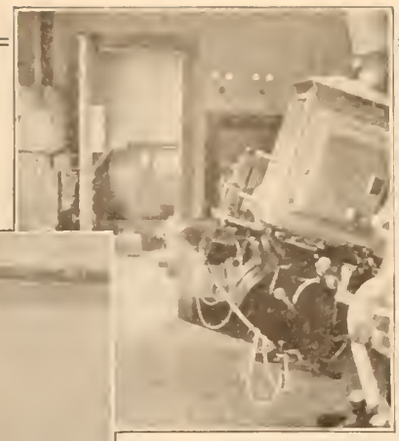
So after all, of the various materials of which decorative and artistic frames and wall cases can be best built, wood, of the proper sort, and when properly selected, is the most desirable and inexpensive in the long run, as well as the most easily worked.

It is well understood that any thing which is built by man, whether texture, clothing, machinery, or building, must be kept up, or maintained in some way. Neglect shows, either quickly or gradually, depending upon the use of the article or its original construction. A pair of shoes, a suit of clothes, an automobile or frame house, when constantly used, and never cleaned, painted, polished or adjusted, soon shows the results of neglect and usage.

And so it is with lobby equipment. The writer makes the following assertion without fear of contradiction, based upon years of observation and experience: A good well built wooden frame if varnished every six months, and refinished approximately every two years, will last from ten to fifteen years. This length of service over which the original investment costs may be spread, brings the price of a beautiful lobby down to a very low figure indeed.

Many of the largest theatres, include in their regular routine the repainting of their lobby equipment every six months regularly, with the result that the lobbies are at all times the same sparkling, shiny, attractive mediums of attention that they were in the beginning.

The writer can think offhand of hundreds of theatres that are today running with the original frames that they opened with years and years ago, merely through intelligent upkeep.



Mass. Theatre Reopens After Fire Caused by Film

The Day Street Olympia Theatre in Somerville, Mass., has reopened after repairs following a recent fire. The theatre was closed just a week and a day. The fire started in the booth and did about $3,000 damage. Repairs were rushed to the balcony and rear of the auditorium and rear walls and the house is now reopened. A. D. Rubenstein is manager.

Exterior of the Mosque Theatre, Newark, N. J., which is housed in the building which is known as the Salaam Temple. This theatre has created a great amount of comment on its splendor and unique design.

Interior Illumination as Related to Projection

IN THIS concluding section of Dr. Hiekman's paper on Motion Picture Theatres the point of interior illumination is stressed and suggestions are advaneed to assist one in securing the proper balance and harmony between the general illumination of the theatre and the projected picture.

Whether or not his suggestions are applicable without ehange to American theatres is open to question but the principles on whieh he bases his contentions certainly seem to have eonsiderable foundation in fact.

General Lighting System

Where it is not a question of adapting an existing theatre, improved lighting might be provided in a number of ways. The pendent side lamps might be replaced by a series of hollow arches, depieted in Fig. 5. Inside each upright pillar would be a lamp of small wattage. The faces (A) of the arches would be opaque, but the interior panelled with translueent material on the sides away from the screen (B). Each lamp would give a diffused area of light about 10 feet square of a low order of brightness. Viewed in enfilade by the audience, they would suggest a dimly lit wall; viewed from the screen they would be practically invisible.

If it were required to fill the arches with boxes the system would have to be modified so that the bright pillars did not trouble the occupants. They would be made triangular, opaque on one side, transparent on the other, with the apex angle so contrived that no light reached the box and little the screen. Both systems are indicated in plan Fig. 6, where the plain arches are shown on one side and the box system on the other. The projection and back lamp lighting of the screen surround is also shown.

The more ambitious theatres, of which in London the Stoll and Tivoli will serve as examples, present greater diffieulties. The circular galleries and boxes, the staging arrangements and orchestra convert the cubical shell, from a lighting point of view, into a broken surfaeed sphere. Such buildings are generally tall, and the contrast lighting might be carried out as in Fig. 7.

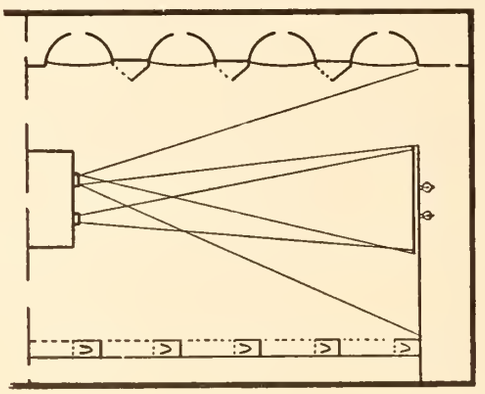

Figure Six.

A large area (A) round the screen (B) might derive its light from a lantern (C) and would in turn light the house. Subsidiary lighting by lamps in deep eonsical shades suspended from the roof would augment that received by the middle and back seats. This simple arrangement would not limit in the slightest any gorgeous display from other lights during the intervals from projection.

With regard to the color of the eontrast lighting, this might be varied to suit the subject, but round the screen, at least, it should not depart much from a neutral hue. By eommon eonsent the side lamps in most kine theatres are red or orange. Whatever the origin of the eonvention, it is founded on scientific truth, for contrast in the red is greater than in other colors. This means that a red light which is bright near its souree and sufficient for the needs of the theatre attendants beeomes invisible most rapidly as the distance from the lamp increases. The shadows on the screen suffer less with red than other colors.

The possibilities with contrast lighting are so great that in the same way that the better theatres arrange their musical programme with care so that appropriate music greets each change of scene, so also can one imagine a contrast lighting programme being arranged to throw into correct relief each successive film. The blue night or dungeon scene could be emphasized by increasing the contrast lighting to a warm orange. The brilliance of blue water and distance might go further and arrange the matter automatically by allowing notches or contacts on the film to control appropriate lights.

Much more might be said for a system of rational lighting. The foregoing remarks are intended merely to be suggestive. If they appear dogmatic in places it is beease time and space have not permitted the very full argument merited by so controversial a subject.

Plan to Erect $500,000 Theatre in Chicago

Plans have been completed for the erection of a $500,000 theatre to be erected at the southwest corner of Chicago and Monticello Avenues on a plot 133 x 299 by A. F. Sass and V. T. Lynch. The building will consist of a theatre which will have a seating capacity of 2000 persons, four stores and eight apartments.

Automatic Ticket Register Corp. Wins Suit

An important decision has just been rendered in the U. S. District Court with reference to a suit for infringement of certain claims on ticket selling machine patents.

This suit was brought by the National Electric Ticket Register Co., against Automatic Ticket Register Corp. of New York.

District Judge Augustus N. Hand, in his decision states that Automatic Ticket Register Corp. does not in any manner infringe on the patent in question, and dismisses the bill of complaint with costs against the National Electric Ticket Register Co.

The contention of the manufacturers of the Gold Seal Ticket Register has been upheld by Judge Hand.

Bush Brothers Are to Build $100,000 Theatre in S. D.

G. A. Bush and Kent G. Bush, formerly operating the Superba Theatre and other motion picture houses in San Diego, Cal., and vicinity, and still controlling several, announce that they will soon start the construction of a new house to be known as the Bush Egyptian Theatre at Park boulevard and University avenue, in that city, to cost approximately $100,000.00, and to have a seating capacity of 1000. Work will be commenced as soon as the architect's detailed plans are completed. It is said that the new house will be the finest neighborhood theatre in southern California, and will be second only to the Pantages and Balboa theatres in the down town section of the city.

Woodlawn, Pa., to Have New $30,000 House

Plans are being drawn by F. M. Stetson, Archt., 425 Franklin Ave. for the erection of a theatre building to be erected on Franklin Avenue on site 25 x 100 at an approximate cost of $30,000. The structure is to be of brick and steel construction. The owner is Anthony P. Jin, c o Strand Theatre, Franklin Avenue.

Times: "Miss Talmadge gives an extraordinarily fine performance, always restrained and always effective. She is delightfully sincere in the love scenes. This is a production which is thoroughly enjoyable. It has been handled by an expert."

Herald Tribune: "'Graustark' is a delightful picture. Dimitri Buchowetski directed 'Graustark' and it is the best picture he ever made. Everyone in the cast was remarkably good. Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien were fine as the lovers. If you want an hour of romance go and see 'Graustark.'"

World: "An uncommonly fine picture. Romance and excitement invests this latest screen version. For this, most of the credit goes to the gleaming and shadowy scenes of Dimitri Buchowetzki and the presence of Norma Talmadge, Eugene O'Brien and Marc MacDermott in its cast. McCutcheon himself probably never dreamed of a more pensive and appealing heroine than the picture made by Miss Talmadge. He evolved the perfect movie plot, for in this screen version 'Graustark' has fulfilled its destiny."

American: "The regular Sunday crowd at the Capitol lost itself in admiration of the gorgeous sets, the absorbing story and in Norma Talmadge as the lovely Yetive. We admire the sheer beauty of scenes and settings and admit that 'Graustark' will always prove a love story of absorbing interest. Miss Talmadge is exquisite as the princess. Her admirers will be delighted. 'Graustark' is an audience picture."

Telegraph: "The two greatest screen lovers acquit themselves creditably. Norma's personal popularity will never diminish. The drama moves along with swiftness and smoothness. Sets are sumptuous, there is plenty of comedy relief and the story will please the fans. Better see Norma at the Capitol this week."

News: "'Graustark' is an interesting, beautiful picture, dominated by that charming lady, Norma Talmadge. Norma is her gracious self as Yetive. The story is skillfully set forth. The scenes are prints from a fairy tale. The sets are glittering, magnificent. Think you'll adore seeing Norma once more as is."

Journal: "There is nothing quite like a romance. Norma is lovely. She always is. And the royal costumes make her even more so. The settings are very beautiful, and there's a good cast. It's a colorful picture."

Mirror: "If you're in the mood for romance look no further than the Capitol. It is confectionery entertainment."

Telegram: "Dear old 'Graustark' has been given a Steinach treatment to the greater glory of the flickering films. Beside—'The Merry Widow,' 'The Prisoner of Zenda,' 'Graustark' makes a brave showing. Norma Talmadge is the leading luminary, with the attractiveness that is Miss Talmadge's own."

"Coming of Amos"—Prod. Dist. Corp., Colony, N. Y.

Graphic: "'The Coming of Amos' is easily the best bet among the Broadway film offerings. Take it from us, this is a picture that everybody will like."

Mirror: "'The Coming of Amos' has the earmarks of being a box office wow. It is raving melodrama, wild carnivals and hectic action."

Herald-Tribune: "'The Coming of Amos,' we are sure, will mean the bounding of the fans to the box office of the Colony."

Times: "Mr. La Rocque is capital as Amos. This is an unusually jolly picture, with capable acting by all the cast. It is beautifully photographed."

Daily News: "Direction—careful. Sets—splendiferous. Acting—fine. Effect—just swell."

Evening World: "It is full of carnivals, gorgeous settings and Continental sophistication. The net result is a picture which will afford entertainment for most movie fans."

Journal: "The story continues with a set of the cleverest subtitles flashed on the screen in months. It's nonsensically, melodramatically, delightfully amusing."

"Pony Express" — Paramount, Rivoli, Rialto, N. Y.

Daily News: "Cruze has fashioned one of those 'you must see' pictures from the rich story of the building of the West."

Mirror: "James Cruze, who gave us 'The Covered Wagon' has scored another sensational winner in this stirring dramatization of the American West of 1860. He has enhanced it with a 14-karat gold cast. Wallace Beery is superb as Rhode Island Red, a humorous disreputable soul—the diamond in the rough sort."

American: "Taken as a whole 'The Pony Express' is an excellent picture. If you like a drama with action and historical interest, one that is exceptionally well done, visit either the Rivoli or Rialto, or both, and you will find your kind of entertainment."

Times: "This pictorial document which causes one's heart to throb with delight, is another chapter in American history."

Telegraph: "In 'The Pony Express' at the Rivoli and Rialto this week, the Paramount company has another great winner. It is a genuinely thrilling tale peopled with glorious characters, replete with humor and doubly appealing because it is the history of our forebears."

Miss Gloria Swanson
The Famous Players,
New York, N.Y.

Dear Miss Swanson:-

I was so deeply moved by your superb characterization in " The Coast of Folly". It was extraordinary - so pitifully true and developed with so much mastery. It is a rare joy to see such great art on the screen.*

When it was over I wanted to get up and cheer and that supplied my only regret of the night - that you weren't there in person so that I could show you how I felt and somehow give vent to the pleasure I had in seeing such craftsmanship.

Sincerely yours,

Jane Cowl

Sept. 21, 1925

My dear Mr. Robson,

We desire at this moment to thank you for permitting the use of Tom Meighan's newest picture "The Man Who Found Himself" which was put on at the Western Penitentiary before a Standing Room Only crowd this morning.

How true to life Tom Meighan played his prison part can only be vouched for by the 1000 men who witnessed his wonderful work. They cheered as no actor on the speaking stage is cheered today.

1000 men behind the gray walls that witnessed today "The Man Who Found Himself" earnestly urge that the inmates of all institutions might have the same privilege, because it will make them better men for the future.

We trust that Pittsburgh will give this picture the earnest interest that was granted it this morning. If they will, "The Man Who Found Himself" will mean much to the lives of others.

Very sincerely,

* Rollo McBride

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, OCTOBER 10, 1925 NO. 15

Reciprocity

WE HAVE just concluded a series of articles designed to present clearly the European film situation—from the European angle as well as from the American.

It seems to simmer down to this: Great Britain, France and Germany want to stimulate production. They want to market their goods here. That is highly essential. But it is just as essential to American producers that they continue to market their pictures abroad.

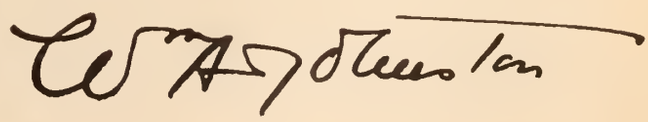
This whole situation—and it is of the utmost importance to the progress of the motion picture—calls, therefore, for reciprocal relations. That is the only way out.

But the problem is: what kind of reciprocal relations between Europe and America will be best for each, and best for the motion picture?

It seems to us that it will be fatal to all these interests to approach a solution from the hard and fast angle—the material angle, you might say—of a Kontingent or a tariff.

This might apply to material goods, though even there you can't jam goods into a market when they haven't been thoughtfully adapted to the market, nor the market well tilled to receive them.

The writer recalls, from a year's residence in London, that American goods had a stiff time getting sales there. Some never got by the dealers at all; and some were only accepted by the public after a spirited and costly advertising and selling campaign.



But pictures, because they are more intangible merchandise—more subtle in appeal to the public—are still further beyond the grasp of reciprocal tariff rules.

Great Britain makes the mistake of believing this to be largely a nation of Nordic peoples. It is far from that. It is a vast mixture, a melting pot of many races; and over here we have to make pictures to fit this polyglot taste. German pictures for the Teutons, British pictures for the Anglo-Saxons, French pictures for the Latins, are one thing: American pictures for Americans are another.

I have always believed that American-made pictures go well the world over because America is a world of peoples in itself and because, for years, our entire entertainment business, stage, screen and what not, has been trained and tuned up to the exactions of pleasing many varying types of the public.

The reciprocal relations—it would seem—will have to be reciprocal film relations. By that I mean a joining of American and European resources in the making of pictures suitable for the world market. And that, happily, is under way. Metro-Goldwyn, First National, Famous, Fox, Universal, Warners—all are entering into such alliances. And it is to be hoped that this good work will progress and succeed so well that the dangerous alternative of arbitrary regulations will be, quickly enough, found unnecessary.

This making of pictures of international appeal is not merely a matter of studios and studio facilities, nor of technique, nor even of directors and casts. It is primarily a matter of ideas. Stories, if you will, but the broader term is better. Ideas. Ideas that will appeal to and be understood by various peoples of varying training, environment and heredity. And that, of course, is not a simple matter.

A Constructive Suggestion

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Brooklyn have taken the initiative in suggesting to the Independent producers and distributors that the latter supply exhibitors with free trailers on their productions.

An excellent idea—which ought to to be followed out.

The Brooklyn suggestion has been endorsed by national headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. and has been transmitted to the Independent Association by President R. F. Woodhull in the following letter:

"We are presenting for the consideration of the members of your Association, a resolution adopted by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Brooklyn urging the Independent Producers and Distributors to furnish theatre owners with free trailers on their productions, as in their opinion such a course will result in increased business both for the distributors and the theatre owners.

"They point out the exploitation possibilities of such trailers and the great publicity value.

"We are very pleased to transmit this resolution to you at the request of these theatre owners, and would urge your giving the same your serious consideration at the earliest opportunity. We join in the belief of the Brooklyn theatre owners that such a practice will prove of great benefit and advantage to the producers, distributors and theatre owners."

Messrs. Zerner and Phillips of the Brooklyn organization point out that the trailer is of genuine service in selling pictures to the public, and their argument is right. We must agree with them that the independents would do far better to supply trailers than to spend large amounts on press-books which cannot affect directly the attendance of the public at the theatres.

"Give us tools to work with," sums up the exhibitors' attitude. "And give them to us consistently and on a definite plan."

They further suggest that a scheme of careful routing be worked out for the trailer service—just as careful as that used if feature prints are to arrive on time and in good condition at the theatres.

We have pointed out several times that the proper advertising of independent productions is an imperative need. The trailer service is a constructive suggestion along this line.

"Malcolm" Big Boy Sebastian, in picture since he was three weeks old, has reached the mature age of 18 months, in recognition of which he has been awarded the role of chief comic in "Baby Be Good," an Educational Juvenile comedy.

More Radio Concerts

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of thirty radio concerts to be given during the coming Winter by the leading opera stars, the programs to be broadcast by WEAF through a hook-up of a large number of stations.

This is an expansion of the radio concert plan put into effect last Winter. What its effect will be on theatre attendance remains to be seen. Until the facts are gathered—and they cannot be until the programs are actually under way—predictions are unwarranted.

Zukor Discusses B. & K. Deal In Exclusive Interview

Makes Statement on F.P.-L. Theatre Policy

Adolph Zukor, President of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

By William A. Johnston

(Copyright, 1925, by Motion Picture News, Inc.)

THERE have been a thousand and one surmises about the Famous Players-Balaban & Katz theatre deal—what it was and what it portended. We ourselves did some surmising. So we decided it would be a good idea to go direct to Adolph Zukor and let him tell about it: that this might clear the air.

"Certainly I'll tell about it," said Mr. Zukor. "There's nothing at all to conceal, and just a few simple facts to state.

"Famous Players-Lasky owns theatres. We are in the theatre business because there's money in it. That's our privilege. I take it.

Discusses Balaban & Katz Deal

"We own a good many theatres. The investment is large. We've got to have the best management obtainable. Mr. Lasky attends to production. Mr. Kent to distribution: I don't know anything about theatre operation. It has grown to be a highly specialized business. We have our own theatre department, a very good one. But we wanted the best. Balaban and Katz have specialized in theatres all during the twenty years I have specialized in pictures. They have developed a man-power organization of the finest: they have vision, initiative. Their wonderful success speaks altogether for itself. What more natural than that we should seek their management for our theatres? I put the proposition to them some time ago. They held back at first. 'Well, think it over,' I said. And now the terms of management have been agreed upon and the matter closed. They get a commission as managers, a share in the profits.

Will Book Best Product

"These theatres must make money. We expect they will. Balaban and Katz expect they will. That's their business. Therefore the theatres will be run strictly on their own bottoms. Do you think Balaban and Katz or any other management would be agreeable to having them run any other way? The theatres will book the best product available. They will have to. And they will pay the right rentals. They will have to—to succeed. And we intend they will succeed."

"Will you buy more theatres?" I asked.

"I don't know," said Mr. Zukor. "Any more than any other theatre concern knows at the moment. Theatre conditions are changing all the time. We may buy; we may sell. I simply repeat I am in the theatre business to make money, like any theatre firm. And I propose to. I will act accordingly. What that action will be I don't now know. I will announce it when I do know."

"Has your ownership of theatres anything to do with your production and distribution problems?"

"No. I see it only as a theatre enterprise. It is purely an economic matter all its own.

"Exhibiting End is the Best," Says Zukor

In Interview with William A. Johnston

"Exhibiting End is the Best"

"The exhibiting end of this business is the best end—by far. It is about time someone said so and said it fearlessly. It is the stable, substantial, profitable side. Production is pure and simple speculation; stars are grief and worry. I know. Making pictures is a heart-breaking game.

"I put five hundred thousand dollars—or six or seven hundred thousand—into a picture. At its best, it's speculative. For the same money I could build a beautiful theatre and safely make money on product on which the other fellow risked his money and health. I repeat—the stable, sure end of the business is the exhibiting end. The profits have been vast and swiftly had. They are increasingly alluring. The people who have my sympathy, my utter sympathy, are the producers—every one of them. Nobody ever weeps over them; but most everybody takes a whack at them. If anyone thinks production is profitable, let them try it. Let them at least get a fair notion of what it means to build and run a producing unit, to create entertainment ideas, to buy at high competitive prices all the values demanded by the box-office success everyone clamors for. It is high time the producer had some sympathetic and intelligent understanding and recognition of the fact that he, with his courage, nerve-wracking enterprise and heavy risk, has advanced the industry and its theatre profits as far as they are today.

A Plain, Candid Statement

"I have now given you," said Mr. Zukor, "a plain, candid statement about my own business affairs. It's my business and my affair. Yet I give it willingly, to correct, as you say, a lot of gossip. But why must this gossip be? The greatest trouble with this business is that everyone is minding the other fellow's affairs. And knowing very little, he imagines very much. Let him devote himself to his own business and thereby not only improve his own fortunes but those of the whole industry. We have plenty of big problems facing us. There's the European situation, for instance. We have brought these muddles on by our own sheer thoughtlessness. If each man would spend in serious thought and analysis the time he uses in gossiping about his neighbor's affairs we would all be better off. We would stop butting our heads blindly against stone walls."

Scenes of the navy seaplane, PN-9 No. 1, in a recent issue of Pathe News. In one view is shown the damaged wing where the men, adrift in the Pacific, tore off wing fabric to make buckets to catch rain water for drinking; in the other is shown the U. S. S. Pelican bringing the lost seaplane into Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, after the rescue. (Pathe News photos).

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Metro-Goldwn-Mayer's latest acquisition is Lars Hanson, a Swedish film star, who is here shown as he arrived on the boat in New York.

Texas contributes another dazzling figure to the screen in the person of Dorothy Seastrom, signed to a five-year contract by First National, and seen in "We Moderns."

Fay Lamphier, crowned Miss America at Atlantic City, and who is playing the title role in "The American Venus" at the Paramount Long Island studios.

GOLDEN ASTERISKS

TWO of the coveted asterisks from the National Board of Review, denoting "a particularly good picture," were awarded this week, according to the bulletin just received. Both, it so happens, are based on stage plays. One is the Paramount picture, "New Brooms," and the other is the Warner Brothers slapstick farce, "The Man on the Box."

Three of the little stars were handed out last week, but could not be listed for lack of space. One was a feature, while the other two were what managers usually bill as "added attractions," that is, special novelty short subjects. The feature length subject was "The Calgary Stampede," Universal's rodeo romance, while the two short subjects were "Thirty Years Ago" and "I Remember," both of the Short Films Syndicate.

SAM RORK'S MASTERPIECE

SPLENDID things are being heard along Film Row of Sam Rork's newest and biggest production, "Clothes Make the Pirate." These whispers assert that this picture is by far Rork's "magnum opus," which is considerable of an assertion, in view of the success of "Ponjola," "The Talker," and some of his others.

The story is a unique one, telling, as it does, of pirate adventure in the early days of Massachusetts. The central character, played by Leon Errol, is a meek, hen-pecked tailor, who dreams himself the hero of pirate adventures in strong contrast to his timidity—and who suddenly falls in with real pirates. They carry him out to sea, thinking him their chief, which leads to myriad complications, laughs and thrills.

TO RESTORE MISSION

SEVERAL of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer stars and featured players were among those booked to appear this Saturday at a mammoth benefit performance at the Olympic auditorium in Los Angeles to raise funds for the restoration of the Santa Barbara Mission. This was badly damaged in the recent earthquake, and the plan for its restoration has aroused widespread sympathy and interest.

MYSTERY PLUS

NOT even the members of the cast will know the identity of the villain in "The Green Archer," according to the plan of Production Manager Frank Leon Smith. The title character is a mysterious masked figure, who shoots death-dealing green arrows, and each member of the cast, in turn, is suspected by the others of being the evasive archer. It is Smith's belief that if the players themselves do not know the answer to the riddle, the mystery atmosphere will be greatly intensified in this Pathe Serial.

CRITICS OF YESTERYEAR

AN unusual idea has already been worked out for the premiere of "The Road to Yesterday," Cecil B. De Mille's personally directed production. Producers Distributing corporation has made preliminary arrangements to have at this showing as many as possible of the old time New York dramatic critics who covered the opening of the play at the Herald Square theatre in 1906. At that time they were warm in their praise of the play, and it is felt that it will be interesting to learn of their reaction to the picturized version.

Col. and Mrs. Fred Lery of Louisville, Ky., snapped aboard the Paris as the First National Franchise Holder returned from a five weeks' tour abroad.

Stella Doyle, an English girl, is an important member of the Christie stock company, appearing in Christie comedies for Educational release.

Eastern film circles are brightened just now by the presence of Esther Ralston, who is working in "A Kiss for Cinderella" (Paramount) at Long Island studios.

Dinner tendered Pathe producers and the Home Office executives at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York, on Friday evening, September 25th. In the picture may be seen most of the executives, as well as the men producing for Pathe release.

THAT PATHE ROOSTER

PATHE'S rooster trade-mark which appears on all this firm's films, has been translated from a silent to an animated fowl. Strange as it may seem, the bird to properly fill the role was mighty hard to find. They wanted a real, live rooster who would flop his wings and crow incessantly while the camera was cranking, but despite numerous excursions into the environs of Culver City, the Roach camera crew realized that not every rooster will oblige. It wasn't until the services of Billy Knight and his roosters, a well-known international vaudeville act, were secured that the difficulty was solved.

For Billy brought forth his loudest crowing artist, and in an hour's time enough negative was shot of a crowing rooster to keep the Pathe trade-mark going strong for the next twenty years or so. But the Hal Roach boys are convinced that there is a whole lot of difference between the barnyard variety and a rooster that will exert his lungs for the benefit of the camera.

OLCOTT 'TWEEN PICTURES

IN AN age which likes to inquire into the methods of the celebrated while at work and their occupations while at play, it seems fitting enough to ask the question "what do directors do when they are not directing?" If there is a generic answer to the question we know nothing about it. But taking individual cases now and then the want can be supplied. Thus Sidney Olcott is now between pictures—having completed "The Best People" at the Famous Players-Lasky studio in Hollywood—and it can be reliably stated that now he is not directing Olcott is vacationing at Big Bear Lake, where may be found much rugged natural beauty, air that tingles and stimulates, and where there are no studios, though the pictures have been there many times in the form of production units on location. Upon his return to the studios announcement will be made of his next production. His last work "The Best People" is from the play of the same title by David Grey and Avery Hopwood, and those who will be seen in the principal roles are Warner Baxter, Kathlyn Williams, Esther Ralston, Margaret Livingston, Margaret Morris, Joseph Striker and Edward Davis.

UTILIZE HOME TALENT

EXTRAS including branch and district managers and home office executives of First National's distribution department will appear in the racing sequence of "The Scarlet Saint." They were visiting at the studio when director George Archainbaud invited the whole crowd to take part as "railbirds" at the race. They were duly rehearsed in expressing frantic enthusiasm and cheered until they were hoarse. The results were highly satisfactory and Archainbaud asserted that he never had a bunch of extras who were so thoroughly infatuated with their jobs and ready to give good service.

AN AMERICAN DEAUVILLE

WILLIAM FOX is heading a new real estate development corporation which, while it has no connection with his motion picture or theatrical enterprises, is of more than passing interests. The company, Deauville Estates, Inc., has taken title to the Floyd-Jones estate at Massapequa, Nassau county, L. I., which has a remarkable history, having been in the same family for nearly 300 years.

In carrying out the ideas that have been conceived for the purpose of creating a real estate development that will be unique and at the same time of a high order, Deauville Estates, Inc., proposes to construct a series of tide water canals of sufficient depth to adequately provide for the clearance of large sized motor driven craft at low tide.

In the plotting of the acreage, provisions have been made for 35,000 feet of water frontage, the owner of every lot having a natural or a man-made water-way at his door. Dredging of these canals will begin at Great South Bay and will be carried back into the property in accordance with the plans.

FIFTH AVENUE—AND BACK

MEMBERS of the "Fifth Avenue" unit, who came East recently to film exteriors along the world's most famous thoroughfare, returned to the Coast in two parties, one of which remained behind for a few days to clean up a number of special scenes. Director Robert C. Vignola departed last Friday, together with Jim Van Trees, cameraman, Allan Forrest, Marguerite de la Motte and Lillian R. Gale, formerly of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS staff. A. H. Sebastian, the producer, his son, Maurice Sebastian, Phil Carle, assistant director, Sally Long, former Follies beauty, Josephine Norman, of the De Mille stock company, and Anthony Caldewey, veteran scenarist.

A recent experience on the part of Miss Long well illustrates the uncertain vicissitudes of this ever changing industry. Leaving the New York stage, she determined to seek the wider opportunities of the silver screen, and trekked to Hollywood, having previously played in a D. W. Griffith production, thereby adding to the list of Griffith "discoveries." On the Coast, her striking beauty procured her parts in several features. Then, with climactic suddenness, she was assigned the much coveted role of leading lady to Valentino in "The Hooded Falcon"—but with equal suddenness the "Falcon" was shelved and another war-like bird, "The Eagle" substituted. This called for a blonde leading lady, which Miss Long is not, so her appearance with the Great Lover has been indefinitely postponed. Meanwhile, since she could not afford to remain off the screen for so long, she has gone ahead with other roles. Quite by coincidence, Caldewey, who did the "Falcon" script, has also done the "Fifth Avenue" continuity. It almost seems as if the motion picture industry should extend a testimonial of some sort to Ziegfeld for discovering so many of the girls who later desert him for the celluloid drama.

MASTBAUM'S ART TREASURES

PHILADELPHIA art circles brightened to the cabled news that Jules E. Mastbaum, head of the Stanley Company and prominent Philadelphian, had acquired ninety-eight bronzes by the famous August Rodin while in Paris on a recent European trip which ended with his arrival in New York last week. These art treasures make Mr. Mastbaum the largest individual owner of Rodin bronzes in the world, he having acquired several of this sculptor's masterpieces last year. The entire collection, Mr. Mastbaum has notified the officials of the Sesquicentennial art exhibition to be held in Philadelphia next year and of which he is a director, will be exhibited publicly for the first time at that event, which its sponsors are ambitious to make the most representative of any collections of works ever held in this country.

Up until the time of Mr. Mastbaum's recent acquisitions, the Thomas Fortune Ryan collection, now in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, held first place as the largest individual collection of Rodin's works. The Mastbaum art treasures are destined ultimately to become the property of Philadelphia, long noted for its works of art. Paris reluctantly parted with the Rodin works, as is evinced by the fact that Mr. Mastbaum has been negotiating with the Minister des Beaux Arts for a long time. When he purchased several bronzes last year Parisians voiced their surprise and shock when it became known that the directors of the Rodin Musee had sold the works to a collector who would take them to America. The proffer to exhibit the collection at the Sesquicentennial exhibition is warmly appreciated in Philadelphia, Mayor Kendrick acknowledging the offer with words of thanks to Mr. Mastbaum and enthusiastic praise of this public spirited move.

CHAPLIN ENTERTAINS

CHARLIE CHAPLIN presided at a luncheon last week at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, New York, among his guests being the picture reviewers and several editors and special writers. He was good naturedly "kidded" on his proclivity for attending luncheons by proxy. In a short talk to the writers, the comedian freely discussed plans for his next picture, "The Dandy," and said that, since the public seem to prefer him as a laugh-provoker, he would forget all serious motifs in his forthcoming vehicle.

EVELYN BRENT ENDS TOUR

WITH a radio engagement in Providence, coupled with a personal appearance at Fay's theatre, Evelyn Brent concluded her country wide tour last week and is en route to the West Coast. During her trip across the country she appeared before the microphone at several leading broadcasting stations, with excellent results in the way of fan mail and publicity.

SYD'S NEWEST HAS PREMIERE

AT 11:30 p.m. last Friday, at Warner's theatre, New York City, "The Man on the Box" was given its world premiere before one of the most distinguished audiences ever assembled for such an occasion. The audience was liberally dotted with celebrities of the screen, stage, literary and diplomatic circles in greater numbers than is usual for such an affair. The Warners should be very happy over the reception given this feature comedy at its initial performance.

PAUL PROGRESSES

PAUL A. YAWITZ, who made a reputation for himself as director of foreign publicity for Fox, and later with MOTION PICTURE NEWS, was this week appointed director of publicity for all the Ned Wayburn enterprises in New York and throughout the United States. The prominent Cheese Clubman will be in complete charge of the direction of all future publicity policy for all the companies under Wayburn's management, including the producing firm, which has three musical comedies scheduled for early winter production, the large group of vaudeville acts, and the Wayburn school of stage dancing. With his wide acquaintance in editorial circles, and his undisputed ability, Paul should do much to add to the lustre of the already illustrious Mr. Wayburn, who glorified the American girl for many years for Monsieur Ziegfeld, and is now on his own.

A remarkable demonstration of the power of make-up to work a complete transformation; at the left, Jack Duffy, the Christie comedian, as the young man that he is in real life; and at the right, Jack Duffy as he appears under the Kliegls and Cooper-Hewitts.

THE MACDONALD STAR LOOMS

HISTORY tells of an instance where Destiny made a star for a corporal, the Little Corporal who later was an Emperor, and now there is news that stardom is in the making for Corporal Casey, humorous and loveable discharged Union soldier and gang boss who figures so prominently in "The Iron Horse." For though J. Farrell MacDonald has done many striking roles since, it is as Corporal Casey that he is known best. That characterization will be associated with him even after MacDonald, who a year ago was practically unheard of, has attained to the stardom which William Fox is planning for the actor. Even now a suitable vehicle to serve as his first starring picture is being sought by the Fox scenario heads and it is indicated that it will not be long before J. Farrell MacDonald will be written in large type at the top of a poster with below it the word "in" and below that the title of a Fox feature production. Since making his screen debut in "The Iron Horse" MacDonald has essayed important roles in "Lightnin'," "Kentucky Pride," "The Fighting Heart," "The Lucky Horseshoe" and "Thank You." He was a "trouper" who became tired of roaming and settled down to make a career in the pictures. MacDonald is a Yale man and started his career after leaving college as a newspaper man, later taking up acting on the legitimate stage.

The technical staff doesn't usually get much of a publicity "break," so here is Corinne Griffith surrounded by the able corps which made "Classified" for First National.

Myer Lesser, director-general of advertising, publicity and exploitation, and Sam E. Morris, general manager of distribution, of Warner Bros., talk over plans.

Milton Sills signs his new First National contract under which he will continue as a star; left to right: E. A. Eschmann, general manager of distribution, Samuel Spring, secretary-treasurer; Mr. Sills, Ray Rockett, of production department, B. W. Perkins, general counsel.

One of the principal figures in the Laurence Stallings story, "The Big Parade" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) is Renee Adoree, in the role of Melisande, a peasant.

A new version of the "infernal triangle" is furnished by Hallam Cooley, Kathryn Perry and Marion Harlan in "The Peacemakers" (Fox).

MORE INDIANA AUTHORS

IT has been asserted, with some little reason, that every person has an unproduced play stuck away in his trunk, or on the attic shelf. Every person, apparently, at some time during his or her life decides to write the Great American Drama.

Sometimes, however, they go a step further and actually get them produced. Such is the case with two men connected with the justly famous Circle theatre in Indianapolis. There seems to be something in the Indiana atmosphere that leads irresistably to the fields of play and novel writing. If you don't believe it, look over your Who's Who, and see how many of them come from the Hoosier state.

The two latest are Constantin Bakaleinikoff, director of the Circle Theatre Concert orchestra, and Carl Niesse, auditor at the same cinema temple. Together they have written a musical comedy entitled "On Time," which has been accepted by the George Milam Production company of Chicago and Los Angeles for staging. Early in October it is to receive its premiere on the Pacific coast. It is to be an elaborate production in seven scenes, with some two score persons in the cast.

Perhaps, if "On Time" goes the way of "Sally," "The Merry Widow" and other musical dramas that have found their way later to the screen, Bakaleinikoff may yet be conducting the Circle Theatre orchestra through an accompaniment to "On Time" on the Circle screen, while Niesse audits the staggering receipts. Anyway, we wish 'em the best o' luck!

MARY'S RAGGED BAND

NINE small children are appearing in Mary Pickford's new film, "Scraps," now in production, a quaint ragged army, clad entirely in cast-off adult clothing obtained from the Salvation Army and Los Angeles second-hand stores. They are an interesting and rather pathetic sight, as they toddle around the "baby farm," led by "Mama Molly," in whose care they are. Tom McNamara, the artist, celebrated for his comic children pictures, arranged the attiring of the youngsters. The kiddies enjoy themselves thoroughly, and, as might be expected, fairly idolize "our Mary" whose love for kiddies is wide enough to embrace them all.

Among the youngsters who have already "won their camera spurs," are Muriel McCormac and Billy Butts. Monty O'Grady, who plays the little bug-picker, is said to be a "find." Others are Billy Jones, Jack Levine, Mary McLane, Florence Rogan, Camilla Johnson, Sessel Anne Johnson, Sylvia Bernard and Mary Louise Miller, all cast in baby roles.

AN interesting fact in connection with "The Pony Express" is that Cruze has produced a picture in which, with one exception, no make-up is used and no false whiskers appear. The one exception is in the case of Johnny Fox as young Bill Cody. Make-up was used to cover Johnny's freckles, since Buffalo Bill had none, legend avers.

Subsidiary of Firm Affiliated With P. D. C. Forms Circuit

60 to 100 Houses in North American Theatres

By Thomas C. Kennedy

NORTH American Theatres Corporation, a subsidiary of Motion Picture Capital Corporation, the financing organization back of Producers Distributing Corporation, has entered the theatre field as the latest large-scale circuit operator. Financing and booking arrangements have been acquired with more than sixty houses through affiliations with independent theatre groups in Northern and Southern California, Oregon, Washington, and Iowa. The exact number of theatres affiliated with the organization at present is not known, but is understood to range from sixty to one hundred.

The theatre company has the backing of Motion Picture Capital Corporation, which numbers among its large stockholders many influential financial groups which hitherto had had no connections with enterprises in the amusement field. These include leading Wall Street operators and officials of some of the largest industrial and commercial organizations in the country.

It is known that the Motion Picture Capital Corporation has served as the medium for bringing into the industry interests never before identified with amusement enterprises. Its stockholders include financiers of the highest standing, including men whose names rarely appear as the holders of shares in companies of this kind, so the report from reliable sources goes. Among these are said to be three men who are partners of the firm of J. P. Morgan and Company and whose stock in the Capital Corporation is held in the names of their brokers.

Frank R. Wilson, president of the Capital Corporation, is also president of North American Theatres Corporation, which is a closed syndicate with no stock being offered on the market. Harry C. Arthur, formerly associated with West Coast Theatres, Inc., is vice-president and general manager of the theare company, the stockholders of which will hold a meeting this week to elect a board of directors.

Motion picture men who are represented on the directorate of Motion Picture Capital Corporation are Cecil B. De Mille and Charles Christie, whose productions are released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

Included in the circuits which have become affiliated with North American Theatre Corporation is the Far West Theatres, Inc., formed in Los Angeles by a consolidation of theatres controlled by Fred Miller and L. L. Bard, which brought six theatres into the combination and which has since acquired leases on several others. The combination now controls about 20 theatres in Southern California and has plans for the erection of several others there. This group also controls the State, formerly the Strand, theatre in Denver, Colo., recently taken over by North American.

According to Mr. Wilson, who with Harry Arthur is directing the operations of North American in acquiring theatres, the present status of the company's circuit represents only a beginning of the large undertakings which have been planned and are ready for execution.

Mr. Wilson told MOTION PICTURE NEWS that the company is in the field to make profits operating theatres. The move he says is in no way designed to create a "forced outlet" for product, but is aimed to develop the buying power necessary to the successful operation of picture houses.

The plan being followed is to form affiliations with independent theatre groups, which provides the financial backing and booking facilities of the parent company to its subsidiaries.

The company has eight or nine houses in Iowa. These are located at Waterloo, Sioux City, Clinton, Olewein, Dubuque and Cedar Rapids. Through leases and ownership of theatres, North American controls large groups of houses in Oregon and Northern California, where corporations subsidiary to the company have been formed with the holdings of local circuits as the nucleus of the operation in those states.

North American made its entrance into Washington last week, when plans were completed in Seattle for the beginning of construction within the next thirty days of a $1,500,000 theatre and office building on the half block at Fifth Avenue and Union Streets, in the heart of the business district. The theatre will be operated under a lease by the Washington Theatre Corporation, the North American organization in that state. The new theatre will occupy an area of 120 by 335 feet and have a seating capacity of 3,000, making it the largest theatre on the Pacific Coast outside of California.

North American plans to enter other states in the course of its operations during the immediate future. Those districts in which the company now has theatre interests include territory where companies without theatre connections find great difficulty in getting theatre representations for their product. In Iowa, for example, where the Blank circuit dominates the theatre situation, Producers Distributing is said to have found the booking situation a difficult one to solve.

Trade observers credit the entry of Motion Picture Capital Corporation, originally formed to finance the production of pictures, into the theatre field to the natural gravitation of capital toward the theatre branch of the industry, which many producers claim is a more profitable enterprise than that of producing. According to this view, the policy of organizations with their own theatres will be to continue production mainly as a reliable and self-controlled source of supply for those theatres.

The Board of Directors of Motion Picture Capital Corporation is comprised of the following:

Cecil B. De Mille, Charles H. Christie, H. A. Richards, New York; Theodore Schulze, New York; John E. Barber, Los Angeles; Steven Leonard, chairman of the board of directors of Arnold Constable Company; Theodore Watson, of Watson & White Co.; John T. Pratt, of the Standard Oil Company; Clarkson Potter, of Hayden Stone & Co., New York stock brokers; Jules E. Brulatour; John B. Miller, Los Angeles, president of the Southern California Edison Company; H. Lester Cuddihy, and Delos Blodgett.

Officers of the corporation are Frank R. Wilson, president; T. H. Brownell, associated with Jeremiah Millbank, vice-president; H. A. Richards, Treasurer; Oscar M. Bate, attorney and secretary.

Brooklyn Theatre is Robbed of $1400

Early on the morning of September 28th, burglars forced their way into the Filmland theatre, Church and Nostrand Avenues, Brooklyn, blew the safe and made their getaway with the week end receipts that amounted to $1400. After dragging the safe from the office to the stage, a distance of over one hundred feet, they cut down the curtain, gathered seat cushions and piled both over the safe, saturating them with water to muffle the explosion.

Filmland is owned by Filmland Players, Inc. and under the management of Fred Dollinger. The theatre held its premiere only about two weeks ago.

Picture Machine Exports Show Increase

Preliminary Department of Commerce figures show that 166 motion picture machines valued at $38,890 were exported from the United States during the month of August as against 99 valued at $23,699 in July and 64 valued at $16,484 in August 1924.

Robt. E. Welsh Joins Associated

Becomes Director of Advertising and Publicity for Company Under New Regime

ROBERT E. WELSH, until last week Editor of Moving Picture World, has been secured for an executive post in Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Since it became known two weeks ago that Mr. Welsh was about to relinquish the editorial reins there has been considerable speculation as to the connection he had planned. His acquisition by Associated Exhibitors rounds out a home office staff that gives strong promise of the big things planned for that organization.

It is only two weeks ago that announcement was made that Oscar Price had completed negotiations to assume control of Associated Exhibitors which will hereafter be divorced from Pathe in every respect except physical distribution. Then last week he crashed into the headlines with the news that Associated's new Board of Directors would include such prominent picture figures as P. A. Powers and Elmer Pearson, while John S. Woody was named for the post of General Manager and Jay A. Gove retained as General Sales Manager.

The current headline means the bringing to Associated of one of the best known figures in the editorial end of motion pictures. He assumes the duties of Director of Advertising and Publicity, and is preparing to organize one of the most complete and efficient departments in the industry. In this respect the new Associated Exhibitors starts entirely from scratch, these departments having in the past been handled through the Pathe organization.

Through his service as managing editor of Motion Picture News for five years, and in recent years as editor-in-chief of Moving Picture World, Robert E. Welsh has been known to exhibitors throughout the country for ten years. Through young in years he is a veteran of the picture industry and probably numbers as many exhibitors as personal friends as any other figure in the business.

Pathe Convention is Sucessful

Home Office Executive Discus Problems With District Representatives

DISTRICT Managers and Pathe executives gathered at a convention in New York last week at which the problems of all hands were openly discussed and from which ways and means will be devised for the improvement of conditions in the field in connection with the most formidable releasing program this year ever attempted by the company.

Harry Scott, general sales manager of the company presided at the sessions and struck the key-note of the convention in his opening address by urging the field representatives present to lay their problems and recommendations before the assembly with the utmost frankness.

"We desire to base the decisions of this convention on first hand knowledge of actual conditions in the field," declared Mr. Scott. "What we are after are facts, not theories. If old methods and established procedure have outlived their time, we want to know it. We must proceed in accord with actual conditions as found in the field."

The district managers heartily approved the recently established staff of field exploitation men who are at work under the supervision of S. Barret McCormick, exploitation manager. Plans were also discussed in detail for national advertising of a kind that exhibitors can tie up with direct benefit to their box offices. Every phase of the huge production program was discussed in detail and plans perfected for the adequate presentation of the various units involved to the field.

Those who attended the regular convention sessions included: Harry Scott, General Sales Manager (Chairman); Pat Campbell, Feature Sales Manager; Stanley B. Waite, Sales Manager of Two-Reel Comedies Dept.; E. Oswald Brooks, Serial Sales Manager; W. A. V. Mack, Short-Feature Sales Manager; Charles Henschel, Eastern District Manager; Fred C. Aiken, Mid-West District Manager; R. S. Schrader, Central District Manager; Oscar Morgan, Southern District Manager; Frank Harris, Western District Manager; L. S. Diamond, Manager of Sales Statistical Dept.; S. Barret McCormick, Exploitation Manager; P. A. Parsons, Advertising Manager; E. F. Supple, Publicity Manager; Miss Regge Doran, Manager of Public Relations Dept.; Mrs. E. R. Dessez, Manager of Educational Dept.; George Gray, Editor of Pathe Sun; and W. C. Smith, Comptroller.

At the banquet in honor of the Pathe producers, held on Friday evening, September 25th, at the Hotel Roosevelt, there were present in addition to those already named, E. C. Lynch, Chairman of the Board of Directors; Paul Fuller, President of Pathe Exchange, Inc.; Elmer R. Pearson; Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.; J. E. Storey, Assistant General Manager; Hal Roach and W. B. Frank for the Hal Roach Studios; William R. Fraser and John Ragland for the Harold Lloyd Corporation; Pete Carroll and John Waldron for the Mack Sennett Studios; A. Van Beuren and Charles MacDonald for "Aesop's Film Fables" and "Topics of the Day"; Emanuel Cohen for Pathe News and Pathe Review; and Irving Green for the Yale University Press.

Blank Reaches Settlement With Musicians

The Des Moines musicians' union and the A. H. Blank Enterprises have settled their differences and reached a compromise. The settlement is based on a two year contract with an increase of three dollars per week per man. The union had asked an increase of five dollars. The orchestras, which walked out of the Blank houses when the strike was declared are back at work in all houses controlled by the organization.

New Companies Launched in New York State

Motion picture companies filing papers of incorporation in the secretary of state's office and entering the business in New York state, during the past week, included the following: Lanscape Amusement Corporation, capitalized at $50,000, with Matthew N. and Fannie Chrystmos, Athanas P. Terzis, of Yonkers; Calderone Valley Stream Corporation, Hempstead, $100,000, S. Calderone, C. W. Carman, Hempstead: G. L. Maggie, New York City.

B. R. Producing Company, Inc., capitalization not specified, H. Baron, M. Weiss, F. Risser, New York city; E. C. Fielder Co., Inc., $10,000, W. L. Worrall, E. C. Fielder, New York; M. J. Warner, Pine Orchard, Conn.; Ace Productions, Inc., $10,000, Jack McClellan, A. Saul, H. Goldman, New York city; Swingalong Movie Productions Inc., $50,000, E. E. Hart, B. C. Hart, William G. Bitzer, New York city.

Sears Amusement Corporation, capitalization not stated, Louis Mehl, Anna Radeloff, Adolph Schimel, New York city; Forest Avenue Studios, Inc., $25,000, A. S. D'Agostino, Elmhurst; Charles Ohmann, A. T. Mannon, New York city; K. W. F. Productions, Inc., $10,000, Clark Rose, M. W. Dixon, Dorothea Hein, New York city; Universal Artists Inc., capitalization not stated, Ruth Sherman, Muriel Borrman, P. D. Kaufman, New York city.

Albany Exhibitors Adjust Labor Troubles

Wage and working conditions have been adjusted between the exhibitors of Albany, N. Y., and the motion picture machine operators. Several conferences, however, were necessary before matters were finally ironed out. Each side compromised to some extent.

While the operators desired a six hour day, it was decided that seven hours would constitute a day's work and that hereafter all union card men were to be in the booths, doing away with apprentices. Under this arrangement a union operator will do the relief work for two theatres.

Bowes Engages New Ballet Master for Capitol

Chester Hale, featured dancer who has arranged ballet numbers for several musical productions, has been engaged by Major Edward Bowes as Ballet Master of the Capitol theatre to succeed Mlle. Gamberelli, who hereafter will devote herself entirely to her work as prema ballerina.

Montreal Leads "Lieber Month" Contest

AT the end of the first week of First National's "Lieber Month" sales contest, Montreal, A Gorman, manager, held first position with a standing of 197.94. Indianapolis was second, with a narrow margin over the Portland branch, and New York was in fourth place. Salt Lake and Cleveland were next.

First National reports that a large percentage of the branches had exceeded their quota at the close of the first week of the drive.

Government Seeks Divorce of F.P.-L. Theatres

Also Asks Commission to Ban Block Booking

By Clarence L. Linz

Washington Correspondent, Motion Picture News

AN order requiring the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules E. Mastbaum, the Stanley Company of America, the Stanley Booking Corporation, the Saenger Amusement Company and Ernest V. Richards, Jr., to divest themselves of all interests which they have in theatrical property where motion picture film is exhibited, is asked of the Federal Trade Commission in a 280-page brief filed with that body by its attorneys in the Famous Players case.

Famous Players-Lasky has already announced that a separate theatre corporation is in process of formation.

Block-booking would also be banned under the order contemplated by the commission's counsel, both being characterized as unfair methods of competition.

The brief follows the history of the case from its inception in 1921 to the present time. Block booking and producer ownership of theatres are characterized as the most important phases of the case, and are considered exclusively, the other charges being left for oral argument.

The attorneys express the opinion that the evidence in the case would not warrant an action under the Clayton Act, and that it is only the virtue of the power granted the Federal Trade Commission that the continuance of these alleged unfair methods and practices can be stopped "and the door opened to a free and open market for the sale of motion pictures, where every producer will have an equal opportunity freed from the undue restraints now imposed as a result of these respondents' conspiracies to unduly restrain the sale of pictures, and the unfair methods in attempting to monopolize the industry."

Citing testimony submitted during the hearings to the effect that a good feature to be successful must have a first-class, first-run showing, and that a town with more than one theatrical seat for every twelve inhabitants was "overseated," it is declared to be "very obvious" that all of the producers cannot own theatres in the key cities, nor can all the distributors own such theatres, "so that if it is not an unfair method of competition for producers or distributors to own such theatres it means the practical elimination of all small producers of pictures and distributors from the business, and that the entire picture industry will shortly be controlled and monopolized by those companies which have the financial power to own and control the first-run motion picture theatres."

To require the various respondents to divest themselves of the theatre holdings, it is asserted, is a step of great magnitude. "Your counsel, in asking this commission to issue an order directing those respondents in this proceeding that are producers and/or distributors, engaged in the exhibition of motion pictures, to divest themselves of all interests, either direct or indirect, which they may have in theatrical properties which exhibit picture films, or divest themselves of the interests which they may have in producing and/or distributing companies, in the United States, realize the far-reaching results of such an order, and in that it contemplates the disposal of property of a probable value of more than one hundred million dollars. This commission, in considering the power that it has to make such an order under the Federal Trade Commission Act, is in the same position as the Supreme Court in the American Tobacco Company case, where Chief Justice White, in rendering the decision, stated:

" 'If the Anti-trust Act is applicable to the entire situation here presented and is adequate to afford a complete relief for the evils which the United States insists that situation presents it can only be because that law will be given a more comprehensive application than has been affixed to it in any previous decision. This will be the case because the undisputed facts as we have stated them involve questions as to the operation of the Anti-trust Act not hitherto presented in any case.' "

The block booking situation is outlined in detail, the brief declaring it to be "not only an unfair method of competition against other producers and distributors, but an outrage on the exhibitors as well as the public who patronize the picture shows."

The record shows, it is asserted, that it was the policy of the Famous-Players Lasky Corporation to coerce and attempt to coerce and intimidate exhibitors who refused to buy all or substantially all of its pictures by various means and methods. This sales policy was usually pursued with exhibitors who refused to take the Paramount pictures because of the exorbitantly high rentals asked for them by the respondent. Threatening to open opposition theatres, "shock advertising" and "clocking" are declared to have been among the methods resorted to.

Discussing the results of block booking, the testimony of various witnesses is cited to show that block booking and theatre ownership by producer-distributor is fatal to the industry, "because it corners or closes the market, especially the first-class, first-run theatres in the big cities, and if it continues will eliminate the independent producers, who are producing the bigger and better pictures with their own money, and with a restricted market they will not be able to get their money out of their pictures. The producer-distributor-theatre owner dictates the policies and prices they pay for the pictures irrespective of the artistic merits.

"It is absolutely necessary for the picture industry to have an open market and an open field for the independent producers, or for all producers who want to make good pictures. If the exhibitor was not compelled to take the bad pictures with the good pictures, the bad pictures would soon be eliminated."

Considerable attention is paid by the attorneys to the contention of the respondents in the case that the Commission has no jurisdiction in the matter, it being pointed out that to sustain a proceeding under the Federal Trade Commission Act against a respondent engaged in interstate commerce the commission must have reason to believe that the alleged unfair methods of competition are of interest to the public. Testimony by Thomas A. Edison, H. H. Connick, Dr. John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education; Colonel Alvin M. Owsley, former Commander of the American Legion; Douglas Fairbanks and others is cited to show the great educational value of motion pictures, and statistics are quoted to show the magnitude of the industry in the United States.

"These figures show the magnitude of the industry," it is declared, "and the testimony of the above witnesses—who are the best qualified in America to testify as to the potential power of the screen—have given us facts to show that never before has there been a case brought by the Government in which the general public has been more vitally concerned.

"It is astonishing to learn that within so short a time this new science for imparting knowledge has developed a greater potential power to influence the character, habits, dress, morals and general conduct of our youth than our public school system.

"As an advertising agency in business, it is equally effective. The screen being the first and only universal language in existence, and the effect of its use in foreign trade and in bringing about a better understanding among nations, cannot be overestimated.

"It follows necessarily that the public is

First National and B. & K. Status Unchanged, Katz Declares

BALABAN AND KATZ'S recent theatre deal with Famous Players will in no way alter its long-standing affiliation with First National Pictures. This fact was emphasized in a telegram sent by Sam Katz to all First National's original franchise holders. Mr. Katz's wire reads:

Sam Katz

"Knowing your interest in the negotiations between Balaban and Katz and Famous Players, I want to advise you that our board of directors today ratified our deal with Famous Players. The first and most important thing is that the status of Balaban and Katz remains unchanged. Balaban and Katz remain the original franchise holder of First National and intend to contribute in the future as they have in the past to the continued development and success of First National. The success of First National is an integral part of your business and ours and our efforts will be directed to maintain the important position First National now holds in the industry."

vitally interested in such a medium for enlightenment, which has such a tremendous influence over every phase of American life and over every phase of business, both foreign and domestic.

"Whether the motion picture will prove to be a blessing or a curse to the world will depend upon whether or not each of the three branches of the industry, to-wit, the production, distribution and exhibition of motion-picture film, can be kept free from the evil influences of monopolistic control.

"We do not contend that the Government should own and operate this industry, but the same rules that have been found necessary to prevent unfair methods in competition, and monopoly, in other great industries must be rigidly applied to this new industry, at least to the extent sought in this case that the independent theatre owner should be left free to lease from any and all producers, and free to lease only such films as he deems suitable for his locality and acceptable to his patrons, and the theatres kept free from the control and domination of producers and distributors."

The brief, in addition to the statement of the case and a discussion of the commission's jurisdiction, reviews the organization of Paramount and Famous Players and the acquisition of the former by the latter; the acquisition of producing and distributing companies and theatres by Zukor's new company prior to January, 1917; the effect of these different mergers resulting in the organization of the First National exhibitors' circuit; Zukor's "attempt to destroy First National exhibitors' circuit and to merge it with his company;" affiliations of Famous Players with independent producers; the raising of $10,000,000 to buy first-run theatres in key cities; the organization of Southern Enterprises and agreements with Lynch; acquisition and control of theatres in various States; block booking; Realart Pictures Corporation as "a bogus independent;" the connections of the various respondents; the coercive methods employed in forcing block booking, and the effect of block booking upon the motion picture industry.

The Commission has set November 10 as the date for the hearing. The attorneys for the respondents have twenty days in which to answer the complaint.

Motion Picture Exposition Under Way in Berlin

All of the different branches of the film industry are represented at the Berlin Motion Picture and Photographic Exposition now under way at Kaiserdamm, Berlin, W., Germany. It is the first exhibition of the kind ever held in Germany and attracted wide attention. The dates are from September 25th to October 4th. The exposition was arranged by the Berliner-Messe-Amt in co-operation with the leading film and photographic associations of Germany.

Des Moines Theatre Strike is Terminated

The Des Moines theatre strike is over. Differences have been settled after three weeks during which stink bombs were once used. The union men returned to work Thursday. Mort Singer and Asher Levy, negotiating for the Orpheum circuit, said both sides made concessions. The theatre had been picketed until a week ago Monday. The settlement includes a two-year agreement retroactive to Sept. 1.

Jersey M. P. T. O. Meeting Held At Asbury Park

Directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of New Jersey met at Asbury Park Thursday, September 24th. Joseph M. Seider, president of the organization presided at the gathering, which was attended by Charles Hildinger, Peter Adams and Louis Rosenthal, vice-presidents; Leon Rosenblatt, secretary; William Keegan, treasurer, and Directors Sidney E. Samuelson, Benjamin Schindler, I. M. Hirshblond, Jacob Fox, J. J. Unger, Lee Newbury, E. Thornton Kelly and Louis Gold.

Among the subjects discussed at the meeting were legislation, industrial reels and the Play Date Bureau. Data collected during the past year for the purpose of obtaining a reduction in the Power Rate has been prepared for presentation to the Public Utility Commission. A large increase in the payment of dues was reported by the treasurer.

San Francisco Coliseum Has Changed Hands

Sale and immediate leasing of the Coliseum property in the Richmond District of San Francisco, the entire transaction involving $1,600,000, was announced Sept. 19th by Louis R. Lurie, realtor, who acquired the large holding from Samuel H. Levin. Lurie purchased the property for $225,000 from Levin and then leased the holding back to Levin for 99 years.

The total rental was $1,470,150 net, the lessee paying all insurance and taxes and expenses of the property. The theatre seats 2,200 persons. Levin sublets the holding for a total rental of $29,000 a month net after deducting for taxes and insurance.

Glens Falls Rotarians Hosts to Hays

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, was the guest of honor last week at a Rotary Club luncheon in Glens Falls, N. Y. Mr. Hays was spending a few days at Lake George, as the guest of Lucius Greve, a friend. Exhibitors of Glens Falls and vicinity, anxious to see Mr. Hays, flocked to the luncheon and listened to his talk.

O'Toole Made Major in Reserve Army

IN RECOGNITION of the work done for the army through Motion Picture Theatre screens while he was president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and chairman of the Public Service Department of that organization, M. J. O'Toole has received an appointment as Major in the Reserve Corps of the United States Army. The appointment was made at the direction of President Coolidge.

Major O'Toole, associated with the Comerford Amusement Company in different theatrical enterprises will serve as required in the office of Secretary of War at Washington and in General Summersall's Second Army Corps Area, with headquarters at Governor's Island, New York. During his association with the motion picture business, Major O'Toole evolved different processes whereby screen publicity has been made to serve the interests of Nation, State, City and Town.

First National Alters Sales Plan

Franchise Holders Replace District Managers as Sales Representatives; System Worked Out At Indianapolis Meeting

SWEEPING alterations in the sales and distribution system of First National provides among other changes for the replacement of district managers by First National franchise holders. Under this new arrangement the company's field forces will operate under twenty-six district managers instead of seven as heretofore.

The new plan, which has already been put into effect, was evolved at the last meeting of the Franchise holders at Indianapolis. The plan was submitted by E. A. Eschmann and received the indorsement of the franchise holders, who agreed to take over the duties of managing the sales in their districts without compensation.

Mr. Eschmann pointed out that while they are exhibitors primarily, the franchise holders are also partners in First National and contended that as partners they are vitally interested in the sales of the company's pictures as they are in their own exhibitions of its product. The franchise holders volunteered full co-operation in the execution of the plan, agreeing to go out into the field if necessary and to lend their assistance if such were required, in smoothing out difficulties which may arise in dealings between seller and buyer.

Mr. Eschmann explained that the change in no way reflected upon the ability of the former district managers. In fact, under his new plan, they will remain with the company, but in the capacity of branch managers.

E. A. Eschmann, who has inaugurated a new First National sales plan.

Canada will remain under the supervision of a general manager, who will act as district manager, as well.

In this manner, it is believed that considerably greater strength can be maintained throughout the field. For, while functioning ordinarily in the territory mapped out for them, provision is also made whereby any one or more of the branch managers, as required, can be switched at a moment's notice to any other territory that might show signs of weakening.

A still more direct contact between the field agencies and distribution headquarters is also incorporated into the new arrangement. It is Mr. Eschmann's intention that executives from the personnel of the distribution department will circulate constantly around the cycle of the exchanges so that there will be no loss of direct contact between them and the home office. He holds that this will be one of the vital aims of his organization.

By this change in policy Mr. Eschmann is calling to his distribution strength, the brains, acumen and force of the owners and partners of First National, and at the same time bringing about a closer and more direct coordination between the home office and the branches, as at least one of his associates in the home office will be making the round of the various branches, when he is not doing so himself.

Seider Makes Protest To Will Hays

Attacks Clause Which He Declares Has Been Added to Exhibition Contracts

A PROTEST has been sent to Will H. Hays by Joseph M. Seider, Chairman of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration Committee, with reference to a clause which Mr. Seider states has been added to the present exhibition contracts by members of the Hays organization.

The effect of this clause, Mr. Seider declares, is to require the exhibitor to accept a contract the terms of which are unknown to him. Mr. Seider's letter says:

"You, no doubt, are aware of the fact that the members of your organization, without advice to their customers, have added a clause to the exhibition contracts that they enter into with theatre owners as follows:—

" 'This contract and each and every term and condition hereof, except the matter set forth in the Schedule, shall be deemed amended, modified, added to and/or abrogated by the terms and conditions of the proposed new uniform exhibition contract if and when finally adopted and approved by Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., insofar as the terms and conditions of such new uniform exhibition contract shall or may be inconsistent with or additional to the terms and conditions hereof, and the provisions, terms and conditions of such new uniform contract, when so adopted and approved, shall be deemed to be incorporated herewith, to form a part hereof and to be binding upon the parties hereto.'

Mr. Seider then declares that when a distributor adds a clause to a contract that contains in bold face type the words "Uniform Exhibition Contract," he is leading his customer to believe that the contract that he is signing is the so-called Uniform Contract without change from the form promulgated by the Hays organization. The letter continues:

"The clause is so drawn that it would give the impression upon a first reading that the proposed new uniform exhibition contract referred to is the form of contract proposed by us and it is only after a careful reading that it becomes apparent that it refers to a contract that your organization is obviously preparing.

"We have no objection to your organization ignoring our proposed form and instead preparing one from your own viewpoint. On the contrary, we will welcome a contract drawn by you that is fair to both sides.

"We must, however, protest, on behalf of our membership, against this newly added clause.

"Through this clause an exhibitor agrees in advance to accept a contract, the terms of which are unknown to him. Your members require of the exhibitors to sign a check in blank for your organization to fill in the amount and the payee.

"We have tried very hard, but in vain, to find a reason for this section other than an effort by your organization to overcome sales resistance because of the demand of the theatre owners for a fair contract to forestall the acceptance of our proposed contract by the Independent Motion Picture Association of America and to provide against a possible decision adverse to the form of contract now in use by your members.

"In the event a decision is rendered, holding the present contract inequitable, we assume it is the intention of your members to substitute a new form for the present one and this clause makes it possible for you to do so. You purpose, thereby, to make valid the present contracts, which we claim are invalid because they lack mutuality."

Hays Office is Drafting New Contract

AT the Hays office it was said no comment would be made on the letter from Mr. Seider. It is understood that the Hays organization is drawing up a new contract.

While no official statement of any kind is available it is understood from sources usually well informed that the view of the Hays office is that the new contract will be an improvement from the exhibitor's standpoint on the contract now in use.

New York Congressman Will Ask Probe of Copyright Law Exactions

CONGRESSMAN MacGREGOR, of New York, has announced that at the opening of Congress he will ask for an investigation of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, so it may be determined precisely how the organization is using the Copyright Law to exact tribute from the public.

"It is unthinkable," said Congressman MacGregor, "that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers should be permitted to continue the practices it indulges in under cover of the Copyright Act. I propose immediately upon the opening of Congress to ask for the appointment of a committee to investigate its practices to the end that there be some curb put to the indefensible methods it has pursued in extracting money from the public.

"Congress never intended to put into anybody's hands such extraordinary power as seems to be exercised by this Society in the institution of a system of spies, the imposition of fines and penalties and the extraction of license fees. I understand that every movie house, every broadcasting station, every hotel, every place in the United States where music is played or songs sung for the pleasure of the people that can in any way be classed as for profit must pay tribute to this society.

"It is unthinkable that any person or group can be permitted to continue such a course. It is contrary to the American sense of fairness or decency."

Buffalo exhibitors are greatly pleased with the announcement by Representative MacGregor of Buffalo that he will seek congressional help to "throttle the music trust." J. H. Michael, chairman of Buffalo Zone, M. P. T. O. of N. Y., declares the fight to repeal this tax is just as important as the campaign to repeal the admission tax and urges every exhibitor in the state as well as the country to support Mr. MacGregor in his proposed battle.

The last named committee, an active one sometime back in the history of the association has been revived to determine the number and classification of the various subscribers and value of each of the periodicals in question.

Saenger Theatres Bond Issue

Float $1,500,000 Issue at 6½% Secured by Mortgage on Real Estate

A $1,500,000 issue of first mortgage and collateral trust gold bonds, paying 6½% and due in 15 years, has been floated by Saenger Theatres, Inc., operating 44 theatres in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Florida and Arkansas, through Hibernia Securities Co., Inc., of New Orleans and Hemphill Noyes & CoS., and Merrill, Lynch & Co., of New York.

The bond issue will be secured by a first mortgage on the real estate holdings of the Saenger company, appraised as of August 1st, 1925, at $2,313,003. The net assets of the company as shown by the consolidated balance sheet as of June 30, 1925, are $4,526,425. Saenger Theatres owns one-third of the stock of the Canal Realty & Improvement Co., Inc., and as co-guarantor with two other parties, has a contingent liability of a total amount of $500,000 first mortgage bonds issued by the Canal Realty & Improvement company.

In addition to the 44 theatres which the company operates, Saenger holds an interest in 23 others. Sixteen of the 44 houses are owned outright and the others operated on long term leases. Saenger Theatres was chartered in 1913, at which time it operated five theatres. Consolidated net earnings of the company and its subsidiaries after depreciation, available for bond interest and Federal taxes, for the five and a half years ended June 30, 1925, averaged over $411,570 per annum.

In and Out of Town

LESLIE F. WHELAN, exploitation manager for the Harold Lloyd Corporation, has returned from a trip through the Middle West in the interest of "The Freshman." He assisted in the exploitation of Lloyd's latest production at Chicago, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Des Moines, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

A. W. SMITH, Jr., assistant to E. A. Eschmann, is on a three weeks' trip to the company's branch offices in the Mid-West and Central districts.

PAULA GOULD, general press representative for F. B. O. in the East, returned Sept. 28 from a four weeks' visit to the Hollywood studios of the company.

RICHARD TALMADGE, starring in comedy dramas for F. B. O., arrived from the Coast this week for a month's stay.

A LARGE number of film notables arrived from Los Angeles during the past week. They included: Joseph M. Schenck, Norma Talmadge, Harry M. Warner, B. P. Schulberg, Joe Engel, Harry Rapf, Joseph I. Schnitzer and Charles Whittaker.

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, general manager of Fox, arrived late last week on the Aquitania from Europe.

Bunn Wins Appointment by First National

E. A. Eschmann has placed C. W. Bunn in charge of the open market selling of First National pictures, exclusive of the specials. The appointment became effective September 28th. Bunn has been conducting the work for the past two months.

E. V. Richards Jr., of Saenger Theatres, Inc., which is floating $1,500,000 bond issue.

Pathe Stock on New York Exchange

156,208 Shares of Class A Common Stock Are Admitted to Market; Statement Shows Rapid Growth

STOCK of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has been admitted on the New York Stock Exchange. The Board of Governors of the exchange has admitted to trading 156,208 share of class A common stock. This company, one of the oldest and largest concerns engaged in the picture industry has shown consistent growth during the past eight years. Its gross revenue in 1916 was $4,277,003, and in 1924, $16,459,386.

According to the story in the Wall Street Journal, Pathe expects to do a gross business of $18,000,000 in the current year, from which net profits of $1,500,000 will be available for dividends. This figure after dividends on the $848,200 of 8% preferred stock outstanding, would be equivalent to nearly $9 a share on the outstanding 160,133 common shares, according to the Journal. In 1924 on a gross of $16,459,385 the net was $1,312,609, or $7.77 a share on the common.

For the first 28 weeks of the current year net of $705,058 was realized on sales of $3,805,268, or $4.19 a share.

Assets: Cash $1,247,252; advances to producers $3,017,168; inventories $1,168,352, other current assets $883,619, real estate, equipment, etc., after depreciation, $757,172, investments at cost $150,000, residual value of films, written off, $1, deferred charges $226,885, goodwill and contracts $2,214,907; total, $9,665,356.

Liabilities: Accounts payable and federal taxes $655,533, advance payments on film rentals $197,378, reserve for amortization of contract $819,915, 8% gold bonds due 1931 $1,184,600, 8% preferred stock $848,200, common stock (represented by 150,133 no par shares of class A and 10,000 no par shares of class B) $2,073,254, reserve for sinking fund for retirement of preferred stock $86, surplus $3,886,390; total $9,665,356.

The product of Pathe includes special features, serials, the Pathe News, one and two-reel comedies, the Pathe Review, animated cartoons, topics of the day and educational pictures. Through a subsidiary, Pathex, Inc., a new popular priced motion picture camera and projector has been recently placed on the market. This instrument is meeting with increasing demand and is beginning to contribute to profits. The price of the film used in the camera includes its development in Pathe's laboratories and its return on a reel ready to screen. While profits on the camera are substantial, the geater return lies in the sale of the film. The number of cartridges of film per camera sold to date has far exceeded preliminary estimates, and the company expects revenues from this subsidiary will materially swell profits.

The company also owns 49% of the common stock of the du Pont Pathe Film Manufacturing Corp. This company was recently organized to manufacture raw and non-inflammable film under the process of Pathe Cinema of France. Present production of film is sufficient to take care of all Pathe's requirements.

Missouri Still Fights the Sunday Closing

ONE Missouri exhibitor has hoisted the proverbial white flag in the Sunday show battle among several smaller town exhibitors and citizens, while another, despite a fine and judgment against him, battles stubbornly on, determined to see the fight to a finish.

J. W. Cotter, Moberly, Mo., exhibitor, pleading not guilty to operating his theatre on Sunday in violation of a Sunday ordinance was fined $50 in a police court. He then gave notice of an appeal to the state circuit court and announced his theatre would be open on Sunday, as usual.

In Liberty, Mo., after those who sympathized with Sunday shows, had threatened to close up all drug stores and filling stations if Sunday shows were prohibited, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Wilson, owners of the Liberty theatre and leaders in the fight, agreed, after a conference with sixteen business men, to let bygones be bygones and cease operating their theatre on Sunday without making the town a "blue law" mecca.

West Coast Now Controls 250 Houses

New Subsidiary Corporations Are Launched, Bringing in Additional Theatres; Many More to Be Added

AS THE result of the organization of a new subsidiary company, and other expansion proceedings, West Coast Theatres now embrace close to 250 theatres along the western coast. West Coast Theatres of Northern California, of which Mike Nafy and Nasser Brothers are the guiding spirits, have organized the Bear State Theatres Corporation, a $2,000,000 concern which will take over the T. and D. Junior Circuit. West Coast owns a half interest in the new unit and the other half is owned by Nafy and Nassers.

The Bear State company will not secure complete control of the T. and D. houses, but will hold a majority interest. The T. and D. holdings at present include about thirty houses, but will eventually expand to include about 75 houses, all in Northern California. Nafy individually controls seven houses and Nasser Brothers eight. This in time, will probably be included in the holdings of the new company. Five new houses are on the program to be built by T. and D.

West Coast. Theatres is now operating 111 houses in the principal California key cities and has seventeen others in course of construction. West Coast Junior, operating in Southern California is rapidly e panding its activities and it is said will shortly annex some sixty additional houses in the smaller towns in the Southern part of the state. The Junior Circuit is under the guidance of Mike Rosenberg and Harry Gore.

Theatres already purchased by the new Junior organization include the Royal, Seventeenth and Main streets, Los Angeles, to be remodeled at a cost of $40,000; the Crystal on Whittier Boulevard, the June on Whittier Boulevard, three houses in Redlands, one of which is the Opera House, which is to cater to legitimate plays, road shows and feature films. A site for a new $200,000 theatre was also purchased in Ontario, California. This house will have a seating capacity of 1,500, a Wurlitzer organ and all modern facilities. Work is to be started immediately.

According to the Junior Theatre Circuit policy a motion picture house will be established in every town in Southern California not covered already by the West Coast Theatres, Inc. Millions of dollars, it is said, will be spent on the new houses and the reconstruction of acquired houses within the next twelve months.

West Coast is also said to be planning an invasion of the Colorado Theatre field. A deal, said to be of considerable proportions, is now in process of consummation. According to A. L. Gore, who is in New York on business with First National, the T. and D Junior holdings involved in Bear State Theatres Corporation deal include three houses in Alameda, two in Lodi, one in Merced, one in Paso Robles, one in Petaluma, one in Oakland, three in Reno, three in Sacramento, one in Selma, one in Susanville, one in Tulare and ten or twelve others in various towns in California.

East Side Theatre Wrecked by Safe-Blowers

In an effort to obtain the cash box containing $500, amateur yeggs caused an explosion which wrecked the Florence Theatre, largest motion picture house on lower East Side, New York, resulting in damage to the amount of $15,000. The bandits used an excessive charge of nitro-glycerine in their attempt to blow open the safe in which the cash box was locked. The bandits escaped without obtaining the cash box which was found intact near the wrecked safe.

The attempted burglary was the fifth raid to be made on the Florence Theatre this year. The explosion, which hurled pieces of the steel safe a distance of 100 feet, started a fire. Orchestra seats, the proscenium arch, organ and other musical instruments were ruined by the flames and by smoke and water.

Laemmle Is Due From Europe

Universal President Returning After Spending Entire Summer Abroad

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, accompanied by his secretary, Harry H. Zehner, and his two children, Carl Jr. and Miss Rosabelle, is due back from Europe this week. He has been away all Summer and has visited all of the important film centers on the Continent in furtherance of Universal's interests.

During his stay abroad Laemmle conducted a Universal sales convention in Berlin. It was attended by the company's office managers from France, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Spain, Holland, and Sweden, and was the first convention of the kind ever held by Universal.

This convention was similar in scope to the sales conventions held in the United States. The visiting managers reported the current conditions in their territories and previewed coming Universal films.

Laemmle was the guest of honor at two important banquets in Europe. The first was held in the Hotel Pupp, Prague, Czechoslovakia, and was given in his honor by the exhibitors of Prague. The second was given in Berlin by the film writers and critics of that city. Both dinners were marked with enthusiasm and amity. In each case the Universal president was hailed for the excellence of Universal's product and assured that Universal pictures had won for themselves a warm spot in the hearts of the Continental film fans.

During his stay in Berlin, Laemmle was the guest of the Ufa organization on a tour through the big Ufa studio plant at Neubabelsberg, on the outskirts of the German metropolis.

Shortly before he returned to America, the Universal chief acquired the rights to an important invention recently developed in Germany. It is a method of trick photography said to be very simple and very effective. The discovery of this invention led directly to the recent decision by Laemmle to make "Gulliver's Travels" as a big super-picture.

Sixteen Columbias Completed

Harry Cohn Here, Lauds Independents for Their Service to Exhibitors

SIXTEEN of the eighteen Columbia Pictures for the season have been completed and the other two are now in work, according to Harry Cohn, who is in New York from Hollywood to confer with his associates, Jack Cohn and Harry Brandt. The product is made up of six Columbias, six Perfections and six Waldorfs.

The Columbia pictures are, "The Danger Signal," "The Unwritten Law," "Steppin' Out," "S. O. S. Perils of the Sea," "Ladies of Leisure" and "The Lure of the Wild." The six Perfections are, "Fighting Youth," "Speed Mad," "The New Champion," "The Great Sensation," "A Fight to the Finish" and "The Handsome Brute." The Waldorfs are, "Enemy of Men," "The Prince of Success," "Sealed Lips," "When Husbands Flirt," "The Fate of a Flirt" and one untitled.

Discussing the Columbia product and the independents in general Cohn said:

"Of course I am personally proud of the pictures I have made for Columbia this year. But I want to say more than a mere passing word of praise for men like Ben Schulberg, Ike Chadwick, Phil Goldstone, Renaud Hoffman, Hunt Stromberg, Whitman Bennett, Charles Burr, Abe Carlos and a host of other real independent producers who have kept their promise one hundred per cent to give to the exhibitors who have had the courage to stand by the independent producers a series of pictures that will stand the acid test of hard box office values.

"A few of this season's finished independent pictures which illustrate this contention and prove that this statement is accurate and that the independent boys are delivering the goods is borne out with "The Danger Signal," a Columbia; "Souls for Sables," Goldstone-Tiffany; "The Girl Who Wouldn't Work," Schulberg; "Steppin Out," Columbia; "Wizard of Oz," Chadwick; "Overland Limited," Gotham; "Romance of an Actress," Stromberg; Richard Talmadge specials, and many others, too numerous to mention."

August Film Exports Show Increase

PRELIMINARY figures just issued by the Department of Commerce show that exports of motion picture films, sensitized but not exposed, from the United States to all countries reached, in August 1925, a total of 9,577,243 linear feet valued at $175,816. This is nearly 13,000,000 linear feet under the unprecedented total of 22,000,000 linear feet of raw film exported in July 1925, but it tops by slightly over 3,000,000 feet the amount of raw film exported in August 1924.

Exports of negatives for August 1925 amounted to 1,760,117 linear feet valued at $260,475 as against $671,765 linear feet valued at $106,559 in July and 1,188,238 feet valued at $244,339 in August 1924.

Exports of positives also showed a slight increase for August 1925 over the two previous periods, the figures reading, 20,368,923 linear feet valued at $572,782 for August 1925 as against 17,589,806 linear feet valued at $552,633 in July and 19,636,791 linear feet valued at $685,140 in August 1924.

Famous-Daily News Tie-up to Seek Potential Star

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY and the Daily News of New York have entered a tieup in which a search will be made for a girl to play a prominent role in a forthcoming Paramount production titled "New York." The girl selected to portray the Spirit of New York will be given a year's contract with Paramount at a salary of $5,200. Four other girls, one from each borough of the Greater City also will be selected for the cast of "New York." They will be paid at current studio rates for the time employed.

The judges who will make the selection are to be appointed by Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Weaver Seattle Studios to Be Enlarged

Enlargement of the H. C. Weaver Productions, Inc., studio at Titlow Beach, Wash., was started the latter part of September, according to announcements made in Seattle last week by Mr. Weaver upon his return from New York City. Growth of the company is a result of the contract signed recently by Mr. Weaver, whereby he will produce within the ne t year eighteen pictures, at an approximate cost of $1,300,000, which will be distributed by the Vital Pictures Corporation.

The Improvements being made in the studios will cost in excess of $25,000, but will make it possible to work twenty-four hours a day on the production of the films. General James M. Ashton of the Weaver organization was expected in Seattle next week, after having signed a contract for the production of eight additional pictures for the Associated Exhibitors' release schedule.

Anthracite Withheld From Massachusetts Theatres

Eugene C. Hultman, chairman of the Emergency Fuel Board, has issued orders to Massachusetts theatre owners and managers that no anthracite coal will be sold for the present time to theatres or to other large buildings. Deliveries are also forbidden to all who have half or more of their year's fuel supply in their bins. Most of the theatres have their fuel supply already on hand, anticipating some such order. Distributing offices are also well fixed as to their supply.

Ten Productions Made In East

First National Units Complete One Feature a Month at New York Studios

SINCE their transfer to New York from Hollywood last October, the First National production units under the supervision of Earl Hudson, have made a record of turning out a feature a month, ten productions having been completed from November, when actual camera work was first started in the East, to the end of August.

The final scenes for "The Scarlet Saint" were completed last week and is now in the cutting room at First National's New York studios, where Arthur Tavares is assembling the work.

The first production made by First National under Hudson's supervision in the East was "One Way Street." This was started in the middle of November last. This was followed by "I Want My Man," with Milton Sills and Doris Kenyon in the featured roles. On the completion of these two "The Necessary Evil" and "Chickie" were filmed. "The Making of O'Malley," Milton Sills' first starring vehicle, and "The Half Way Girl" comprised the next pair. Then followed "The Pace That Thrills," "The Knockout," "The Unguarded Hour," and "The Scarlet Saint."

Five noted scenario writers have just been added to First National's eastern production units at New York. These writers who will do the scenarios for pictures going into production this Fall under the supervision of Earl Hudson are: Olga Printzlau, John Fish Goodrich, Charles Whittaker, Jane Murfin and Harvey Thew.

Editing "Road To Yesterday"

De Mille Also Prepares to Start New Feature; Three Other Units at Work

THE peak of production activity at the Cecil B. DeMille studios has been reached by the units making features for the Producers Distributing Corporation program at the Culver City plant, where three pictures are now in course of filming and Mr. DeMille is editing his personally directed production "The Road to Yesterday."

Upon completion of his editing and titling of this work, Mr. DeMille will immediately hold conferences with Jeanie Macpherson on the adaptation of "The Volga Boatman," his next personally directed feature based on a story especially written for him by Konrad Bercovici.

The units engaged in camera work on Producers Distributing features are headed by Rupert Julian, directing a screen adaptation of Anthony Paul Kelly's stage success "Three Faces East;" Alan Hale, who is making "Braveheart," the second Rod LaRocque starring vehicle, and Paul Sloane, filming "Made for Love," an original story by Garrett Fort in which Leatrice Joy will be starred.

The cast which will appear in "Three Faces East" includes Jetta Goudal, Robert Ames, Clive Brook and Henry Walthall. La Rocque's supporting company in "Braveheart" includes Lillian Rich, Robert Edeson, Tyrone Power, Jean Acker and Sally Rand.

F. B. O. Production Activity

Studio Personnel to Be Increased; Plans Made for Completion of Current Schedule

A SCHEDULE of great production activity has been mapped out for the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood during October and November. Production executives are concentrating on the completion of the 1925-26 program of 64 pictures and the plans which they have completed call for the addition of several directors and players to the present personnel of the organization.

At the close of September the F. B. O. plant completed one of the busiest months in its history. There are now six companies actively producing, with four more units about ready to start camera work.

Tom Forman, filming the "Midnight Flyer," a railroad melodrama by Arthur Guy Empey, is on location with a cast which includes Dorothy Devore, Cullen Landis, Buddy Post, Claire McDowell and Frankie Darro. And other F. B. O. units on location at present are the Fred Thomson company making "All Around the Frying Pan," a Frank Richardson Pierce story being directed by David Kirkland, and Maurice Flynn and his associates in the cast of "Between Men," a comedy melodrama being directed by Harry Garson.

Richard Talmadge is at work on an untitled story under the direction of Sam Nelson, and Tom Tyler, F. B. O.'s new western star, is being directed by Bob De Lacey and Jimmy Grnen. The fourth episode in the "Adventures of Mazie" series is being made by Alberta Vaughn and the comedians who will support her in these pictures.

Productions for which the preliminary plans are now being made are "A Poor Girl's Romance," to be adapted from the Laura Jean Libbey story of that title, "Flaming Waters," an original story by E. Lloyd Sheldon, the Emory Johnson production to follow "The Last Edition," and the next starring vehicle for Evelyn Brent, who will return to the studio soon from a month's vacation in New York.

John Lowell Russell Starts New Production

John Lowell Russell left on September 30th, for Knoxville, Chattanooga and points South where he will join the Miller Bros. 101 Ranch Outfit with whom a special production will be made.

The story is by Mrs. L. Case Russell and George Terwilliger will direct. John Lowell and Evangeline Russell are to be starred and the title and releasing arrangements will be later announced.

Cast Completed for Harry Carey Feature

Charles R. Rogers has assembled the cast for the first of a series of Western features he will produce with Harry Carey as the star for release through Pathe. Harriette Hammond has been chosen as leading lady, while in the supporting roles will be Bert Woodruff, Ruth King, Pat Harmon, Stanton Heck, Raymond Nye and Joseph Gerard. The first feature is an adaptation of "Buck Up," a story by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven. Scott Dunlap will direct.

A group of scenes from "The Everlasting Whisper," a Wm. Fox production in which Tom Mix is starred, accompanied as usual by Tony, the Wonder Horse.

Seven Units Working on Coast

Paramount Launches Busy Fall Schedule at Hollywood Plant; Eastern Units on Location

WITH seven production units now at work on important features for the Paramount program and plans completed for the launching of eight additional pictures in November, the Hollywood studios of Famous Players-Lasky are now well under way on the heavy Fall production schedule outlined for them by Jesse L. Lasky. There is little activity at present at the Long Island studios owing to the fact that three features were completed last week and the other units producing there are now on location.

The companies working at the Hollywood studios include the Pola Negri unit, now filming "The Tattooed Countess," adapted from the Carl Van Vechten novel and being directed by Malcolm St. Clair.

James Cruze is directing "Mannequin," the Fannie Hurst prize story of the Liberty Magazine contest; while Irvin Willat recently started the cameras on "The Enchanted Hill," written by Peter B. Kyne.

New productions which it is expected will be started this week at the Hollywood plant are "Magpie," William de Mille's next feature, in which Bebe Daniels will have the starred role, and "Two Soldiers," adapted from the story by Hugh Wiley. This picture will bring Mildred Davis, Mrs. Harold Lloyd, back to the screen after an absence of two years. Victor Fleming will direct the work and Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton are to head the cast supporting Miss Davis.

The productions completed within the past week at the Eastern plant are "The King on Main Street," with Adolphe Menjou, Greta Nissen, Bessie Love and Oscar Shaw and directed by Monta Bell; "Stage Struck," Gloria Swanson's new vehicle, and Herbert Brenon's "A Kiss for Cinderella," from the Barrie play and featuring Betty Bronson and Tom Moore.

Warner Plans For Next Season

Current Schedule Well Up; Preliminary Arrangements for 1926-27 Under Way

WARNER BROS. will make forty pictures for the 1926–27 season, the program to be headed by six superspecials of which two will be directed by Lubitsch, two will be vehicles for John Barrymore and two will star Syd Chaplin, it was stated by H. M. Warner, who returned to New York last week from a visit to the company's studios in Hollywood.

The current production schedule, Mr. Warner said, was so well advanced at this time that considerations looking toward the product to be offered next season were already under way. Twenty-five of the forty Warner features for this year have been completed and according to present indications the studios will be ready to start on the 1926–27 product as early as January next.

Twelve of the fifteen remaining pictures to be made for the current program are well along in production now. Warner officials, he said, have found the results of advanced production so gratifying to both the production and distribution branches of the organization that every effort will be made to take advantage of the plan during the 1926–27 season.

Fifty Candidates for Role of Theodore Roosevelt

F. B. O. reports that more than fifty applications have been received from candidates for the role of Theodore Roosevelt in the production based on the noted statesman's career to be filmed by that company. Each of the applicants have been granted a personal interview at which their qualifications to portray the character on the screen have been minutely inspected. The choice, it is reported, has narrowed down to twelve. Work on the scenario for the picture will be started soon at the F. B. O. studios in Hollywood.

Kelley Color System in Novelty Pictures

A new series of pictures in which the Kelley Color system has been applied, is announced for release. It offers diversified subjects, consisting of novelty reels, such as "Escotypes" and "Babyland," and scenics such as "Feathered Braves," Indian pictures; "Sky High and Blue," showing the Canadian Rockies, the "Gardens of Victoria" and "Golden Apples."

Florence Auer in "King on Main Street"

Florence Auer has been assigned the role of Queen of Molvania in "The King on Main Street," which Monta Bell is producing at Paramount's Long Island studio. Miss Auer has just completed an engagement with D. W. Griffith in "That Royle Girl."

Scenes from "Borrowed Finery," a Tiffany Productions offering.

"Modern Madness" Print is Due in New York

"Modern Madness," a new A. M. Foote production has been completed under the direction of J. P. McCarthy, and F. J. Hawkins of the Hollywood Film Sales Service will leave for New York October 1st with a print of the picture. Dorothy Hope, an actress from England, makes her initial American appearance in "Modern Madness."

M. S. Rosenfield is the eastern representative of Hollywood Film Sales Service and will handle the sales of the Foote series. His offices are in the Loew State Theatre building in New York.

M-G-M to Double Production

Most Extensive Schedule in History of Organization Under Way on Coast

THE usual Fall production schedule of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will be more than doubled, according to Louis B. Mayer, who is now in the east conferring with other executives of the organization. Within the next four months at least twenty productions, many of them super specials, will be sent east either completed or near completion.

King Vidor has started his Fall productions with the direction of Lillian Gish in "La Boheme," in which John Gilbert will also appear. Elinor Glyn will direct one of her own stories for the first time when "The Only Thing" goes into production.

Tod Browning is ready for the production of his underworld story, "The Mocking Bird," which will star Lon Chaney. Waldemar Young, who wrote the continuity for "The Unholy Three" is preparing the script and the story will go into production in the near future.

George Hill has been assigned to direct Rex Beach's "The Barrier," adapted by Harvey Gates, and Leon Abrams will handle the megaphone on the English novel, "Nocturne," the work of Frank Swinnerton.

Benjamin Christianson, noted Swedish director, will start "The Light Eternal," some time this month. After a brilliant record on the continent, this will be Christianson's first picture in this country.

Hobart Henley is scheduled to start production this week on "Free Lips," an original story by Carey Wilson. Norma Shearer will be starred and Lew Cody featured in the supporting cast.

One of the most pretentious efforts on the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer schedule will be the filming in technicolor of "Bardelys the Magnificent" from the story by Raphael Sabatini. This will be directed by King Vidor, it is announced by Mayer.

Paul Bern will direct "Paris" as his initial M-G-M picture. The story is an original by Carey Wilson, adapted by Jessie Burns. Edmund Goulding has completed his script for "Sally, Irene and Mary," adapted from the successful musical play and was scheduled to start direction this week.

Robert Z. Leonard is directing his first Fall picture, "A Little Bit of Broadway," co-starring Charles Ray and Pauline Starke. The story is by Richard Connell.

Marshall Neilan is completing "The Great Love," based on his own original story, and Christy Cabanne has been assigned to the direction of "Dance Madness." "The Mysterious Island" is to be directed by Jack Conway.

One of the super specials of the year to be made under the supervision of Hunt Stromberg will be a propaganda picture on the peril of fire, by arrangement with the International Order of Fire Chiefs.

Among other stories slated for Fall production are Vincente Blasco Ibanez' "The Temptress," an original by Donald Ogden Stewart, and a superspecial by William Slavens McNutt. There will also be three original stories by Ferenc Molnar.

Louise Dresser Added to Cast of "Fifth Avenue"

Louise Dresser, well known stage and screen actress, has been added to the cast of "Fifth Avenue," now being filmed under the direction of Robert G. Vignola for release on the Producers Distributing Corporation program. Miss Dresser will join the company on its return to Hollywood from New York, where exterior scenes were filmed.

For a number of years Lancaster has headed his own casting organization.

"Nightie Night Nurse" Cast Selected

Warner Brothers have made good progress with the selection of the cast to support Syd Chaplin in "Nightie Night Nurse," which has already gone into production. Patsy Ruth Miller will play opposite Chaplin, while others in important roles are, Gayne Whitman, Pat Hartigan, Edith Yorke, David Torrance and Raymond Wells. Charles (Chuck) Reisner is directing.

Camera Work Soon to Start on "Beverly of Graustark"

"Beverly of Graustark," a screen adaption of the George Barr McCutcheon work of that title, is to be started soon at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City. The picture will be made by Cosmopolitan with Marion Davies in the starring role. Sydney Franklin will direct.

Featured Players Named for "Hassan"

Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., and Greta Nissen will be the featured players in "Hassan," Raoul Walsh's production for Paramount from the Arabian Nights tale. Five gigantic sets are now under way for the production. The story was adapted for the screen by James T. O'Donohoe.

Tom Buckingham Again Fox Comedy Director

Tom Buckingham, who for a number of years directed Fox Comedies, has again been appointed to the directorial staff of a comedy unit, by George T. Marshall, Fox comedy supervisor. Buckingham is preparing a new Imperial comedy which will shortly go into production.

Two Universal Serials in Production

Universal has put two serial pictures into production. They are "Strings of Steel," starring William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick, and "The Radio Detective," starring Jack Daugherty. Henry McRae will direct the former and William Crinley the latter.

M-G-M Planning Third Annual Ball

ELABORATE preparations are being made for the third annual Loew-Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ball scheduled to be held at the Astor Hotel in New York City, Saturday evening, October 31st. Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production, is at present in the east arranging for the personal appearance of practically all of the M-G-M stars and featured players.

Major Edward Bowes and the entire house and technical staff of the Capitol Theatre are at work on a number of novelties to be presented, while Nils Granlund, master of ceremonies, is lining up the talent that will appear from all of the leading Broadway shows.

Dancing will be enjoyed to the music of several of the leading orchestras and an elaborate banquet will be served.

"The Brown Derby" Next Star Vehicle for Hines

C. C. BURR announces the purchase of the motion picture rights to "The Brown Derby," a comedy by Francis S. Merlin and Brian Marlow which is soon to be produced on the New York stage, as a screen vehicle for Johnny Hines on the First National Program.

The picture will be produced after "Rainbow Riley," which Hines is now making at Delaware Water Gap. "The Brown Derby" will complete the group of three productions which the Burr-Hines combination will contribute to the First National schedule this year.

MacIntyre Now Production Manager for Goldwyn

Samuel Goldwyn has engaged Robert D. MacIntyre, for the past four years casting director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as production manager. Mr. MacIntyre will assume his new duties immediately and will supervise George Fitzmaurice, Potash and Perlmutter and Henry King productions, the three Goldwyn production units.

Paramount Appoints New Title Editor

Paramount has appointed John Peale Bishop, former managing editor of Vanity Fair, as title editor of the company's eastern made productions. He succeeds Julian Johnson, who has been promoted to production supervisor.

Elaine Hammerstein in "Paint and Powder," a Chadwick picture.

Douglas MacLean in "Seven Keys to Baldpate," a Paramount production.

Five Fox Features in October

"Iron Horse" Heads List of Releases Due Exhibitors During Coming Month

FIVE feature pictures, four two-reelers, two one-reelers and the usual twice a week issue of the news reel comprise the month's releases for October of Fox Film Corporation. The features are "The Iron Horse," "Thunder Mountain," Tom Mix in "The Everlasting Whisper," George O'Brien in "The Fighting Heart" and "The Winding Stair."

October 4th is the release date set for "The Iron Horse," which has already had sensational runs in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Cleveland and other cities. It is a John Ford production, an epic of the building of the first transcontinental railroad.

Two feature attractions will be released October 11th. They are the Tom Mix starring vehicle, "The Everlasting Whisper," and "Thunder Mountain." The former is an adaptation of Jackson Gregory's story of the same name. J. G. Blystone directed. Tony, the Mix horse is of course featured with him, while in the supporting cast are Alice Calhoun, Robert Cain, George Berrell, Walter James, Virginia Madison and Karl Dane.

"Thunder Mountain" is an adaptation of John Golden's stage success, "Howdy Folks," by Pearl Franklin. It was directed by Victor Schertzinger. Madge Bellamy, Leslie Fenton and Alec B. Francis have the leading roles. In the supporting cast are Jay Hunt, Zasu Pitts, Paul Panzer, Otis Harlan, Arthur Houseman, Emily Fitzroy, Dan Mason, Natalie Warfield, Maine Geary and Russell Simpson.

George O'Brien's starring vehicle, "The Fighting Heart," is scheduled for release October 18th. It was directed by John Ford, and supporting the star are Billie Dove, J. Farrell Mac Donald, Victor Mac Laglen, James Marcus, Francis Powers, Harvey Clark, Colin Chase, Bert Woodruff, Edward Piel, Jack Herrick and Hazel Francis Ford, Lynn Cowan, Diana Miller, Howell.

"The Winding Stair" is set for release October 28th. It is John Griffith Wray's first directorial effort for Fox. Alma Rubens and Edmund Lowe are the featured players. Others in the cast are Warner Oland, Mahlon Hamilton, Emily Fitzroy, Chester Conklin and Frank Leigh.

"A Cloudy Romance" and "With Pen, Brush and Chisel" head the short subject releases on October 4th. The former is an Imperial comedy directed by Lew Seiler, with Harold Austin, Hazel Dawn, Harry Dunkinson and Jules Cowles in the leading roles.

"All Aboard," second of the "Married Life of Helen and Warren" series, is scheduled for release October 11th.

On October 18th Fox will release the one-reel variety, "Cuba Steps Out," the two-reel Imperial, "The Heart Breaker" and the second of the O. Henry series, "Transients in Arcadia."

Seven Featurettes Due From Red Seal

Seven featurettes are announced for October release by Red Seal. "Daisy Bell," taken from the old song, "On a Bicycle Built for Two," is the Ko-Ko Song Car-tune. The second of the "Marvels of Motion" is also on the list, while "Ko-Ko on the Run" is the month's "Out of the Inkwell" contribution. "Land's End," another release is of the Gems of the Screen series. Two more of the "Animated Hair Cartoons", and another issue of "Film Facts" titled "Dance of All Nations," complete the list.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage — a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

The Box-Office Value of Pathe Two Reel Comedies is up to You!

Under a new long term contract with the Hal Roach Studios, Pathe agrees, to advance to the producer for production purposes every dollar indicated by an expectancy table that quite reliably forecasts at six month intervals what the eventual collections per picture are going to be.

If there has been another similar contract between producer and distributor, I have yet to hear of it. If there is a fairer contract to producer, distributor and exhibitor, I don't know of it.

Increased receipts are at once reflected in pictures that cost more, are worth more, and will bring more at the box office.

The chief concern of every exhibitor is, and should be, not so much what a picture costs him but what it will bring him. If a moderate increase in film rentals will insure him an immoderate increase in profits, it is mighty good business to pay more to get more.

A producer must get an adequate return on his pictures in order to go on producing. Better pictures mean increased production cost. The business is not interested in more pictures. It only wants better ones.

The production cost of a feature picture that is just fair, is low at $25,000.00 per reel. Mr. Wm A. Johnston of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in their issue of Sept. 19 says: "The cry everywhere is against, not for, the moderate cost program feature. Yet comedy producers would be happy if they could have as much per reel to spend as the average feature costs. . . . . Distributors of comedies will increase their advances to the producer just as soon as the exhibitor will permit the increase."

Putting the biggest part of your program cost, reel for reel, into the feature, and giving to the comedy what's left, is neither fair to the comedy, nor is it good business for you. On a footage basis, entertainment value considered, the comedy is as important to you as your feature.

To make the most money you've got to get the best pictures that it is possible to make. The public is hungry for quality entertainment. You and you only can make it possible, by encouraging the producer to make his pictures better.

You, then, write your own ticket. Both the production cost of Pathe Two Reel Comedies and their value at your box office are up to you!

"She's a good gal. Why not treat her right?"

A hungry man wouldn't be satisfied with humming bird's tongues on toast or a dill pickle.

He wants a real square meal, like good rare roast beef, potatoes and brown gravy.

The "subtle stuff" may go with a Browning Club, but your crowd likes to haw haw. They don't like to guess at the laughs.

When you give them a Mack Sennett you give them a good square meal of comedy, and they thank you for it.

Take a look at "Over There-Abouts" and "Dangerous Curves Behind." When you get through laughing, plan to advertise them. What's the profit in having a good thing if you don't tell them about it?

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Window Displays Featured on "Wife of Centaur"

Elaborate window displays were a feature of the campaign on "Wife of the Centaur" recently waged by Charles Glickauf in connection with the showing of this production at the Strand theatre in Evansville, Ind. Five drug stores displayed copies of the novel on which the film is based, and the town's leading jeweler contributed an exhibit of Richelieu pearls, vanity boxes, fancy compacts and toilet articles. Tobacco shops featured a popular brand cigar with stills showing John Gilbert smoking one. Art cards were displyed in all these windows.

Three slides and a trailer were used, and there was a special lobby display. Special stories achieved space in the press and three slides and a trailer were brought into play.

Old Time Stars Made Basis of Effective Contest

The ability to recognize famous screen stars of yesterday was rewarded in Brooklyn, N. Y., by passes to the Meserole theatre. J. Hartman, exploiteer from the Big U Exchange, secured a photograph of former favorites taken at Universal City during the recent Anniversary celebration and used it as a basis of a contest which a neighborhood newspaper, The Greenpoint Home News, conducted for him. Under a two-column cut of the photograph, which showed such celebrities as Francis Ford, King Baggot, Max Asher, Cleo Madison, Carmen Phillips, Grace Cunard, Rosemary Theby, Ella Hall and Dorothy Phillips, was this copy:

"With the rapid progress of the 'movie' productions the stars that you knew 'yesterday' have retired to either private life or other fields, but few remain to carry on in the 'land of make believe.'

Manager George Schenck of Loew's Metropolitan theatre, Brooklyn, and Carl Levi, of Loew's, Inc., arranged this striking front for "Never the Twain Shall Meet," Cosmopolitan's production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"In this group are a number of players who were popular players in the Universal productions within the past ten years. How many do you recognize? How many were your favorite players?

"It would take but an instant to recognize Dorothy Phillips, seated in the second row, third from the right. Perhaps it is easy to recall one of her greatest triumphs, 'Once to Every Woman.'"

The story went on to say that the Meserole theatre would give a pass to every reader of the paper who could send in a correct list of the pictured stars. In addition to the cut in the newspaper there was an enlarged reproduction of the group in the lobby of the theatre.

Lillian and Dorothy Pairs See "Romola" Gratis

When "Romola" played in Cleveland, O., at the Stillman theatre, M. A. Malancy, publicity director for the house, assisted by C. C. Deardourff, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, waged a campaign that attracted considerable attention to the showing.

The most notable feature of their campaign was the publishing of a telegram from Lillian and Dorothy Gish in the Cleveland Press reading "Will you kindly invite all sisters in Greater Cleveland whose names are Lillian and Dorothy to be our guests next week at the Stillman theatre during the presentation of our latest picture, 'Romola'? Please have them send their names and addresses to you and our representative in Cleveland will provide them with tickets. Our sincere thanks to you and best wishes to our many friends in our home state." Twenty-one letters were received on the day following the appearance of this letter in the Press, and several on each day succeeding, the stunt attracting enormous attention. In the event that any one of the sisters was sick a two-pound box of candy was forwarded. Each pair was checked up and all found authentic.

The Catholic Alumni association, Cleveland branch, co-operated in distributing 20,000 tickets good for a five per cent discount in the afternoon and 10 per cent in the evenings, and seventeen displays of photographs were made in branch libraries, through which 10,000 book marks exploiting the showing were distributed. Forty 24-sheets and twenty-one 8-sheets were posted, and copies of the novel were featured in a window display. Ads were bought extensively in all local papers including the Italian, and letters from the Will Hays office endorsing the picture were liberally distributed. Street cars carried cards throughout the showing.

Toledo "Iron Horse" Drive a Model

Temple Theatre Engagement Supported by Exploitation Campaign of Smashing Magnitude and Force

ONE of the most complete and carefully planned exploitation campaigns on record is that staged recently in Toledo, Ohio, for the showing of "The Iron Horse" at the Temple theatre. The management of this house, in conjunction with the Fox exploitation forces, left no stone unturned to let Toledo know the calibre of the attraction.

The first step taken by the exploiters was to organize the local railroad officials and employees, which was done at a special invitational showing, in which the executives of the different roads entering Toledo, together with the heads of the various unions were asked to pledge their support. Toledo being the third largest railroad center in the world, the railroadmen's showing took on all the aspects of a convention or political demonstration.

A similar screening was held for the Toledo Chamber of Commerce, and the aid of this body was pledged to make the Temple engagement a success. Then an afternoon tea was held at the Fort Meigs hotel, to which were invited the heads of all the women's business and social organizations, together with all the local school teachers. The women were organized to act in concert with the railroad men and the Chamber of Commerce.

A replica of "The Iron Horse" built upon an auto chassis, toured the streets for one week preceding the opening, and throughout the engagement as well.

The Mayor of Toledo, cognizant of the tremendous local interest in the engagement, offered his services in helping put the picture over. At a special invitational showing, held on the evening before the engagement opened, the Mayer headed the list of celebrities present, and also rode in the cab of the engine ballyhoo on the streets.

Oliver Slocum, aged 94 years, and reputed to be the oldest railroad man in the world, was guest of honor at this showing. The old railroader was brought to the theatre in the cab of the engine ballyhoo, accompanied by a special military guard of honor from the state barracks at Columbus.

Animated marquee display by Manager Charles H. Amos of the Carolina theatre, Greenville, S. C., for "Don Q" (United Artists).

So enthusiastic was the crowd gathered before the theatre, on seeing the old timer that it was necessary to take him to one of the windows of the theatre overlooking the street, where an announcer with megaphone, introduced him, incidentally making a short talk on the pictnre.

The recruiting division of the army was tied up with the attraction, through a number of specially painted one-sheet boards placed about town in advantageous locations. A recruiting meeting was held before the post office on one evening before the opening, at which plenty of railroad flares were burned, and speeches made by civic officials, together with liberal mention of "The Iron Horse."

Special vaudeville gags bearing on humorous aspects of "The Iron Horse" were compiled. These gags were used the week before the engagement by Mack and Tempest, and Ryan and Walker in the routine of their acts at the local Keith house.

A railroadmen's parade was staged during the run, in which members of the Engineer's, Firemen's, Conductor's and Trainmen's organizations took part. The American Express Co. contributed a float to this turnout.

The local radio station was used for a sales talk on the attraction, and the Toledo newspapers played this and the many other stunts up heavily in their columns.

Forty-two window tie-ups were secured in the shopping district, through the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce. The Chamber also displayed a large announcement in the windows of their offices. Each window bearing a single letter, and the whole spelling the title.

Taking advantage of the new "Lucky Buck" craze that is sweeping the country, the Toledo News-Bee ran a contest in which passes to the theatre were given to the winners of the money prizes.

The Lion and Milner's department stores wrapped up "Iron Horse" heralds with all bundles for a week before the opening.

The Boy Scouts organization was tied up with the showing, on the angle that the hero of the picture, as a child was the original Boy Scout. The boys paraded with the railroad men, as did also the Toledo G. A. R. posts, and the Sons of Italy, a fraternal organization.

In most exploitation campaigns, it is customary to have some kind of a newspaper contest. The Toledo exploiters had two. The News-Bee ran a Railroad Men's Popularly Contest, while the Blade ran an essay contest on "What The Iron Horse Has Done For The Civic Development of Toledo."

The members of the Board of Education, school principals and teachers were also invited to one of the special showings.

Tags made up after the fashion of Auto Violation Cards, and carrying "Iron Horse" copy, were tied to all cars parked in the downtown district.

Three of the attractive window displays in the campaign on "The Pony Express" (Paramount) at the Imperial theatre, San Francisco, featuring costumes and properties actually used in the filming of the picture.

YOUR IDEA

A SCRIP BOOK PLAN

AS AN introductory feature for the fifth season of Capitol Entertainment at the F. P.-L. houses in Canada, the company has launched a Scrip Book plan. Books of tickets have been placed on sale simultaneously in 57 of the corporation's theatres from Montreal to Vancouver, B. C., the ticket coupons being offered in five, 10 and 25 cent denominations for the convenience of patrons. The books of admission tickets, which are transferable and acceptable at any of the 57 theatres, were issued at prices that represented a considerable saving to purchasers. The $10 scrip books are sold at $8.50 and the $5 books are sold for $4.50. The scrip books have practically no restrictions, the coupons being detachable, interchangeable and transferable.

This feature was worked out and put through by Walter F. Davis, former manager of the Metropolitan theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, who was transferred to the head office staff of Famous Players at Toronto to take charge of the Scrip Book department for the 57 theatres. The principal cinema halls of the corporation were selected for the feature and it is a noteworthy fact that no less than 14 theatres in Toronto come under the plan.

Large advertising space was used simultaneously in the various cities in which the 57 theatres are located for the first "flash" on August 22 and other literature and screen announcements were employed for the purpose. The cities which come under the plan include Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver, Calgary, Brandon, Brockville, Brantford, Cobourg, Chatham, Edmonton, Fort William, Guelph, Galt, Hamilton, Kitchener, Kingston, London, Moose Jaw, Nanaimo, Nelson, Ottawa, Oshawa, Owen Sound, Port Arthur, Paris, Peterboro, Port Hope, Regina, Saskatoon, Stratford, Victoria, Welland, Woodstock, Sault Ste. Marie and St. Catherines.

The 14 theatres listed for Toronto include the Hippodrome, Oakwood, Bloor, College, Palace, Alhambra, Beaver, Parkdale, Teck, Family, Beach, Capitol, St. Clair and York Theatres.

The Scrip Book feature is one of the most important innovations for chain theatres in the Dominion in recent years.

REISENFELD ON MUSIC

THE all-important matter of musical accompaniment for pictures is dealt with interestingly in a past issue of The Close-Up, published by Famous Players for its theatre employes, by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, who has charge of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion, New York City. Some of the highlights of the Riesenfeld article are:

In scoring a picture, I think it is unwise to use tunes that are too familiar. They distract attention from the screen. By this I do not mean that well-known music should never be used. Often it gives exactly the right atmosphere. When we show boys playing on the poorer streets of New York City, nothing is more appropriate than to play "The Sidewalks of New York," which everybody knows. What I do mean is that one should avoid using a too well-known aria, such as "Celeste Aida," or a song like "Love's Old Sweet Song" for a love theme. But then again, in a Southern picture it might be very suitable to play "Swanee River" or "My Old Kentucky Home." A good thing to remember is that the audience should never be consciously listening to the music. The score should never become obtrusive.

The film should be divided into moods and then every effort be made to find music that represents each mood. Ideally, of course, all motion picture theatres should be equipped with an extensive music library, with the compositions so catalogued that reference is a simple matter.

With the exception of set arias, operatic music is admirably suited to film accompaniment. In opera one finds practically every emotion and situation expressed. If a certain film has oriental scenes there is "L'Africana" and "Aida" and "Coque D'Or" to draw upon.

Musical settings cannot be standardized. If Charlie Chaplin in one of his comedies slips and falls, he may well be accompanied with a roll of drums and crash of cymbals. But it would be fatal to use such an accompaniment for a scene where Valentino falls to a tragic death.

Scoring has become a science of split seconds. A melody that perfectly enhances one scene may prove ruinous if it is allowed to run over raggedly into a subsequent one. A scene of dancing and gaiety may perhaps be immediately followed by one of sadness and tears. In such a case the tune that is used for the former must not be allowed to run over even a fraction of a second into the other. The method that I have found to be most satisfactory in scoring a film is to divide it roughly into moods, and then select from the library such compositions as seem to be suitable. While the picture is being run off in the projection room, a pianist plays these compositions while the scorer marks off on the sheet the point that is reached when the scene stops. Afterwards the whole picture with the accompaniment is run off, timed absolutely, and the accompaniment carefully modulated so that the changes will not be too abrupt.

I finish with a plea to the conductor that however he arranges the score, when it comes to the actual performance, not to halt in the middle of a musical phrase because of a scene change. It gives an impression of jerkiness that makes the audience unconsciously fidgety. Of the two evils, having a musical phrase run over too far, or breaking it up, the former is far more desirable.

Race between an ancient automobile and a foot racer, patterned after the picture, used to exploit "Not So Long Ago" (Paramount) by Manager George T. Cruzen of the Palace theatre, Lockport, N. Y.

Naval band from the U. S. S. "Savannah," mother ship to the Pacific division of submarines, which appeared in a Naval Week at Loew's Warfield theatre, San Francisco, in conjunction with "Shore Leave" (First National).

AND OURS

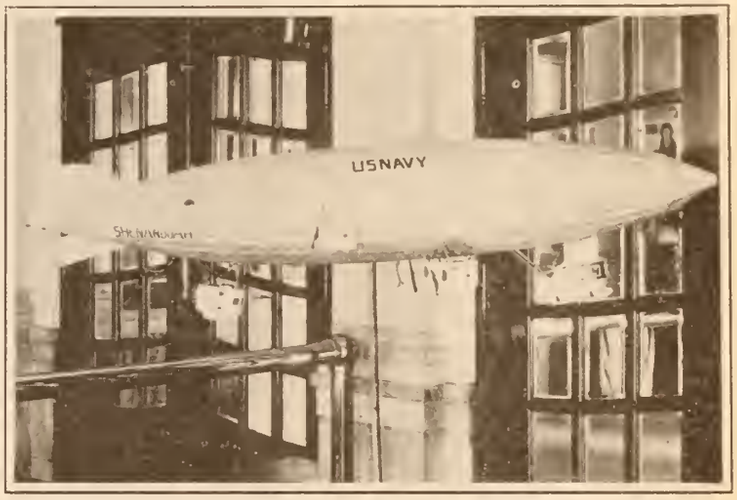
ANOTHER HYMAN PRESENTATION

TYPICAL of the atmospheric prologue which he consistently delivers, Edward L. Hyman, managing director of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, Brooklyn, recently staged a most effective presentation for "Sally of the Sawdust." Not so elaborate as to detract from the picture, it blended pleasantly with the feature and created just the right mood for it.

This prologue, which opened "in one" and gradually worked to a full stage, was preceded by an art-title announcement introducing the purpose of the prologue and the characters. A basso, made up as W. C. Fields in the photoplay, came on in front of the purple spangled draw-curtains of the production stage for some business built around the character. In a moment the premiere danseuse, as Sally, made her appearance. For the two a special number was written, both music and lyrics, which embodied many of the sayings of McGargle in the picture, among them "the old army game."

As the pair finished their number, the purple draw-curtains opened, disclosing the outside of a huge circus tent. There was a group of performers in various poses and costumes, listening to a woman-whistler, made up as a boy, whistling "Invitation." Then a hobo, who had been lounging around the tent, picked up a football balloon and played two numbers on it, "When You and I Were Young" and "My Best Girl." Then the clown of the group, following the example set by the hobo, picked up a saw and played "Old Pal" on it. This was followed by the popular xylophonist of the orchestra, who dressed as the ringmaster, played "Ruffen-ready," while Sally danced and the rest of the performers swayed to the rythm of the music.

Then the ensemble on the stage and in the orchestra took up the final, "The Gallop" from "Faust," after which the performers were seen packing their belongings in preparation to move. As the production stage was cleared, lights dimmed down on the circus tent, which was rigged on a traveller, slowly opened for the final scene which was that of the circus leaving town.



This final scene was the climax of this pretentious and elaborately staged prologue. The scene depicted circus band wagons and animals, one behind the other, with lights on the sides, moving slowly along and disappearing in the distance. The calliope was heard playing as the circus left, gradually growing fainter and fainter as the curtains closed on the prologue and the feature picture "Sally of the Sawdust" was flashed upon the screen.

Unique shadow-box on "The Gold Rush" (United Artists) at the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga. This same idea might be worked out on a large scale and made the basis of an effective prologue, using the drop cut-out in the shape of a Chaplin shoe.

PRESS BOOKS

DOROTHY CLEVELAND, director of advertising and publicity for Rayart Pictures, has just brought out a press book which is an excellent example of the usefulness and value that can be crammed into these exhibitor aids when they are intelligently prepared, with an eye to showmanship and practical conditions. The press book in question is on "The Cyclone Cavalier," and in its sixteen pages is embraced a valuable collection of worth while ideas and material.

Unusual enterprise in exploiting a news weekly subject was shown by Manager Barry Burke of the Palace theatre, Fort Worth, in connection with the Pathe News shots of the Shenandoah disaster. This working model, with revolving propellors, drew great attention to the lobby.

A number of unusually compelling newspaper ads, a cartoon feature for the photoplay page, a mailing card and theatre program cover, a special lobby panel, prepared reviews, snappy catch lines, and the like, are included in the meaty pages, several of which are inclosed in highly decorative art borders.

CANINE EXPLOITATION

HOW many dogs are there in your town? Unless they are conspicuous by their absence, there is one sure-fire exploitation angle for you to use on any of the dog-star pictures that come along, and that is the dog contest for the youngster. Every kid is proud of his "mut" and confident that it would beat the bluest-blooded thoroughbred.

Announce a dog contest, with prizes for the dogs most nearly resembling Rin-Tin-Tin or Strongheart, whoever the star may be, and also for the biggest dog, the smallest, the handsomest, the homeliest, and so on. Give a pass to each of the boys who enters a dog. If it could be arranged, you would attract a lot of attention by rigging up temporary kennels at one side of the lobby and leaving the dogs there for an evening. But just the contest, alone, should bring you a lot of publicity and talk. The prizes need not be large. The appeal is rather to the children's pride in their pets, and their anxiety to see them win.

$5,000 REWARD

HAVE you ever used the "Reward" and "Lost" bulletins as heralds, by way of getting variety into your throwaways? If printing isn't too expensive in your town, little cost attaches to the stunt. The thing to do is to get one of the regular police "Reward" heralds and copy its general style.

If there is a "Lost" or a "Missing" in the title of the picture, so much the better. Use a cut of the villain and announce $5,000 reward for his capture, dead or alive. Then use the line: For information, phone—followed by the theatre phone number. If they phone in, give them a brief sales talk on the picture.

Manager Walter League of the Strand theatre in Memphis used a similar idea on "Lost—a Wife," when he had printed bulletins carrying a picture of Greta Nissen as a lost wife, with a suitable reward offered for her return. He followed this up with classified ads in the "Lost and Found" section of the paper. These stated that she was expected in Memphis the following week.

Elaborate Ballyhoo Boosts "Never the Twain"

Loew's Metropolitan in Brooklyn, N. Y., played "Never the Twain Shall Meet" recently following a vigorous campaign waged by Carl Levi, of Loew's, Inc., and Manager George Schenck.

A massive float which toured the busiest sections of Brooklyn four days before the opening and an exceedingly elaborate lobby display were the features of this campaign. The float carried a setting reproducing a South Sea Island, and two attractive young women costumed as natives, who played ukeleles and at intervals gave short exhibitions of native dances. Special scenic sets transformed the lobby into a South Sea island grove, with Yuba leaves five feet long hanging from the edges of the marquee. Large palm leaves were used in abundance and over 500 real cocoanuts in the husk helped decorate the lobby. A thatched hut was built over the box office and water boards and shields grotesquely painted stood at each corner. Four live monkeys, brilliantly colored macaws, tropical plants, palms and flowers, spears, tom-toms, cocoanuts and fibre mats completed the display.

Teaser cards were distributed in abundance through the city, and 10,000 Chinese puzzles, walking dolls and colored balloons, all bearing announcements of the showing, were donated to patrons of the theatre the week preceding the showing.

Handsomest Man Passes as "Lightnin'" Publicity

An interesting method of acquainting Indianapolis with the fact that "Lightnin'" was shortly to make its local screen debut has just been executed by Bingham and Cohen, managers of the Colonial, and the Fox exploitation department.

The stunt consisted in sending a letter signed by the theatre management, and enclosing two complimentary tickets to the secretaries of the local civic and fraternal bodies. The letter stated that the Colonial management had been requested by Miss Madge Bellamy to present the tickets to the two best looking men in the local lodge, society or fraternity, as the case might be.

The Indianapolis Rotary club, Real Estate board, Traffic club, Luncheon club, and in fact, every social body to which the passes were sent, held voting contests to determine which of their members were most qualified to wear the laurels as beauties. That the eliminations, tests and balloting created no end of amusement is putting it mildly. The picture—in the meantime—coming in for no small amount of word-by-mouth advertising.

On the evening appointed for the Adonises to attend the theatre, not only were Indianapolis's "handsomest" on hand, but their less decorative brothers as well, turned out and gave them a cheer as they entered the theatre. The cheer was responded to, by a set of such fiery blushes that the Marquee lights for the moment seemed to have lost their "kick."

Unique Display Arranged for "Iron Horse" Ad

A unique display was arranged in the lobby of the Grand Central theatre in connection with the premiere St. Louis showing of the "Iron Horse" at the Skouras houses opening on August 29.

The display was arranged by Jack Fuld, exploitation man for Fox, in conjunction with the St. Louis, San Francisco railway. It included a miniature working model of the finest engine on the Frisco system in 1904, incased in glass, while above was displayed a photograph of the new "1500" type of engines now in use on the Frisco lines.

The model was in the Frisco exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase World's exposition in St. Louis in 1904 and last week was shown at the Missouri State fair in Sedalia.

The lobby exhibit also included various farm products raised along the Frisco lines.

A similar exhibit has been arranged by the Missouri Pacific railroad and will be displayed at Eighth and Pine Streets in the down-town business section.

Stickers on Newspapers as "Unholy Three" Stunt

Three thousand stickers exploiting "The Unholy Three" were distributed among newsboys in Minneapolis when this production played at the Garrick theatre, and were attached to lower corners of every paper sold on the town's busiest corners. Exceedingly prominent exploitation was secured in this way at a nominal cost. Morris Abrams, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, and Eddie Gallinagh, publicity man for the Garrick, achieved this feat.

Twenty thousand cards tying up the impending arrival of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's Trackless Train with the showing were distributed, and the town was lavishly posted. Three thousand 1-sheet and thirty-five 24-sheets were used, and extra display space was taken in all the papers. A trailer was used and there was a special lobby display.

THE FOUNDATION FOR EVERY GREAT MODERN DRAMA!

'EAST LYNNE'

Playwrights for years have been drawing inspiration from this great play because it has every element of truly wonderful entertainment—pathos—suspense—humor and heart interest. Since 1861 it has been regarded by millions, in every town and city, as the world's greatest love story. Now it has been screened, and on a more lavish and wonderful scale than was ever possible on the legitimate stage, and with five great favorites—Alma Rubens, Lou Tellegen, Edmund Lowe, Marjorie Daw, Frank Keenan—in the wonderful cast.

It is fitting that the world's most magnificent playhouse should be chosen for the world premiere of the film version of America's greatest drama.

Short Subjects and Serials

Pathe Fixes Release for "A Dog's Life"

"A DOG'S LIFE" will be the first of the Charley Chaplin comedies brought back to the screen by Pathe under the terms of the contract recently signed by the comedian and the distributing concern. The release date has been set for November 22nd.

Edna Purviance is Chaplin's leading lady in this one, with Albert Austin prominent in the supporting cast. In addition to "A Dog's Life," Pathe secured the rights to three others of Chaplin's old comedies; "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside."

Pathe will provide exhibitors a complete line of campaign books and accessories on the Chaplin series.

F. B. O. to Film New Series by H. C. Witwer

F. B. O. announces the purchase of the screen rights for a new series of H. C. Witwer stories now running in Cosmopolitan Magazine under the title "Bilgrim's Progress." The stories will be made as a series of two-reel productions.

The stories are concerned with the adventures of a taxi driver and are done in the slang style of "Fighting Blood," "The Telephone Girl" and "The Pacemakers," all of which were screened by F. B. O.

"Be Careful" is the first of the 1925-26 series of Educational-Jimmie Adams comedies. These stills are taken from the picture.

Mack Sennett and Hal Roach Two-Reelers Feature Program for Week of October 11

THE Pathe program of releases for the week of October 11th is headed by comedies from the Mack Sennett and Hal Roach studios. A single reel Roach comedy, the third chapter of "Wild West," the current serial, and the usual weekly features make up the balance of the program for the week.

The Sennett two-reeler is "Over There-Abouts," with a cast headed by Billy Bevan. The Roach two-reel subject is "The Caretaker's Daughter," with Charley Chase. Katherine Grant plays opposite Chase, while in the supporting cast are William J. Kelly, Jimmy Finlayson, Jimmie Parrott and Symona Boniface. Leo McCarey directed.

Madeline Hurlock plays opposite Billy Bevan in "Over There-Abouts," a comedy of war times. In other prominent roles are Ernest Woods, and Sunshine Hart. Arthur Rossen directed.

The Hal Roach one-reeler is "Solid Ivory," a comedy of the prize ring, with Earl Mohan and Billy Engle heading the cast. Ralph Cedar directed.

The third chapter of "Wild West" is titled "The Outlaw Elephant." Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson are the featured leads in this serial made on the 101 Ranch of Miller Brothers. Other players appearing in this chapter are, Eddie Phillips, George Burton, Virginia Warwick, Milla Davenport and Gus Seville. Robert F. Hill directed.

Pathe Review No. 41 presents three subjects: "The City of Half-and-Half," Ronda, Spain, shown in Pathecolor; "Lively But Refined," the manufacture of rubber bands and rubber balls; and "There She Blows!", scenes of whaling in the Antarctic.

"The Hero Wins" is the latest animated cartoon of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series, and the schedule for October 11 is completed by "Topics of the Day" and two topical issues of Pathe News.

Felix Adler to Write Fox Comedy Titles

Fox Film Corporation has signed Felix Adler, former vaudeville headliner and short story author, as chief title writer for the comedy units at the West Coast studio. Adler served in a similar capacity for several years at the Mack Sennett studios. He will write titles for the "Helen and Warren," O. Henry and "Van Bibber" comedies, as well as all the Fox Imperials.

Fox Launches Comedy Program

Helen and Warren, O. Henry and Van Bibber Stories Are Ready for Production

GEORGE E. MARSHALL, supervising director-in-chief of Fox comdies has launched an extensive program of comedy productions for this season. Among the first to get under way will be Director Albert Ray who will start production on a new "Helen and Warren" picture titled, "Hold Everything," with Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley again playing Helen and Warren. In the supporting cast will be Sidney Braeey and Frank Rice. This will be the fourth of the series to be produced at the West Coast studios.

Director Ben Stoloff has just completed "East Side, West Side," first of a series of Irish-Jewish comedies with George Harris and Barbara Luddy in the leading roles. Stoloff has already started preparing the script for the second of the series which will go into production shortly.

The scenario for the next O. Henry comedy is being prepared by Beatriee Van. It it titled, "Cupid A La Carte" and will be directed by Daniel Keefe. This will be the fourth of the series.

Robert Kerr has started production on "The Brain Storm," an Imperial comedy with Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett in the two principal roles. Director Lou Seiler is preparing the script for another of the Imperial comedies, as yet untitled, while a third Imperial is being prepared by Tom Buckingham, recently added to the Fox directorial staff.

Educational Announces Lineup

Lloyd Hamilton and Lupino Lane Stars of October Schedule; Will Offer Ten Comedies

EDUCATIONAL has announced a program of 10 comedies for the current month. The schedule will introduce the new series of Lloyd Hamilton two-reelers and the series in which Lupino Lane is starred. In addition to the pictures of these stars there will be three other two-reel offerings and a total of five single reel comedies, with the customary twice-a-week releases of Kinograms, Educational's news reel.

"The Movies," the first of this season's Hamilton Comedies, will be released on October 4th. It shows the star as a country boy who leaves home to make his fortune in Hollywood. He endeavors to follow his mother's instructions to "keep away from the movies," yet in spite of all, he finds himself pressed into service as a "double" for the well known star, Lloyd Hamilton.

Lupino Lane will be seen in "Maid in Morocco," the first of Educational's 1925-26 series of six releases which will star him. It will be released October 11. Charles Lamont directed the first of the Lupino Lane Comedies.

Educational's October 4 releases will also introduce a new Christie comedian, Billy Dooley in "A Misfit Sailor." The role is similar to the part in which he built up a reputation in vaudeville circuits. A one-reel animated cartoon "Felix, the Cat On The Farm," completes the schedule for this week.

Coincidentally with the first Lane two-reel subjects on October 11 there will be released a one-reel Cameo Comedy "Dog Daze."

The first of the new season's two-reel Juvenile, "Baby Be Good," appears on October 18, introducing Bonnie Barrett and "Big Boy" (Malcolm Sebastian), "Felix the Cat On The Job" and "Knickknacks of Knowledge," a Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, both one-reel offerings complete this week's schedule.

A Mermaid Comedy, "Spot Light," the two-reel release for the final week of October, features Lige Conley in a satire on "back stage" life. Another Cameo one-reeler, "Scrambled Eggs," completes the comedy schedule for October 25.

Action stills from Universal's "The Great Circus Mystery."

Fox Will Continue Van Bibber Stories

George E. Marshall, Fox comedy supervisor plans resuming the screening of Richard Harding Davis Van Bibber stories early in December at the Fox West Coast studios. Earle Foxe and Florence Gilbert will continue in the leading roles. These two are now appearing in important roles in other Fox pictures. Foxe is playing in "Wages for Wives" and Miss Gilbert is appearing in her second leading role opposite Buck Jones in "The Desert Price."

"All at Sea," the latest Fox Imperial comedy has gone into production on the west coast under the direction of Lew Seiler with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles. Stanley Blystone, James Farley and Nora Cecil have the chief supporting roles.

Sees No Need to Change Name of Short Subjects

THE agitation to find a new name for Short Subjects is aimless and mere wasted effort, according to an official of the Short Subject Division of Fox Film Corporation, who points out that "the changing of the class name will not change the quality of the films themselves."

Declaring that the name Short Subjects has in no way interfered with the success of meritorious short pictures and has not proved a handicap to the "Van Bibber," "Helen and Warren," "O Henry," and other series offered by his company, the Fox official states that his organization is glad to foster "anything that will give the short subject its well earned place in the sun; that will bring in extra dollars at the box office through adequate advertising of the short screen offering." But he doubts strongly whether that end will be attained by lost motion in creating a new name for the short product, which, when found, will be little used.

It is better, he states, to devise ways to help exhibitors in getting results from this class of product than to waste time over a name that will not give them any added value.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"The Raid"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS is a western of considerable action with Edmund Cobb in the featured role. The action is provided largely by a series of fist fights in which Cobb finds no more difficulty in conquering a half dozen tough cattle rustlers than he does in subduing one. He's a demon with his mitts, is Cobb, though his punches apparently do not carry the heft of a Mickey Walker or a Jack Dempsey. Nevertheless, when he hits them they go down and that is what wins for Cobb against such tremendous odds.

But for the athletic prowess of this hero, Jessica, daughter of the owner of the ranch and the owner of the ranch himself would be victims of these rustlers. They are both captured by them in the process of a raid and are held captive in an abandoned cabin until Cobb dashes to the rescue. He bowls the rustlers over one after another until the ranch hands, apprised of the raid by a cowardly suitor of the girl swoop down upon the place, make prisoners of the rustlers and rescue the victims.

(The Cast)

Jerry Smith, a Cowboy.....Edmund Cobb

The Story.—Jessica, daughter of the owner of the Raymond ranch implores her father to employ Jerry Smith, cowboy, to put an end to rustling on the ranch.. He acquiesces only after another raid, in which both Raymond and the daughter are abducted. Jerry gives chase and overtakes the party at an abandoned cabin. A fierce fight ensues, with Jerry getting the better of it as the other ranch hands come to the rescue. The raiders are captured and the girl admits her love for Jerry.

Summary.—A fast action Western, replete with lively fighting and some good riding. The story is of the ordinary run for these pictures and will doubtless be approved where the short western is liked.

"Just Cowboys"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS western which features Ben Corbett and Pewee Holmes is decidedly more of a comedy than the usual type of western. It is devoid of the thrills that mark these two reelers, and is somewhat of a relief, though the comedy situations could well be improved upon. The story too, is one that has often been seen in the past.

The two cowboys, fired by the ranch manager, seek a new job and encounter a moving picture outfit on location making a thriller. They think it serious action and go to the rescue when the child is abducted. They also take seriously the bank robbery until they are apprised that it is only a motion picture. And then they fall heavily for the beauteous leading lady.

With but one suit between them to do their courting, they cut the cards for that, but it is burned in the process of being gasoline-cleaned. They succeed in getting other clothes of ridiculous cut and then pursue their comedy antics in the courting of the movie queen. The action is considerably forced and strives too hard to corral laughs.

The Cast

A Cowboy.....Ben Corbett
Another Cowboy.....Pewee Holmes

A Mustang picture featuring Ben Corbett and Pewee Holmes.

The Story.—Two discharged cowboys seeking a new job encounter a motion picture company on location. They become alarmed when the child is abducted and give chase. They also prevent the bank holdup, until they are apprised of the fact that it is a motion picture stunt. They are then urged to play the role of bank bandits, are slugged by real bandits, who proceed to hold up the bank in reality. Both cowboys fall in love with the leading lady and apparently are making good progress until the husband of the heroine puts in an appearance. They are paid off in motion picture money to the amusement of the entire company.

Summary.—A comedy western without the usual thrills. The story is somewhat old and hackneyed and the comedy situations not too humorous, but it may be appreciated in the neighborhood houses.

"Piping Hot"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is very little in the way of slapstick and hokum they have neglected to put in this picture. It is more a succession of alleged comedy incidents than an attempt at a story. Al Alt and the others in the cast apparently were rushed around until some one thought of something considered funny that they might turns their hands to and then the cameras started grinding.

The result is just another comedy based upon the recovery from a spree of Alt and his fat buddy. It all happens after an all night session with a bottle and with Alt going through his maneuvers in a semi-stupor and not realizing what he is doing. He jumps or falls from one incident to another without any of them having any bearing on the one immediately preceding it.

There are a few comedy situations that may bring an occasional laugh, and there is a touch of the aerial stuff that seems now to be the vogue in these short comedies. The latter angle is not well executed however and decidedly lacking in the thrill it should provide.

The Cast

A Plumber.....Al Alt

The Story.—Al, with his buddy wakes to a semi-stupor following an all-night session with the bottle. He walks out of the window on a wire rope to a building across the way. As his buddy approaches with an undertaker Al apparently walks off the end of the building but is seen being lowered atop a safe. Alt next emerges from a barber shop, his face covered with shaving cream, and proceeds to shave himself, first walking down the street and then on the rear of a truck. Later Alt is a plumber and with his buddy all but destroys a house in an effort to repair a leaky pipe.

Summary.—This is a comedy of hokum and slapstick without the semblance of a story. It is a collection of incidents shot in a vain effort to gain laughs, only a few of which may be forthcoming.

"The Big Kick"

(Pathe—One Reel)

SOME good slam-bang slap-stick is provided by this single reeler from the Roach plant. The story is about a fight manager who has his troubles but triumphs over them when his badly beaten "champ" is saved by using a bean shooter to pepper his opponent and thus make an opening for his wide and wild swings. The bulk of the reel is devoted to a burlesque boxing bout. The bout is funnier than we thought one could be at this date. The picture was ably directed by Fred Guiol and makes a better than average single reel comedy offering. Billy Engle plays the manager and Earl Mohan and Noah Young do efficient work as the fighters.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"A Cloudy Romance"

(Fox-Imperial—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS Fox comedy is a combination of humorous situations, slapstick and hokum and it makes for a pretty lively two-reeler that should be good for a lot of laughs. The story is smoothly told with the action brought about naturally, except for the aerial stunts which provide considerable comedy as well as an abundance of thrills. The story for a change, is an exceptionally good one with complications that are taken the fullest advantages of by the director and players.

There is rather a strain to get the players on the huge steel girders on which a lot of the action takes place, but even this is fairly cleverly done and the situation adds much to the picture.

The cast is an exceptionally good one, with Harold Austin, Connie Dawn, Harry Dunkinson and Jules Cowles in the principal roles. Austin as the young suitor gets all the comedy possible out of a humorous role, as does Connie Dawn as the prospective bride.

The Cast

A March Hare.....Harold Austin
A June Bride.....Connie Dawn
Her August Father.....Harry Dunkinson
A December Cloud.....Jules Cowles

An Imperial comedy, directed by Lew Seiler.

The Story.—The young couple eloping is brought before the Judge, the girl's father, and the unwelcome suitor is sentenced to thirty days, to make way for the foppish sort of man whom the Judge selects for the daughter. The real sweetheart at the expiration of his term disguises himself as a negro maid and gets a position in the judge's house. The butler falls in love with the distinguished hero and abducts "her." The hero returns in time to see the girl in bridal clothes going into a hotel. He sits on the end of a girder and is hoisted to the window of the room in which the marriage ceremony is about to take place. The girder swings through the window and in turn lifts out the bride and minister. The marriage ceremony with the hero takes place on the girder in mid-air.

Synopsis.—A good, lively, well told story that is well acted and well directed. It contains a number of good comedy situations, as well as some hokum and slapstick that is entertaining. The aerial thrills add to the effectiveness of the picture and it should be appreciated in almost any type of house.

Pathe Review No. 40

(One Reel)

ANN PENNINGTON'S dancing, revealed with novel photographic effects produced by the "Process Camera," lends spirit and spice to this issue of the Review. She is a splendid subject for the trick camera, which numbers among its stunts the ability to reproduce several images of the subject on the screen at the same time. The camera made five Ann Penningtons grow where one grew before, and beholding this magic we for the first time realized that this particular trait of Mr. Knechtel's machine must be listed among other virtues which were more readily apparent with its previous demonstrations. The Pennington pictures are entertaining and compelling and they are supplemented by a color feature showing some pretty scenes of Salin-LesBains, a French vacation resort, and some views of the granite quarries at Barre, Vermont.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Caretaker's Daughter"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS new Charley Chase two-reeler from the Hal Roach studios specializes in mistaken identity, and with two men and a woman, all with different purposes in view impersonating the caretaker, whose outstanding characteristics are a flowing moustache and a stiff leg, a skull cap and a linen duster, there is bound to be some audible response from audiences viewing "The Caretaker's Daughter" on the screens of their favorite picture theatres.

We would not say that the offering measures up to the exceptionally high standard of Chase's best work in the brief comedies. It is not so fresh as to idea nor as subtle in execution as some of his works in the past. However, there is humor in the picture and all of it reaches toward, even though it does not entirely grasp, the spontaniety and brightness which distinguishes the pictures of this unit directed by Leo McCarey.

In the cast supporting Chase are several excellent actors. Among them is George Seigman, who has scored many personal hits in big features. Here Seigman essays the role of the jealous husband, whose wife is carrying on a flirtation with a banker, the employer of our hero. The latter agrees to drive the lady to his employer's lodge in the country. He is followed by his own not too trusting wife, the banker and the other woman's husband. All are brought together at the lodge and the hero as well as the rather adventurous lady seek to escape by wearing a make-up similar to that of the faithful caretaker. The latter is much on the job and more complications arise when a prohibition agent assumes a get-up like that of the other three. This situation is worked for all it is worth at this rather late date in its career, and the result is a comedy that will score many laughs even though it does not create a sensation.

The Cast

The Clerk.....Charley Chase
His Wife.....Katherine Grant
The Banker.....William J. Kelly
The Vamp.....Symona Boniface
Her Husband.....George Seigman
Caretaker.....Jimmie Parrott
Sleuth.....Jimmy Finlayson

A Hal Roach comedy. Directed by Leo McCarey.

The Story.—Charley agrees to help out his employer by driving a lady, whose husband has just gotten out of jail, to a favorite rendezvous. On the way he is seen by his wife, who follows in a taxi. Also following are the adventurous lady's jealous husband and the banker. The banker invites the husband and Charley's wife to stay for luncheon, a situation which makes it difficult for Charley and the vamp to escape. They try impersonating the caretaker by wearing a make-up similar to his, but the appearance of "the caretaker" here, there and everywhere almost simultaneously results in a general investigation and an exciting chase, with the jealous husband and Charley's wife leading the pursuit.

Summary.—A rather lively comedy specializing in mistaken identity. It offers nothing very original but there is substance to the plot and the situations while the acting and direction of the piece are of the highest order.

"The Gold Trap"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LOVE, intrigue, action and thrills, none of them new elements in a two-reel western, mark this Mustang picture, whose story is perhaps a little better than the average. It is the old, old tale of the salted mine and the young mining engineer who saves the girl's father from investing the last of his remaining fortune in the crooked scheme.

However, the story is well told with the situations not so incredulous as in the majority of pictures of this type. There is some good lively scrapping in the picture, some daring horseback riding and the action is continuously sustained without the story diverting from its main object. There is enough suspense to add to the effectiveness of the story which is exceptionally well directed. Fred Humes is the featured player and he gets everything possible out of a sympathetic role.

The Cast

A Mining Engineer.....Fred Humes

The Story.—Major Fairfax and his daughter, southern aristocrats attempt to retrieve a dwindled fortune in the gold hills. They are persuaded by an unscruplous promoter to invest in a worthless mine that has been salted. Jack Craig, a young mining engineer has just discovered a rich vein before saving the newcomers from death in a stage coach and falling in love with the daughter. Jack is told of the prospective investment and goes to the salted mine with the girl. They are seized by Craven's men and made prisoners. Jack escapes, rescues the girl and they proceed to the headquarters of the swindling outfit in time to prevent Major Fairfax turning over his fortune. He is then permitted to invest his money in the new Jack Craig mine presided over by his daughter and the young mining engineer.

Summary.—This western tells a better story than the usual run. It is well acted and well directed, with sufficient thrills, love and intrigue to make it interesting from start to finish. It should be well received wherever the western is appreciated.

"Peggy's Heroes"

(Davis Dist. Div.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS is a mildly amusing two-reeler consisting of a miscellaneous assortment of "gags" with lots of hard work by the cast in an effort to coin laughs in which endeavor it partly succeeds. The production is another of the "Sheiks and Shebas" series the general theme of which seems to be a race for the hand of Peggy indulged in by various types of youngsters, stout, thin, juvenile Harold Lloyds and cake-eaters.

This particular number of the series revolves around the efforts made by Cudgy and Specks, two of Peggy's boy friends, to curry favor with her by taking her gouty dad to the beach for a day but their clumsiness only increases the old gentleman's irritableness and at the same time provides a few chuckles for the spectators. The latter portion of the story deals with an amusing conglomeration of mishaps which occur at a party when a number of burglars break in and a general chase ensues which results in a complete route of the thieves due purely to dumb luck on the part of the "heroes."

This subject should find favor with the patrons of the smaller houses.

A McKnight-Womack production. Story by King Benedict. Titles by Pinto Colvig.

The Story.—Cudgy and Specks visit Peggy and, in an attempt to gain her favor, volunteer to take her father, who is troubled with gout, to the beach for a day's outing. They succeed in balling things up to such an extent that the party returns from the beach. That evening during the peaceful progress of a party a gang of thieves gain entrance to the house and succeed in demoralizing both the people and the furniture until subdued by Peggy's heroes.

Summary.—A fairly entertaining two-reeler with a number of funny gags which should cause laughs in houses where physical mishaps to the players get a mirthful response from the audience. The titles are fair and it has been given a good production. The action moves at a fast pace.

"In Deep"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

THIS is the story of the henpecked husband, whose wife goes to the country and who determines to let no grass grow under his feet while she is away. As a consequence he brings a lot of trouble upon himself and his boy friend. They are arrested for speeding and as an excuse offer a sick wife and child.

The cop is suspicious and makes them display the wife and child. A young lady friend is inducted to serve as the wife and a monkey as the child. At about the time the cop is satisfied everything is all right the irate wife unexpectedly returns and the complications arise. The cop overhears the retelling of the ruse and the whole gang are rustled off to the station house. Cliff Bowes, George Davis, Blanche Payson and Helen Foster make up the cast in this comedy which is well above the average.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

"By the Sea"

(Universal-Bulls Eye—One Reel)

THE rotund comedian Charles Puffy is featured in this one-reeler, which provides him the best vehicle he has had in the series to date. Puffy, posing as a sheik is in reality a hot dog vendor. He has a successful flirtation with Betty Burton until the latter's real lover takes a hand. To escape the latter's vengeance, the girl plunges from a pier at the seashore and Puffy dives to the rescue. The inexperienced life savers attempt their rescue with a crane that has a happy faculty of going amiss just as the pair reach the level of the pier. They are finally rescued by a passing racing launch. There is a lot of good comedy in this one, which should win many admirers for Puffy.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pathe Review No. 41

(One Reel)

A TRIO of interesting subjects are presented in Pathe Review No. 41, which includes a color sequence devoted to picturesque spots in Ronda, Spain; a sketch of the manufacturing processes which go into the making of rubber balls, and scenes illustrating the ever-fascinating adventure of whaling. The latter contribution covers pretty completely the enterprises and experience of a ship which sets out to sea in search of the monsters of the deep. Pictures of icebergs as well as scenes showing a whale being harpooned by the modern method of a gun and its landing by the crew prove highly entertaining. It is a very good number of Pathe Review.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"The Lion and the Monkey"

(Pathe—One Reel)

PAUL TERRY, maker of the "Aesop's Film Fables," was in rare form when he produced this contribution to the series of cartoon comedies. It relates the stirring and touching tale of an appreciative monkey who comes to the rescue of the farmer who befriended him when the farmer is attacked by a lion. The grotesque movements of the characters and the cartoonist's brilliant flair in achieving ludicrous situations are here displayed for the delight of the spectator. It is an uproarous reel and its unreeling should be accompanied by gales of laughter everywhere. —T. C. KENNEDY.

"Who's Which"

(Educational-Cameo—One Reel)

PHIL DUNHAM, Helen Marlowe and James Hertz are featured in this one reeler directed by Jules White. There is some fairly good comedy in it of the slapstick variety, though the material is no newer than the story.

A masquerade party provides the theme. Eleanor is the hostess and her sweetie phones her he is coming as a burglar. On the way he is apprehended by a policeman and a real burglar puts in an appearance at the party. He is welcomed as the sweetie, and the real boy friend, upon his arrival later is treated as an interloper until he proves his identity, after which the usual comedy chase begins. The picture is a little better than the run of this type.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

The Calgary Stampede

(Universal—5924 Feet)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

FOR thrills, natural scenic beauty and, to a certain extent, the suspensive element, there haven't been many of the outdoor type of pictures made that can surpass this vehicle. Hoot Gibson is starred in this production which, in the opinion of this reviewer, is the best he has made to date.

Though having a conventional theme, the riding of the star, the authentic scenes taken at the Rodeo staged at Calgary, which are even better than that put on at Pendleton, and the good work of the entire cast more than compensate for any familiarity in story outline that might be noticed.

THEME. Melodrama of the Northwest. Rodeo champion, accused of murder of fiancee's father, is forced into hiding. Reveals himself at Rodeo when employer's ranch is at stake. Wins rodeo event, is cleared of murder charge and wins girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The murder of the fiancee's father and Gibson's subsequent ride in search of the murderer. The many thrilling scenes at the Rodeo.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the horsemanship of the star. Advertise the fact that the Rodeo scenes are authentic. Stress the romantic element.

DRAWING POWER. Good picture for all types of houses but especially those catering to audiences with a bent for outdoor stories.

SUMMARY. An excellent production that combines beautiful outdoor scenes, superb horsemanship, good direction and character delineation.

THE CAST

Dan Malloy.....Hoot Gibson
Marie LeFarge.....Virginia Brown Fairo
Jean LaFarge.....Clark Comstock
Neenah.....Ynez Seabury
Fred Burgess.....Jim Corey

Story by E. Richard Schayer and Don Lee. Directed by Herbert Blache. Photographed by Harry Neuman.

SYNOPSIS. Dan Malloy, champion Roman rider of the United States, roaming through Canada, meets and falls in love with Marie LaFarge but her father refuses to allow their marriage. Fred Burgess, poacher, just released from prison, kills Marie's father and is observed in the act by Neenah, Marie's maid, who shields him. Malloy, accused of the murder, flees and gets employment on the Bar-O ranch. Mounted police get on his trail but fail to identify him until day of Rodeo event, when Malloy, to save employer's ranch, rides in and wins Roman race. He is arrested by M. P. but saved by confession of Neenah whom Burgess has betrayed.

PRESS NOTICE

FEATURING marvelous horsemanship, wonderful scenic beauty, and a brilliant cast "The Calgary Stempede" the latest production starring the ever-popular Hoot Gibson will grace the screen of the ———— theatre on ————. Among the many thrills incorporated in this feature, built around the annual Rodeo events staged at Calgary, Canada, are broncho busting tests, "chuck" wagon races and the great climax in which Gibson wins the Roman ride.

A cast of unusual acting ability support the star in this most realistic effort. It consists of Virginia Brown Faire, Clark Comstock, Ynez Seabury, Jim Corey and Philo McCullough

CATCH LINES

See the thrilling stunts performed by the entries in the great Rodeo—Gibson's riding in the Roman event is something that will long be remembered.

The Tower of Lies

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—6849 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IN "The Tower of Lies" Victor Seastrom approaches more nearly to the artistic masterpieces which he produced abroad than in anything he has made here. Not that it is finer than "He Who Gets Slapped," but that it approaches his Swedish pictures more nearly in theme and mood. This is partly due, no doubt, to the fact that it is based upon Selma Lagerlof's Swedish novel "The Emperor of Portugallia," and concerns itself with Swedish peasants.

Many of the scenes of rural life have the artistic charm and force of a painting by Millet. Like "The Man with the Hoe," it presents the man who toils with his hands, living from day to day, feeling neither sorrow nor joy. To this man there comes an infant daughter, and with it a sudden interest in life. Her girlhood increases his pride in her, and finally, when she falls, his reason leaves him and he returns to their childhood game, the Emperor and Empress of Portugallia.

THEME. Intimate drama of a farmer who awakens to the beauty of life through his daughter, and who loses his reason when she goes astray. His death brings the girl back to herself, and she finds happiness with her childhood sweetheart.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The remarkable atmosphere and background which Seastrom has created. The vivid characterization contributed by Chaney.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up Chaney and Shearer, if you have any Scandinavian element in your community, appeal to them. Advertise along high class lines.

DRAWING POWER. High class production, appealing to intelligent audiences.

SUMMARY. A sincere and forceful story of rural life, produced and acted with feeling and skill.

THE CAST

Glory.....Norma Shearer
Jan.....Lon Chaney
Lars.....Ian Keith
Katrina.....Claire McDowell
August.....William Haines
Eric.....David Torrence

Adapted by Agnes Christine Johnston from the novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia" by Selma Lagerlof. Directed by Victor Seastrom. Photographed by Percy Hilburn.

SYNOPSIS. Jan, a farmer, finds an interest in life in his daughter, Glory. She goes away to earn money to meet mortgage on farm, and is seduced. When she does not return, Jan loses his reason. She returns, but villagers try to drive her away, leading to Jan's death. Girl finds happiness with childhood sweetheart.

PRESS NOTICE

ANOTHER of Lon Chaney's remarkable character portrayals will be seen in "The Tower of Lies," which the management of the ———— theatre announces will be shown commencing ————, and in which Chaney is co-starred with lovely Norma Shearer. This is based on Selma Lagerlof's prize-winning novel, "The Emperor of Portugallia," and is a story of Scandinavian peasant life.

As a Swedish farmer, seen first as a young man and later as an old, broken figure, his reason gone, Chaney gives one of his most remarkable characterizations. The picture has been produced by Victor Seastrom, the celebrated Swedish director.

CATCH LINES

Life was cruel to him, but he held Truth and Honor to the end—and when the Tower of Lies crashed he was ready to meet it.

The Wrongdoers

(Astor Distributing Corp.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THIS is just a fair program picture with the work of Lionel Barrymore the saving factor. Otherwise the offering recalls films of other days, being somewhat crude in direction and unconvincing in incident and characterization. The players seem to move as being guided about the scenes on strings like mannequins.

Mr. Barrymore assumes the role of a philanthropic druggist who like Robin Hood of old, heads a gang to rob from the rich to help the poor. The gang meets in a secret room, which is discovered one day by an adopted son who unable to see his dad's attitude toward life, rushes to a costume ball to foil a planned jewel robbery. He gets the jewels from dad, but is caught with them himself and arrested. Both hero and villain pass out at the end.

THEME. A melodrama of New York's lower strata life in which the career of a modern Robin Hood ends in disaster but brings happiness to others.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The Jewel dance and robbery. The climax in which villain and hero take each other's lives. The artist's studio scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the name of Lionel Barrymore. Stage a jewel dance as a prologue patterned after the one in the picture. Tell the folks this is a Bernarr MacFadden True Story picture.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for the smaller houses downtown, some community theatres and towns. Also O. K. for double feature programs.

SUMMARY. Just another program picture, weak in direction and story and saved only by the work and fame of Lionel Barrymore.

THE CAST

Daniel Abbott.....Lionel Barrymore
Helen Warren.....Anne Cornwall
Jimmy Abbott.....Henry Hull
Sylvester Doane.....Henry Sedley
Honora.....Blanche Craig
Society woman.....Flora Finch
Butler.....William Calhoun
Solemn Man.....Harry Lee
Crook.....Tammany Young
Little Jimmy.....Tom Brown

A Bernarr MacFadden "True Story" production. Directed by Hugh Dierker. Scenario by Lewis Allen Brown. Photographed by John Holbrook and Fred Chasten.

SYNOPSIS. Daniel Abbott, druggist and philanthropist, visits court with his adopted son, Jimmy Nolan. There he finds a "Mrs. Warren," charged with attempted suicide. He takes mother and baby home. Abbott is also head of a gang that steals from the rich to aid poor. They plan to rob Sylvester Doane, tenement owner, who has also been attracted to Helen Warren, now grown to beautiful girlhood. Jimmy, also now a youth, learns of his father's dual role and rushes to the Doane home to stop the robbery. He takes the gems and is himself jailed. Eventually Abbott kills Doane, but is shot himself. Jimmy and Helen are married and the identity of Mrs. Warren solved.

PRESS NOTICE

LIONEL BARRYMORE comes to the ——— theatre, commencing ——— in "The Wrongdoers," the first of the Bernarr MacFadden "True Story" productions. Mr. Barrymore is seen in the role of Daniel Abbott, head of a gang of modern Robin Hoods, who steal from the rich to aid the poor. The famous character actor is supported by Henry Hull, also a stage favorite, Anne Cornwall, Flora Finch, Tammany Young and others equally well known.

The picture is mounted in elaborate manner and there is a lavish sequence showing a ball at which is featured a "Million Dollar Jewel Dance," and at which is enacted a big jewel robbery.

CATCH LINES

See Lionel Barrymore as a modern Robin Hood who steals from the rich to aid the poor. Thrilling scenes in New York's far famed artists' colony.

The Man on the Box

(Warner Bros.—7481 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IT seems to be the fashion these days to turn famous light farces of other days into slapstick comedies, and the result, in this case, is productive of much merriment. The ingredients are nine-tenths Syd Chaplin and one-tenth Harold McGrath, for the resemblance to the story is rather slight. The characters still bear the same names, and the hero still enters the heroine's employ as her groom, but not much else of the original plot remains.

Many of the sequences are riotously funny, some of the best being those in which Chaplin impersonates a maid. The humor is laid on with broad, sure strokes, and Chaplin's remarkable pantomimic ability is brilliantly displayed. Plenty of entertainment here for the comedy fans.

THEME. Comedy of mistaken identity in which hero, a wealthy young man, masquerades as the groom, and later the maid, of the girl he has fallen in love with, ultimately foiling the villainous spies and winning the girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Chaplin's pantomime. His impersonation of the maid. Chuck Reisner's direction and his own acting. The scenes in which Chaplin is left on the street in his pajamas.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as the successor to "Charley's Aunt," and tell them that Chaplin does a female impersonation which is just as funny. Play up the cast. Good chance for a street ballyhoo of a man impersonating girl and handing out heralds or cards on the picture.

DRAWING POWER. Should do well in view of past record of star, popularity of story and present taste for comedy.

SUMMARY. A comedy which is extremely funny in spots, and drags in others, but which on the whole should register well with comedy fans. Some of the gags are distinctly original and general production is satisfactory.

THE CAST

Bob Warburton.....Syd Chaplin
His brother-in-law.....David Butler
Betty Annesly.....Alice Calhoun
Mrs. Lampton.....Kathleen Calhoun
Inventor Lampton.....Theodore Lorch
Bob's sister.....Helene Costello
Col. Annesly.....E. J. Ratcliffe
Badkoff.....Charles F. Reisner
Count Karaloff.....Charles Gerard
Warburton, Sr.....Henry Barrows

Adapted from the novel by Harold McGrath. Directed by Charles F. Reisner. Photographed by Nick Barrows.

SYNOPSIS. Bob Warburton is backing the invention of Lampton, which the government seeks. Lampton misunderstands Bob's attentions to his wife. Bob flees, and becomes groom of Betty, with whom he has fallen in love. Here he foils foreign spies, seeking to steal plans from Betty's father, and ultimately wins girl.

PRESS NOTICE

SYD CHAPLIN, whose fame has risen rapidly since his return to the screen, will be seen at the ——— theatre on ———, when "The Man on the Box" will be the feature attraction. This clever pantomimist is said to have in this picture one of the best and funniest vehicles. It gives him the opportunity to masquerade first as the groom of the girl with whom he is in love, and later, as a lady's maid.

The story was suggested by the famous novel by Harold McGrath, and the play of the same name,

With Chaplin are such players as Alice Calhoun, David Butler, Helene Costello, "Chuck" Reisner and Charles Gerard.

CATCH LINES

"Charley's Aunt" comes back to town in another fast, furious and funny farce —Syd Chaplin at his merriest.

East Lynne

(Emmett Flynn Production-Fox—Nine Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

ONCE again this famous old melodrama comes to the shadow stage. This time it is Emmett Flynn who has transferred the half-century old love story to the screen. He has achieved a creditable production from an acting viewpoint, but has taken entirely too much footage to tell the story and has given the picture a mounting that smacks too much of artificiality.

However, there are many fine dramatic moments and a climax that will move most audiences to tears. The scene in which Lady Isabel dies in her husband's arms after she has nursed her child back from death's door to health is sure to strum on the heart strings. The biggest selling point is the cast. It is an all-star one in the true sense of the word.

THEME. A melodrama dealing with the eternal triangle in English life of yesteryear.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The murder of Mr. Hallijohn by Levison. The scene in which Lady Isabel leaves for France with Levison. The train wreck. The scene in which Levison returns to woo Afy Hallijohn EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Go after the women folks by playing up the love story. Plaster the town with the title. Boost the names of the all-star cast.

DRAWING POWER. The strong cast, the fame of the director and the popularity of the story should make this a drawing card in most houses, although especially suited for the towns.

SUMMARY. A well acted version of the noted stage meller laid against an artificial background, which is much too long, but which has a goodly quota of dramatic incident, a fine climax and some comedy. Will appeal to women everywhere.

THE CAST

Lady Isabel	Alma Rubens
Archibald Carlyle	Edmund Lowe
Sir Francis Levison	Lou Tellegen
Chief Justice Hare	Frank Keenan
Barbara Hare	Marjorie Daw
Richard Hare	Leslie Fenton
Afy Hallijohn	Belle Bennett
Mr. Hallijohn	Paul Panzer
Mrs. Hare	Lydia Knott

Based on the play by Mrs. Henry Wood. Directed by Emmett Flynn. Scenario by Lenore J. Coffee.

SYNOPSIS. Left alone by the death of Lord Mount Severn, Lady Isabel is wooed and wed by Archibald Carlyle, new owner of East Lynne. Seeking the aid of Carlyle in behalf of her brother, charged with murder, Barbara Hare arranges a rendezvous with Carlyle. Levison, a ne'er-do-well, persuades Isabel the meeting is one of many. Isabel, believing there is an affair on, leaves her husband and children, and goes to France with Levison. Injured in a wreck, Isabel recovers, assumes another name, returns to East Lynne and nurses her child back to health. Later she dies in her husband's arms. Carlyle weds Barbara. Levison is convicted of the murder of which Barbara's brother had been charged.

PRESS NOTICE

FOR over half a century, "East Lynne," has been regarded as one of the greatest plays ever written. Its appealing story, filled with drama, heart interest and pathos, has swayed audiences in every land. Now William Fox has transplanted the story to the screen in elaborate manner and Manager ——— of the ——— theatre has booked this attraction for presentation commencing ———.

One of finest casts ever assembled is featured. Edmund Lowe is the hero, while Alma Rubens is seen as the ill-fated Lady Isabel. Lou Tellegen plays the "heavy" part of Levison, while Frank Keenan has a strong role as Justice Hare.

CATCH LINES

One of the greatest dramas of all times recreated into an ever greater pictureplay. Your mothers and grandmothers cried over "East Lynne," and so will you when you see this great screen version. Mothers, wives and sweethearts never tire of "East Lynne."

Thunder Mountain

(Fox—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

"THUNDER MOUNTAIN" has perhaps gained in effectiveness in its transition from John Golden's "Howdy Folks" of the legitimate stage. Some of its bigger dramatic moments lend themselves more readily and with more telling effect on the screen than on the speaking stage.

The story is undoubtedly a strong one and one that holds the interest throughout despite the fact that the continuity is rather jumpy in spots. It is well produced and well acted by a cast headed by Madge Bellamy, Alec Francis, Leslie Fenton and Zasu Pitts.

THEME. A melodrama of the Kentucky Hills, in which the hero, influenced by the visiting preacher, attempts through education to put an end to lawlessness, only to himself be accused of murder and threatened with hanging, which is avoided with the aid of the heroine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The blowing up of the mountain side as a warning from above that an unjustifiable crime is to be committed in the hanging of the hero.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Playing up the feud angle always makes for interest at the box office. You can offer them a thrill in the blowing up of the mountain side.

DRAWING POWER. The story is of a type that should appeal strongly to houses of all classes. With its diversified angles there should be something to interest all.

SUMMARY. This is a grim story of the Kentucky Hills, with thrills, suspense and love. It has been given a good production and should interest picture goers of all classes.

THE CAST

Azalea	Madge Bellamy
Sam Martin	Leslie Fenton
Preacher	Alec B. Francis
Morgan	Paul Panzer
Joe Givens	Arthur Houseman
Mandy Coulter	Zasu Pitts
Ma MacBirney	Emily Fitzroy
Pa MacBirney	Dan Mason
Jeff Coulter	Otis Harlan
Mrs. Coulter	Natalie Warfield

SYNOPSIS. Sam Martin, befriended by the preacher, leaves for three years to acquire an education. He returns to the mountains determined to build a school and instruct his townsfolk in the rudiments of learning. He goes to Simon Pace the miserly money lender for funds, but is turned down. Azalea, a former circus queen deserts the show in the mountain town, falls in love with Sam and attempts to get the necessary funds for him from the miser. The latter is slain following a visit of the pair, and suspicion is turned upon Sam. Azalea rushes to the preacher for aid as the townsfolk proceed to the mountain side for the purpose of executing the hero. The preacher plants dynamite in the mountain side and eventually dynamites it as a sign of God's wrath against the action about to be taken. The real murderer of the money lender, in his fear, acknowledges his guilt. Sam builds his school and marries Azalea.

PRESS NOTICE

THE sensational Fox picture, "Thunder Mountain," portraying a story of the Kentucky Hills, will be presented at the ——— Theatre on ———. It is a vivid story of lawlessness and feudism, love and intrigue, replete with thrills and acted by a cast of exceptional merit. Madge Bellamy is the heroine in the role of a former circus queen, who because of cruelty practiced upon her father, a clown of the circus, leaves the big tent in the hill town and falls in love with the hero, portrayed by Leslie Fenton. The latter attempts to educate his neighborhood and seeks funds from the town miser to build a schoolhouse.

CATCH LINES

Thunder Mountain, a picture of feudism and thrills. It will hold you spellbound from start to finish. You will find it highly entertaining. Don't miss it.

The Plastic Age

(Schulberg—6488 Feet)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS is a "Jazz" story with a collegiate background, the central character being a country youth who goes away to college to make good in studies and athletics and then nearly comes a cropper through associations with the riotous and reckless youngsters he finds there. The work is based on a novel of the same title by Percy Marks and has been filmed with a view to the sprightliness of photoplay scenes depicting petting parties, dances at which there is plenty of stimulating punch, etc., and so forth. The interest which screen patrons have evinced in previous plays of this type no doubt will work in favor of "The Plastic Age," and as there is a general triumph of virtue over its opposite as depicted here, there is reason to suppose that this offering will succeed at the box office.

THEME. Modern drama of youth, in which a young man takes up dissipation at college but learns in time that scholarly and athletic attainments are more worth while.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scenes on the football field where hero makes good. The scene in which flapper tells hero she and he must reform.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A tieup with book dealers offers the best exploitation bet. Stress football sequence as of great timely interest and the fact that story concerns the adventures of a youth at college.

DRAWING POWER. Designed for general audiences and capable of gaining the interest of a big majority of the screen patrons.

SUMMARY. A drama of youth, zestful material in that regard and cut to a pattern which has succeeded on the screen of late. It is somewhat conventional dramatic fare.

THE CAST

Cynthia Day.....Clara Bow
Hugh Carver.....Donald Keith
Mrs. Carver.....Mary Alden
Henry Carver.....Henry B. Walthall
Carl Peters.....Gilbert Roland

Author, Percy Marks. Scenario by Eve Unsell and Frederica Sagor. Directed by Wesley Ruggles.

SYNOPSIS. Hugh Carver, a promising athlete, takes up with a fast set at college. One of his companions is Cynthia Day, a young and rather too carefree girl. Carver, out of condition, loses a race at the big meet, an event which brings the wrath of his father and sobers the youth. With Cynthia's assistance, Hugh settles down to work and as a result makes good in his studies and on the football gridiron as well. His reward in the love which Cynthia offers and his own and her triumph over the frivolity which threatened their happiness.

PRESS NOTICE

THE screen version of "The Plastic Age," Percy Marks' tremendously popular novel of college life, will be presented at the ———— on ————. Clara Bow, the screen's most popular interpreter of "flapper roles" appears as Cynthia Day, a young beauty whose carefree attitude toward life almost wrecks the career of Hugh Carver at college and threatens her own happiness.

Donald Keith appears as Hugh Carver and other screen celebrities appearing in principal roles are Henry B. Walthall, Mary Alden, David Butler, Gilbert Roland, J. Gordon Edwards, Jr., and Felix Valle.

CATCH LINES

Hugh Carver went to college to make good as a scholar and an athlete—he did ultimately, but not until he defeated himself by joining in the dissipations of a jazzy young set whose occupations were petting parties and dances where there was gaiety and well-filled punch bowls.

What Fools Men

(George Archainbaud-First Nat'l—Eight Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

THE usual excellent characterization contributed by Lewis Stone is the feature of this picture which is entirely too long for the material at hand and which in spots is weighted down with exaggerated situations and one sequence showing life in a ne'er-do-well society set which tends to cheapen the otherwise dignified atmosphere. The title seeks to set forth that many men are fools because they are unable to distinguish the sham from the real in other men and to understand workings of the mind of a modern flapper.

Mr. Stone dominates the action throughout and he is given some good support. There are some tense scenes between Stone and Miss Mason as the former seeks to curb the latter's unruly ways. The picture is artistically mounted.

THEME. A drama of frenzied finance and society sham in which an inventor is ruined by crooked bankers and fails in his efforts to "mother" a wild daughter.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The title. The stars. Bookstore tie-up on the Webster novel. Put man on street dressed in jester's costume with appropriate advertising. Photos of Miss Mason as theme of fashion window

DRAWING POWER. Popularity of Lewis Stone and the strong supporting cast should make this a welcome attraction in any house. With a little exploitation should do business.

SUMMARY. A fairly entertaining picture which is saved by the excellence of the acting, the artistic mounting and the dramatic incident. Too long, however, and would be improved by careful cutting.

AN important reorganization of managers in Winnipeg, Manitoba, has been effected by H. M. Thomas, Winnipeg, Western Division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto. L. Charles Straw has been appointed manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in succession to H. A. Bishop and the latter has been made assistant to Mr. Thomas in the general supervision of theatres. E. A. Retallick of Winnipeg has been appointed house manager of the Capitol Theatre, Winnipeg, over which Mr. Thomas has general personal direction.

Mr. Straw is aformer Winnipeg exhibitor but has had charge of the Strand Theatre at Brandon, Manitoba, where he scored signal triumphs in popularizing that house. Mr. Bishop's promotion is of wide interest as he is well-known in theatrical circles of Winnipeg, Calgary and other Western centers and also of Los Angeles where his family resides.

Mr. Retallick has been the dramatic editor of the Winnipeg Tribune for the past five years and has handled the publicity for the Capitol Theatre for a considerable period.

The Bijou Theatre has become one of the recognized first run theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba, this development having taken place along with other important local happenings. Announcement is made by Manager Levy that the Bijou will be the "outlet" in the Manitoba Capital for all releases of the Film Booking Offices and will specialize in independent bookings.

Recently Universal Films acquired the leases of three important Winnipeg theatres, the Lyceum, Starland and College Theatres, appointing Charles A. Meade general manager of the group, a specialty to be made of Universal attractions. Famous Players have two large theatres in Winnipeg, the Capitol and the Metropolitan.

Famous Players Canadian Corp. has no immediate use for the large central site which it acquired several years ago in Ottawa, Ontario, at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars, judging by a notice which has been erected on the location offering the property on a rental basis for a parking station, gasoline service station or other purposes. Famous Players has a fine moving picture house in Ottawa, the Regent, which is managed by Leonard Bishop.

Albany

ANOTHER shift took place along Film Row during the past week, when Bert Gibbons, one time manager for Vitagraph here, and later transferred to Canada, only to return to Albany, to become associated with Universal, succeeded Bob Wagner, of Little Falls, who has been looking after Dependable's interests in this section since the theatre which he managed in Little Falls, was taken over by the Schines. Henry Randall, former manager for Dependable in this section, but who is now residing in Miami, where it is said he has massed a considerable fortune, was in town during the week, on his way to Montreal, with his bride of a few days. Mr. Randall was married in New York City a week ago. He received a warm welcome in Albany, although admitting that there were many strange faces along The Row.

Mike Freedman, who was associated with Mr. Shirley in Schenectady, is reported about to reopen the Rialto in that city, and to operate it along with the Woodlawn.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, who already operates a dozen or more motion picture theatres in this part of the state, has just bought the site for another which he will erect in Stamford next spring. Mr. Smalley is already running a theatre in Stamford, but it is located on the second story of a business block and not very well adapted for theatrical purposes. Mr. Smalley has been running a Fashion Show along with pictures in St. Johnsville, Walton and Fort Plain, drawing immense crowds in each place. "Al" Bothner, who has been associated with Mr. Smalley for the past year or so, has returned to Mohawk and will get busy booking amateurs over the Smalley circuit for the fall and winter months.

Rae Candee, of Utica, well known in Albany, and associated with Nate Robbins, is looking forward anxiously for the opening of the hunting season. It's a safe bet that Mr. Candee will bring back a deer this fall as he never failed in this respect.

Alex Weismann, who is associated with the Metro-Goldwyn office here, is bemoaning the theft of his car last week. It bears license 6L 8-784.

William Benton, of Saratoga Springs is rushing matters in Mechanicville these days, where he is building a new theatre which was originally scheduled to open on October 12. Various matters, however, have delayed things so that the opening is now set for October 19. All the exchange managers and exhibitors in this part of the state are to be invited by Mr. Benton and will be on hand.

Although Lew Fischer opened his remodeled theatre at Fort Edward last week, in what he terms an informal opening, rather than wait for additional seats to replace those broken in shipment, the real opening to occur in the near future.

Frank Pelon, a well known exhibitor of Indian Lake, managed to save his new Studebaker car last week, when it caught fire as he was driving between North Creek and Indian Lake. It so happened that Mr. Pelon was traveling a rather sandy road which enabled him to scoop up a few handsful of sand and put out the blaze.

Charles Walder, former manager of the Fox exchange in Albany, but who resigned to engage in the real estate business in Miami, arrived back in town from Florida last week, but plans to return south in about four weeks.

Leon Medem, manager for Pathe in Albany, is back home from a vacation, spent in Edgemere, L. I. The vacation, however, cost Mr. Medem his wrist watch which was lost while he was in bathing. He has replaced it with a brand new one.

R. J. Meigs and Jack Coudert, connected with the New York office of Pathe, were in town during the week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Moran, of Coxsackie, who run the Opera House there, were also along Film Row during the week.

The week also brought to town Walter Hays, of Buffalo, former president of the New York State M. P. T. O., and one of the owners of the Strand group of houses in this city and Troy. Mr. Hays reported business as being good throughout the territory. The Regent in Albany, which was recently leased by Mr. Hays and his associates, reopened on Thursday under the management of Herman Vineberg. The theatre presents a very attractive appearance. W. W. Farley, of Albany, owner of houses in Schenectady and Yonkers, was in Binghamton during the week on a business trip.

Louis Scott, an exhibitor in Cazenovia, who also is manager of a canning works in that village, has just about completed his labors with the canning factory and will now devote most of his time to furnishing the villagers with the best pictures obtainable.

Between the Holy Rollers, holding an outdoor meeting on Tuesday nights, and the Socialists on Friday nights, each directly across from the Lincoln theatre in Troy, Benjamin Stern, manager of the house, is well nigh frantic.

Zeb, handyman at the Troy theatre, is declared to have carried off eating honors at a clam steam held by employees of the Troy, and Mark Strand theatres, a week ago. Walter Roberts, manager of the Troy theatre, declares that Zeb consumed four chickens and fifty clams and then asked for more. Incidentally, the Troy theatre trimmed the Mark Strand at a baseball game by a score of 25 to 8.

Louis Saperstein, was named as manager of the Palace theatre in Troy, last week. His brother, Joe Sapterstein, manages Harmanus Bleecker Hall in Albany.

Patrons of motion picture theatres in Troy, appear to be superstitious when it comes to two dollar bills, invariably tendering such when they have one in their possession, for their tickets. The other night, Mrs. Walter Roberts, cashier at the Troy theatre, took in eighty-six in an hour.

Barcli theatre, in Schenectady, one of the Farley group of houses, and which has been closed for several months, has reopened, giving Mr. Farley control of the down town situation. Orchestras have been installed at the State and Strand theatres in Schenectady, also owned and operated by Mr. Farley.

Harold Filkins, a local F.B.O. salesman, is passing around the cigars these days as he announces that it was a nine pound boy.

Ben Young, is busy these days in Ilion, rushing matters in the construction of a new theatre that will be in readiness to open about December 1.

Another exhibitor in that section of the state, W. H. Linton, is also starting to rebuild in Utica.

The many friends of George Goldberg, a salesman in the local Producers Distributing Company office, will be pleased to know that the operation which he underwent last week at an Albany hospital, was successful, and that he will up and around within a couple of weeks.

James R. Keitz, who has charge of the Greater Features exchange here, is expected in from Idaho the later part of this week. Clifton Pierce, salesman for Greater Features, came in from the Idaho branch and left immediately for Southern Utah.

Carl A. Porter, manager of the Victory Theatre in this city, announces that the movie golfers are getting ready for their fall tournament. This promises to be a very interesting event, and keen rivalry is expected between the contestants. The Paramount Empress and the Victory theatres have put up a cup, and the players of all of the theatres are getting prizes. A meeting will be held within a few days and the players will be paired off according to their handicaps.

M. Stringham who formerly owned the houses at Price and Raines, Utah, has purchased the Colonial Theatre at Ogden, Utah, from H. S. Skinner.

George Brewerton has purchased the Iris Theatre at Murray, Utah, and the Rialto and Princess theatres at Magna, Utah, from Frank Burgener.

Other exhibitors visiting the exchanges this week are: A. L. Stallings, owner of the Kinema Theatre, Richfield, Utah; Chas. Simmons of the Orpheum Theatre, Oakley, Idaho; H. W. Howdeshell, operating the Baugh Theatre, Shoshone, Idaho and Ed Ryan, owner of the Liberty Theatre, Brigham City, Utah.

Seattle

R. R. NAVE, former booker for L. K. Brin's Kwality Pictures Exchange, and more recently associated with Manager H. A. Black's Warner Brothers office, last week took over the booking details at Manager W. H. Drummond's Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange. Mr. Nave is succeeded at Warner Brothers by G. G. Maxey, former salesman in the Eastern Washington territory, who is well known by exhibitors of the Northwest through his former connections with Selznick and First National.

Guy D. Haselton, owner and manager of the Rialto Theatre in Missoula, Montana, was a visitor in this city last week, buying and booking pictures for his house for the coming season.

Two Universal notables, both former residents of this city, were the guests of Manager L. O. Lukan at the local "U" office last week. These were Jack Schlaifer, former local manager and now western district manager for Universal, and Lou Metzger, former Film Booking Offices manager here, and now a special representative for Carl Laemmle.

Charles Code, well-known as a film representative of this city and more recently associated with Manager W. K. Beckwith's Warner Brothers Exchange in Portland, last week joined Manager Jack Sullivan's local Fox office. He will cover the Eastern part of the state for Fox in a sales executive capacity, with headquarters in Spokane.

Reports received on Film Row from Cheney, Wash., last week indicated that Frank Carlon's Rose Theatre in that town had been purchased by Miss L. Neilson, who was scheduled to take over the management of the house within a few weeks time.

George P. Endert, manager of the Famous-Players-Lasky exchange in this city, left last week for San Francisco, where a coast managers' convention was called by District Manager Herman Wobber. On the way south Mr. Endert stopped off long enough in Portland to pick up Neal East who manages the Paramount interests in the Oregon territory.

Erection of a 600 seat theatre in Wenatchee, Wash., directly across the street from the Jensen-Von Herberg Liberty Theatre, was announced this week. It will be built and managed by M. Lillis, who expects to have it ready for a grand opening on January 1, 1926.

W. J. Murphy, publicity director for the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer interests on the Pacific Coast, spent a few days in this territory with local Manager C. M. Hill last week.

Something new in the art of theatre construction and design was promised last week by G. W. Swope, a former exhibitor of California, who has begun construction in Longview, Wash., of the Pekin Theatre, which will be entirely Chinese in architecture. The house will seat approximately 600, will cost in excess of $25,000, and is expected to be ready for occupancy within three months.

Roy Cooper, exhibitor of this city, and former manager of the Anzier Theatre here, last week announced his marriage to Miss Adelaide Salinger, also of this city, the latter part of September.

W. H. Burke, a special representative of the Educational Pictures Corporation from New York City, spent several days here last week with Manager J. A. Gage in the new Educational quarters. Wallie Rucker, Educational salesman, also was "among those present" for the week.

W. V. Ginn, formerly an exhibitor of Trinidad, Colorado, last week announced that he had taken a lease on the Rialto Theatre of Brownsville, Oregon, and would take over the management of the house immediately. The Rialto is owned by R. W. Kessel of Harrisburg and Junction City.

Cleveland

A CURSORY survey of motion picture theatre conditions in Cleveland shows that business is fair. The report from heads of the large neighborhood circuits is that business this fall is just about what it was last year at his time. There's no boom. Neither is there any falling off from last year's standards. However, very few of the season's newest pictures have played these circuits as yet. The exhibitors interviewed said they were still playing up old contracts. So their estimate of local business conditions in the picture business is not based on new pictures. They expect a decided increase in business when the new and bigger product gets to them. The large downtown houses also report business to be average for this time of year, when weather is unsettled, and fans have not yet adjusted themselves to regular winter entertainment.

Howard Christman has resigned as secretary of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade. Christman's resignation will become effective just as soon as his successor has been appointed. Howard Christman has been the one and only secretary of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland. He was appointed to the position when the Film Board of Trade was organized in 1922 and has continued in that post ever since. Under his secretaryship, many important things have been successfully accomplished by the Board. The two big constructive things that they have accomplished is to stabilize contracts and to establish confidence between the distributing and exhibiting branch of the industry. The zoning system, whereby the city is divided into zones, with each theatre classified so as to regulate booking precedence, has also been put into operation under Christman. He resigned in order to accept a bigger job in the east.

Dr. B. I. Brody is the successful bidder for the lease af the new motion picture theatre now in course of construction at the Cedar Lee intersection on Cleveland Heights, a residence suburb of Cleveland. The house has been leased from the Cedar-Lee Realty Company, composed of Charles D. Simmons and Malcolm B. Vilas of the Law firm, Simmons, Dewitt and Vilas. The lease is for seventeen years at an aggregate rental of nearly $300,000. The theatre, which will be finished in about two months, will have 1200 seats, and is located in the rear of a business building. Entrance will be on Lee Road. Dr. Brody also owns and operates the Detroit, Kinsman, Homestead and New Broadway theatres. The new Broadway and Kinsman were built early in 1925. The Detroit is two years old. All of them are night class first-run neighborhood houses. All of them play a straight picture policy with the exception of the Kinsman which plays a combination vaudeville and picture policy. It is expected that the new Cedarlee Theatre will play straight pictures.

The Cameo theatre, Euclid Ave. near East Sixth St. will be ready to open about November 1st. This is a Loew house and the ninth Loew. house in the city. As the Star Theatre, it was for many years the home of burlesque. Recently the property was acquired by the Laronge Company, and has been entirely rebuilt for a picture house. The policy to be inaugurated has not been established other than that it will be devoted to pictures only. But whether it will play first run pictures, for second runs, or both, has not been determined.

The Park Theatre at Barberton has changed hands, the change to become effective on October 5th. Messrs. Makinson and Gaethke have purchased it from John Buckhor. The new owners have closed the house for several weeks, during which time they will put it through a complete course of renovation, including remodeling and re-decorating.

Fred Schram has resigned as city representative for Producers Distributing Corporation. Schram has been with the company ever since it opened its Cleveland exchange. He will announce his future plans shortly.

R. C. Steuve, owner and manager of the Orpheum theatre, Canton, has returned from a summer abroad. Steuve wrote his Cleveland friends to get the band out some day this week, when he plans to visit the exchanges in person.

J. B. Cohen has been advanced from a sales position to that of manager of the Producers Distributing Company's exchange in Pittsburgh. He succeeds G. R. Ainsworth, who has resigned.

Chester Loewe, district representative for P. D. C. and Robert Cotton, division manager, attended a meeting in Chicago, last week, of all district representatives.

Pat Dowling, in charge of publicity for Metropolitan Studios was in the city early in the week. Dowling called on the local newspapers, and paved the way for further publicity on his product.

A. W. Smith, in charge of First National specials, was a guest of the local First National family for a day or two in the beginning of the week, and left on Thursday for Detroit.

Margaret Moir, who has served First National, and First National customers faithfully for a number of years, has resigned to take a new position as wife of Arthur Ayers. It was a Film Bldg. romance, as Ayers was employed in the building when he met Miss Moir. The wedding took place Thursday, September 24th at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. The entire First National office force was in attendance, both at the ceremony and the dinner which followed. They presented the bride and groom with a set of flat silver.

The Film Bldg. register was much in use during the past week. The list of out-of-town exhibitor guests included: Bat B. Charnas, Lyric theatre, Toledo; Garland Shetler, the new owner of the Opera House in Middlefield and the Opera House in West Farmington; Mrs. S. E. Chuba, Empire theatre, Amherst; A. Stalder, Spicer Theatre, Akron; N. D. Schworm, Grand, Massilon; Mike Shea, of Feiber and Shea theatres; Max Young, McKinley theatre, Canton; C. O. Frederick, Moose theatre, Norwalk; A. Moranz, Grand, Lisbon; J. Rubin, Strand, Newton Falls; Leo Burkhart, Hippodrome, Crestline; W. J. Powell, Lonet, Wellington; Ben Yudelvitz, Princess, Medina; Mike Ratoff, Pastime, Akron; J. Stein, Utopia, Painesville; John Damm, Strand, Wadsworth; J. A. Martin, Pastime, Berea, and A. Fish, Alhambra, Canton.

Lou Geiger, manager of F. B. O.'s Cleveland office, is spending a few weeks' vacation in Hollywood at the F. B. O. Studios. Much of his time is being spent in conferences with production managers at work on F. B. O.'s next season product.

Denver

PUEBLO, COLORADO, will soon have another beautiful theatre. On the corner of Broadway and Abriendo Street is being erected a large building most of which will be occupied by what will be known as the Broadway Theatre. The capacity of the new house will be about 1,000 seats. No expense is being spared to make the new motion picture house one of the finest in the state as far as beauty and modern equipment are concerned. The owners of the lease and operators of the theatre are Messrs. Lucy and Wilkinson. The theatre will be finished and open on or about December 15th.

The entire Pathe sales force working out of the local Denver exchange were called into Denver this week. While here, several conferences were held with their manager, Mr. C. M. Van Horn.

Aaron Epstein, auditor for the Fox Theatres in Denver, was taken seriously ill a few days ago while working at his desk. He was immediately removed to a local hospital where he is now reported to be steadily improving. Mr. Epstein has been auditor for the Fox theatres for over a year with offices in the Isis Theatre, during which time he has become one of the most popular and well known theatre men among the Curtis Street first run houses. His present location is J C R S Sanatorium, Sanatorium, Colorado. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Mrs. B. A. Tyo was in Denver visiting her many friends among the exchanges a few days ago. Mrs. Tyo is one of the few lady exhibitors in the Denver territory, being the owner and manager of the Tyo Theatre in Wray, Colorado.

Senator and Mrs. Frank Kelly, who own and operate the Empress Theatre, Salida, Colorado, also made the rounds at film row this week. Their trip to Denver was primarily for the purpose of purchasing service and equipment for their theatre's use during the coming winter months.

J. B. Melton of the Colonial Amusement Company is now in Florida on a business trip. Mr. Melton is also visiting his son who is a real estate operator in Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. He expects to return to Denver October 10th.

The active management of the new State Theatre which opened last week in Denver has been taken over by H. D. McBride. Mr. McBride is a well known theatre manager of the Pacific Coast having until recently managed the theatre at Santa Barbara, California. He was located in that city at the time of the recent disastrous earthquake.

R. V. Mallory has disposed of all his interests in the Rialto Theatre at Brighton, Colorado, to W. A. Seaman. Mr. Seaman is a veteran exhibitor in and near Brighton having operated in that vicinity for the past nine years. Mr. Mallory as yet has not announced his future plans but states that his fellow exhibitors will probably soon see him in the territory as a salesman for one of the leading exchanges.

Exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week were Otto Bachechi of the Pastime Theatre, Albuquerque, New Mexico; J. E. "Tommy" Tompkins, American Theatre, Colorado Springs; Paul Krier, Star Theatre, Walesburg, Colorado; and A. H. Stewart, present manager of the Iris and American Theatres, Casper, Wyoming.

Harry Nolan, district supervisor for First National, will leave for New York City on a business trip about October 1st.

St. Louis

THE addition of the Cinderela Theatre to the St. Louis Amusement Company's chain has caused the transfer of many managers for that company.

J. F. Brinkmeyer moves into the Cinderella from the Grand Florissant. Ralph Walsh takes over the Grand-Florissant while Joe Greene moves up from the Lafayette and Russell airdrome to the Maffitt to replace Walsh. Harry O'Brien goes from the Gravois to the Lafayette and Russell J. Smith is managing the Gravois now.

George McBride has gone up again. Recently he was made chief booker for the local Universal office following a considerable period as short products booked. He is now a valued member of Lou Hess' sales staff. Elmer Sedin who was Universal's booker until about a year ago returned to his old job. Bill Collins continues as short products booker.

David E. Russell, manager of the Columbia and Strand theatres, has been reappointed manager for the Municipal Opera for the season 1926 which opens next May. The opera runs twelve weeks at the Municipal theatre in Forest Park. Russell has always managed it.

T. W. Sharp of Little Rock took bids September 28 on his new theatre in Pulaski Heights. The house will be one story, 40 by 150 feet and cost about $50,000.

Manager J. Greenberg of the New Bond Theatre, 3600 Bond avenue, East St. Louis, Ill., gave a benefit show for St. Regis Church on Sunday evening, September 27.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributing Corporation departed for Kansas City and Omaha September 26. Russell McLean, personal representative for Hill has gone to Des Moines.

Charley Werner, manager for the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office has returned from Mayo Brothers Sanitarium at Rochester, Minn. He was accompanied by his brother Sam, who operated the United Films Exchange. Charley's numerous friends will be pleased to learn that he is greatly improved and will be his old self again within a few weeks. His recent operation was entirely successful.

Tom McKean, manager for F. B. O. and Mrs. McKean returned from the Eastern tour on Monday, September 28. They had a dandy time amid the Effete East. Tom denies that he bought the Woolworth Tower or Grant's Tomb.

The Opera House at Jonesburg, Mo., was destroyed by fire recently. The entire business section of the town was wiped out.

L. C. Crow has sold the Star Theatre, Paris, Mo., to K. K. Stephens. The new owner changed the name to Liberty Theatre.

J. W. Etherton has sold the Opera House, Edinburg, Ill., to P. A. McCarth. Etherton will manage an automobile salesroom for his brother at Carbondale, Ill.

H. W. Haines is now sole owner of the Star, Rockport, Ill.

The Majestic Theatre, Mammoth Springs, Ark., is scheduled to close on October 1.

May Stewart, prize winning beauty who formerly ornamented Universal's local office, has resigned to complete her course of study at Cleveland High School. Representing the Kingland Theatre Miss Stewart was chosen as St. Louis' Film Queen and later she landed top honors in the city's Midwinter Bathing Beauty contest.

Among the other millionaires who vacationed at Wildwood Country Club, Steeleville, Mo., was Bernard (Tim) Temborius, cashier for Universal here. He returned to town with a handsome coat of tan and a flattened bankroll.

Sam R. Alexander has purchased the house at Pawnee, Ill., formerly operated by Tony Serva.

The theatre at West Salem, Ill., will be converted into a poultry house.

A new theatre will be erected at Bowen, Ill.

Visitors were Tom Reed, Duquoin; S. M. Francis, Charleston, and O. W. McCutcheon of Sikeston, Mo.

Kansas City

MRS. MARY WILLIAMS of Sedalia, Mo., mother-in-law of Fred Spear of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, died unexpectedly while visiting Mr. and Mrs. Spear in Kansas City Monday.

Theatre construction in Kansas City appears to have shifted from the southern section of the city to the older district of the city in the northeast section. One new theatre has been completed, another is under course of remodeling and enlarging, a third is under construction, while a fourth is planning to increase its seating capacity. The Vista theatre has opened under the management of L. J. Lenhart, who also operates the Roanoke theatre, while the Belmont theatre, which is under construction, is nearing completion. At Independence avenue and Harrison street Frank Garnier is constructing a new theatre which he has contemplated for years, while A. P. Vaughan, owner of the Maple theatre, announces that the house will be remodeled to seat 1,000 and a 10-cent policy adopted.

The Twelfth Street theatre, which originally was built as a down town first run house of Kansas City, has changed its policy to burlesque, having entered into a 30-week agreement with the Gus Sun and Ackerman and Harris vaudeville chain.

Several openings and changes of management of theatres in the Kansas City territory have occured in the last week. The New Regent theatre, Winfield, Kas., owned by O. K. Mason, has re-opened after having been remodeled. I. S. Campbell will manage the house. The Elliott and Electric theatres of Independence, Mo., have been added to the string of Glenn Dickinson, he now controlling all three theatres in that town. Three theatres, the Gem at Cassville, Mo. the Star at Exeter, Mo., and the Cozy at Seligman, Mo., have been purchased by Mrs. H. L. Karr of Monett, Mo., who also owns the Gem at Monett and the Strand at Pierce City, Mo. H. L. Karr will manage the entire string and will buy for all the theatres.

The Burford theatre, Arkansas City, Kas., operated by William Burford, was robbed Sunday night of $1,000 when the safe of the theatre was blown by nitroglycerine.

Work on the new $150,000 Gillioz theatre at Springfield, Mo., will start soon, all contracts having been let. The house, which will seat 1,700 persons in the parquet and balcony, also will contain a full sized stage. It will be a first run house and, according to reports from Springfield, will be leased by United Studios, Inc., of Chicago.

Light top-coats were necessary along Kansas City's movie row this week, but there was no "cooling off" of business by any means. C. A. Schultz, P. D. C. branch manager, returned from a managers' meeting in St. Louis and started his men out in the territory to "get 'em." M. A. Levy, Fox branch manager, conducted a peppy sales meeting all of his own. F. J. Warren and Jack Langan, general manager and manager, respectively, of the Standard Film Exchange, returned from the territory to report that cooler weather had stimulated box offices. George Priest, Fox salesman, has resigned. "Alexander Bill" obtained excellent results on his first week in the territory for the Standard Film Exchange. Sam Black, formerly with Warner Bros., has accepted a position as shipping clerk with P. D. C. E. H. Goldstein, treasurer for Universal, and A. E. Fair, general manager of Universal's Hostetter circuit, were in Kansas City last week on their way to the West Coast. Few rivals on movie row has Harry Silverman for being an "in-and-outer." Scarcely had the Independent Film Corp., representative arrived home last week than he was on his way back to the territory. The P.D.C. branch is undergoing many new improvements and alterations, much to the satisfaction of C. E. Schultz, branch manager.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: R. E. Christian, Casino, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; F. A. Robinson, LeRoy, Kas.; Louis Griefe, Windsor, Mo.; Bryan Hawkins, Drexel, Mo.; S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson theatre, Springfield, Mo.

"Yes, after spending a rather strenuous vacation playing golf, fishing and swimming, I'm glad to get back to work," said C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, who returned from Northern Missouri and Colorado this week.

New York and New Jersey

INVITATIONS are out this week for at least two new theatre openings. Sol Brill's Inwood at Dyckman Street and Post Ave., New York City, will have its Premiere on Thursday evening, October 1st. The Inwood is under the management of the Haven Amusement Corporation with Sol Brill as President.

Small and Strassburg will open their new Terminal theatre at Fourth Ave. and Dean Street, Brooklyn, on Wednesday evening, September 30th. Further details of both these opening nights will be given in next week's Motion Picture News.

Peter Adams, of Newark and Paterson theatrical circles, has been presented by Mrs. Adams, with a baby girl. Mrs. Adams is in the Paterson hospital and the report is that she is getting along finely.

Joseph M. Seider, President of the M. P. T. O. of N. J. and Director Hirschblond attended the Shriners Convention at Atlantic City and while there did not lose the opportunity of talking over Sunday legislation with the Reverend Samuel Steinmetz of Trenton, N. J.

President Seider is scheduled for Tom's River on Saturday of this week and will go on to Camden, Sunday. Both stops will be made in the interest of Jersey organization matters.

On the completion of Joseph Stern's new theatre in Red Bank, N. J., it is reported that a booking arrangement will be formed between Mr. Stern and Walter Reade of the Walter Reade Enterprises. Mr. Stern's theatre is now under construction and when it is finished, both circuits will be represented in Red Bank.

Fred Mertens, of the Fulton theatre, Jersey City, whose policy has been first and second runs will change his theatre over to a strictly first run house. Mr. Mertens has been experimenting with first runs of late and with such success that it is the reason for the change.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Pear appeared at the Astor theatre recently with a brand new chauffeur driven Marmon Sedan which was delivered to him during the past few weeks. Max had a brace of box seats and after looking over their location, decided that the orchestra was a better bet. Dave Brill of the Big U exchange had to help him out. Mr. Pear operates a circuit of six theatres in New York City. Messrs. Jutkwitz and Smollen of Red Bank and Perth Amboy, N. J., were also observed in the Astor theatre lobby on the same night.

Arthur Rapf, brother of Harry Rapf of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, has gone up to the mountains for a two weeks' vacation. Mr. Rapf's interests included the Highway, Benson, Montauk and Park theatres in Brooklyn.

John J. Heagney has recently joined the sales staff of the local Associated Exhibitors exchange and will cover Northern New Jersey. Mr. Heagney's former connections were with the Fox and Warner-Standard exchanges in Michigan and he has also worked under the Hodkinson banner in New Jersey.

Goldreyer's Manor theatre, reported to be a beautiful new 1800 seat house that is strictly up to the minute in every respect, recently held its opening. The Manor is located at Avenue K and Coney Island Ave., Brooklyn.

William De Mille, who has written the story for his next Paramount production "Magpie."

It is reported that A. Sobelson, of the Sobelson and Tannhauser Enterprises over in Jersey, has lately become interested in a big real estate deal in Bergen County. No theatre sites are said to be involved.

Phil Meyer, the New York manager of the Associated Exhibitors exchange has bought himself a new Hupmobile Sedan.

Louis Gold and E. Thornton Kelly, both recently elected Associate-Directors of the M. P. T. O. of N. J., attended for their first time the last meeting held at Asbury where the members were the guests of Messrs. Hildinger, Keegan and Newberry.

Several more local theatres have changed over to a full time schedule. They include J. Wolff's Miller theatre on Saratoga Avenue, Brooklyn, Small-Strassberg's Washington, Myrtle Ave., Brooklyn and also the S. & A. theatre, the latter of late only being operated for two nights a week.

Lee Simon, assistant Pathe shipper, is back at work again after a two weeks' vacation in the mountains.

The Ritz theatre at 1901 Fulton Street, Brooklyn, which has been closed for several months, was reopened on Saturday, September 25th, by H. Lightstone.

The Forest Park theatre in Brooklyn, owned by Rossasy, has been sold to a former Connecticut exhibitor by name of Crystal.

Abe Puder and Harry Lowe, as heads of a syndicate, took over the property at 172-174 Clinton avenue, formerly the home of James R. Nugent, Democratic boss of Essex County, and will erect a combined theater, store and office building. The transaction was made through Murray Applebaum, Inc., realtors, with Attorney Seymour Solomon representing the syndicate.

Along with the property, a tract of land at 170 Clinton avenue and having a depth of 219 feet was also bought. The combined properties are valued at $100,000.

Central Penn

SPECIAL exercises on Labor Day marked the formal opening of the new 1000 capacity Freedman Theatre, erected by Julius Freedman, in Forest City. Among the prominent theatre men in attendance was M. E. Comerford, of Scranton, head of the Comerford Amusement Company, which operates a big chain of theatres in the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania. He had just recently returned from Europe. The new theatre is a modern one in every respect, being of steel and concrete construction.

A ten-year lease on the Moose picture theatre, Mahanoy City, has been granted to Charles Haussman. He will make extensive alterations and renovations and operate it under the name of the Hippodrome. It was formerly known as the Family. Mr. Haussman is manager of the Hippodrome in Pottsville. He has appointed Frank Hill, formerly of the Hippodrome in Reading, to act as manager of the theatre in Mahanoy City.

The new Arcadia theatre, in Shenandoah, which is to replace the old theatre of the same name, is nearing completion, and will soon be ready for formal opening, according to Oppenheimer & Sweet, the owners. They purchased the old property from Porter Seiwell.

The management of the Hippodrome theatre, York, has announced an engagement of the expert motion picture organist, Walter C. Simon.

The Poli theatre, Scranton, was reopened for the Fall season on September 14, and the Poli in Wilkes-Barre, on September 21. Both are affiliated with the Comerford Amusement Company chain of theatres. Both theatres have undergone improvements.

Reports from the hard coal mining regions of Pennsylvania are that the miners' strike, which started September 1, did not, during the first three weeks of the month, have the adverse effect on the motion picture theatre business that had been anticipated. It is now predicted by the more optimistic theatre men that the falling off in theatre patronage may not become very serious in the anthracite sections unless the strike becomes prolonged. They point out that while the strikers' incomes are reduced, nevertheless the fact that the men have more time on their hands since they have become idle, gives them more leisure in which to attend picture shows and other forms of amusement.

An increase in wages of about four dollars a week has been granted by the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, to the stage hands employed in the Capital, Academy, Gaiety and Poli theatres in that city, effective September 1.

The Victoria theatre, of Mahanoy City, has a new chief electrician in the person of Raymond Clarke, formerly of Barnesville. This is one of the Chamberlain Amusement Company theatres.

A new theatre with a seating capacity of 350 is about to be opened in Swayersville, by Michael Manchutas.

Arthur Lichtenthaler, prominent theatre man in Lebanon, proprietor, of the Family theatre there, and owner of a motion picture and dance pavilion at the Mt. Gretna summer resort, on the evening of Saturday, September 19, formerly opened his new $100,000 Community Auditorium, at Cumberland street, near Fifth, in Lebanon. It provides accommodations not only for dances, lectures and public assemblies of a general character, but also is designed for conventions, expositions and all kinds of meetings where large space is required. It has floor space two times as great as that of the Lebanon Armory which heretofore had been the city's largest assembly hall. The opening exercises were featured by a large public dance.

The State theatre, Altoona, recently acquired by the Wilmer & Vincent interests, has been formally reopened under their management, after having undergone extensive interior improvements. Announcement is made that Professor J. F. Keith has been engaged as organist for the theatre which is one of the finest and largest in Western Pennsylvania, outside of Pittsburgh.

New scenery, curtains and lighting effects have just been added to the equipment of the Academy of Music, in Lebanon. The curtains are of asbestos, decorated in plain, straight-line trimmings. An emergency lighting system has been installed so that in event of the city light failing the theatre can be lighted by means of storage batteries.

Minneapolis

MINNEAPOLIS city ordinance requirements having to do with fire protection have been so altered as to make it necessary for most of the film companies here to change the arrangement of their plants, cutting exits and increasing the thickness of the walls. One company which, at the time its plant was built, went far beyond the requirements of the time in the matter of construction has been put to a good deal of inconvenience in spite of this and some alterations have been ordered with most of the others.

S. F. Heath of the State theatre at Wells, Minn., was a visitor in the Fox office at Minneapolis last week.

R. H. Byram of the New Dream theatre at Redwood Falls, paid a visit to the Twin Cities recently.

George W. Ryan has taken over the Palace theatre at Hector, Minn., from E. P. Nelson.

Waldorf and Johnson have taken over the management of the Grand theatre at Estherville, Ia., Minneapolis film men report.

Ray D. Stewart of the Fox sales force, who makes his headquarters at LaCrosse, is not half so sick as he was supposed to be. In fact, he denies having been sick at all in spite of the story that went the rounds that he was in bad shape. He was formerly with F. B. O. here.

W. J. Morgan, sales manager, and Cecil E. Mayberry, district manager, of Producers' Distributing Corporation, spent a few days with Jack O'Toole, local manager, last week.

Lloyd Willis, formerly with the Will Hays organization, has come out from the home office of Warner Brothers as special representative. It is understood that he will become division manager.

Warner Brothers force of five salesmen, supervised by T. A. Burke, manager, and M. E. Montgomery, assistant manager, has been making high marks in the drive now being conducted throughout the United States. Last week this organization went well over its quotas.

H. B. Smoots of the Lowell theatre at Little Falls has gone back home after a visit to Minneapolis.

J. Dudley of the Dudley theatre at Bradley, S. D., has been paying calls at the exchanges here.

John Pillar of Valley City, N. D., is getting to be a familiar figure on the film row here. The opening of his new Rex theatre sent him back to the Twin Cities again last week.

Stanley B. Waite, two-reel comedy salesmanager for Pathe, dropped into Minneapolis office and stayed a few days last week.

Buffalo

THE strike of musicians, stage hands and operators is still in force in the Strand, Cataract and Bellevue theatres, Niagara Falls, N. Y., and promises to continue indefinitely. High officers of the stage hands union were in the Cataract City last week end but were unable to get together with the theatre interests so they returned to New York. A. C. Hayman, president of the Cataract Amusement company, operating the Strand and Cataract, has left for the wilds in northern Ontario for a two weeks' hunting and fishing trip, and Herman Lorence, manager of the Bellevue has started on a motor tour to the Adirondacks and New York city. The Strand is celebrating its third anniversary this week.

Members of the Rochester Parent-Teachers' association heard Mrs. A. S. Mattice outline the work for the Eastman theatre educational program committee the other day. The association is cooperating in arranging the programs for the Saturday morning children shows at the big house.

Four thousand, two hundred and twenty-seven different articles have been picked up during the past ten months in the Eastman, Rochester, auditorium. A great majority of these articles were returned to their owners. A review of the collection displays a variety that would do justice to a five and ten cent store. They range all the way from prayer books to soldering irons and lipsticks. Handkerchiefs head the list with a total of 1,890, the majority of which are women's. The women also left behind some 106 vanity cases, along with 55 pairs of rubbers, 80 umbrellas and 102 combs. House Manager John J. O'Neill must be a busy man.

CONSTRUCTION & EQUIPMENT DEPARTMENT

Theatre Analysis Reveals Interesting Data

Reports of Four Weeks Show Investment of $21,000,000; Sixty Projects Average $360,000

ANALYZING the reports on new theatre projects which have been received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the remarkable showing of sixty new motion picture theatres is recorded within the last four weeks. The reported investment called for by these new projects totals approximately $21,500,000, a figure which would tend to indicate that the estimate of over $200,000,000 for theatre construction and equipment during 1925 would be exceeded, especially when it is realized that this total of over $21,000,000, is solely for the purpose of construction of new houses and does not take into consideration the very material expenditure constantly required for the re-equipment of the thousands of theatres already in operation.

Further analyzing of these reports shows that Illinois leads with a $5,340,000 building program, though the number of projects calling for this figure is only eight. New York with thirteen projects will require $4,440,000 being very closely pressed for second place by California with a building program of $4,400,000 to be invested in eleven new theatres. New Jersey follows next in line with a schedule of $1,575,000 for six houses. Three other states call for $1,000,000 or more new theatre construction. They are: Virginia, $1,250,000, 1 project; Washington, $1,175,000, 4 projects; Wisconsin, $1,000,000, 1 project. Ten additional states report building programs varying from $700,000 down to $50,000. They are: Connecticut, $700,000; Massachusetts, $515,000; Arizona, $400,000; North Dakota, $150,000; Ohio, $125,000; Georgia, $110,000; Kansas, $100,000; Pennsylvania, $70,000; Minnesota, $50,000; Tennessee, $50,000.

These new theatre project reports call for a total seating capacity of approximately 84,000, which brings the average per theatre very nearly 1400. This unusually high average only forcibly illustrates the general tendency of the times towards large pretentions houses located in relatively large centers of population. However, it is well to note here that there are included in this building program quite a number of theatres calling for a seating capacity from 350 up to 800 seats.

Final O. K. Placed on Plans for New Grauman Theatre at Hollywood

THE first definite authentic announcement concerning the much heralded new Grauman theatre in Hollywood was given out yesterday by Sid Grauman, following his placing the final okay on the plans for the $5,000,000 edifice as designed, executed and engineered by Mendel Meyer of Meyer and Holler, working under ideas created by the California showman, who has raised the prologue from a vaudeville skit to an extravaganza, and developed film playhouses from the nickelodeon to the bizarre picture palace palatial.

The new temple to Thespis will be located on the North Side of Hollywood boulevard, between Orange Drive and Orchid Avenue, with a frontage of 140 feet on the boulevard and a depth of 250 feet. The seating capacity will be 2,000.

The motif of the theatrical palace is to be that of the classical Chinese dynasties, and inspiration has been drawn from those magnificent Celestial temples which bear the same relation to the architecture of the Orient as do the Greek Acropolis and the Roman Forum to the architecture of the Occident.

The approach to the Thespian palace will be through a great tropical garden, elliptical in form, and surrounded by a wall 45 feet high.

No expense will be spared in creating such surroundings that when the visitor enters the court he will be conscious of entering another world.

The auditorium will be absolutely unique in its plan, patrons passing through great colonnades or corridors on either side, formed by towering lacquered columns seven feet in diameter.

In developing the scheme for painted decoration, the marvelous colorings and designs developed to such a high degree in early days by the Chinese people have furnished the inspiration for the architect.

One of the largest and finest pipe organs in the country will be installed, with the music introduced into the auditorium through an elaborate grill in the ceiling. Provision will be made for a very large orchestra.

The proscenium arch at the asbestos curtain will be 65 feet wide. The stage from this line will be 40 feet in depth and 140 feet wide, designed to permit the staging on an elaborate scale of the most gigantic of stage productions.

The structure will be Class "A" construction throughout on a frame of steel. A highly developed system of ventilation will be incorporated, which will permit of the introduction of fresh air, cooled to the proper temperature in summer, in such a manner that the patrons will be unconscious of the mechanical circulation.

Ground will be broken for the theatre about November 1, and it is estimated that more than a year will be required to complete the structure.

Reports that Grauman is financially interested in other theatres to be constructed are vigorously denied, his only enterprises of this character being Grauman's Egyptian theatre and the new Grauman Chinese Theatre.

Effinger to Build 2,500 Seat House in Philadelphia

Plans are now being prepared for the erection of a 2,500-seat theatre at 67th avenue and Broad street, Philadelphia, for Herbert Effinger, who now operates the Strand, Leader, 69th Theatre and the Nixon at Glenside, all of which are booked through the Stanley Company. The lot is 125 x 200 feet and the specifications call for a structure, including stores, which will cost approximately half a million dollars. It will probably be ready for operation late next spring.

Atlanta, Georgia, to Have Another New Theatre

A new motion picture theatre is to be erected in the heart of the West End business district at 57 Gordon Street. There will be erected a motion picture theatre with stores and the cost of the new structure will be approximately $60.000. The site on which the new building will be erected is 50 x 200. The owner of the new theatre is Adolph Samuels.

Interesting Program for Society of Motion Picture Engineers' Fall Convention

THE SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS will hold their Fall Convention beginning Monday, October 5th and concluding Thursday the 8th at the Lakewood Farm Inn., Roscoe, N. Y. An exceptionally interesting program of papers and entertainment has been announced that promises to equal or surpass any previous convention. Another attraction that this meeting holds forth to the Society members and guests is the delightful auto trip to the meeting place for all those within a radius of 250 miles of Roscoe.

The program for the meeting is as follows:

October 5th—Registration, President's Address, Unfinished Business, New Business, Report of Arrangements Committee, Report of Advertising Committee; Papers: "Handling of Motion Picture Film in the Field Under Climatic Conditions"—R. J. Flaherty; "Washing of Motion Picture Film"—Kenneth Hickman; "Effect of Scratches on Motion Picture Film"—S. E. Sheppard and S. S. Sweet, Evening of Entertainment.

October 6th—Papers: "Importance of Village Theatre"—F. H. Richardson; "Color Photography Patents"—William V. D. Kelley; "A New Camera for News Screen Cinematographers"—J. H. McNabb; "A New Incandescent Spotlight"—L. C. Porter; Report of Progress Committee—"The Questionable Educational Value of the Motion Pictures"—A. W. Abrams; "Movies for Teaching; The Proof of their Usefulness"—Rowland Rogers; "An Exhibitors Problem in 1925"—E. T. Clark; "Transmission of Pictures Over Telephone Lines"—Dr. H. E. Ives; Evening of Entertainment.

October 7th—Papers: "A Prefocusing Base and Socket for Projection Lamps"—R. S. Burnap; "The High Intensity Arc"—Dr. Frank Benford; "Reflector Arc Projection; some Limitations and Possibilities in Theory and Practice"—S. Stark; "Standards and Nomenclature Committee Report; Recreation as scheduled for the afternoon; Banquet—Informal.

October 8th—Papers: "Importance of Proper Splicing"—E. J. Dennison; "Rack Marks and Air Bells Produced in the Development of Motion Picture Film by Rack System"—J. I. Crabtree; "The Pathe Camera and Projector"—W. R. Daniel.

Building Contracts Continue to Be Let for New England Theatres

CONTRACTS have been let and ground broken for the new theatre in Harvard square, Cambridge, Mass., which will probably be known as the University Theatre. It is being erected by Charles A. Newhall of Brookline, Mass., for the University Theatres, Inc., of which Charles E. Hatfield of Newton, Mass., is a leading factor. The company operates the Community Theatre and other playhouses.

The new theatre will be completed sometime in March, according to present plans. It will have a seating capacity of about 2,000 and will have a main entrance from Massachusetts avenue.

J. M. & C. J. Buckley of Boston have the contract and will push the theatre to completion at the earliest possible date. Programs of feature films with comedy and short subjects and news reels will be given and it is probable orchestral music will be provided.

Contracts for the new S & S Corporation theatre at 250 Main street, Middletown, Conn., have been let to Tracy Brothers Co. of Waterbury, Conn. The playhouse will be completed late in the spring and will cost approximately $150,000. The auditorium will be 60 by 150 feet with lobby 22 by 125 feet. It will be of brick and concrete construction with balcony.

Alterations costing about $25,000 are to be made on the former St. James Theatre, 239 Huntington avenue, Boston, by the new owners, the Keith-Albee company.

A new theatre is to be erected by the Singer Real Estate Trust of 84 Chauncey street, Boston, at 119 Dudley street in the Roxbury district. No announcement is forthcoming at this time as to the lessees. The theatre will be 81 by 195 feet with auditorium and main balcony and will cost approximately $225,000. It will be completed late in the spring. M. Shapiro & Son of Boston have the general contract and plans were drawn by F. A. Norcross of Boston.

The Wakefield Theatre, Wakefield, Mass. which was gutted by fire a few weeks ago, has been entirely remodelled, enlarged and redecorated and this week the house reopened for the season. The theatre was practically reconstructed from basement to roof.

Broadway Theatre Corporation of Providence, R. I. is constructing foundations for its new theatre on Broadway, which will be 60 by 200 feet and will have a seating capacity of from 850 to 900.

The Globe Theatre on Chapel street, New Haven, Conn. is to undergo extensive remodelling, contracts for which have been let. A new front, new lobby, new toilets, new ceilings, and redecorating of the theatre will be done before reopening for the winter season.

Alexander Saraceno is to build a new theatre in Middletown, Conn. which, it is understood, will be linked up with the circuit operated by Israel Gordon of New Haven. The theatre will be located near the present Grand Theatre, owned by the D. & G. Corporation which also owns the Middlesex Theatre, the only other theatre in the city. It is understood the new theatre will cost in the vicinity of $100,000. Construction will commence within the next 30 days.

The G-E Incandescent Lamp Projector with Cinephor Condensing Lens

More Light from the Same Current

The Cinephor Condensing Lens, consisting of two specially designed parabolic condensers, makes the advantages of incandescent projection available to an increased number of theatres. This new lens is for use with the 30-volt, 30-ampere Mazda lamp, and can be adapted to all existing installations of the G-E incandescent lamp projector. Properly adjusted, it increases the amount of light on the screen nearly 50 percent over that obtained on the same sized picture with a standard prismatic condenser. In addition, the screen illumination is more even, the presentation of the picture improved.

General Electric specialists will be pleased to consult with any theatre owner or projectionist on the requirements of his theatre. Address the G-E office in any large city.

For more than thirty years the General Electric Company has built electrical apparatus for service to every industry. In motion picture theatres all over the country, incandescent lamp projectors bearing the G-E monogram are providing the best, most even screen illumination.

Optics, Electricity, Practical Ideas & advice

Inquiries and Comments

A Remarkable Change

FOR a considerable length of time a writer for a certain motion picture trade journal has been carefully nursing the idea that the laws governing the emission of light from primary sources —"open" sources he calls them—differed in some mysterious manner from those governing the projection of light by means of lenses and reflectors. We have looked high and low for a suitable definition of an "open" source—but all in vain, so we have come to the conclusion, much to our regret, that as far as "open" or "nude" sources, to speak with brutal frankness, are concerned, there simply "ain't no such animal."

Positive

Be that as it may, this writer was so positive in his convictions that the same laws did not apply in these two cases that he went so far as to accuse persons who thought otherwise of having seriously blundered. In this respect we call upon you to witness his rashness for yourself.

Sometime ago he wrote as follows: "Light intensity decreases inversely as the square of the distance from the source. It (the law) is mentioned here to caution you that this law applies to light from an open light source only, because many have committed the blunder of applying it to the light beam between the projection lens and the screen. The law does not apply to light after it has been acted upon by a lens."

Didn't Think So

The "information" contained in that paragraph did not strike us as being exactly correct; it didn't read right. With this thought in mind we undertook to explain in these columns how the "Inverse Square Law" did apply to projector beams and that the mere addition of lenses or reflectors did not, under average conditions, change its operation. This article appeared a little more than a year ago (Motion Picture News, July 26, 1924).

Immediately thereafter our friend defended his stand.

Third Party Agrees

He sent the article in question to a friend who is reputed to be well versed in optics. No doubt, much to the surprise of our literary contemporary, his friend agreed with our statements and proceeded to explain the whys and wherefores of his beliefs. In attempting this explanation he got considerably balled up and thus only served to increase our conviction that he, too, did not know what he was talking about.

In this connection let us quote from an article containing the discussions of our literary and optical friends which appeared a little less than a year ago.

Mr. Optics.—"Regarding the attached page (our article—Ed.) the following is a statement covering the situation: The fact that it is possible, with a given size crater, to project a given size picture at 50, 75, 100 or 125 feet projection distance, with practically the same screen illumination density in all cases, merely by changing the E. F. of the projection lens is sufficient proof that the inverse square law does not apply to the light action of the motion picture projector optical train as measured from light source to screen, although it does apply to that part of the light beam as measured from the condenser image (commonly referred to as the "aerial image") to the screen, when using an arc light source, and from the lens to screen when using a Mazda."

Just imagine securing a constant foot-candle intensity on any throw between 50 ft. and 125 ft. "merely by changing the E. F. of the projection lens!" In other words if a certain system gave 8 foot-candles on a 50 ft. throw and it was desired to secure the same intensity on a 300 ft. throw the only thing required would be "merely to change the E. F. of the projection lens" to a certain value and then—8 foot-candles would jump out of space and stare you in the face.

No Such Thing

The only effect that a change in projection lens E. F. will have, in any given optic system and where the throw is constant, is that the total volume of light on the screen will change in practically direct proportion to the area of the illuminated picture. The intensity will remain constant. The screen intensity will vary inversely as the square of the throw regardless of projection lens E. F.

The only things that effect intensity on the screen are free diameter of projection lens, source brightness, and aperture area. This assumes, of course that the system is properly adjusted to secure limiting illumination. As for the statement in the last part of the above quotation that the inverse square law is measured from the objective lens in one case and from the aerial image in another, why, that too is wrong. It is measured from the objective lens in each case.

Change in Attitude

In view of all the foregoing it is interesting to note a recent statement of our writing friend in which he confesses to a change of heart. He writes as follows:

"In conversation with ——— he made the assertion that I was in error in saying that the inverse square law applies only to an open (Blast that word—Ed) light source—that the intensity of illumination decreased inversely as the square of the distance.

"——— holds that this law applies to any-beam of light, including the light from a projection lens. This I both concede and dispute. I concede that it applies to the beam from a projection lens, but dispute that it applies in just the same way. The light in a beam from a projection lens will decrease inversely as the square of the distance, provided that this does not always apply close to the lens; also I hold that it is stretching things to apply the inverse square law to the directed beam in the same way it is applied to the open (what again?—Ed) source.

"I am well aware of the fact that I could be cornered in this and put in a position where I would not exactly know how to prove my view correct, but all the same I do hold that, while granting the law to apply in both cases, still there is a difference. I think, however, the statement in the third paragraph of page 125 of ——— is altogether too strong. I was in error when I made it."

A Trickey Law

Well, well! Will wonders never cease? After a solid year of heavy abuse the poor, old, inverse square law has come into its own. So it does apply to projector beam after all. And all the harsh things that were said about it, too.

The inverse square law is a fickle lady so she doesn't deserve much sympathy. She seems to be a very aristocratic person because she chooses her application in a critical manner. For instance, when our optical friend said the inverse square law applied to any beam of light he was wrong. Very much so. And yet in the strictest sense of the word he was right, too. When considering a spotlight flooding a stage, the inverse square law does not apply to the beam from the spot but only to individual points on the lens or to local lens areas. It does apply, however, to the beam when the "spot" is drawn down to cover a single small object on the stage such as a person's head.

Nor does it apply to light beam between the collector and converging lenses of a plano-convex condenser set, although it does apply to the beam from the two lenses in combination.

Fundamental Law

The inverse square law is the fundamental law of light. In the strictest sense of the word, it applies to all light radiation no matter what the conditions of use are. It makes no difference whether lenses, mirrors, or other objects are placed in its path, the law always remains operative. The only possible effect such objects can have upon light is to change either its direction or velocity or both.

HOWEVER, the inverse square law in projection, is commonly understood to apply to beams (such as from mirrors or lenses) and in view of this it must be used with extreme caution.

The exact application of this law must be understood since the same factors in the law cannot be used for each condition, new factors are involved for each change.

Locatelli is Building Third House in Somerville, Mass.

Albert J. Locatelli, general manager of the Ball Square and Central Theatres in Somerville, Mass., is building a third theatre on Massachusetts avenue, corner of Lake street, Arlington, Mass. which will be opened later this season, probably around Nov. 1. The construction work is being done by his father, John E. Locatelli of the J. E. Locatelli Company. The new playhouse will be larger than either of the two Somerville houses, with a seating capacity of about 1,700. It is located between Arlington square and North Cambridge and will draw its patronage largely from those sections of Arlington, Cambridge, Somerville and Medford within close proximity to the theatre.

Contracts to Be Let for New Arkansas House

T. W. Sharp, 114 Main street, Little Rock, Ark., will let contracts shortly on the new theatre he plans to erect at Beech and Prospect avenue, Pulaski Heights. The house will be one story, 40 by 140 ft. and cost approximately $25,000 exclusive of equipment. It will contain a balcony and full size stage.

$50,000 Theatre to Be Built in Paris, Illinois

Paris, Ill., is to have a $50,000 theatre to be erected between the Central Hotel and the Paris Auto Company garage on site 47 x 147 ft. The theatre will have a seating capacity of 800 persons. It will be up-to-date in every respect.

How Lobby Material and Equipment are Manufactured

By Wm. F. Libman, Libman-Spanjer Corp.

FROM the earliest days of the average normal youth, the desire to "see the wheels go round" is an inherent impulse in all of us; while the wish to see men working at some calling other than our own is always present.

And the urge to "look behind the scenes" is an even stronger one. So it seems to the writer that a brief trip through the factory of an up to date lobby equipment plant would not only be interesting, but fully in keeping with the subjects so far discussed in the present series of articles. As in every form of good construction, whether it be in the building or mechanical line, the material used, and the sort of labor engaged in its manipulation, determines to a great extent, the length of service, and the value to the user of the finished product.

As detailed in the last article, the very best medium that is most easily manufactured, that is most adaptable, readily worked, and at the same time most economical, is carefully chosen wood. It is but natural therefore, that woodworkers, carvers, and cabinet makers should predominate. Machinery for aiding the craftsmen mentioned is required, and forms a most important group of necessities in the frame building business.

Besides the artisans mentioned, the requirements also call for the inclusion of painters, decorators, glazers, marble workers and electricians.

As we enter the factory, we pass through the shipping room where a completed order is ready waiting for shipment. The care necessary and the means employed in packing these easily-broken-in-transit frames will be touched upon in the natural sequence which will be followed—the building of a frame.

Lining the walls of this room, swathed in canvas, old velvets and sailcloths, are the finished frames, looking for all the world like the treasured objects that were brought, one by one, out of King Tut's tomb. And by the way, the art of carving, gilding and decorative surfacing aside from the modern machinery now employed, differs but little in process or application from that followed in the days of the Pharoahs where this art was followed by skilled masters.

First of all let us go into the stock room where long, ceiling high racks are filled with lumber, including everything used in frame building, from the thin, slender little beaded moulding, to the 16-inch wide board stock. Speaking of the latter, it might be well to mention that this stock in the rough costs the builders 24c a square foot, or 2c an inch, so it can be seen that careless cutting, or wasteful methods would quickly run into big sums.

All of the wood is kiln dried, and carefully selected, for the presence of warpage, or cracks in a finished frame will also spell losses for the manufacturer. The absence of knots, gnarls, and sap marks, is also an important item in selection.

Let us follow the progress of a wall case and watch it grow from the rough stock in the racks, to the shipping room. This frame will have, let us say, a decorative, hand carved top with the name of the theatre, and includes French plate, mitre cut mirror, with a crystal chandelier or bracket lamp mounted against the mirror. First we see the frame itself being put into shape, the corners cut on the mitring machine, which produces a smooth, almost invisible joint where the corner edges come together. Behind each corner, an iron corner brace is attached, while the glued corners are held together in a viselike grip of a special screw press which exerts terrific pressure and insures a tight seam. The edges in which the glass is to set have already been cut out on the "rabbitting" machine, which forms a smooth even surface of any desired width or depth that is needed. The ornamental columns are now attached to the sides of the door openings on the top of which, caps or capitals are mounted in either Roman, Greek or Egyptian design.

Meanwhile in another section of the factory, the decorative top, or capping for the entire frame is being carved, and here indeed can be seen one of the most interesting phases of frame building, where the most skilled artisans are at work carving beautiful designs from single pieces of wood stock. The baseboard that is to be used for the top is roughly outlined with the band saw, and a piece of sugar pine, selected for its softness and freedom of fibres and knots, is tacked onto the baseboard. The design is transferred from the pattern to the sugar pine, and then the carver commences his work.

Through the use of native skill the proper tools, the plain pieces of wood very quickly becomes a beautiful example of hand carving, bringing out in bold relief, the central design of sea shell ornament, flanked with floral and leafy designs on either side. It is this real hand carving which gives so much distinction to the professionally built lobby frames, which is absent altogether when the hand of the local carpenter has fashioned his examples of framework.

While this is in progress, at another machine which operates as a large jig saw, a workman is busy cutting out of sugar pine, the lettering that is to be attached to the cap piece. These letters, resembling those seen on children's alphabet blocks and books, are also first traced and then cut out one by one, with the jig saw, which is of course power driven.

After being smoothed and finished up the letters are attached to the cap piece which is now ready to be fastened to the main frame, this being done with glue, dowels, and iron braces. The partially constructed frame is now ready for its trip to the paint shop, after which it will go to the decorator for the plush, then to the glazing department for the mirror, the electrical shop for the chandelier, and lighting fixtures.

The interesting process followed out in the paint shop, will be described in another article. The writer might add, that in the covering of the wood in the right manner, a big element in the life and service of the frame is accounted for.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Tower of Lies"—M-G-M., Warfield, S. F.

Call: "Another magnificent characterization by the marvelous Lon Chaney, quite as fine as anything he has done before; an almost equally startling portrayal of a Swedish peasant mother by Claire McDowell; Norma Shearer exceeding even her arresting work in 'He Who Gets Slapped' and 'Lady of the Night'; marvelous photography, deft direction and a heart-burning narrative — these are highlights of 'The Tower of Lies,' which will undoubtedly go down in cinematographic history as one of the finest five photoplays of 1925."

Chronicle: "'The Tower of Lies' has all the elements of a great success. Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer, Claire McDowell, William Haines and Ian Keith have principal characters to play, and Chaney and Miss Shearer set the pace for the others to follow. It's a good fast race to the goal, with Chaney giving one of the finest performanees in his brilliant career."

Bulletin: "Maintaining in every particular the dramatie standard set in his other successes, Lon Chaney, the past master of sereen make-up, has created a new, an impressive character, in Victor Seastrom's new picture, 'The Tower of Lies.' This picture can be taken as a shining example of the progress made in photoplay achievement. It is unquestionably the finest dramatic screen play thus far brought forward this season."

Examiner: "Unusually fine photography, subtle direction and a setting of Arcadian loveliness. make all this a pretty and moving tale. There is pathos, as when Goldy comes back and her mad father, all bedecked with tinsel and medals, hails her as his empress. And retribution, as when the wicked cousin is drowned from the steamboat upon which the girl is sent out by her evil neighbors. The ending is happy, and Seastrom, a genuine artist among directors, proves that he can direct down to the popular taste."

News: "The principal claim for recognition offered by 'The Tower of Lies' is that it is the vehicle for carrying another wonderfully fine character portrayal by Lon Chaney in the role of Jan, the crazed 'emperor,' plus some very excellent direction by Seastrom."

"Black Cyclone"—Pathe, Sun, Omaha

World-Herald: "One of the most interesting films of the year is at the Sun Theatre this week. It is Hal Roach's production 'Blaek Cyclone,' which stars Rex, the handsome black stallion, as the hero. If you don't enjoy the love story of Rex and his Lady, then we miss our guess. It is only after seeing such a produetion that you can appreeiate the art of direction."

Bee: "No audience ever pulled harder for a human hero to win than did the Sun audience for 'Rex' Sunday evening. Two fights are high points in that unique photoplay, 'Black Cyclone.' There are other big moments, though. 'Rex' kills a mountain lion; he drives away a pack of wolves which attacked 'Lady'; and finally he offers his fleet legs to the man who saved him from the quicksands. It is a thrill to watch him run, with one of the two human characters in the picture on his back. The picture almost exudes the scent of the sage brush and the open spaces. It has the appeal of the primitive—the genuineness."

"Your Own Backyard"—Pathe, Keith's, Rochester

Democrat and Herald: "Not the least important offering on Keith's bill is the supplementary screen offering, an 'Our Gang' number, entitled 'Your Own Backyard.' Those who recall the plaintive melody of the name, popnlar a score or more years ago, remember how it tells the story of a mammy's consoling of her piekaninny because of his being neglected by white neighbors. Farina appears for the first time as a boy and gives evidence in this brief screen tale, which is a blending of comedy and melodrama, of unusually promising acting ability."

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Colony, New York

American: "Beg, borrow or steal, but get the price somewhere for a ticket to the Colony Theatre this week to see Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman.' Put off the bridge game, the shopping expedition or whatever you have scheduled but by no means miss getting the best laugh of the year. Seeing 'The Freshman' is as good as a doctor's prescription for it makes you forget everything but the laugh you will surely get out of Harold's adventures at Tate College."

Times: "If laughter really is a panacea for some ills, one might hazard that a host of healthy persons were sent away from the Colony yesterday after regaling themselves in wild and rollicking explosions of mirth over Harold Lloyd's eomie antics in his latest hilarious effusion, 'The Freshman.' Judging from what happened in the packed theatre in the afternoon, when old folks down to youngsters volleyed their hearty approval of the bespectacled comedian, the only possible hindrance to the physical well being of the throngs was an attack of aching sides."

Mirror: "Harold Lloyd charged the Colony yesterday and kieked a goal with his latest college football comedy, 'The Freshman.' Harold makes a nifty freshman. 'The Freshman' is a sereamingly funny eomedy. Jobyna Ralston makes a darling heroine. 'The Freshman' is elean entertainment. Yes, Harold Lloyd triumphs again in his latest eomedy. This is one pieture we go on record as advising everybody to see."

Daily News: "'Your money refunded if you don't laugh.' The Colony would have been perfectly safe in handing out laugh insurance to its audience yesterday—and for all days to come. It's a Harold Lloyd comedy, and to this reviewer's way of thinking his gayest."

Telegraph: "You'll forget that it is a symbol of bad manners to laugh out loud when you view 'The Freshman' at the Colony Theatre. In fact, you'll be lucky to be able to eontrol your laughter at all. Just as soon as you are about over one good roar, something happens on the screen, and you start all over again. Whieh is my subtle manner of informing you that Harold Lloyd's latest picture is just about the funniest film he has ever made."

Herald-Tribune: "It's quite funny enough to suit the most exacting, and, thank heaven, most of its humor is derived from situations and not from throwing things and kicking people about. The picture is well east, well directed, well played and well titled. 'The Freshman' has a fresh theme and is a refreshing picture."

Evening World: "'The Freshman' is Harold Lloyd at a new high level. Any one who has enjoyed other Lloyd pictures will enjoy the offering at the Colony, and 'The Freshman' shows development that should win many new friends for this popular comedian. 'The Freshman' has been cast, staged and photographed in a thoroughly adequate manner."

Graphic: "'The Freshman' is a succession of laughter-producing gags, each funnier than the other. Harold's marked personality is particularly suited to this character, and while he is the college fall guy he is no sap. 'The Freshman' is much more than a fine comedy. It depicts a phase in the life of every individual whether he has been to college or not. You can't afford to miss it."

Post: "Harold Lloyd's newest comedy, 'The Freshman,' which opened at the Colony yesterday, is a very funny movie, and like all really funny movies, it contains, likewise, a distinct element of pathos. Everybody is sure to enjoy 'The Freshman.'"

Sun: "Laughter, loud, hearty laughter, filled the Colony yesterday when Harold Lloyd's new comedy, 'The Freshman'—a strikingly humorous slapstiek affair whieh turned academie ways to burlesque account—made its first appearance hereabouts. 'The Freshman' is funny. Very funny. It is in the finely imagined, humorous details that it is superlative. 'The Freshman' must be seen at all costs."

Journal: "Three cheers and a five-letter word meaning a spotted animal, for Harold Lloyd's best picture to date—'The Freshman,' at the Colony. It's without a doubt one of the funniest, most spontaneous comedies that ever flickered to a happy fade-out. Jobyna Ralston, the little girl at the cigar counter, realizes that they're all making fun of him, and the result is humor and pathos and satire and understanding. It is very deftly directed by Sam Taylor and Fred Newmeyer, and the various gags and situations are joyously effective."

Telegram: "The fun is irresistible. There is a punch value that produces laughs in such rapid succession that even the most captious spectators will count his wait on the sidewalk line-up well worth while. Lloyd is at his best in his characterization of the well-meaning boob."

"Girl Who Wouldn't Work"—Schulberg, Broadway, N. Y.

American: "If you like your drama dished up with a new angle you will find this a film after your own heart. Here is a picture made with as much attention to direction, produetion and action as if it had been widely heralded as the greatest super-special of the year."

World: "An engrossing and eontinuously interesting play. Stark, bold melodrama, swift traveling and nicely charged with suspense, is 'The Girl Who Wouldn't Work.' Barrymore is far too good to miss."

Daily News: "A movie that is both sane and satisfying. There is but one suggestion. This is the one time a picture could be bettered by making it longer. You will like it. It is alive."

Journal: "A delightfully adroit piece of work. It was directed by an unknown, Marcel De Sano, and having seen his first effort, all we can say is long may Marcel wave!"

Post: "Turned into something different by intelligent and individual handling. One of the most interesting offerings of the season. De Sano prefers suggestion of mood and action to printed analyses of every detail."

Mirror: "Splendid entertainment. A youthful director shows that while there may be nothing new in the world there are new ways of doing old things."

Sun: "There is something intriguing about Rin-Tin-Tin. He seems eloquent. I have never tired of seeing him in photoplays. His admirers may go to 'Below The Line' with the assurance that they will be satisfied."

Post: "There is a splendid fight between the police dog and a pack of bloodhounds, which is thrilling, indeed, and many of the scenes are unusually well photographed."

The World: "There is no surpassing the work of this young actor, the brightest of the dog stars. We can recommend 'Below the Line' heartily as a thrilling

Evening World: "The dog is interesting and convincing."

Daily Mirror: "A cracker jack melodrama, packed with thrills. Herman Raymaker has turned out a picture that is a credit to him, while Cameraman John Mescall contributes greatly by splendid photographic effects. The actors are all good but it is Rin-Tin-Tin that makes 'Below The Line' a wow of a melodrama."

American: "A corking melodrama with a dog hero full of pep and zip. I only wish a few of our leading men would steal his 'stuff' and forget the exalted position they occupy. Even if you are a high-brow and scorn the Nick Carters of the 'fillums,' you will adore Rin-Tin-Tin and wish you had him in your family."

Daily News: "For you who admire Rin-Tin-Tin, that noble canine; for you who enjoy a good, brisk melodrama; in fact, for you, and you and you. 'Below The Line' is heartily recommended. The director has a clever way of whipping up your interest."

Morning Telegraph: "The best dog picture that has been made in months. Rin-Tin-Tin, in himself, is enough to put over a film among fans who have dogs, and here he has been given a good story, with great suspense, excellently directed by Herman Raymaker. Rin-Tin-Tin is marvelous; he can always express pathos as well or better than any human actor on the screen."

Graphic: "The dynamic personality of this fourfooted is truly amazing, and the audience watches his adventures with amused interest. If you think you've seen this cleverest of animal actors do everything possible for a canine to accomplish, you will have a few surprises in 'Below The Line.'"

"The Circle"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Brooklyn Eagle: "In the hands of a director less capable than Frank Borzage, W. Somerset Maugham's play might have turned out to be just another dull, unconvincing triangle picture. As it stands, however, it has sufficient originality to hold the interest. The group of players who appear in his tale are billed as an all-star cast, and, for once, that term does not prove a misnomer. Few recent films have had so many performers of equal merit."

Post: "An excellent cast has been assembled for the picture. The various roles are unusually well handled by people who look the parts. Our best advice is—go and see the picture."

For Better Projection

Know True Merits of Incandescent Lamp Projection

Incandescent lamp projection has many substantial advantages that are worthy of serious consideration by every exhibitor. There is no question about its economy. The incandescent lamp consumes only about one half the current required for the average arc light.

DE LUXE THEATRE
HUTCHINSON, KANSAS

June 20, 1925

Mr. W. E. Green,
The Precision Machine Co.,
317 East 34th Street,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Green:

I have now used your Simplex incandescent equipment almost a year and it is a pleasure to report that the results have been very satisfactory. The saving accomplished in lessened electric light bills is a Godsend to exhibitors and is available and applicable to over seventy-five per cent of the theatres. I displaced a 75 ampere arc on a throw of 118 feet and a picture 12 by 16 feet.

On four different occasions in the last five years we tried Mazda in this theatre without satisfactory results until at last we tried your improved type with a special Mazda screen. We were naturally dubious but the results were astounding. Let no one tell you that his house cannot use Mazda without a trial.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) W. D. FULTON.

A letter typical of hundreds

It assures steady pictures. The light source being fixed and constant, screen flicker, shadows, spots, etc. are entirely eliminated by this method of projection. The light is pleasing and easy on the eyes of the audience.

The incandescent lamp improves operating conditions. It gives off no fumes, carbon dust or excessive heat. The projection booth is cleaner and healthier.

MOST THEATRES CAN USE IT.

Incandescent lamp projection is adaptable to any theatre with seating capacity less than 1,000 throw not exceeding 120 feet and picture width not more than 16 ft. That includes about 80% of the theatres in the country.

But for maximum efficiency, incandescent lamp projection requires careful adjustment of the optical system. Because the Simplex incandescent unit is easily adjusted, its popularity is increasing every day. Many exhibitors who despaired of obtaining the advantages of this newer method of projection, found that the Simplex unit overcame every obstacle in the way.

Full information on the merits of incandescent lamp projection and detailed description of the Simplex Incandescent Unit is given in an interesting booklet that will be sent to you on request. It will pay you to have this information.

Mail the attached coupon. It may be a step towards a saving of hundreds of dollars.

WURLITZER
UNIT ORGANS

...the permanent attraction with a REAL Box Office POWER

EXHIBITORS from coast to coast are realizing every day the real box office value of the Wurlitzer Unit Organ. The steadily increasing number of Wurlitzer Unit Organ installations, in both newly constructed and long established houses, is conclusive evidence of this fact. And it is not always the largest of America's finest motion picture palaces that select the Wurlitzer, but the smaller houses as well, for there is Wurlitzer Music for every type of motion picture theatre, whether large or small. The convenient Wurlitzer plan of purchase is a boon to the small exhibitor and bears investigation. Write today and learn how easy it is to acquire this powerful and permanent box office attraction.

ANOTHER MIGHTY WURLITZER

THE accompanying illustrations show the interior and exterior views of the new Albee Theatre, Brooklyn. It is considered to be the finest house in Greater New York. After careful research and extensive investigation of numerous makes of organs, the mighty Wurlitzer has been selected. Thus again a Wurlitzer will furnish the musical accompaniment for the highest type of motion picture productions in another of America's finest motion picture palaces.

TWO UNUSUAL CATALOGS

A copy of the new Wurlitzer Unit Organ catalog is ready to be mailed to you. Write for it today—it's a genuine printing masterpiece. No obligation.

The Wurlitzer Grand Piano is used and highly endorsed by leading exhibitors in the orchestra pits and for feature sets. Write today for catalog.

SOME PUMPKINS!!

When our General Sales Manager returned last week from a trip around the country he said:-

"Funny thing Tom Saxe in Milwaukee, and Frank Buhler in Philadelphia, told me. They both said that they have to pay as much attention to the selection of their news reels as to their features. Then they showed me the week's mail.

"Forty per cent of the letters related to the news reel. I telt you we're getting to be some pumpkins."

Right, Mr. Sales Manager

Based on a lamp cost of $0.06 per hour and a carbon cost of $0.05 per hour

Every dollar you save on operating expenses is a dollar added to the earnings of your theatre. Incandescent lamp projection reduces your operating costs from 25% to 75%. It means an extra earning of hundreds of dollars annually.

The table above shows the saving affected by the incandescent lamp over various types of arc lights. For instance if you are operating a 50 amperage arc by rheostat control 10 hours a day, current rate 8c a K. W. hour, you can save $1,280.00 a year by replacing your arc with a 900 watt Edison MAZDA Incandescent lamp. If your arc control is by motor generator, compensator or rectifier your saving would be $623 per year. If you operate 5 hours a day your saving would be half as much in each case.

Apply these savings to the earnings of your theatre. Consider also the advantages to be gained through better projection and better operating conditions. Is it not a matter of good business to install incandescent lamp projection now?

VOL. XXXII ALBANY, N. Y., AND NEW YORK CITY, OCTOBER 17, 1925 NO. 16

Percentage

WE FEEL like adding our own observations to the much discussed subject of producer-owned theatres; and what is in our mind is best introduced by the following facts:

Said a prominent executive the other day: "Our company (a large producing-distributing concern) just took over a theatre in the State of ————. This theatre had rarely paid over $75.00 for our features—$150.00 occasionally for a longer run. Now we receive over $500.00. Why shouldn't—and why wouldn't—a manufacturer run his own retail outlets when he can sell his wares to the public for five times what the dealer will pay?"

Said another executive—and he is compiling a most interesting and significant set of figures: "By playing on a percentage basis instead of flat rentals our receipts thus far on (a well known star) have been increased 65%. I have a comparative box-office record from a list of towns of 400 to 17,000 population. It shows receipts of about $22,000 in flat rentals on another and just as good picture, as against $39,000 receipts on percentage playing."

* * *

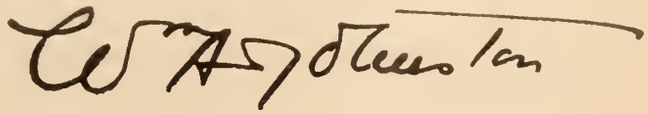
Fully six years ago MOTION PICTURE NEWS came out flat-footedly for percentage playing—in the interests equally of producer, distributor and exhibitor. We didn't advocate any one scheme, especially any then in use. We said it was not an easy matter to work out; that unfairness from both sides would prevail at first, but that gradually a scientific, practical and equitable system would be evolved; that advertising done by the theatre would have to enter the equation; that traveling auditors would be necessary, etc.

We asserted that only through the picture's actual box-office receipts could producer, distributor and exhibitor—on some just sharing basis—be assured, each, of an equitable return.

For this stand we were pretty generally assailed. Not by all exhibitors; some even then saw the wisdom as well as the fairness of the scheme. But a resolution against percentage playing was then a stock procedure in practically every exhibitor convention.

We believed in percentage playing then; we believe in it as sincerely today. And today we are prepared to go further. We believe that, had percentage playing been entered into several years ago, producer-owned theatres today would be a minor factor in the layout of this industry—confined, at least, to the key cities; and possibly not a factor at all. Anyway, producing organizations would not have been tempted or forced into the buying or building of theatres, because they could make five dollars grow where, before, they reaped but one.

* * *



Everybody is talking pretty plainly, these days. And rightly so. There's no use in smoothing over facts that are glaring enough.

The truth of the matter is that a lot of theatres, in a position to force rentals down, have been making unreasonable profits.

There have been two inevitable results of this greed: one is to induce well-financed producing organizations to buy or build theatres; the other is to force a lot of other exhibitors to pay too heavy rentals. Someone has got to pay the freight. Production cost is high. If one exhibitor pays one-half of what he could well afford to pay, some other exhibitor has got to pay twice as much as he should pay.

Note the tax return figures from producing and exhibiting firms, as published in this issue. It is pretty evident that some are making a lot and some are losing a lot. There's little balance. And if you'll dig into the facts it will be found that theatres, not pictures, are the determining factor between big profits and heavy losses.

Percentage playing, where neither partner can gyp the other—and producer and exhibitor are partners, of course—would have leveled profits and losses, stabilized the whole business, and kept each business man in his own business field.

Speaking Editorially

OUR observer on the film firing-line at Hollywood reports a distinct trend away from the program picture and a steady swing to specials—in fact as well as in name. This follows our own analysis of the situation some weeks ago—when we pointed out that the "average" picture no longer has a real place in the progressive march of the motion picture.

* * *

THIS week we are happy to present the views of Joseph M. Schenck on the subject of producer-owned theatres. The interview with Adolph Zukor, printed last week, seems to have aroused unusual interest throughout the trade.

These are divergent views; both are highly significant, and are, we believe, real contributions to the discussion of the industry's major problems.

* * *

FROM Washington comes the news that Representative John Q. Tilson, the majority leader of the House of Representatives, is squarely on record for the repeal of the admission tax on motion pictures. This is a development of unusual significance, and should give great encouragement to exhibitors—as well as to all the other divisions of the industry. The tax up to and including 50c admissions has, of course, already been lifted. Mr. Tilson now urges complete freedom of the screen from this out-of-date impost. His reasons, which are highly gratifying, are set forth in full elsewhere in this issue.

* * *

THINGS are humming at Associated Exhibitors. With the inauguration of the new regime, headed by Oscar Price and P. A. Powers, the company's activity has been greatly increased. Mr. Price has given us an interview on what he hopes to accomplish. It is an elaborate plan; and the company, strongly financed and officered by film men of genuine skill, bids fair, as Mr. Price says, to make a very definite and outstanding place for itself in the industry.

* * *

THAT was a very interesting communication sent by Mr. Hays to the convention of the Michigan M. P. T. O., in which he offers to take up for immediate adjustment any real grievances exhibitors may communicate to him against members of the M. P. P. D. A. A step forward—and a very necessary work. Incidentally, the Michigan organization now includes practically all the exhibitors of the State in its membership—some 475, we believe. It's a real organization.

Vice-President Charles G. Dawes (in the light suit) visits the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios during his stay on the West Coast, and is piloted about the Culver City plant by Harry Rapf and Louis B. Mayer, at the left and right of Mr. Dawes, respectively.

AN authentic report comes to us that J. D. Williams is very active in England. As is well known, he went to the other side some time ago but the nature of his plans, up to the present moment, has not been disclosed. We learn now—from a source fully informed of the situation—that J. D. is in process of building another "First National" along the lines he followed as the author of First National here. Further news may be expected shortly. Meanwhile, this report in itself will be of great interest to the American industry.

Schenck Defines Attitude on Producer-Owned Theatres

U. A. Prefers to Concentrate on Pictures

By William A. Johnston

(Copyright, 1925, by Motion Picture News, Inc.)

"UNITED ARTISTS have never owned theatres, do not now own theatres and expect never to own theatres," said Joseph M. Schenck, in an interview I asked for on the subject of producer-owned theatres.

"That is our policy, that's all. I do not criticize any other company for owning theatres. That is their business—not mine, nor anyone else's, it seems to me.

"I may, however, disagree with them on business grounds; and so I do.

"The buying of theatres, it seems to me, is a necessary result of indiscriminate production. If you make a great many pictures you cannot possibly make them all good. Some of them will be fine attractions and these find their way readily to market. The weak ones—and they are inevitable in bulk production—need theatres to bring back their negative cost. Mind you, I am not criticizing. It is just one business policy against another, that's all. And we mustn't forget to give a lot of credit to those big producing organizations that have given the theatres so many fine and profitable pictures.

"Over-production is a seriously bad factor today. It raises production cost to an alarming point. There's just so much raw material to go around—stories, talent, etc. And naturally, intense production raises the competitive bids.

"I don't believe that block selling is an outgrowth of this bulk production. I think the exhibitor is largely to blame for that. He buys in block; he evidently prefers to.

"He rarely sees the pictures before he buys them. He figures that such and such a service made money for him last year. So he buys in advance, in bulk, sight unseen. If he would reform his buying methods you would see reform in production and distribution.

"But to get back to theatres. We don't own them because we feel we do not need the ownership. That's one reason. Secondly, we don't want the responsibility of ownership. A theatre, you know, is also an attraction, like a picture. You've got to make good theatres just as you should make good pictures. The public pays for the brick and mortar. Now, the making of good theatres demands concentration. We, for our part, prefer to concentrate on pictures.

Joseph M. Schenck, Chairman of the Board of Directors, United Artists Corporation.

"Then there's a third reason. And an important one. It is this, that the theatre map is changing with incredible swiftness today. The theatre you want to own today you may not want tomorrow. Theatres get out of date very fast. Look at Chicago. Compare the theatres there today—the new Uptown, for instance—with the theatres of a few years ago. These changes are happening, will happen, in every big city and in many smaller ones. I look to see a great movement in the building of large and beautiful neighborhood houses. In fact, the future holds forth so much—and I feel I can see it so clearly—that I wouldn't tackle theatres on a large scale. I'd rather make pictures suitable for these present and future houses—whatever they may be.

"But, as I say, that is simply my own business program. I agree with Mr. Zukor, and I think it's fine, wholesome advice to give—that each one of us stick to his own job, do the best he can, and stop worrying about and throwing rocks at the other fellow.

"We are making pictures for the world to see. We hope to continue to. That's a man-sized job, a great responsibility for all of us."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Teddy Criswell, the attractive winner of Universal's "See America First" Beauty Contest in Milwaukee, conducted by the travelling studio unit now on tour.

JACKIE'S CHANGING ROLES

JUST about the busiest person on the Fox lot last week was Jacqueline Logan, playing the leading feminine role in "Wages for Wives." Just before this she had been engaged in making "When the Door Opened," a James Oliver Curwood story, and when this was completely assembled and the work print screened it was found that several scenes would have to be added to complete it.

So for several days Miss Logan's services were in equal demand by Frank Borzage, director of "Wages for Wives," and Reginald Barker, in connection with the other picture. As it finally worked out, she played on one set in the morning and the other in the afternoon during one hectic week, portraying two entirely different roles and living a strange "double life." In one case, she came back thirty miles from one location, only to be sent out fifteen miles to another. Jackie, being a good trouper, came through with flying colors, but admits very frankly that she prefers playing one girl at a time.

The first heroine with a dirty face on record will be Doris Kenyon in "The Unguarded Hour" (First National). Director Lambert Hillyer is about to dish the dirt.

Yola d'Avril, a striking Gallic type, who lends color to the Christie comedies for Educational, caught by the photographer in an Apache pose. (Photo by Horwitz).

WALSH BLOSSOMS OUT

GEORGE WALSH will assume a role far removed from those with which he is usually asociated in the public mind when Chadwick's "The Count of Luxembourg" reaches the screen. No more gym trunks, the sombrero and chaps, or the three ounce gloves —for in the title role of the Franz Lehar operetta, in its celluloid transcription, he discards them all for the frock coat, the boiled shirt, the wing collar and the top hat. Nor is that all, for with them he has acquired a new decoration—a firm, dignified mustache —thus upsetting the screen tradition of long standing that only villians wear whiskers. The Sheik has run his vogue—perhaps it will be the Count that will replace him in the hearts of feminine fans.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce (Countess Morner) who makes her debut as a star in "The Skyrocket," which Associated Exhibitors will release as a special.

Alice Ardell goes through a few rounds of shadow boxing prior to her strenuous work in Blue Ribbon comedies for F. B. O., in which she is leading woman.

A remarkable shot of wild elephants in their native habitat, as photographed by Mr. and Mrs. Lou C. Hutt and shown in their "Wild Beasts of Borneo," an Educational Pictures Special.

Charlotte Bird, a clever and attractive miss engaged for "The Best People," which Sidney Olcott is now producing for Paramount on the West Coast.

Director Joseph Henabery shows Glenn Hunter how to "choke the bat" in a scene for "The Pinch Hitter" (Associated Exhibitors), recently produced.

TOM'S PROUDEST PRESENT

MANY strange gifts come to an actor in the course of his career, and Tom Mix, no exception to the rule, has accumulated as strange an array of trophies as any of them. Most of them mean little or nothing, but Tom acquired one on location for "The Best Bad Man" that he treasures with a great deal of pride.

The company was on location making outdoor sequences for this picture in the Columbia district (not to be confused with the District of Columbia) and Mix noticed a grizzled old miner watching him intently. When lunch time came, and the company knocked off, the old man approached and asked if he was Tom Mix. Tom allowed that he was. Then the prospector paid him the compliment of telling him that while he didn't go to pictures much, he had always fancied the Mix yarns, and had never seen Tom in a bad picture (something a good many folks would agree with). Then he ended up by fumbling about in his faded blue shirt and producing a shiny nugget. Presenting this to Mix, he explained that it was the first he had ever wrested from Mother Earth and that he wanted the Western star to have it. He had carried it for more than fifty years, but the work of Mix had made such an impression on him that he was happy to part with his treasure so that he might know that the nugget was in good hands.

Fay Lanphier, "Miss America," is declared to be a real find as a result of her work in "The American Venus" (Paramount), now in production at the Long Island studio.

PATHE'S MERRY WASSAIL

AN interesting time is looked forward to by the press scribes this week on Friday, when Pathe will entertain in the "vast baronial hall of Bellamy Castle" erected at the Pathe studios in Astoria, Long Island for "The Green Archer." The party is to be held in honor of Allene Ray, the serial star, who appears in the picture.

A special feature of the day will be the coronation of Miss Ray as "queen of serials" with suitable ceremony and jollity. Just who will do the "crowning" is undetermined, since that will be decided at the party by the drawing of lots. The lucky person will then be photographed bestowing the coronet on the charming star, thereby going down to fame in a blaze of reflected glory. We shall doubtless have much more to say about the party and the coronation next week.

Lilyan Tashman, one of the most beautiful of the Follies graduates in pictures, whose current role is in "A Little Bit of Broadway" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer).

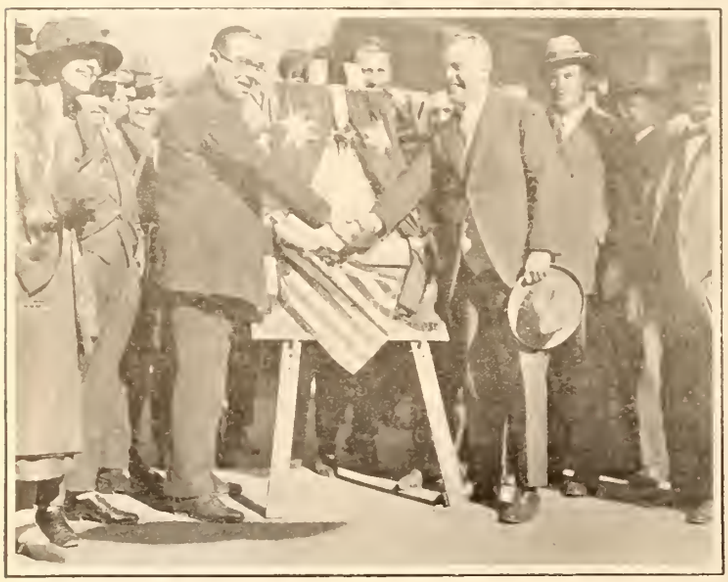
HIGH SPEED SHOOTING

AN unusual record for working under difficult conditions was made recently by James P. Hogan and his "Steel Preferred" company in Pittsburgh. Nearly two hundred scenes were filmed under considerable handicaps in exactly ten working days, right in and around the steel mills. And all of this was done without delaying or interfering in any way with the work of the mills.

These scenes against a background of Bessemer converters and furnaces, with flaming loads of liquid metal passing back and forth on the ladle trains, should provide some thrilling and beautiful shots.

Gilda Gray, Paramount's newest star, who leaves this week for Porto Rico in location for "Aloma of the Seas," her first production. (Photo by Abbe, Paris.)

Madge Bellamy, whose beauty and personality have steadily grown with each picture, has been an attractive feature of several recent Fox releases.



King Vidor directs Lillian Gish in a close-up for "La Boheme" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), while Irving Thalberg, assistant executive, looks on to see how things are progressing.

Greta Garbo, most recent of the imported beauties, who will be seen in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Sweden holds the honor of being her birthplace.

A "DARK ANGEL" TAKES FLIGHT

ATTENDED by a brilliant array of celebrities, "The Dark Angel" was given its professional premiere on the Coast this week at Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, and was warmly received. In addition to those connected with the filming of the picture, notables on hand included: Edwin Carewe, Florence Turner, M. C. Levee, Sid Grauman and mother with party, John Gilbert, Matt Moore, Harry Wilson, Finis Fox, Robert D. McIntyre, Mrs. Wallace Reid, Florence Lawrence and many others.

Clayton P. Sheehan (at the left), Fox home office representative, clasps hands with Stanley S. Clark, Australian managing director, at laying of corner-stone for the new Fox building in Sydney, Australia. More than 250 prominent persons were on hand.

FIFTH AVENUE BEAUTIES

ONE of the high spots in the scenes obtained in New York by Robert Vignola and his company, filming exteriors in New York for the A. H. Sebastian production "Fifth Avenue," before their departure last week, was a group of shots of a corps of models said to rival the beauty brigade of Florenz Ziegfeld.

These models, employed as mannequins by one of New York's most fashionable shops where the clientele is of the most wealthy and aristocratic class, are selected with the utmost care, both as regards beauty and grace, and are paid proportionate salaries.

Naturally, such a shop does not seek publicity in the usual sense, and it was only through bringing considerable personal influence to bear that permission was obtained to photograph the showroom with its aggregation of exceptionally beautiful girls.

Meanwhile, Director Vignola, with his company of players, including Allan Forrest, Marguerite de la Motte and Sally Long, has arrived on the coast, where the cast will be augmented by the addition of Louise Dresser. He will at once plunge into the filming of the interiors to match up with the rich assortment of exterior scenes taken on Fifth avenue, from Washington Square on the south to the new Ghetto on the north.

THOMAS MEIGHAN'S TRAVEL RECORD

THOMAS MEIGHAN has certainly made himself eligible during the past 18 months, for membership in the ranks of confirmed travellers. All told, during the period named, he has knocked off 20,000 miles of touring on location for various pictures. No more does he get the trunk and make-up box unpacked than it becomes necessary to trek away in a new direction, and if he ever decides to expand his activities he might well open the Thomas Meghan Travel Bureau, for he could surely give all inquirers first hand information.

Four of the most lengthy trips have been as follows: To Alberta, Canada, for "The Alaskan," 6,000 miles; to Birmingham, Ala., for "Coming Through," 2,500 miles; to Ocala, Fla., for "Old Home Week," 2,500 miles; and now, to Dublin, Killarney, Cork and other Irish locations for "Irish Luck," 9,000 miles. Together with other and shorter location trips in New York state, the total for the 18 months is in the neighborhood of 21,000 miles.

A feature of Carl Laemmle's trip to Europe this summer was his visit to the Ufa studios, near Berlin, where the Universal chief looked over the latest German improvements; left to right: Carl Laemmle, Jr., Mr. Laemmle, Director Staub, Erich Pommer, General Director of Ufa, H. H. Zebner, secretary to Laemmle, Oscar Einstein and Director Ostermeyer.

UNIVERSAL'S NEW BEAUTIES

WEEK by week, Universal's "See America First" tractor and trailer studio unit has been going about the country from city to city, doing remarkable work. In each city a special film has been made, depicting the leading spots of interest, industries, and the like. C. E. Holah is in charge of the unit, and has gotten a remarkable publicity "break" for the stunt in every city. Now the outfit has arrived in New York, where the procedure is being repeated.

An important feature of the campaign in each city has been a contest to select a local beauty, the winner being awarded a six months' contract at Universal City. Such a contest is now being waged in New York in conjunction with the Daily Mirror, one of the tabloid newspapers. Already, it is said there are some thirty thousand entrants.

An interesting feature of these contests is the fact that the winners are actually being put to work at Universal City and given practical training from the outset. If they have any real ability, they will have every chance to show it.

Vanna Carroll, San Francisco, was cast first in "Sporting Life," and later in two-reel westerns, "The Winking Idol" and a special western feature. Dorothy Gulliver, Salt Lake City, has already played in "The Still Alarm," "The Winking Idol," "Two Blocks

Walter Lang directing a scene for "The Red Kimono" (Davis Distributing Division) in which Mrs. Wallace Reid, Virginia Pearson and Priscilla Bonner appear. The picture is now in production on the West Coast.

Away" and "Strings of Steel." Blanche Fisher, Omaha, has worked in a comedy with Charles Puffy, in "Strings of Steel" and a western feature. Florence Allen, Chicago, is playing in "The Radio Detective." Emmaline (Teddy) Criswell, Milwaukee, has just arrived at Universal City, and is cast in a new western feature. Grace Parent, has appeared in "Two Blocks Away." Irene Franklin, Toledo, and Mabelle Perry, Cleveland, are undergoing preliminary training, and will be cast shortly.

A girl will be selected in New York City within a fortnight. She will first appear in a special film showing the high spots of the city, as have the other winners, after which she will journey to Universal City to take up serious training. This special film will be used for showing around New York.

THE LONE STAR

ONLY one of the significant little asterisks found its way to the list of pictures reviewed this week by the National Board, but if past performance is any criterion this one should be well deserved. The picture in question is Robert J. Flaherty's "Mona," a Samoan idyll, acclaimed a worthy successor to "Nanook of the North." Flaherty spent some two years in getting the precise shots at South Sea life that he wanted, and the few favored individuals that have seen the picture since his return have been tremendously enthusiastic about its beauty and interest.

Carlo Fescia, accordionest, celebrates his seventh anniversary on the Harry Carey set during the filming of "The Man From Red Gulch" (Producers Dist. Corp.). Carey carves the seventh notch, watched by Harriett Hammond, his leading lady.

THE ESKIMO EXPRESS SERVICE

THE exhibitor who has trouble with deliveries of film should ponder the case of the one lone Eskimo exhibitor, served out of Calgary. William Kelly, Paramount branch manager in that city, writes that this man's prints must each be shipped 300 miles by dog train over the frozen wastes. It is a remarkable testimonial to the popularity of the motion picture the world over that it should be in demand 300 miles from a railroad, where such influences penetrate only with the greatest of difficulty.

It's wonderful how stars and their producers get along together. Here are Leon Errol and Sam Rork having it out with cutlass and derringer between scenes of "Clothes Make the Pirate" (First National).

HUDSON DEFENDS TEMPERAMENT

THAT much maligned quality, Temperament, often condemned and the cause of many sleepless nights for producers, has at last found a warm defender in Earl Hudson, head of First National's Eastern production units at New York—who not only defends it but demands it in his players, and gives good reasons why.

"I wouldn't give ten cents for an actor or actress in the motion picture business who has no temperament," declares Hudson. "Temperament and imagination go hand in hand. What good is an actor without imagination? He may do everything the director tells him, but without imagination he will lack that something which the successful actor has. It is hard to describe, but it shows on the screen.

"Don't make the mistake so many people do and think that temperament means just a plain 'temper.' There is a vast difference. I have no use for alleged temperament which is a cloak for temper. Temperament is a special type of mental constitution and development or mixture of characteristics. In other words it is summary of intellectual and emotional tendencies. I figure, and believe I am right, that where there is no temperament there is little if any intellect; and of course, there can be no emotionalism. An actor surely needs emotionalism or he will not get very far.

"An actor with temperament reaches the heights that his untemperamental brother always strives vainly for.

A. M. P. A. AFFAIRS BOOM

UNDER the new administration headed by Glendon Allvine the weekly luncheons of the A. M. P. A. are doing an S. R. O. business, with seats in the hands of speculators, and no prospect of the attraction going into the cut-rates. Each week's program seems better than the one before it, with even more brilliant plans for the future.

Last week's meeting had on its bill the following headliners, a truly all-star aggregation: Phil Baker, comedian of "Artists and Models;" H. A. Snow, explorer and picture producer; Eileen Stanley, phonograph recording artist; James A. O'Gorman, candidate for alderman; and Jackie Taylor and his Rue de la Paix orchestra.

The guest of honor scheduled for this week is Richard Talmadge, the screen star, and several other surprises are promised.

JOHN BARRYMORE IN SPECIAL
Warners To Make "Tavern Knight"

AFTER several weeks of negotiations, Warner Bros. announce they will make a third picture with John Barrymore while that actor is on the coast. The signature of Barrymore was obtained this week out on the Pacific Ocean where he is making "The Sea Beast," and the Warners immediately purchased "The Tavern Knight" by Rafael Sabatini, author of "The Sea Hawk" and "Captain Blood" as the story in which Barrymore will be put out in a big special production.

This does not mean that the Warners are to abandon their plans to present the star in Lord Byron's "Don Juan." On the contrary work on this love story will be started with the completion of "The Sea Beast," which is nearing an end, and will practically be finished so far as Barrymore is concerned when the whaling episodes now being shot are completed.

"The Tavern Knight" is a period picture of the Seventeenth Century in England when Charles II attempted to regain the throne from the parliamentary rule of Oliver Cromwell. Barrymore will play the title role, that of Sir Crispin Ballaird.

This means that Barrymore is not likely to appear on the speaking stage this season, but it does not mean that he is deserting the footlights permanently.

Centralize Paramount Booking

Sam Dembow is Organizing New System; Five Districts Under Theatre Department

THE organization of a centralized booking system to be put into effect by the Paramount Theatre Department is being supervised by Sam Dembow, Jr. Under the plan there will be five district offices which will be in charge of physical operation and a master book will be maintained by the theatre department in New York.

William Saal, recently transferred to the home office from the Missouri theatre, St. Louis, will be in charge of the bookings under Dembow's supervision.

The district offiecs are now being established in New York, Charlotte, Atlanta, Jacksonville and Dallas. District No. 1 will have its headquarters at the home offiees in New York and will be supervised by Saal. Bookings for New York State, Kansas City, St. Louis, Bay City, Denver, Lincoln, Los Angeles, San Francisco and other widely separated points not included in other districts, will be handled from this office.

District No. 2 will have headquarters in Charlotte, where bookings will be handled for Paramount theatres in North and South Carolina. District No. 3 will be established in Atlanta with A. C. Cowles in charge. Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee are in this district. Florida houses will be booked by J. N. Thomas, in charge of District No. 4, with headquarters in Jacksonville. District No. 5 will be located in Dallas and will be under the direction of Miss Bray.

The appointment of Earl L. Crabb as managing director of the Metropolitan, Boston, and the promotion of John J. Friedl to succeed him as district manager in Dallas, have entailed the following promotions in the Paramount theatre organization in Dallas:

Bary Burke succeeds Fredl as manager of the Palace, Dallas; Harry Gould succeeds Burke as manager of the Palace, Fort Worth; Luther Strong succeeds Gould as manager of the Hippodrome, Fort Worth, and Tom Owens, formerly at the Melba, Dallas, goes to the Crystal, Dallas, as manager, succeeding Strong.

Eastman Holdup Averted by Treasurer

A daring attempt by a lone bandit to hold up Frank L. Smith, treasurer of the Eastman theatre, Rochester, in his office on the second floor of the big Kodak Town house last week was frustrated when Smith whipped out a revolver, covered the youthful robber and then chased him down a corridor to the main lobby and into the arms of House Manager John J. O'Neil.

While hundreds of patrons in the theatre watched the final performance, all unaware of the drama being enacted in the lobby, the youthful bandit, fighting for liberty was turned over to the police who had been notified of the attempted holdup and rushed to the scene. Taken to headquarters the youth gave his name as John Henderson, 24 years old, living at a Russell street boarding house.

Led Successful Fight for Open Sundays in Logan

R. E. Brown of the Pastime theatre, Logan, Ia., is given credit for the open Sunday victory there. Though new in the picture business he went to merchants and showed them how the closed Sunday was driving away business and hurting the town. Then he led them in a campaign for petition signatures. The victory was won only after several fines had been paid.

"Two Thirty Three" Club Celebrates

The Two Thirty Three Club of Hollywood, composed of a restricted membership of 1,233 theatrical masons celebrated its first anniversary last week with a fourteen act vaudeville show made up of talent exclusively from the club roster. It was announced that the club would start work within a few months on a twelve story building, which will be used for headquarters.

Edwards Davis, character actor and former president of the N. V. A. of North America and the Green Room Club in New York is president of the club. Milton Sills, Frank Lloyd and Don Meaney are vice-presidents, Raymond McKee and Adam Hull Shirk, secretaries with Fred Douglas, recording clerk and Samuel Kress, treasurer. The board of directors comprises George Sargent, secretary of the Motion Picture Directors Association, chairman; John Ince, Lew Gill, Joseph Goldsmith, Jr., Raymond Hatton, Edward V. Rowland, Darwin S. Karr, George Davies, Parry Vekroff, Joseph Mury, Joseph Kilgour, Philip Hunt and J. L. Johnston. The membership committee comprises Wilfred North, chairman; Mitchell Lewis, Herbert Prior, William H. Turner and David Thompson.

Bandits Take Receipts of St. Louis Maffitt

Two armed bandits held up the Maffitt theatre, 2812 North Vandeventer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., shortly before midnight Sunday, October 4th, escaping with Saturday and Sunday receipts, totaling $530.70.

The Maffitt is one of the string of theatres owned by the St. Louis Amusement Company.

Joseph Greene, manager; Miss Grace Hilliker, cashier, and Walter Bunte, usher, were about to depart from the showhouse when the two bandits entered. While one guarded Bunte and Miss Hilliker in the lobby the other robber forced Greene to enter the office and open the safe.

Mayer Attends Convention of Fire Chiefs

Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will attend the convention of International Fire Chiefs being held this week at Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Mayer will consult with the officials of the organization and the fire chiefs regarding the picture which M-G-M will make in behalf of fire prevention.

August Film Exports Over Million Mark

MOVING picture exports again exceeded the million-dollar mark in August, figures just compiled by the Department of Commerce show. The shipments of positive film totaled 20,368,923 feet, valued at $572,782; negatives, 1,760,117 feet, valued at $260,475; and raw stock, 9,577,243 feet, valued at $170.816.

Approximately a third of the total exports went to the United Kingdom, whose imports included 6.705.925 feet of raw stock, valued at $94,446; 1,322,979 feet of negatives, valued at $190,515, and 1.540.129 feet of positives, valued at $49.038. Exports to Canada totaled $68,000, and to France $69,000.

House Republican Leader For Admission Tax Repeal

Tilson Advocates Complete Removal of Levy

Washington, D. C., Oct. 7
Special to Motion Picture News
By Clarence W. Linz

"THE tax on theatre admissions should go," declared Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican Leader of the House, in an interview with the Washington correspondent of Motion Picture News. "This is a tax on a very important means of education and relaxation and should not be continued in effect after the enactment of the forthcoming revenue revision bill."

Mr. Tilson insisted that it should be clearly understood that he voiced his own sentiments only, and that he did not undertake to speak for anyone else. However, there is known to be a great deal of sentiment in favor of this proposal and the repeal of these taxes is likely to become an accomplished fact.

Representatives of the theatrical and moving picture industries will be given an opportunity to present their plea for removal of the admission tax either on October 24 or 26 when the House ways and means committee takes up the question of eliminating the so-called "nuisance taxes."

The committee has assigned ten days to hearings on the question of tax revision.

The Washington Bureau of Motion Picture News has received several inquiries of late as to what is likely to happen to the move to materially reduce the income taxes. There has been some talk of a maximum surtax rate of 15 per cent, but it is not believed that this can be procured, although it is quite likely that a 20 per cent rate will be finally agreed to.

To reduce the surtax maximum to 15 per cent would bring about a great dip in the income tax receipts to the Government, it is pointed out by leaders in Congress, and might be dangerous. On the other hand, if a 20 per cent rate proves satisfactory there will be plenty of opportunity later to make a further reduction. This latter proposal would represent a cut in the tax burden now placed upon the American people of about $100,000,000, and a like amount will be absorbed in the reduction of the present normal taxes from 2, 4 and 6 per cent, to 1, 3 and 5 per cent, respectively.

The Treasury Department is said to be opposed to any reduction in the corporate income tax rate at this time, although there is some sentiment in Washington for some relief to those corporations whose income is not in excess of $50,000 a year. The capital stock tax also will be retained.

Floor Leader Tilson expressed the belief that the permanent peace time maximum surtax rate should not exceed 15 per cent, adding that with such a rate in force the increase in the total amount of incomes returned for taxation will alone soon make good the initial loss of revenue, to say nothing of the tremendous indirect effect.

Analysis of Tax Returns

Nearly half of the corporations engaged in amusement enterprises in 1923 failed to show any net income, according to an analysis of the income tax returns for that year just issued by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

The report shows 5,446 corporations engaged in such enterprises, 2,191 of which had no net income, but reported losses aggregating $19,951,135. The 3,255 corporations showing net income reported a total of $56,659,551, on which profits and income taxes to the total of $6,233,548 were paid. These corporations deducted $3,169,461 from their net income for that year on account of losses suffered in prior years.

The detailed analysis shows 281 corporations engaged in the production of moving pictures in 1923, of which 176 reported no income, having losses aggregating $4,803,665. The 105 corporations showing net income reported $10,058,562, on which, after deducting $843,883 as losses in prior years, taxes aggregating $1,141,519 were paid.

Four hundred and fifty-two corporations had theatres or theatrical enterprises, 169 reporting no net income and a loss of $1,919,126, and 283 reporting net income of $11,239,831, deducting $485,532 as losses in prior years, and paying taxes of $1,307,749.

Of 1,712 corporations engaged in moving pictures, 517 reported no net income, having deficits aggregating $3,492,285, and 1,195 reported net income aggregating $16,208,944, deducting $887,998 as losses in prior years and paying taxes of $1,725,640.

Kansas and Missouri Fear Baker Tax Plan

FEARING the disastrous result of the film tax in Connecticut may be duplicated in Missouri and subsequently in Kansas, the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri is launching a thorough investigation of the plan of Governor Baker to submit an amendment to the Missouri constitution calling for a 5 to 10 per cent levy on all amusement and luxuries.

"Missouri exhibitors are not to be caught asleep in this proposed action," said C. E. Cook, business manager of the M. P. T. O. K.-M. "We always have co-operated in constructive legislation and we are capable of fighting what we believe is unjust legislation just as hard as we have aided the government in various ways."

Tacoma Settles Its Troubles With Musicians

Reports were received this week from Tacoma to the effect that the differences between the management of the Pantages Theatre and the musicians' union had been settled, and the house would return to a combined vaudeville and motion picture program policy next week.

Demands made by the musicians recently were declared to be so exorbitant that vaudeville programs were discontinued, and motion pictures, with only organ accompaniments held sway. The basis of settlement of the differences was not stated, but it was generally understood to favor the theatre management.

Sunday Shows Issue Stirs Urbana, Ill.

The question of legality and morality of Sunday picture shows has divided Urbana, Ill., into two camps and the issue is being hotly contested between them. Students of Illinois University cheer the managements of the town's two theatres for defying the Sunday closing ordinance while the Puritan element clamors for a tight lid on the town. G. T. Freeman and E. E. Alger, the managers, declare they will fight the ordinance to the highest court. Merchants of the town have taken sides with the theatre owners and have signed a petition asking for the repeal of the Sunday Closing Ordinance.

Mrs. Moffett Secretary of Cleveland Film Board

Mrs. Georgia Moffett has been appointed secretary of the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland by C. C. Pettijohn. Mrs. Moffett has previously been engaged in field work for the national film board organization. She succeeds Howard Christman, who has resigned to become affiliated with the Hays organization in New York.

Maurice Sapier, manager of the Cleveland Exchange for United Artists, has been chosen president of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade. Ward Scott, Fox exchange manager, is vice president.

TRADE PAPER AUDIT

Rothstein Heads A. M. P. A. Committee

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by President Glendon Allvine of the appointment by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers of the following Space Buyers Audit Committee of Trade Papers and Other Amusement Mediums:

Nat Rothstein, chairman; Vivian Moses, P. A. Parsons, A. M. Botsford, Bruce Gallup, A. L. Selig, Gordon White, J. M. Solomon, Russell Holman, John C. Flinn and Paul Gulick.

The questionnaire decided upon to be sent to the publishers follows:

What is your total circulation?

What is your total exhibitor paid circulation?

How many copies do you deliver to others than bonafide exhibitors?

(a) To advertising departments of film companies.

(b) To publicity men or managers.

(c) To film executives' offices.

(d) To moving picture directors.

(e) To stars and other people in or out of the trade.

*Give classification and state exact number of copies absorbed.

What is your news stand sale if any?

How many copies do you send to Foreign counties?

Give list of countries and number of copies sent to each.

How can you prove to the satisfaction of space buyers that your paid exhibitor subscribers are actually exhibitor subscribers who pay for your paper?

How many bulk circuit subscriptions have you?

Give name of circuit and list of theatres and towns.

Canada Fights Copyright Law

Organized Exhibitors and Performing Right Society Debate Music Royalties

THE decks are being cleared in Canada for an action over the question of copyright royalties for music played in the moving picture halls, with the organized exhibitors on one side and the Performing Right Society of London, England, on the other. The music copyright question has been a live issue in the Dominion since last winter when E. R. E. Chevrier, Federal member for Ottawa, introduced amendments to the Canadian Copyright Acts in the Canadian House of Commons, Ottawa, to provide for the payment of royalties on music played by theatre orchestras. The changes were strenuously opposed by the Canadian M. P. T. O. and the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada with the result that the amendments died a natural death in the committee stage in the Parliamentary proceedings at Ottawa.

There has been a new development, however, which has just been indicated by a notice of incorporation by the Secretary of State at Ottawa of the establishment of the Canadian Performing Right Society, Limited, with headquarters at Toronto, under a Canadian Federal charter, the capital stock being 10,000 shares of no nominal or par value. The Canadian company is a branch of the Performing Right Society of London, England, which had previously organized a branch in South Africa and which had also invited the Society of Composers and Authors in the United States to enter into a working agreement for mutual interests. It has been intimated that the society controls the copyright privileges on many musical works which are commonly played in moving picture houses and on which fees will have to be paid, it is stated, when the society gets going.

A conference was held recently at Toronto, however, to combat the Performing Right Society and announcement was made after this conference that the result would have a very considerable effect upon the musical copyright situation in the Dominion. Those attending the Toronto conference include President John A. Cooper of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada; John Arthur, musical supervisor of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto; Prof. Watson Kirkconnel of Winnipeg, secretary of the Canadian Society of Authors and Composers; Mrs. G. V. Thompson of Toronto, representing the Musical Writers and Composers Association.

Whitehurst Theatres to Change Hands

IT was learned on excellent authority this week that the important Whitehurst chain of theatres in Baltimore will shortly change hands and will pass into the control of one of the big factors in the industry.

The deal will be settled probably within a week. The Whitehurst circuit includes the Garden, New, Parkway and Century.

While the name of the prospective new owner could not be learned, it is known that several of the large film concerns have been active in bidding for the circuit.

In and Out of Town

MAJOR H. C. S. Thomson, president and managing director of Film Booking Offices, will leave on October 13th for a two months' trip abroad.

RALPH W. LIKE, president of the Cinematograph Laboratories of Hollywood, is in town this week.

HENRI ELLMAN, vice-president of the Capitol Film Exchanges in Chicago, is here on a visit with B. P. Schulberg in the interest of distribution.

E. OSWALD BROOKS, serial sales manager of Pathe Exchanges, Inc. left New York last Sunday for an extensive tour of the key cities.

RONALD COLMAN arrived in town this week to attend the premier of the Samuel Goldwyn production, "The Dark Angel."

DAVID R. HOCHREICH, president and general manager and Max Goosman, assistant general manager of Vital Exchanges, have returned to New York after a tour of the East and Middle West.

WILLIAM VOGEL, president of the foreign branch of Producers Distributing Corporation, sailed for Europe on the Berengaria, October 7th.

RALPH INCE arrived in town this week from the West Coast.

British Film Exports and Imports Show Increase

Exports of British motion picture films during the first six months of 1925 totaled 54,894,482 feet, as compared with 27,598,472 feet in the corresponding period of 1924, it is declared in a report just received at the Department of Commerce from the American consulate in London.

The greater part of these exports—40,096,413 feet—were unexposed film, while shipments of positives amounted to 14,545,347 feet and the small balance was negative film.

Imports during the six-month period showed a great increase over the preceding year as a result of the announcement that the McKenna duties on British imports of films would be reimposed on July 1, 1925. The total imports for the first six months of this year were 154,742,426 feet, against 48,898,631 feet in the same period of 1924, when imports were withheld pending the removal of the duties in August, 1924.

Of the imports this year 112,070,968 feet were unexposed film, 36,051,101 feet positive film and 6,620,357 feet negative film.

Yeggs Get Jefferson City House Receipts

Yeggmen on Sunday night, October 4, robbed the safe of the Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Mo., getting the Saturday and Sunday receipts totaling $1,000. It was the first safe blowing job in the history of the Missouri capital city.

The yeggs broke a rear window then carried the safe from the office to the lower floor of the theatre auditorium, where the combination was knocked off and the safe rifled. William H. Mueller owns the Jefferson.

Production Trend Is Toward Bigger Features

Indications on Coast of Let-Down in Program Films

Belle Bennett as she appears in "Stella Dallas," (Samuel Goldwyn-United Artists.)

Douglas Fairbanks in Costume for "The Black Pirate," (United Artists.)

John Gilbert, in "The Big Parade" (M-G-M).

Lillian Gish as she will appear in "La Boheme," (M-G-M).

By Edwin Schallert, Los Angeles Times

(Editor's Note:—This is the eighth of a regular series of articles by the Editor of the Los Angeles Times Pre-View. Mr. Schallert writes exclusively for MOTION PICTURE NEWS in the trade field.)

THERE is still a strong concentration of interest in Hollywood in the bigger features, with some indications of a let-down of activity in the smaller films. It portends, I believe, some scepticism regarding the worth of the routine program film during the ensuing months. Overproduction gives signs of seriously affecting the status of this smaller product — a fact which has already been called to the attention of Motion Picture News readers.

More than ever it would appear, a picture must have some sound reason for its existence to become a good salable commodity. It does not market itself in an overcrowded market simply because it is a picture.

Those companies that have adhered rather relentlessly to the policy of getting out their releases to conform with a schedule are proceeding more cautiously than heretofore, awaiting developments and observing what will be the eventual outcome for the big productions.

This slowing-down process is interesting since it has not brought on any burden of real dullness. The feeling is that the late fall and winter will see a consistent if not a sweeping activity. And even though the number of cameras at work may be reduced, those that are on the job will crank busily enough, because there are so many larger productions under way or right in the offing.

Notable, of course, in their elaborate character are the scenes now being completed of the "Ben Hur" Circus Maximus—a feature in themselves; Douglas Fairbanks's "The Black Pirate"; John Barrymore's starring feature, "Don Juan," just about to start, as well as "La Boheme," which is turning out much more spectacular than might be anticipated; and the various starring films of Corinne Griffith, Colleen Moore, Pola Negri, and others.

Altogether, it is hardly a condition over which one may raise complaint, for the prominence of the big production has all the earmarks of a new phase of health in the industry, which is the most desirable thing of all.

I must mention that the color photography in "The Black Pirate," of which I spoke in my last article, has now been demonstrated as most amazing. It is color that is never going to bother or distract an audience if one may judge from the scenes already taken. It is most sensational in not giving the effect of color, so much as in adding stereoscopic depth to the screen. One's feeling on seeing it is that the screen had been suddenly enlarged toward the back —if I make myself clear—and that one is looking across rather than at a panorama. If anything, the color tones in which the picture is being made are more restful to the eye than the so-called black and white.

In my last article I devoted more space to advance glimpses of a new picture than to actual studio developments, but there was striking reason in the case of "The Big Parade," and again I find, after viewing "Stella Dallas" at a preview in Pasadena, that a single completed work of the studios assumes an outstanding position among the recent developments here.

For all that each season brings a considerable quota of films based on the ever dependable theme of mother-love, only a few of the features that have used it as the basis for their attraction, really stand out in the memory.

Recollections turn most readily to "Over the Hill" and "Madame X," with "The Old Nest" sharing in their tremendous popularity.

The majority of the others are for the most part not so brilliantly remembered. Too much similarity has been the fault of many of them—too much slobber of sentiment and a consequent lack of sincerity has destroyed the effectiveness of the others.

Actually, the mother picture has gone somewhat out of fashion. There have been only a very few examples in the past season or two that are worth remarking—"My Son," "So Big" and more recently "The Goose Woman."

There is, I believe, at this time, therefore, a genuine and logical place for a great mother-love picture, one that possesses a searching pathos and heart interest, and it is for this reason that I am inclined to predict big things for "Stella Dallas."

This production, made by Samuel Goldwyn, with Henry King as director, and Frances Marion as scenarioist, is, to my mind, a singularly splendid treatment of a justly outstanding modern novel. It is a story absolutely free from sugar-sweetness. It has the quality of tear-evoking drama, a pathos and a penetrating heart interest that give promise of reaching every kind of public.

MILTON SILLS AN AUTHOR

Writes "Men Of Steel," His New Vehicle

MILTON SILLS is the author of the drama of the steel industry to be produced by First National under the title "Men of Steel" with Sills as the star, it was announced this week by Earl Hudson, supervisor of First National's eastern production units. This picture will be one of the First National "specials" for the current year.

When the company announced that a picture dealing with the steel industry was to be produced, Sills started to work on his scenario, which he turned over to Hudson upon its completion and which was accepted for production. The work will include scenes to be filmed at the steel mills at Gary, Indiana, on the Mesaba iron range of Minnesota and at the ore docks in the Great Lakes. The author—star of "Men of Steel" is now collaborating with John Fish Goodrich, scenarist on the preparation of the continuity.

The audience that left the theatre the evening of the preliminary showing recently in Pasadena, was an audience of glistening eyes and thoughtful demeanor, rather than one of casual laughing conversation. There were ample evidences that tears had been shed, particularly by the women who attended the preview. There were many who mentioned on leaving—"Why, I know a woman just like that woman in the picture." Despite the fact that "Stella Dallas" brought a deeply serious reaction, I venture that there was not a single one that would not have advised every friend and acquaintance to go and view it at the very first opportunity.

If, as a matter of fact, entertainment occasionally may mean something that will touch generously the heart, rather than merely amuse, then "Stella Dallas" has that quality in a way that will result in its being hailed far and wide as one of the year's sensations.

The story from which it was adapted has been widely read, and needs no detailed second telling. The book has been followed very faithfully right from the courtship between Stephen and Stella Dallas, to the very end where the mother, an outcast, beholds through a window and unrelenting iron fence bars the marriage of her daughter Laurel, from whom she has so willingly separated herself for the sake of the girl's future.

Some of the finest scenes in this production are those which build up to this separation.

Really, in this picture more pathos is secured through smiles than tears of the leading characters. The situation that would be termed good for a laugh in another feature, has been transformed into something heart-moving in this. The moment when, in the wash room of a railroad station, Stella Dallas weeps over the departure of her daughter until the mascara runs down from her eyes has every element to cause mirth, yet it is one of the most enriously pitiful that has ever been filmed.

Some audience members, strongly ruled by sentiment may, of course, not agree with the idea of the mother giving up her daughter to her divorced husband in the way that Stella Dallas does, and certainly the character of Stephen Dallas lacks something of bigness both in the book and in the picture, but there is not a single person who will not appreciate the terrible and tragic dilemma in which the mother found herself in the effort to do the best for the future of her child.

The performance by Belle Bennett in the title part is tremendous. It will be acclaimed as one of the great acting triumphs of the year.

Lois Moran as the child Laurel is a happy discovery—a girl who lives up fascinatingly to the term unsophisticated. She seems indeed to represent youthful refinement itself. A wise choice was made in putting the sympathetic Ronald Colman in the somewhat unsympathetic part of Stephen Dallas, and Alice Joyce's grace and dignity are very acceptable as Mrs. Morrison. Young Douglas Fairbanks is the fiance of Laurel, while Jean Hersholt gives a broad but clever portrayal of Ed Munn, the uncouth riding master whom Stella marries when he is a wreck from drink, to force her daughter to leave her.

Receiver Asked for Ohio Amusement Company

Messrs. Schumann, Fine and Kramer have asked that a receiver be appointed for the Ohio Amusement Company, for the purpose of dissolving the company. The Ohio Amusement Company owns and operates one of the largest motion picture circuits of Cleveland. All of its theatres are first run neighborhood houses. They include the Dennison Square, Five Points, Jewel, Savoy, U-No, Yale, Capitol, Knickerbocker, Photoplay and Lakewood and Garden theatres. Beside Schumann, Fine and Kramer, founders of the firm, Leo Keller, Art Keller and John Kalafat are active members. The Ohio Amusement Company, however, has purchased the stock owned by John Kalafat, so his activity in the company automatically ceases when he has been paid out. Failure to agree on business policies is said to be the reason for the present action, calling for a receivership and dissolution of the firm.

Catholic Priest Operates Schroon Lake House

A Catholic priest in the person of Father Blais, of Schroon Lake, N. Y., is now included in the ranks of the exhibitors of New York state. He has taken over the Strand theatre in Schroon Lake, previously operated by Arthur Richardson, who has gone to Florida.

Father Blais tried out being an exhibitor during the summer, and was so successful that he has leased the theatre, a house of 350 seats, and will run it in the interests of the church over which he presides.

Ten Companies Chartered in New York State

Ten companies obtained charters from the secretary of state during the past week for the purpose of engaging in the motion picture business in New York state. This number is somewhat above the weekly average that has prevailed for the past month or so.

The companies incorporated during the week included the Rawig Amusement Corporation, capitalized at $10,000, with N. Ravitz, M. Gordon, of New York City; Samuel Witlin, Brooklyn; Deeansee Theatre Co., Inc., $11,000, Samuel and Anita Crystal, New York; Abraham Deitch, Middletown, Conn.; Playhouse at the Cross Streams, Inc., Hopewell Junction, $25,000; Marguerite Robertson, V. I. Boyer, Hopewell Junction; A. D. VanBuren, New York City.

Appearances Producing Corporation, $30,000, L. W. Sagar, Brooklyn; H. S. Wilkinson, Sonoma, Calif.; Fergus Wilkinson, Santa Rosa, Calif.; Prelude, Inc., $10,000, H. Ascher, R. Sattler, A. Medoff, New York City, the capitalization of the following not being specified: Bellcress Amusement Corporation, H. Frieder, S. Price, F. J. Farrell, New York City; Albany Regent Theatre Corporation, Buffalo, Moe Mark, White Plains; E. B. Mark, New York; M. Sharaf, Boston, Mass.

Labor Troubles Settled in Montreal

The labor situation has been straightened out in Montreal, Quebec. The projection machine operators decided a short time ago to accept last year's wage scale of $40 and $45 per week but the stage hands held out for something different.

B. M. Garfield, secretary of the Montreal Theatre Managers Association and manager of the Rialto Theatre himself, has announced that a compromise has been effected with the stage employees in agreeing upon a five per cent increase in wages for 1925-26. The union had asked for a 10 per cent raise.

C. E. Williams Reelected by Nebraska M. P. T. O.

MOTION PICTURE THEATRE Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa re-elected C. E. Williams to serve a third term as president of the organization at their annual convention held in Omaha last week. The convention drew the largest attendance of any ever held by the organization.

Others re-elected were H. F. Kennedy, vice president and George H. McCardle, treasure. Miss Esther Anderson was elected secretary. Members of the exetive committee re-elected are the following: H. F. Kennedy, Baline Cook, Sam Epstein, H. A. Larson, W. H. Creal, A. Burrus, E. E. Gailey, J. E. Schoonover, R. B. Thomas, Wm. Hawley, W. H. Ostenburgh, R. W. Small, Lou Heal, Chas. Prokop, W. A. Bowker, P. A. Schlumberger, Max Drefke, B. B. Holdridge.

Hays Offers Aid to Exhibitors

Message to Michigan Convention States His Willingness to Help Adjust All Grievances and Complaints

IN his first direct message to the exhibitors of the country, Will H. Hays has expressed his willingness to aid any exhibitor or distributor who is a member of the Hays' organization. This statement was made in a speech by Jerome Beatty, delivered at the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Michigan, which opened Tuesday at the Pantlind hotel, Grand Rapids, with two hundred and fifty exhibitors present, representing nearly four hundred theatre owners. The memo from Mr. Hays, read by Mr. Beatty, included the following:

"You may further say for me to the exhibitors that this determination on our part to do everything possible for them and to promote to the fullest extent the plan of cooperation, goes to the extent of assuring them that if any exhibitor in Michigan or anywhere in the country has a real grievance against any of the producers or distributors who are members of this association and will call my attention to such grievance, that the good offices of the association will be immediately and sympathetically used to bring about such conferences and consideration.....that a fair solution may be quickly sought."

The first high spot of the Tuesday session came in the report of Glen A. Cross, of Battle Creek, the retiring president, when in his farewell address he advised Michigan to cease pioneering for national exhibitor organization and not to spend any more of its time and money until new interests took a guiding hand in the so-called national body. The cheers that greeted the statement was evidence that such a policy met with the hearty approval of the Michigan exhibitors.

H. M. Richey, Detroit.

Glenn Cross, Battle Creek.

In the report of General Manager Richey he pointed out that regardless of how big the circuits got in Michigan the time would never come when these circuits didn't need an organization and didn't need the little fellows, too, especially when it came to legislation. He warned exhibitors of Michigan to retain the interest in their organization pending the necessity of again putting the organization machinery in the field. He stated that the Connecticut situation was an example of the sort of thing they must be constantly on guard against.

The financial report as read by John E Niebes, treasurer, showed that there are now 475 theatres represented in the organization and that there had been added twelve thousand dollars to the surplus during the year, despite the fact that dues have been cut fifty per cent. The surplus of the organization now lacks only a few dollars of fifty thousand dollars, which is invested in bonds and which bring in dividends of nearly three thousand dollars a year. The report was enthusiastically accepted.

Tuesday afternoon John Lovett of the Michigan Manufacturers association addressed the convention, as did Martin J. Quigley of the Exhibitors Herald.

The convention was preceded by a golf tournament for the beautiful silver cup offered by Manager Richey, which resulted in a tie between Harold Frank of Jackson and C. J. Kendrick of Port Huron. This will be played off later. A board of directors' dinner was held Monday night, and on Tuesday the entertainment features included a luncheon for the ladies at the Highlands Golf club, given by the American Seating company, a theatre party in the afternoon and the banquet at six thirty.

The banquet was a colorful affair attended by three hundred and fifty, with addresses by James C. Ritter, the daddy of Michigan organization; Martin J. Quigley, John Lovett, Lieut. Governor Welch, Jerome Beatty of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, bringing a message

Laemmle To Produce In England

Universal Chief, Home From Abroad, Announces Extensions of Foreign Activities in Several Directions

CARL LAEMMLE, president of Universal, returned from Europe last week, accompanied by his children, Miss Rosabelle and Carl, Jr., and his secretary, Harry H. Zehner and Julius Bernheim, formerly director general of Universal City.

Mr. Laemmle's activities were widespread during the three months he was abroad. He made several appointments that will pave the way for greater Universal activities on the other side. He appointed Max Schach, well known German producer, distributor and theatre owner, to take charge of Universal activities in Germany. Schach will succeed Henry H. Heningson, who returned a few days ago and will have an executive position at Universal City.

Mr. Laemmle also opened a distributing organization in Poland in charge of Sam Burstein. Charles L. Brookheim, formerly Universal representative in Spain, succeeds I. Blofson as manager of the Paris office, and A. Torres succeeds Brookheim in Spain.

While in Germany President Laemmle became acquainted with a new double exposing process which prompted him to produce "Gulliver's Travels." With this invention he feels that the mechanical difficulties required in the production of the picture will be easily met.

Just prior to his sailing for New York, Laemmle was the luncheon guest of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in London and he announced his acceptance of their invitation to produce pictures in England, using as far as possible the English backgrounds. English actors, experts and directors. Several American actors, whose names are well known, will also be sent to England to appear in the pictures.

In his speech to the C. E. A., Mr. Laemmle said in part: "I am going to produce pictures here for the sole and simple reason that I consider it good business. I may bring American stars over here, what of it? If I do, it will be solely because I consider it good business. I may bring American technical men for the same reason. But if I can find what I want right here, it would be poor business not to use them, wouldn't it? I am not going to employ any of the stuff you call eye wash. I am not pretending that I can make better pictures in England than English producers make. I am not coming here to teach you anything.

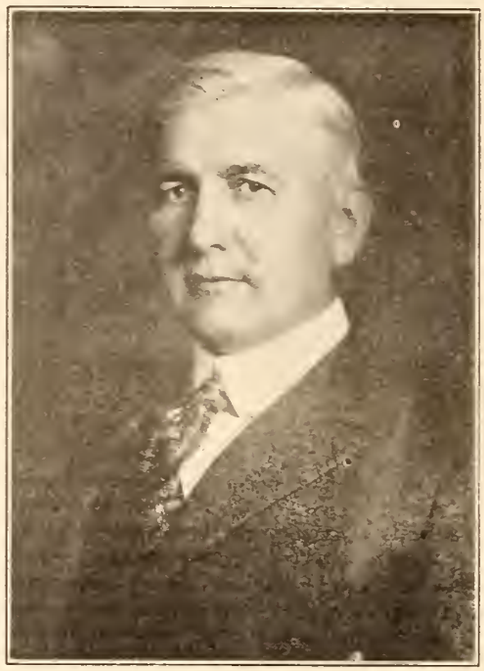
"I'm not here to reform anything, not even the climate. I am not here to perform miracles. I am not here to pretend to be anything I am not. I have too much respect for your hard common sense as well as your sense of humor to make any mistake about why American producers as a whole have been more successful than English producers as a whole. I know as well as you do that the war gave us a tremendous jump on you and I know as well as you do that we've got to fight and fight hard to keep you from giving us a licking.

"Your directors are just as brainy as ours. Your technical people are just as skilled. Your actors are just as able. Outside of the fact that the war crippled your production work fearfully while we went madly about our business, I think we've got you beaten in only one respect and that is our willingness to gamble on results. You always speak of Yankees as synonomous with money. You've got just as much money for picture producing as we have, if you'll go ahead and gamble with it as we do. Don't imagine we pick money off the trees. I've seen the occasion many a time, when I put the last dollar of cash and the best dollar of credit I could dig up into one season's pictures. I've been up against it just as hard and as often as you have. So I know exactly how you have been feeling for a long time.

"There's just one idea I want to pass along to you in closing. If I can make pictures in England which will sell all over the world, you can do it, too. No matter how I do it, if it helps to show you the way, then my efforts here will have been helpful."

Price Discusses Associated's Plans

Declares Company, Strongly Financed, Will Make Definite Plans for Itself in Industry



THERE is an atmosphere of mystery and suppressed excitement about the Associated Exhibitors' offices these days. Encounter Jack Woody and you get the impression of repressed enthusiasm. Then just as he is about to tell you an item of news, he catches himself, and says, "Well, I'd better wait awhile." Speak to J. A. Gove, Sales Manager, and you get the same impression; drop in on Bob Welsh's office and once more that feeling, "We've got big things to tell you, but we are biding our time."

So we determined to beard Oscar Price in his den and, by means of an interview for MOTION PICTURE NEWS, get an advance hint of Associated Exhibitors' plans. Those plans are big, there seemed no doubt of it; and after a leisurely talk with the calm, business-like, unaffected president of the organization we feel doubly certain of it.

"Of course our plans are big," said Mr. Price in response to our opening question. "If you will look over the names on the new Associated Exhibitors Board of Directors you will readily agree that they are not the sort of men to embark on so futile a mission as the running of 'just another picture company.' Associated isn't going to sit on the fence or just drift along with the current. Associated is going to have a definite personality, a definite mission, a definite place in this business, and I can tell you right here and now it is going to be a big place.

"There is a real and concrete need for the organization that the new Associated is going to be. The battle lines in this industry are growing tighter every day. The independent exhibitor's decision is coming closer to him every day. But speeches about independence aren't going to help him a bit. Mere shouting about independence isn't going to keep him on the right side of the ledger nor keep him in business. The natural desire on his part to line up with independents isn't going to be translated into action unless independents do their part by him.

"Pictures are the answer. Not merely good pictures, but pictures that rank in entertainment values with any that are offered to him from whatever source. Pictures that also offer the box office pull that he expects and needs. Then back those pictures up with service that is efficient and truly cooperative.

Oscar A. Price, President of Associated Exhibitors.

"It's a simple calculation. You can't give the independent no choice but the choice of two evils. On the one hand he knows that support of the tendencies, with their growing strength and over-weening ambition is just hastening his doom. On the other hand he knows that the playing of mediocre or average pictures today will bring that doom just as certainly.

"Give him Grade A independent pictures, back them up with Grade A sincere service and his decision is automatically made.

"The independent with limited financial resources, or the independent with hampering distribution problems, will find difficulty in doing it. But the men who have taken over Associated know that they can do it. They have the capital, they have the machinery, they are sincere in their desire to go out and get the brains and the merchandise to go through with the job.

"They are not looking to today's profits, nor to this month's. They are looking towards the future. They are building solidly, brick upon brick, towards a goal that is clearly in sight and vividly in their minds.

"I could issue a thousand word policy statement to you and not tell exhibitors of the country any more than I can in a few words with the plain fact that practical, veteran picturemen have thrown their hats in the ring with Associated Exhibitors and they don't intend to give elbow room or take second place for anybody. It takes strong financial resources to feel that way—and it's going to take hard work to change the feeling into results' and both ways we'll meet the test.

"But that is enough in the way of forecast and ambitions for Associated Exhibitors. To tell the truth I would rather say nothing now and let the happenings of the next year do the talking. For that matter there are current happenings that carry a lesson or two of their own.

"Take one recent bit of Associated news for an example—the addition of Robert E. Welsh to the home office staff. For ten years Bob Welsh has been known to the exhibitors of the country as a square-shooting, straight-thinking editor. If he hasn't earned exhibitor confidence then no editor in this business ever will earn it. In addition, for over ten years he has been in intimate touch with the inside maneouvering and developments of the business—right on the ground in New York where the wheels are turning that decide next year's problems.

"When we set out to get Bob Welsh for the new Associated Exhibitors' executive staff you can be certain that we did so knowing of the many attempts that had previously been made to lure him from the editorial chair. And knowing that we would have to show him where we were heading and how we are going to go about getting there. A man who has been sitting on the inside for ten years is in a position for shrewd analysis and clear judgment.

"I consider the fact that we are able to 'show' Bob Welsh and add him to our forces almost the same as if he had been able to talk simultaneously to the thousands of exhibitors who know him so well and lay our innermost plans before them. By the action of the editor whose film knowledge and independent spirit they have known for so many years they can readily guage the pace that Associated Exhibitors intends to set."

Request for Free Trailer Service Sent I. M. P. A.

AT the request of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Brooklyn, President R. F. Woodhull of the national organization, has forwarded to the Independent Motion Picture Association of America, a resolution urging members of the latter body to supply free trailer service with their productions. The resolution adopted by the Brooklyn theatre owners expresses the opinion that such a course would result in increased business both for the distributors and the exhibitors.

President Woodhull has referred the matter to the I. M. P. A. with the request that it be submitted to the members of the organization for their consideration.

Hays Offers to Adjust Exhibitors Complaints

from Will H. Hays and Judge Alfred J. Murphy of Detroit.

Judge Murphy saw drastic changes taking place in the industry that demanded a closer, more compact exhibitor organization and he deplored that policies had prevented a truly national body.

Wednesday there was planned a luncheon for the ladies at the Pantlind hotel, a trip through the largest furniture exhibit in the world, and for the men a trip and luncheon at the American Seating Company plant. The Wednesday session opened at one o'clock and was featured by the report of E. E. Kirchner on arbitration in which he recommended an investigation of the arbitration law in the state and opposed the contract that Joseph M. Seider has proposed which would fix a board of appeals and leave the decision of disputed cases to this board. He stated that Mr. Seider, in making this offer, was not speaking for the exhibitors of Michigan.

Southern Office Reestablished by Loew

E. A. SCHILLER, general representative of Loew's Inc., this week announced that Howard McCoy, a member of the New York executive staff would re-establish a southern office to handle the expansion activities in the South and Southwest which the company will carry out in the near future.

Several Circuits Enlarge Holdings

West Coast Expanding in Northern California; Saxe Acquires Four More Theatres and Universal One

SEVERAL large theatre circuits increased their holdings as a result of deals concluded during the past week, which also brought forth official announcements of definite plans looking toward the expansion of other chain operators.

The Saxe circuit has acquired four more theatres in Milwaukee through a group of deals said to involve $4,000,000, the announcement being accompanied by the statement that this organization aims to have forty houses in its chain by another year.

The new deals include the outright purchase of the Mirth Theatre in the Bay View section of Milwaukee from George Buach, while Saxe obtained long-term leases on two large theatres being built by the Mal Investment Company. In addition to these Saxe interests will build on property at North and Lisbon Avenues. The additions of these new houses brings the total of theatres owned by Saxe up to thirty, ten of which are located in Milwaukee and the others in various parts of the state.

The Mirth has a seating capacity of 1,000 and was rebuilt two years ago. Saxe interests, it is reported, will buy the adjoining property so that the capacity of the theatre can be doubled. One of the two theatres leased from the Mal Investment Co. will be located at 27th and Wells Sts. It will be known as the Tower and will be completed in a few months. The other leased house will have a capacity of 2,300 and the Uptown, which Saxe will build, is to have a capacity of 2,000.

Herman Wobber, Pacific Coast Manager for Famous Players and Sol Lesser, Photographed in San Francisco on Lesser's arrival to initiate expansion of West Coast Theatres, Inc., in Northern California.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., has formed definite plans for further expansion in Northern California. Sol Lesser, vice president of the West Coast, was in San Francisco last week for conference with Jacob Samuel, senior counsel for his corporation, and Herman Wobber, Pacific Coast manager for Famous Players-Lasky.

Lesser's presence in San Francisco brought out a report that the West Coast company would buy four theatres from Louis R. Greenfield. Two of these houses are located in San Francisco, one in Santa Cruz and the fourth is in Honolulu.

At the present time West Coast is represented in San Fransieso, Oakland, Berkeley, Richmond, San Jose, Stockton, Salinas, Watsinville, Sacramento and Fresno, these houses representing the northern division. Lesser definitely states that his company will go into Marysville and Chico with new theatres and that some fifteen houses now operated by others will be added to the present West Coast holdings which number over 100 theatres, all in the state of California.

From Chicago it was reported that Balaban & Katz have entered into a deal with Fitzpatrick & McElroy whereby the chain of houses owned by the latter would be operated by B & K under an arrangement similar to that which was recently entered into with Lubliner & Trinz. Sam Katz would make no comment on this report.

The Beldorf theatre, Independence, Kan., has been obtained by Universal, according to Charles T. Sears, general manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory. The Royal and Crystal theatre, Atchinson, Kan., which were purchased by Universal, are to be managed by A. R. Zimmer, recently a First National salesman, it also was announced.

In Philadelphia the Independent Theatre Corporation of that city announced that three new theatres would be erected in that territory. The company, which now operates the Strand, Shenandoah, and the Savoy

Connecticut Tax Relief Is Likely

Ninety Per Cent of Legislators Favor Special Assembly Session to Repeal Statute; 500,000 Signatures to Petition

THAT a special session of the Connecticut Assembly may be called for the purpose of repealing the Durant tax law, is not unlikely, according to Joseph W. Walsh, President of the State Motion Picture Theatre Owners. According to Walsh 90 per cent of the legislators are in favor of such a special session to consider the repeal of this drastic law. The M.P.T.O. recently sent out cards asking the legislators to express themselves regarding the matter. Up to the present time, according to Walsh, 80 members of the Assembly have expressed themselves as against the statute.

Governor Trumbull alone has the power to call such a special session, according to Connecticut law. He originally approved the Durant law after hearing the protests of film representatives, but it is understood at that time the Governor had the impression the law would hit only at the distributors. The law has admittedly miscarried, however, and in view of that fact it is thought the Governor may yield to the wishes of almost the entire Assembly.

According to one prominent exhibitor the film theatres cannot continue to operate under the crushing burden of the new tax. He said:

"If we are to receive the aid we need it must come immediately or it will be too late. Proponents of the law who argue concerning the $60,000 which a special legislative gathering would cost, should be informed that the film people have already paid considerably more than that amount under the Durant Law.

"The distributors and exhibitors have cooperated with the state tax department as much as possible in working out a plan for the collection of the assessments. Now it is up to the state to give the film interests equally fair treatment by at once nullifying the law which has frankly failed to achieve its purpose."

Charles Schneider, owner of the new Strand at New Haven has been unable to open his house for a week because of a lack of pictures available under the tax burden. He has an investment of $85,000 in his theatre and has appealed to the state M.P.T.O. to help him in his problem. President Walsh has promised to call a meeting of the special committee of five to see what can be done for Schneider.

At Stafford Springs in Connecticut, Joe Wood, owner of Town Hall Theatre is faced with a similar problem. He has suffered three dark nights in the past two weeks because of his inability to get delivery on pictures. Wood has talked with Alexander I. Mitchell and Benjamin P. Cooley, two representatives from the town concerning the law and both are said to have vowed they would help obtain a special session and will vote to repeal the statute.

Public opinion is being moulded by the M.P.T.O. and the operators' union toward the demand for a special session of the Assembly. Hundreds of residents of Connecticut are daily signing cards requesting a special session to reconsider the law. It is expected that well in excess of 500,000 of these signatures will be on hand in the near future. When the seat tax bill was fought five years ago 650,000 people expressed their disapproval of the act in this manner and it is felt there is far more interest in the present tax situation.

The Strand Amusement Company has been active in Bridgeport in the securing of signatures. Houses of that company have secured over 5,000 signers to the petition asking the repeal of the tax measure. Jack Schwarts is running a slide explaining to his patrons the necessity and the reason for the substitution of pictures for others that have been advertised. Schwartz says his patrons have voluntarily signed cards and have in many instances expressed to him personally their disapproval of the law.

British Film Imports Increase

Reimposing of McKenna Duties in July Adds to the First Six Months' Imports

A RECENT report just released by the Department of Commerce from Alfred Nutting, clerk in the Consulate General, London, gives an interesting analysis of British foreign trade for the first six months of 1925 in comparison with similar periods in 1924 and 1923. The report follows:

Coincident with the announcement that the McKenna duties on British imports of films would be re-imposed on July 1, 1925, there was a great increase in the quantities received during the first half of the current year, far transcending the decrease recorded in 1924 (compared with 1923) when shipments were withheld pending the removal of such duties in August, 1924. Two years ago the amount imported aggregated 58,940,968 linear feet; last year the total was 48,898,631 linear feet; while in the current period no less than 154,742,426 linear feet were imported. Against an average import value on total receipts in 1923 of 2d. per linear foot, the rate rose last year to just under 3d. and decreased in 1925 to 1½d.

Of the present year's imports 112,070,968 linear feet (£316,070) comprised blank films, contrasted with 36,715,356 linear feet (£122,213) a year ago, and 44,997,838 linear feet (£128,107) in 1923. Positives rose to 36,051,101 linear feet (£186,100), against 8,961,679 linear feet (£74,638) in 1924, and 10,020,170 linear feet (£83,011) two years ago; while negatives increased to 6,620,357 linear feet (£427,833) contrasted with 3,221,596 linear feet (£376,866) and 3,922,960 linear feet (£250,943) in 1924 and 1923 respectively. Countries of origin are not shown in the official returns of trade available.

British exports in the current period aggregated 54,894,482 linear feet, valued at £198,749, compared with 27,598,472 linear feet (£124,313) last year, and 21,063,515 linear feet (£77,147) in 1923; 40,096,413 linear feet (£104,410) comprised blank films, against 16,552,254 linear feet (£42,219) in 1924, and 222,180 linear feet (£1,012) in 1923; positives increased from 10,498,473 linear feet (£68,364) two years ago, and 10,825,900 linear feet (£71,380) in 1924, to 14,545,347 linear feet (£87,532) in the current six months, the comparatively small balances consisting of negative films.

Figures of total re-exports do not show any extensive movement, except, proportionately, in value, the aggregate of 6,875,880 feet re-exported in 1923, being valued at £146,410; of 8 268,949 linear feet a year ago, at £102,264; and in 1925 the total of 7,656,105 linear feet declining to £87,661.

Mastbaum Back, Declares Paris House Unlikely

JULES E. MASTBAUM, President of the Stanley Company of America, is back at his home in Philadelphia following a vacation of several months in Europe. Upon his departure from America it was announced that an effort was being made to have him devote his personal attention to a big house in Paris.

No progress was made on the deal, according to Mastbaum, who declares the site near the Paris Opera House is still held, but that government interest is lacking. He declares too, he could not give his personal attention to the house because of the activities of the Stanley Company.

Regarding exhibition conditions abroad Mastbaum said:

"The motion picture situation abroad cannot be compared with that in this country. There isn't a picture house anywhere that compares with our Palace in Philadelphia. The entertainment is of the old type without large orchestras, special features, prologues and the like."

Missouri Owners Advised to Pay Music Tax

Missouri exhibitors who use music controlled by the Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers have been advised by the M. P. T. O., Kansas-Missouri to make payment on a fair and consistent license until such time as Missouri can obtain the same 20 per cent rebate system as is in force in Kansas among e hibitor members, or, until the national copyright act is amended.

Kofeldt is Appointed Berlin Manager of P. D. C.

Walter W. Kofeldt has been appointed as Berlin Representative of Producers Distributing Corporation, it was announced this week by William M. Vogel, general manager of the P. D. C. International Corporation. Kofeldt has been associated with Pathe as manager of the San Francisco branch for several years.

Lauds Health Conditions of Chicago Theatres

Dr. Herman Bundenson of the Chicago Health Department is preparing to distribute a pamphlet telling the public of the splendid health conditions existing in Chicago motion picture houses, and recommending the theatres as a safe place to go on account of their adequate ventilation and cleanliness.

Troy Operators' Chief is Assembly Candidate

Harry Brooks, president of the Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union in Troy, N. Y., is a candidat for the New York State Assembly on the Republican ticket this fall and his opponent is Michael F. Breen, who is connected with the bill posters' organization in the Collar City.

Swedish Actor Arrives at M-G-M Studio

Lars Hanson, Swedish film actor and his wife are late arrivals on the coast, where Hanson is to appear in forthcoming productions of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He was signed by Louis B. Mayer on the latter's last trip abroad.

The novel, however, was serialized in McCall's Magazine.

The New York premiere of "The Keeper of the Bees" took place in Town Hall last Monday evening and brought out an audience of society folks, stage and screen celebrities and members of the literary set.

Discuss New Franchise Play

Columbia Officials and Exchangemen Hold Meeting to Perfect System of Nationalization

EXCHANGE men handling the Columbia Pictures product and officials of that company held a meeting in New York to discuss a plan looking toward the nationalizing of exchanges distributing Columbia pictures. It was said that a system under which that end could be accomplished has been perfected and would be brought into operation within a very short time.

No detailed description of the plan was given out by Joe Brandt or Jack Cohn, president and treasurer of Columbia, but it was said the suggestion was made at the meeting that all exchanges handling the company's program restrict its activities to the Columbia product for the coming season.

It is reported that all of the exchangemen who attended the meeting were in favor of the idea under which Columbia Pictures would receive simultaneous release throughout the United States.

A general meeting of all of the Columbia franchise holders will be held immediately upon the arrival of Harry Cohn in New York, which will be some time during the month of October. At that time, it is said, the working plan of the National system of Columbia distributors will be worked out in detail and put into execution.

Mayer Concluding Conference

Will Return to Coast Soon to Launch Second Half of the M-G-M Schedule

LOUIS B. MAYER, vice-president in charge of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, who arrived in the East recently to discuss production matters with Marcus Loew and other officials of the company, will soon return to California to launch the second half of the production schedule M-G-M will carry out this season.

In the production of the second half of the "Quality Fifty-Two," the executives associated with Mr. Mayer will be, as in the past, Irving Thalberg and Harry Rapf with the addition of Hunt Stromberg, recently signed. This announcement definitely refutes rumors concerning a change in the executive personnel of this organization.

"Under the producing schedule just prepared, provision has been made for vacations among the members of the executive staff," said Mr. Mayer. "Harry Rapf will shortly make a trip to Europe with his family where he will combine pleasure with M-G-M business. Upon his return Irving Thalberg will take a well earned rest and later, I myself will spend a month abroad. The addition of Hunt Stromberg and others with whom we are now in negotiation, will make it possible for members of the executive staff to take vacations which have thus far been denied them because of the rush of production."

Among the pictures to be produced during the coming months are: Elinor Glyn's "Four Flaming Days," "Free Lips," starring Norma Shearer; Tod Browning's "The Mocking Bird," starring Lon Chaney; "La Boheme," starring Lillian Gish and featuring John Gilbert; "Ben Hur," now nearing completion, and "Bardolys the Magnificent," a spectacular version of the Raphael Sabatini novel to be made entirely in technicolor and to star John Gilbert.

Midshipman In Capital

Secretary Wilbur and Naval Officers Attend Premiere at Loew's Palace

THE premiere of "The Midshipman," Ramon Novarro's initial starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was held last Monday night at Loew's Palace theatre, Washington, D. C.

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, Navy and Army officers and Government officials attended the presentation. Will Hays, who made the trip to the Capital from New York especially to be present at the showing, was another distinguished guest at the premiere.

The premiere of "The Midshipman" was celebrated as Navy Night at the Palace. The major portion of the exterior scenes in the production were filmed at the U. S. Naval Academy at Annapolis.

Among the distinguished people who attended were Secretary Wilbur, Will Hays, Rear Admiral W. R. Shoemaker, Admiral E. W. Eberle, Captain Gherardi, Mrs. Theodore Douglas Robinson, Everett Saunders, President Coolidge's secretary; Rear Admiral Robinson, Brig. Gen. Williams, Brig. Gen. C. Richards, Major General J. A. S. F. Sees Paramount Premiere

Public and Press Enthuse Over Initial Showing of "Vanishing American"

PARAMOUNT'S "The Vanishing American" had its world premiere at the St. Francis Theatre in San Francisco last week and was acclaimed a success by both public and critics. The opening performance was a brilliant affair which brought out the social set of San Francisco and a number of screen luminaries from Hollywood. Power wagons and arc lights in front of the theatre permitted newspaper photographers to photograph the celebrities entering the theatre.

Among those prominent in pictures who attended the opening performance were, Betty Bronson, Raymond Hatton, Zasu Pitts, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and George B. Seitz, director of the picture. Charles Wakefield Cadman, who wrote the musical score and theme song, "Little Wild Rose," journeyed to San Francisco especially to play the theme song at the opening performance.

"The Vanishing American" luncheon, given by Paramount on the day preceding the premiere was attended by Hollywood celebrities and all of San Francisco's dramatic critics and the city's leading newspaper men.

Park French Art Director for Samuel Goldwyn

Samuel Goldwyn has signed Park M. French as art director for his third "Potash and Perlmutter" production, "Partners Again." French for a long time was associated with Joseph M. Schenck Productions. Henry King will direct "Partners Again" from the script prepared by Frances Marion in collaboration with Montague Glass. George Sidney will play "Potash" and Alexander Carr, "Perlmutter." The picture will be distributed by United Artists.

Metropolitan Fills Cast of "Steel Preferred"

Metropolitan this week completed the cast which will appear in "Steel Preferred," a feature to be distributed by Producers Distributing Corporation, with the signing of Pat Harmon, Herbert Pryor and Ivor McFadden for principal roles. William Boyd and Vera Reynolds have the leading parts, and others prominently cast are Hobart Bosworth, William V. Mong, Charles Murray, Nigel Barrie, Walter Long and Helene Sullivan. James Hogan is directing.

Final Title Selected for Mildred Davis Story

The vehicle which will bring Mildred Davis back to the screen for Paramount has been definitely titled "Behind the Front." The picture is an adaptation of Hugh Wiley's war story, "The Spoils of War," and was tentatively titled "Two Soldiers." Production is scheduled to start October 12th.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Ad-Line Contest in Daily Advertises "Chickie"

The Morning Press of Santa Barbara staged a "Chickie" Ad Line contest to help the showing of "Chickie" in the Granada theatre, Santa Barbara, as a direct tie-up with the newspaper serial, which had run previously in the paper, and the motion picture.

The contest was held one week in advance of the opening of the film, and more than 100 "ad lines" were received in the campaign. Readers of the story were advised of the coming of the picture through the contest and the resulting publicity.

The winning ad line was used in the Granada "splash" ad, while all prize winners were published in the news columns of the Press.

J. Frank Churchill, Managing Director of the Granada, and H. D. McBride, publicist for the California Theatre Co., operators of the Granada handled the campaign.

Scooter Sweepstakes Aids "California Ahead"

The great Seattle Star handicap, the Columbia Theatre derby, and the California Straight Ahead sweepstakes were big events this summer among the children of Seattle —and they gave the Columbia theatre front page publicity on "California Straight Ahead."

Robert Bender, manager of the Columbia, conceived the idea of a coaster wagon and kid automobile race, and sold it to the Seattle Star. The prizes were nine merchandise certificates, and in addition each kid who made the race received two tickets—one for himself and the other for his mechanic—for a special show of "California Straight Ahead" at the Columbia on the following Saturday morning.

When an escaped leopard recently monopolized the front pages of the Paris newspapers, Reginald Ford's Cameo theatre had this appropriate ballyhoo out for "The Lost World" (First Nat'l).

The races to find the speediest scooter wagon or home-built automobile in town were open to any boy under 14 years of age. All contestants were told to assemble at the race course—a downhill grade several blocks long patrolled by police to make it safe—with one of the entrance blanks properly filled out with the driver's name and that of his mechanic. When a boy turned in his blank, he was given his theatre tickets and racing number to hang on his back.

Here are the rules that were used:

First race: The Seattle Star Handicap: Pilots will ride on their cars; mechanics will be allowed to give them a 10-foot shove off. Three merchandise prizes.

Second: Columbia Theatre Derby: Same rules and similar prizes.

Third: California Straight Ahead Sweepstakes. The three winners of each of the first two races will be started over the course. Three merchandise certificate prizes of $15, $10 and $5.

Deaf Ballyhoo Stunt Used to Aid "Lightnin'"

Passengers on Seattle street cars were—for several days recently—amused greatly by the antics of two old soldiers, both deaf, who were continually getting on the wrong cars, and when not on cars were getting all tangled up in traffic. No matter how badly the two old fellows fared in their journeyings however, they managed to keep up a running fire of conversation in a loud tone about them being on their way to the Strand theatre to see their old comrade Jay Hunt in "Lightnin'."

Of course it was all an exploitation stunt for the Strand engagement of the picture, but it went over big. The stunt was pulled, after several days of careful rehearsing with the operatives—one 88, and the other 75. The two men were instructed to never accost each other, but to let people within earshot direct them. An exploitation man accompanied them everywhere on their travels, picking out the street cars they were to ride on, the crowded streets they were to get "lost" on, etc. The soldiers, of course, never accosted or paid any attention to their guide.

No G. A. R. insignia of any kind was worn by the men, and there was nothing about the stunt that could in any way reflect on the G. A. R. The uniform of that body not even being worn. The clothes worn by the men being makeshifts supplied by a local masquerade costumer.

The stunt was started each day, by the men boarding cars going in some direction away from the Strand Theatre. Then, feigning deafness, they would start to shout at each other, until passengers would volunteer directions, telling them they were on the wrong car, etc. Then the "boys" would acquaint everybody present that they were on their way to see their old comrade, play the main part in that picture "Lightnin'" and how they expected to enjoy it.

A real, honest-to-goodness circus front, with sideshow banners and all, and a juvenile circus parade, featured the campaign of Manager Dick Darst of the Hollyway theatre, Los Angeles, on "The Great Circus Mystery" (Universal).

"Perils of Wild" Tied Up With Chicago Contest

Bruce Godshaw, Universal's new exploitation man in the Chicago territory, is turning out exploitation campaigns in rapid order. His latest tie-up, for "Perils of the Wild," is with The Hub (Henry C. Lytton & Sons) for essay contests in 35 theatres, the clothing store to furnish three boys' suits for prizes for each theatre. All the Lubliner and Trinz houses with the exception of the Pantheon, and the Monogram, 20th Century, Casino (Halstead St.) and the Casino (Madison St.) are already in on the stunt.

The prizes are to go to the writers of the best essays on the three following subjects:

Why do boys prefer to come to The Hub for their first long trouser suit?

Would you rather wear long trousers or knickers—why?

If the Hub organized a Boys' Club would you like to belong and what entertainment would you suggest?

In addition each boy who enters the contest will receive a free copy of a 48-page book containing batting averages, track records, Boy Scout data, All American football teams, radio dope, etc.

Miniature Skyscraper in "Shock Punch" Lobby

Manager E. B. Roberts of the Majestic theatre, Austin, in his recent exploitation of "The Shock Punch" used a miniature display in the lobby which effectively sold the picture.

The exhibit consisted of a small skyscraper, about 12 feet high, in course of construction. This was made from the toy construction apparatus, Erecto, and had a crane with a toy beam with toy men on it and an elevator such as is used for hauling up material. Both of the latter devices were kept moving up and down by means of a small concealed motor, their operation greatly enhancing the attention value of the display. A beaverboard background painted with the skyline of New York completed this interesting exhibit.

A real roulette wheel obtained and used as a special window display for "The Wheel" (Fox), showing at the New Aster theatre in Minneapolis, and attracted no little attention.

Eye-catching cut-out on "As Man Desires" (First Nat'l), mounted on rosin paper, and used in the lobby of the Rex theatre, Eugen, Ore.

Notable "Iron Horse" Parade

Majestic Theatre, Portland, Makes Tie-up With Union Pacific on Joint Advertising

INTENSIVE exploitation preceded the opening of "The Iron Horse" at the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore., where a corking campaign was put over by Charles E. Couche and Frank Lacey, director of publicity and house manager, respectively.

The big Portland "push" started three weeks before the picture opened, with an elaborate newspaper announcement and plenty of press stories planted, on the signing of the contract.

A score of de luxe painted boards 12 by 60 feet were arranged on the four main vacation highways. The boards were not merely painted, but had old style engine heads built of wood and beaver board projecting about two feet from surface of sign. The boards were brilliantly illuminated with flood lights at night, and constituted a valuable flash for the campaign. Forty ordinary 24-sheet boards were also utilized for "The Iron Horse" stands.

The "Oregonian," Portland's leading newspaper, was tied up with the drive, and in a manner that secured over 200 inches of free space, including two front page stories. The Oregonian consented to act as host to local pioneers, who came to Portland by railroad prior to 1885. The newspaper also acted as host to orphan children at special matinees. The local lodge of Elks co-operated by providing transportation for the children at these performances.

The Union Pacific Railways responded liberally to an invitation for reciprocal advertising courtesies, and displayed special 8x10 "Iron Horse" ad cards throughout their shops, offices, etc. The railroads also allowed an advertising slip on the picture to be attached to every month-end pay check issued to their employees, approximating 10,000.

The Union Pacific helped put over the biggest advertising parade ever staged in Portland. They furnished their 40 piece shop band to lead the procession, which consisted of section crew, floats, equipment, Indians and Portland's first railway engine. The old engine being transported on a tractor-drawn truck. The parade was ten blocks long and secured 260 inches of free publicity for the picture.

The parade was the climax of the advance campaign—being staged on Saturday morning immediately preceding the opening. After it was over the band gave a concert in front of the theatre, where the engine was parked by special permit for the run of the engagement.

Motion pictures of the parade were made during its progress. These pictures were run at the three other big downtown houses. The orchestra at one theatre, and the orchestra of the biggest and most popular hotel cafe, put on "Iron Horse" musical novelties.

The local County Fair opening the week before the picture's opening, a booth was engaged, in which an "Iron Horse" trailer was shown for five days preceding the opening engagement.

A number of display windows in the downtown section were also brought into play, one window using a trailer, and two displaying miniature model engines.

Oil cloth signs were used on the spare tires of taxicabs, and Portland street cars carried "Iron Horse" dash board cards as well. A distinctive feature of the drive was the broadcasting from local wireless station of an orchestra rendering "Iron Horse" musical novelty. This number comprised in its rendition, whistles, bells and imitations of railroad effects.

Lucky "Iron Horse" Stunt Put Across in Lima

Quick to take advantage of a newspaper circulation builder, now sweeping certain cities of the country like wildfire, the management of the Faurot Opera House, Lima, Ohio, and the Fox exploitation department, have the The Lima News of that city, running a Lucky Buck contest as an aid to the local "Iron Horse" showing.

In this contest, however, the Lucky Bucks are no longer designated as Lucky Bucks, but as "Iron Horses." The Lima News featuring the matter daily under a three column head in its most prominent front page position.

The News is further offering in all its contest announcements, a season pass for the Faurot, to holders of all lucky "Iron Horses." The offer stresses the fact that the cash prizes for bills carrying the lucky numbers are really of secondary value, as "The two season passes mean $600 in free shows for one whole year, the William Fox 'Iron Horse' being the first treat."

The contest is receiving in Lima, the same response that has marked its introduction at New York and other cities, with the exploitation on the picture receiving a valuable added impetus as a consequence.

Weird Lobby Display Made as "Monster" Flash

Attention was attracted to "The Monster" at the Egyptian, Greenville, recently by the uncanny lobby display Manager J. Wright Brown arranged for the attraction.

Mounted in a shadow-box was a large cut-out figure, similar to the big black shadow on the six sheet, with the eyes cut out and faced with red crepe paper. The title also appeared in cutout lettering backed with similar colored paper. Equipped with a flasher socket which kept the eyes and title flashing on and off, the exhibit drew the eye unresistingly.

"Don Q, Son of Zorro" (United Artists) at the London Hippodrome, in London, was given this attractive window display in Piccadilly Circut by Swan & Edgar, Ltd.

"Lightnin'" Wins Tie-up With Bakery in Omaha

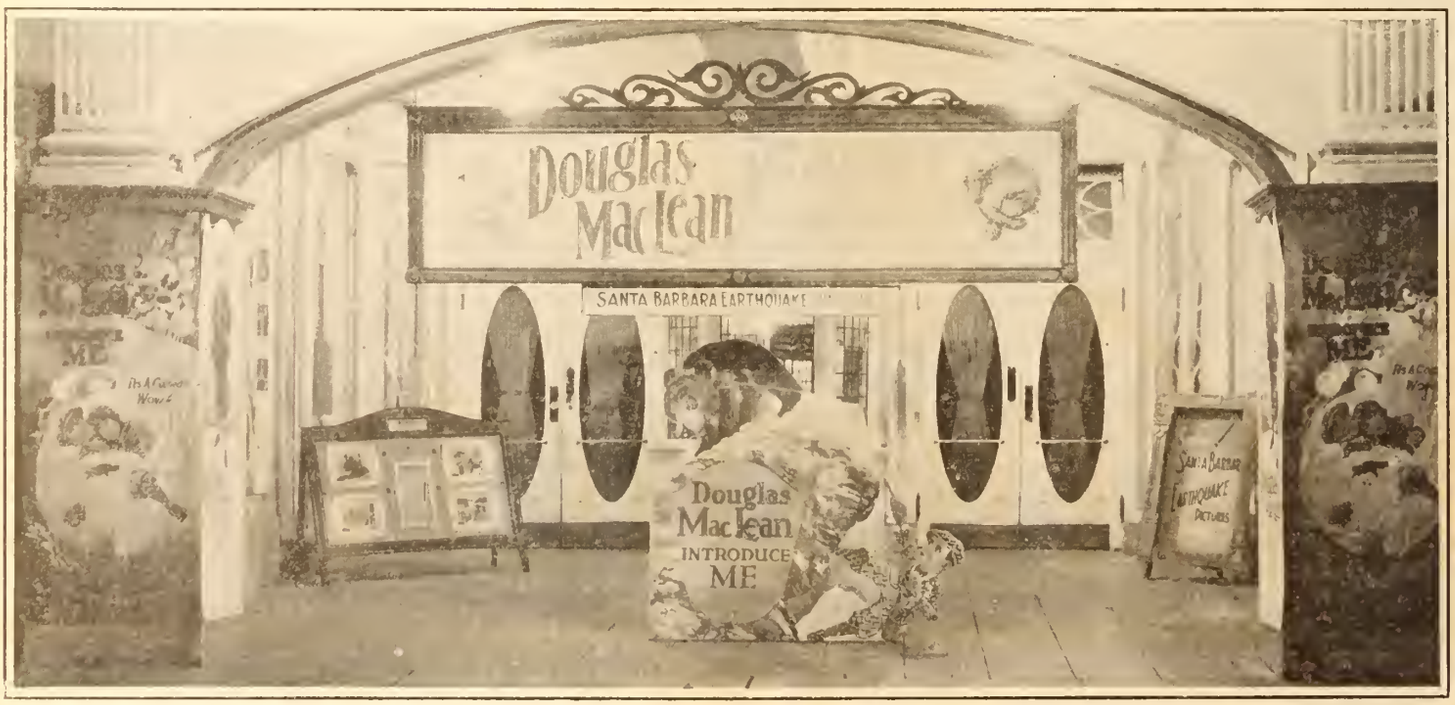
When "Lightnin'" played the Sun theatre, Omaha, Nebr., recently, N. N. Frudenfeld, director of publicity for the Sun theatre effected a tie-up with a local baking concern on Peter Pan Bread. The tie-up consisted of a large card, bearing a picture of Jay Hunt as "Lightnin'" and the statement, "Lightnin'" Bill Jones sez: "When I was a baker, I used to bake good bread just like 'Peter Pan.,' the leading bread."

The card also carried the play date of the engagement, and a brief selling argument on the picture. The cards were distributed about town in cars, on billboards, and upon the wagons of the baking company.

"Slave Girl's Dream" Show With "Slave of Fashion"

Under the title of "The Slave Girl's Dream," a style show was presented at the Majestic, Austin, during the recent showing of "A Slave of Fashion," which was entirely "different" from any previous show of its kind.

Manager E. B. Roberts accomplished this with the cooperation of four local merchants, all of whom in addition to arranging window displays, ran a large cooperative display ad in the local newspaper, tying-up the style show with the picture at the Majestic.



Presentation opened with prison scene, done in futuristic style, with woman elaborately gowned wielding a whip over a ragged slave girl, who with wrists chained to floor, did a short dance in a spot. This unique opening was followed by full stage lighting, revealing several shop windows displaying gowns, millinery, jewelry, shoes and the like. In one window manikins posed as wax models, coming to life when orchestra started playing. Three girls at a time paraded before the audience showing off their finery, while others were seen inside shops trying on hats, shoes, and jewelry. While models changed gowns, popular singer entertained with group of songs, girls in pajamas closing show with jazz dance.

The models, university sorority girls, greatly enhanced the presentation's drawing power.

Horseshoe Matinee Strong "Lucky Horseshoe" Ad

One place where horseshoes brought good luck, was at Hagerstown, Md., where the Academy theatre played "The Lucky Horseshoe" recently. One of the stunts employed by the management and the Fox exploitation department, was a Horseshoe matinee to which any child who brought a horseshoe, was admitted free, provided they were accompanied by an adult. The adult, of course, paid admission.

So great was the amount of shoes collected that they were made into a huge pile in the lobby and appropriately placarded.

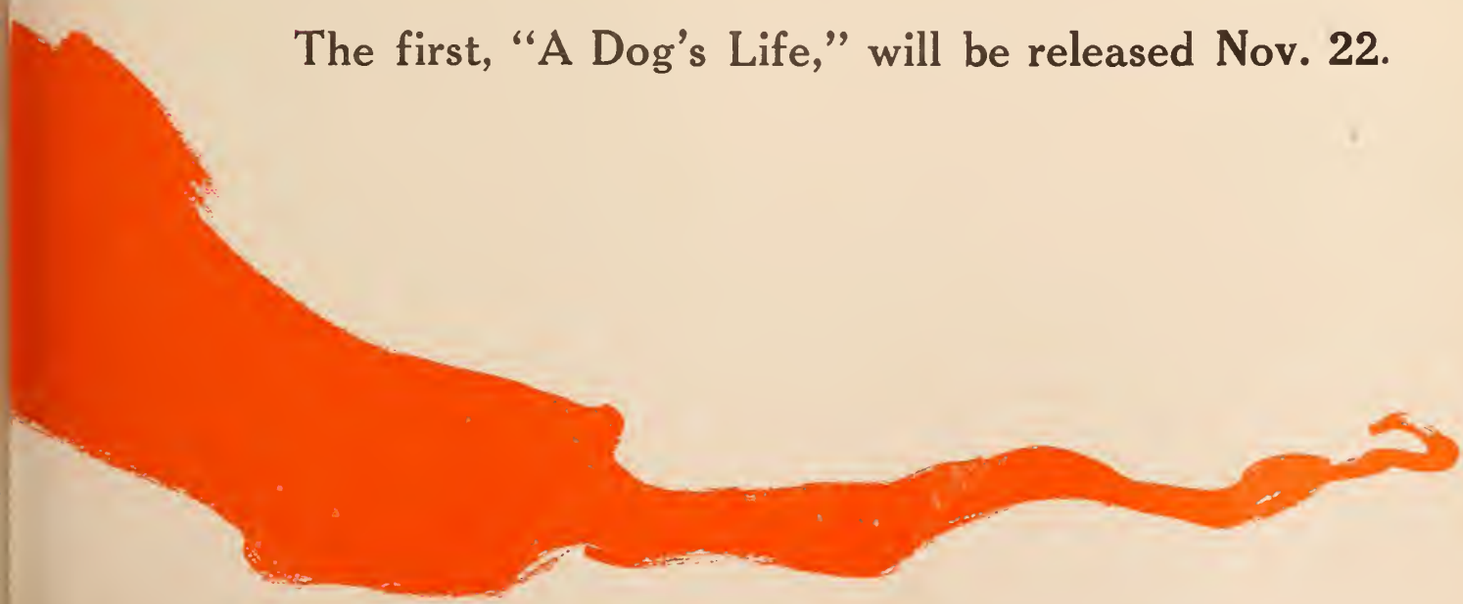
TRADE MARK



Million for the screen the First Four Pictures made under his Eight Picture Contract

Four triumphant successes, "A Dog's Life," "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside," which include some of the greatest pictures this amazing screen personality has ever made!

Never before have pictures for re-presentation brought such a price. Only Chaplin productions could have done it.

These Chaplin pictures are always first runs. As box office attractions today they are in a class by themselves.

The first, "A Dog's Life," will be released Nov. 22.

For the first time in the business, rights for re-presentation of pictures have cost as much as on original release ----They are Charlie Chaplins of course

When, a number of years ago, First National made a million dollar contract with Charlie Chaplin for eight two-reel pictures, the price was considered very high.

Since that time it has been amply demonstrated that the price, far from being excessive, made that contract one of the very best buys any distributor has ever made.

Every one of those pictures was good. Among them are some of the outstanding successes of the business.

Chaplin's screen career is absolutely unique. His pictures have undoubtedly played over 500,000 bookings, yet who ever heard of a booking that wasn't a success?

All of his pictures have made money for everyone. There is probably not one exhibitor in the many thousands all over the world but what has money he wouldn't have if he hadn't played Chaplin.

PATHE HAS JUST PAID HALF A MILLION DOLLARS FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF BRINGING BACK TO THE SCREEN THE FIRST FOUR CHARLIE CHAPLIN PICTURES MADE UNDER HIS FAMOUS MILLION DOLLAR CONTRACT WITH FIRST NATIONAL FOR EIGHT PICTURES

AND—

THE PRICE PAID IS THE SAME PRICE THAT WAS PAID FOR THEM ON ORIGINAL ISSUE.

"A Dog's Life" will be released on Nov. 22nd. "Shoulder Arms," "A Day's Pleasure" and "Sunnyside" will follow.

In all honesty I do not know where so much box-office value can be secured, dollar for dollar and foot for foot.

If there is any box-office certainty in any product, it is in these pictures. Like diamonds their value has grown with time. They are PROVEN product, the best that can be bought.

To be able to offer pictures so certain to make money for exhibitors is a privilege indeed.

We are confident that exhibitors will be as eager to welcome them as we were to get them.

"Happy-O!"

Everyone is happy-O
In Happy Canyon, Idaho!
Hear the sniggle when they wriggle
Flash the wildness of the wiggle
Of the film fans at the show.
Hear them roar and laugh, and cliggle—
How they love the screen's best giggle
In Happy Canyon, Idaho!

—Hoots by Oliver Owl

Clyde Walker says In his Seattle Film Journal

(Sept. 19th)

GOING UP, Douglas MacLean, 7 reels—Seems useless to say anything about any of MacLean's pictures. Every one who is familiar with his pictures knows they are at the top. Not only do they contain the best comedy, but are always absolutely clean and have good stories as well as good laughs. BEST BUSINESS SINCE "COVERED WAGON."

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"Good Morning, Madam"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS looks like another Ralph Graves hit. There are sure-fire gags and a generally pleasant and entertaining air about the entire work. It concerns the experiences of a book agent who reaches the starvation point and goes further down the economic scale when he meets a young charmer who invites him to invite her and some girl friends to lunch. But he gets a break finally and wins the girl, the daughter of the man who "established the banks of the Wabash," we are told in one of A. H. Geibler's excellent group of titles.

The comedy is clean and clear-cut in its methods. It has a rich supply of effective gags, a sparkling quality to its presentation and excellent acting. Little more can be asked for in two reel comedies by either exhibitors or public than is offered in generous measure by "Good Morning, Madam." Lloyd Bacon's direction seems especially good, while Graves' acting and that of Marvin Lobach and Thelma Parr leaves nothing to be desired. The subtitles are by Mr. Geibler, who is always droll and never dull, but who seems to have been in rare form when he did the captions for this film.

The Cast

Book Agent.....Ralph Graves
His Pal.....Marvin Lobach
The Girl.....Thelma Parr
Her Father.....Wm. McCall

Story.—Ralph and his pal, book agents who have not made a sale in weeks, are down to their last half dollar when they meet a society beauty who is collecting for a charity. She gets the lone coin as a donation and then invites herself to be their guest at lunch. But she soon discovers that her boy friend is broke and quietly pays the check. It is a case of love at first sight and the marriage takes place at the second meeting, when Ralph prevents her marriage to another chap endorsed by her father.

Summary.—A very entertaining two-reeler, offering clean, wholesome comedy and plenty of the gags that produce laughter. The picture has been finely directed and acted. An excellent choice for any exhibitor.

"Cuckoo Love"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

BATHING beauties are becoming more numerous on the Hal Roach lot. To this fact there is convincing evidence in "Cuckoo Love," a two-reeler featuring Glenn Tryon as a modern Romeo who finds that the "course of true love" is not the smoothest highway a man can travel. But the beauties! There are several of them shown in their one-piece suits at sprightly games of polo and swimming and diving contests. They do dress up the scenery a lot and we should be glad that they have been brought into the play, though their influence seems to go too deep into the fibre of the production.

From swimming tanks and polo fields, the action goes into a routine of gags about people sitting on pin cushions and cacti and bees—from which it emerges and forthwith plunges into some boudoire bantering in which a jealous husband becomes the dramatic "menace" to characters straying therein by error.

"Cuckoo Love" has its amusing moments and it will furnish satisfactory entertainment to the bulk of its audiences. Rather because of its treatment than any sophistication of idea in the story do we suggest that the picture is better suited for the adult patronage than that of the youngsters.

Glenn Tryon, the featured player, has the support of an imposing cast, in which Katherine Grant, an actress who is making the most amazing progress in her work before the camera, Blanche Mehaffey, Chester Conklin, Jimmie Finlayson and Jane Sherman appear to decided advantage.

The production is a very dressy one and Fred Guill's direction is better by far than the story material with which he had to work.

The Cast

Glen Tryon, Blanche Mehaffey, Katherine Grant, Chester Conklin, Jimmie Finlayson, Jane Sherman.

The Story.—A letter from a former flame, enclosing a photograph, starts trouble between the engaged couple. The girl's father returns from Palm Beach with a bride and she proves to be the former flame of her sweetheart. The father is jealous and brings his gun into play when he sees the bride talking with his prospective son-in-law in the garden. A rival for the daughter's hand sees his opportunity and by a ruse sends the hero into the boudoire of the bride, a situation from which the hero extricates himself only after many exciting adventures.

Summary.—Very elaborately produced and finely acted comedy is hampered by sketchy story and lack of anything clever in the way of gags. It is almost straight slapstick from start to finish.

"The Road From Latigo"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is always that sameness about these two-reel Westerns and this one is not out of the ordinary, though it does have a twist or two that lifts it a little above the average. Edmund Cobb is the hero who accomplishes the usual rescues and overpowers the intriguing villains, whether there be one or a dozen.

He is the victim of a mistaken impression on the part of the girl whom he loves and she all but spills the beans in turning him over to the sheriff and posse as the real robber of the stage coach, but he thwarts even her and her information brings the true culprits to justice.

The Cast

Jerry Donovan.....Edmund Cobb

The Story. Jerry Donovan, keeper of the Half Way House thwarts the efforts of Black Dan's men to hold up the stage and assumes the delivery of the gold when the driver is wounded. With his horse and a donkey he arrives at the cabin of Janet Leigh, who has just been advised by the Sheriff there is a reward of $5000 for information regarding the whereabouts of Jerry. She discovers the gold bag and takes him for the stage robber. She substitutes bricks for the gold and Jerry goes on his way. She phones the Sheriff as Jerry is overtaken by the bandits. He passes the bag to them and the stones are revealed. The girl rides up demanding the reward, thinking the bandits are the sheriff's posse. She reveals to them where the gold is really hidden and they dash off to get it. The Sheriff's posse then overtakes and captures the gang, when it is revealed to the girl that the $5,000 reward for Jerry is offered by his wealthy father, who wants him to return home.

Summary. A Western of the usual type, whose story is somewhat above the average. There are some good riding shots and the picture is enlivened by some good fighting and fast action. It is well acted by a competent cast.

"Maid in Morocco"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

LUPINO LANE is the bright particular star of this good comedy, which shows Lane off to the same good advantage as he was seen in musical comedy and on the vaudeville stage. He is a versatile comedian and his pictures in this series, if this one is an indication, are bound to add to his popularity.

There seems to be nothing in the way of gymnastics and tumbling that is too hard of accomplishment for Lane and in this good story he is given every chance to show his full line of attractive wares, including his dancing specialty, when as a pinch hitter for his young bride he struts his terpsichorean stuff in the harem to the delight of the Caliph.

If there is a fault to the picture it is that there is too much of the run-around stuff, but at that, there is hardly a foot of it when the comedian is not displaying some astonishing ability in one direction or another.

The Cast

The Groom.....Lupino Lane
The Bride.....Helen Foster
The Caliph.....Walace Lupino
The Favorite.....Violet Blythe

A Jack White production, directed by Charles Lamont and photographed by Robert Doran.

The Story—The young bride and groom go to Morocco for their honeymoon and visit the harem of the Caliph, who becomes enamoured of the bride and would make her the newest member of his harem. She is made a prisoner as the groom is detected in the room with the Queen of the Harem. The enraged Caliph orders him tossed to the lions. After innummerable difficulties he makes his escape and takes his bride with him.

Summary—An exceptionally good comedy, well directed and well acted, with Lupino Lane displaying the full scope of his talents. There are a number of humorous situations with just enough slapstick to add to the two reels of fun. It is a picture that should be appreciated in almost any type house.

"Solid Ivory"

(Pathe—One Reel)

EARL MOHAN and Billy Engle are here featured as the central characters of a slapstick contribution from the Hal Roach studios. The plot concerns the further adventures of a fighter and his manager introduced to picture audiences in previous films from the Roach plant. The reel reaches its climax in one of those comic boxing matches which have been so widely exploited on the screen that there is no telling at this date whether they are actually funny or just repetitions of gags that are not only stale but stupid as well. Of this work one can feel safe in reporting that there is action and speed and there is every apparent effort on the part of players and director to stage the action in as amusing a fashion as is possible.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"Scrambled Eggs"

(Educational—One Reel)

LITTLE out of the ordinary is on display in this one-reeler, which is of the usual slapstick type. It is the tale of a pair of correspondence marriages in which the couples on arrival of the train, become mixed up, with each getting the wrong partner. Jealousy develop as the action continues and complications come thick and fast. Phil Dunham, George Davis, Babe Landon and Helen Marlowe make up the misguided couples. Their antics are rather funny in spots and the picture may be good for a few laughs in the neighborhood houses.—CHESTER J. SMITH.

Kinograms Inaugurates Prize Contest

IN order to stimulate interest its staff men and free lance cameramen in the news field, Kinograms, the newsreel released by Educational, has inaugurated a monthly prize offer of $100 for exclusive news pictures. The prize is divided into two parts. For the best exclusive picture sent in for the current month a $50 bonus is paid, and another $50 goes to the cameraman sending in the greatest number of exclusive pictures.

The first prize will be awarded October 31st and the succeeding prizes at the end of each month. The awarding of the prizes will be in the hands of an editorial committee consisting of Forrest Izard, managing editor and J. V. Fitz Gerald and H. E. Hancock, associate editors. The only restrictions placed on the cameramen are that the pictures must be based on news and that they must be original subjects obtained without any suggestion from the Kinograms editorial force.

Bernard Garcey Signed for Al Joy Comedies

Al Joy, head of Ricordo Films, producers of two-reel comedies in which he plays the leading roles, has engaged Bernard Garcey, who created the role of "Isaac Cohen" in "Abie's Irish Rose," to play prominent parts in his support.

Garcey will continue his stage engagements while working in the pictures. He is now rehearsing with an Arthur Hammerstein production soon to be presented in New York.

Pathe Discusses 18th Program

Graves and Tryon Featured Comedians; Schedule Includes New "Sportlight" Reel

THE program which Pathe has announced for the week of October 18th covers a wide range of short subjects, the list including comedies, cartoons, Pathe Review, a serial episode and "Nazareth," a Biblical film, in addition to the regular issue of Pathe News and the "Topics of the Day" reel.

Ralph Graves and Glenn Tryon are the featured comedians appearing on this schedule. Graves will be seen in "Good Morning, Madam," a two-reeler produced by Mack Sennett under the direction of Lloyd Bacon. In his role as an enterprising but not very successful book agent, Graves is supported by Marvin Lobach, Thelma Parr, Wm. McCall and Bud Ross.

"Cockoo Love" offers Glenn Tryon in a two-reel comedy from the Hal Roach studios. Katherine Grant, Chester Conklin, Jimmie Finlayson, Blanche Mehaffey, and Jane Sherman are the distinguished members of the cast. Fred L. Guiol directed.

"Ride 'Em, Cowboy" is the title of the fourth chapter of the Pathe serial "Wild West," featuring Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson.

"Clever Feet" is the newest Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. In this reel producer J. L. Hawkinson shows how important clever feet are for the participants in all forms of athletics.

"Nazareth" is the second release of the "Pilgrimage to Palestine" series of Biblical films.

Pathe Review No. 42 presents three subjects: "The Gorges of Rocamadour," a mountainside village in Central France in Pathe color scenes; "Tree-Top Nurseries," first flashes of bird life; "Brides of the Northland," another of the "Here Comes the Bride" series.

"Air Cooled," one of the "Aesop's Film Fables"; "Topics of the Day," and two issues of the popular Pathe News complete the October 18th release schedule.

F. B. O. Announces Short Subjects for November

F B. O. has announced eight short subject releases for the month of November, the program including two episodes of "The Adventures of Mazie," two Standard Fat Men comedies, a Blue Ribbon comedy, and three Bray cartoons.

November 1st is set as the release date for "A Ton of Fun in a Beauty Parlor," starring Fat Karr, Tiny Alexander and Kewpie Ross. The same day will also see the release of a Bray Cartoon as yet untitled.

On November 8th the fifth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" starring Alberta Vaughn will be distributed.

The sixth Bray cartoon, as yet untitled, will be distributed on November 15th, as well as "Hold Tight" a two reel Blue Ribbon comedy starring Alice Ardell.

On November 22nd the sixth episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" will be ready for exhibitors.

A Standard Fat Men Comedy, as yet untitled, will be shown on November 29th, as well as a Bray Cartoon.

Three Episodes of "Mazie" Series Completed

The first three episodes of the "Adventures of Mazie," two-reel series being produced on the west coast by F. B. O. with Alberta Vaughn in the title role, have been completed. The pictures are being directed by Ralph Ceder and present Larry Kent, Al Cooke and Kit Guard in the principal supporting roles.

The stories, which are based on a series written by Nell Martin and were published in a magazine, depict the adventures in business and love of a young stenographer. There will be twelve episodes in the group.

Educational Celebrates New Studio Opening

Many of the best known leaders of filmland attended the reception which marked the opening of the new Educational studios in Los Angeles on October 8th, when the final stage was completed. With the completion of work the company now has five acres of stage space, according to Jack White, in charge of production at the Educational Studios on the west coast.

Second Self-Protection Series Under Way

Leander de Cordova has started the direction of a new series of "The Scandal of America" for Self-Protection Pictures, Inc. The pictures are one-reelers dealing with the present national crime wave and show methods of self-defense whereby the weakest woman may learn to repel the attack of a powerful ruffian. Mme. Grace G. Girard, well known authority on the Japanese art of jiu jitsu is being featured in the series. Each story carries a plot and is complete in itself.

The producers have surrounded Mme. Girard with a cast that includes Tana Kamp, former Follies beauty; Jack Clemence and Tom Blake. Earl Rossman, producer and photographer of "Kivalina of the Icelands," has charge of the camera work for the series.

William Fox Signs New Comedy Leads

Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy, pint-size comedians, have been signed to long term contract by Fox. They will have the leads in a new Irish-Jewish comedy series to be made at the west coast studios shortly. The first of these is "East Side, West Side," which has just been completed under the direction of Benjamin Stoloff.

Fox Starts New Helen and Warren Comedy

Fox has started production on "Hold Everybody," latest of the Helen and Warren series, under the direction of Albert Ray, Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley again have the leading roles. Sidney Bracey, Grace Darmond and Frank Rice have the leading supporting roles.

18 Comedies Completed By Fox

Six Production Units Now Working Under George Marshall's Supervision

THE SIX units producing Fox comedy pictures under the supervision of George E. Marshall have completed eighteen of the productions they are scheduled to make for the current season and six more are now in work. The progress made by the comedy division under Marshall's administration sets a new mark for the Fox studios in the production of the brief entertainments.

Two of the new series of Van Bibber Comedies, "The Sky Jumper" and "A Parisian Knight," were made under Marshall's personal direction. Robert P. Kerr has completed "The Big Game Hunter," "The Wrestler" and "The Feud" and is now preparing to film the sixth Van Bibber.

Daniel Keefe has just completed "Failure," third of the O. Henry series with Harvey Clark as Lawyer Gootch and Kathryn McGuire as Tillie Jones.

Albert Ray is in the midst of filming "Hold Everything," fourth of the Helen and Warren married life Comedies based on Mabel Herbert Urner's stories.

Imperial Comedies, of which there will be twenty in the course of the season, are going forward rapidly. Robert Kerr was drafted from the Van Bibber lot to produce "The Brain Storm," with Sid Smith and Katherine Bennett in the leading roles and Larry Stears as the villain.

Benjamin Stoloff is directing Georgie Harris and Barbara Leddy in "East Side, West Side," the first of a series of Irish-Jewish comedies that will be released under the Imperial brand.

Lew Seiler has just finished filming "Strong For Love," with Sid Smith and Judy King in the leading roles and Stanley Blystone as the villain. Bryan Foy is hard at work on a new comedy as yet untitled.

Assemble Cast for "The Power God," Serial

Following conferences with J. Charles Davis, 2nd, on his recent visit to the coast, Ben Wilson has started casting "The Power God," to be filmed as a fifteen episode serial and distributed by Davis Distributing Division. Mary Brooklyn will be the star and important parts will be assigned to Mary Crane of Chicago and John Battaglia of New York, winners of a contest conducted by newspapers and magazines throughout the country in connection with "The Power God," an original story by Rex Taylor and Harry Haven.

Alice Day Starts Eighth Comedy for Pathe

Alice Day has completed "Gooseland," her seventh Sennett picture for Pathe release, and has started on her next production with Eddie Cline directing. The company is now at work on location scenes at San Pedro.

Ralph Graves also finished another two-reeler. This is entitled "Not So Fast" and shows the comedian as a cop. Thelma Parr is the leading lady.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Children of the Whirlwind

(Arrow—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

LE ROY F. SCOTT'S story about a young crook who determines to "go straight" proves very adequate screen material as presented in this Whitman Bennett production. It offers a good plot, and with crook melodrama that is everything. We are on familiar ground, of course, but the action is quick and the number of complications sufficient to keep the heroic character in that position of uncertainty which never yet has failed to hold an audience.

A mighty good cast has been assembled to enact the play. Johnny Walker as the crafty and likable youth who steadfastly holds to his resolution to keep straight despite the attempts of both police and his former colleagues to "frame" him, furnishes a good characterization. Marguerite DeLaMotte, J. R. Toser, Lionel Barrymore and the others play with conviction and becoming earnestness. It is too long, but so too are ninety-nine out of every hundred features these days.

THEME. Crook melodrama dealing with adventures of young swindler who goes straight despite opposition of the cops and his former colleagues.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The quick action and good supply of effective melodramatic incident. The acting and sympathetic characters.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature first the cast. Author has been widely read and should be exploited. Bill as fast-moving and exciting crook melodrama.

DRAWING POWER. Good for "spot" wherever crook melodrama is popular.

SUMMARY. Well plotted and convincingly acted crook melodrama. It has action and is rich in melodramatic incident. Is interesting throughout.

SYNOPSIS. Larry Brainerd returns to the rendezvous of his colleagues in crime after a "stretch" in jail and announces he will go straight. He escapes the detective who wants to "frame" him and also the crooks, later preventing the girl and her mentors from putting over a "badger game" on a wealthy youth, which wins him the girl and his chance to make good in legitimate enterprise.

A Lover's Oath

(Principal-Astor Distributing Corp. 5800 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

IF all the admirers of the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, and there are many of them, could gather together and view this picture, they would acclaim it as a hit of the year but we do not believe that it will register as an all around attraction for the several different types of audiences, although the beauty of some of the backgrounds, the trick photography, the fine, practically all-star cast, offset some of its disadvantages.

Ramon Novarro and Kathleen Key are the stars, though Edwin Stevens easily runs away with the picture. As the old libertine of a Sheik, his acting is superb.

The Story is adapted from the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam and the old philosopher's verses are interwoven with the entire story.

THEME. A poetical melodrama adapted from the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam by Edward Fitzgerald and the efforts of a Sheik to gain possession of the betrothed of Ben Ali, Omar's son.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Artistic backgrounds, the trick photography and the fine handling of the entire production by Ferdinand P. Earle. The harem of the Sheik, Hassan ben Sabbath and the desert scenes.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Ramon Novarro, and Kathleen Key. Arrange tie-up with book store on the Rubaiyat. The directing ability of F. P. Earle.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well in houses catering to intelligent audiences.

SUMMARY. It was booked in New York City on a double feature day. Has an all star cast, is well directed and the settings are extremely artistic and beautiful.

A Lover's Oath

(Principal-Astor Dist. Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

"A LOVER'S OATH", which will be the attraction at the ——— Theatre, was produced by a new process of revolutionary nature. Director Earle is solely responsible for this process in which backgrounds and sets are made in a unique and novel way. Ramon Novarro has never had a finer role nor one that fitted him better in Ben Ali, the greatest lover of all Persia. The picture was edited by one of today's foremost stars, Milton Sills and directed by Ferdinand P. Earle, noted painter, dramatist and motion picture producer de luxe.

CATCH LINES

Ramon Novarro as Ben Ali, the great lover, risks life for love. . . . and makes good in "A Lover's Oath." Ramon Novarro in a great role. Kathleen Key has never appeared sweeter or with more charm.

The Keeper of the Bees

(F. B. O.—6712 Feet)

(Reviewed by L. C. Moen)

IN the case of a book which has enjoyed the sale already chalked up by Gene Stratton-Porter's "Keeper of the Bees," any comment on the technical merits or shortcomings of the picturization is rather superfluous from a trade angle. Like "The Girl of the Limberlost," this can scarcely fail to do business—and mighty good business. At the same time, one cannot help feeling a little sorry that the inherent possibilities in the story were not brought out more sharply.

One expects nature study material in a Stratton-Porter story, and more footage devoted to the bees would not have been amiss The hero's restoration to health and happiness through the example of that industrious and admirable creature, the bee, could have been made both fascinating and novel.

As it stands, most of the footage is devoted to the tangled marital relations of the hero, who is married and not a husband, and through rather inadequate direction many of these scenes are neither convincing nor unusual. However, the Gene Stratton-Porter fans in any community will make the nucleus of a man-sized audience, and this picture should appeal strongly to any save the more sophisticated audiences. But we'll always be sorry we didn't see more of the bees!

THEME. Restoration to health of a disabled war veteran through his contact with nature, and his romance with a fair neighbor.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Sincere performance by Robert Frazer. Natural characterization by Gene Stratton. The bee scenes. The storm.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the author heavily and tie up with bookstores and library on the book. Put a bee-hive, enclosed in glass, in the lobby. Tie up with grocers on honey.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well through popularity of book and strength of cast. Not especially good for sophisticated audiences.

SUMMARY. Average picturization of popular novel, with excellent cast and laid in attractive settings.

THE CAST

James Lewis MacFarlane.....Robert Frazer
The Bee Master.....Josef Swickard
Margaret Cameron.....Martha Mattox
Lolly.....Clara Bow
Molly.....Alyce Mills
The Little Scout.....Gene Stratton

From the novel by Gene Stratton-Porter. Direction and continuity by J. Leo Meehan. Photographed by John Boyle.

SYNOPSIS. The hero, a disabed vet, runs away from army hospital when he learns he has short time to live. Befriends aged bee keeper, who dies and leaves him property. Healthy exercise and care of neighboring woman restore his vitality. Neighbor's daughter tricks him into marriage under her sister's name, to provide legal protection for erring sister. This girl dies in giving birth to child, and hero finds happiness with girl with whom he went through ceremony.

PRESS NOTICE

THE many admirers of Gene Stratton-Porter in this city will be delighted to learn that an entertaining motion picture adapted from her last novel will be the attraction at the ———— theatre on ————, according to announcement by the manager. This is "The Keeper of the Bees," based on the late author's last, and some say greatest, work.

A brilliant cast interprets the leading roles in the story, including Robert Frazer, Clara Bow, Alyce Mills, Martha Mattox, Josef Swickard and little Gene Stratton.

CATCH LINES

He ran away from the hospital to die by the sea, but instead he found renewed health and joy awaiting him as "The Keeper of the Bees."

Gene Stratton-Porter's greatest novel made into a beautiful and inspiring motion picture.

Exchange of Wives

(Metro-Goldwyn—6300 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS comedy is of pretty light texture as regards plot, even for a comedy, where thin stories are usually tolerated generously. An adaptation of one of Cosmo Hamilton's plays, the paring down process supposed to be necessary for the screen has reduced the narrative to a harmlessly amusing film, with some bright spots, but on the whole a rather weak production. Still many patrons will laugh over the adventures of the two wives, each attracted by the other's hubby, and the excellent acting of the entire cast. Renee Adoree is extremely captivating and saucily alluring as the coquettish Elise, Eleanor Boardman gives a remarkably fine performance as Margaret; while Lew Cody, as John Rathburn, and Creighton Hale, as Victor Moran, are decidedly effective in their respective roles.

From an artistic standpoint the feature ranks high. There are many handsome interiors with elaborate settings and the photography throughout is of first-class quality. Director Hobart Henley has kept the action moving swiftly throughout and the continuity links up smoothly.

THEME. Domestic comedy in which two wives are temporarily attracted by each others' husbands.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The excellent acting, colorful atmosphere, ornate settings, complications which ensue over the cooking arrangements and clever climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The four principals mentioned in the cast are all worth featuring as they are well and favorably known to the fans. Play this up as a very funny comedy of domestic entanglements, with unique situations.

DRAWING POWER. Should get by in most houses on strength of the title, the author's fame and strong cast, but is hardly likely to make big box office records.

SUMMARY. Acting, settings, atmosphere O. K. Doesn't rank as a strong comedy, but is good enough to get by in most houses, provided it is properly exploited.

THE CAST

Margaret Rathburn.....Eleanor Boardman
John Rathburn.....Lew Cody
Elise Moran.....Renee Adoree
Victor Moran.....Creighton Hale

Author, Cosmo Hamilton. Director, Hobart Henley. Photographed by Benjamin F. Reynolds.

SYNOPSIS. Two couples, John and Margaret Rathburn, and Victor and Elise Moran are next-door neighbors. After being married a year they all reach a stage where they are for a time incompatible. Elsie flirts desperately with John, while Victor finds consolation in the sympathy and excellent cooking of Margaret. The situation becomes intolerable and they resolve to test matters by going to camp, with each woman cooking for the other's husband. Many amusing and near tragic complications ensue, but finally everything is straightened out and all ends well.

Exchange of Wives (Metro-Goldwyn)

PRESS NOTICE

A WHIMSICAL comedy entitled "Exchange of Wives" will be the leading screen attraction at the ———— Theatre on ————. It concerns the marital troubles of two couples after being wedded one year. Each wife becomes temporarily attracted by the other's husband and although matters are straightened out in the end, there are any number of funny complications and near-tragedy incidents before peace reigns in each household.

The cast is practically an all star aggregation, consisting of Eleanor Boardman and Renee Adoree as the opposing wives; and Lew Cody and Creighton Hale in the husband roles.

CATCH LINES

Do you think domestic troubles could be solved by a partial exchange of wives for cooking purposes

A Regular Fellow

(Paramount—5027 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE original title of this one was "He's A Prince," but as a matter of fact they could have called it any old thing and it would still stand out as one of the best comedies sponsored by Paramount in a dog's age. It would be hard to fancy a vehicle better suited to the talents of the star—versatile Raymond Griffith, there is a trifle more slap-stick stuff in the action than has previously been associated with the work of that breezy comedian, but the whirlwind humor is exactly in line with the story's absurdly farcial trend and it's all very amusing and a genuine, guaranteed cure for the blues.

Raymond Griffith has certainly never appeared to such good advantage as in this film and the support is excellent,

THEME. Farce comedy, with prince for hero who doesn't like his job, is forced into all kinds of royal activities, welcomes a revolution, is made president of New Republic and weds girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Good direction and clever acting of star and support. Witty subtitles and fine continuity. Scene where prince presides at ship-launching, also that where dog keeps bringing back the bomb.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as Griffith's first starring comedy. Call the fan's attention to the fact that he scored heavily in "Changing Husbands," "Forty Winks," "Miss Bluebeard," "The Night Club" and "Paths to Paradise."

DRAWING POWER. Should prove a winning box office attraction for all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. A sure-fire hit comedy, one of the season's best, with Rayond Griffith getting the laughs all the way through, assisted by splendid cast. Ought to be a big box office magnet.

THE CAST

Prince ..... Raymond Griffith
Girl ..... Mary Brian
King ..... Tyrone Power
Prince's Valet ..... Edgar Norton
Revolutionist ..... Nigel de Bruliere
Prime Minister ..... Gustav Von Seyffertitz
Girls's Companion ..... Kathleen Kirkham

Authors, Reginald Morris and Joseph Mitchell. Directed by Edward Sutherland. Photographed by Charles Boyle.

SYNOPSIS. Young European prince falls in love with girl but is prevented from meeting her by official duties which include ship-launchings, judging Baby shows, reviewing troops, etc. Whenever he gets a chance to talk to her, they are surrounded by hundreds who recognize him. One day he starts to run after her, is pursued by the Prime Minister and informed that his father is dead and he is the king. He arranges to have a revolution take place. It does, but they elect him president of the new Republic. But he gets the girl.

A Regular Fellow (Paramount)
PRESS NOTICE

THERE'S a real treat in store for the patrons of the ——— Theatre on ——— when "A Regular Fellow" comes to the screen. This film is the first comedy starring feature with Raymond Griffith as the bright and particular light, but the fans who have seen him in important roles in other productions will assuredly flock to witness his work in this one. The role fits Griffith perfectly, the picture has received unqualified praise from every critic in the country.

Griffith appears as a young European prince, sick of his job and in love with girl whom his royal duties prevent from meeting. It is a veritable whirlwind of fun. Mary Brian is the heroine, with a brilliant supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

His High Hat Highness, The Prince of Laughter, is with us again. Be sure you are on hand when Raymond Griffith makes his appearance in "A Regular Fellow."

The Pace That Thrills

(First National—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

IT is hard to believe that Byron Morgan who turned out all those good Wallie Reid automobile stories, is responsible for the tale unreeled here. And while the plot is weak the manner in which it has been transplanted to the screen is even worse. It seems that an effort has been made to jam in everything. There is a no'er-do-well dashing after his wife and baby with a pair of scissors and falling down stairs himself to an untimely end, there is a bull fight, a prize fight, an auto race and whatnot. There are many unconvincing situations.

THEME. Comedy drama of a youthful movie star who has to bear the brand of cowardice because he cannot afford to take chances as his mother needs him to aid in obtaining a pardon from jail.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The bull and prize fights. The auto race in which the hero goes thru the track. The dash from the city to the course where the hero arrives in time to get in the event.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Try and get a racing auto and put it on the streets with the driver in racing costume and with the car carrying appropriate advertising. Tie up with local auto dealers on this theme, "Enjoy the 'Pace That Thrills,' in a ——— Sedan." Play up the names of Ben Lyon and Mary Astor.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for second class downtown houses, community theatres and towns.

SUMMARY. Much ado about nothing, but it may please some audiences in smaller houses. An unconvincing plot and a poorly produced picture with a big auto race as a saving factor.

THE CAST

Danny Wade ..... Ben Lyon
Doris ..... Mary Astor
Duke ..... Charles Beyer
Hezekiah Sims ..... Tully Marshall
The Director ..... Wheeler Oakman
John Van Loren, Sr ..... Thomas Holding
Jack Van Loren, Jr ..... Warner Richmond
Paula ..... Fritzi Brunette
Toreador ..... Paul Ellis

By Byron Morgan. Directed by Webster Campbell. Personal Supervision, Earl Hudson.

SYNOPSIS: Danny Wade, is unable to tell that the reason he will not take any chances in his pictures, is that he is working to get his mother out of jail where she was sent on perjured testimony accusing her of murdering her husband. Danny even refuses to drive in an auto race even though his reputation, future and "the" girl is at stake. His mother's case suddenly come up before the pardon board. He hastens to the hearing. His mother is freed. He then rushes for the race arriving in time to "get in," but is injured when the track gives way. He then proves to the world that it was not cowardice that made him refuse to take chances.

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of those popular Byron Morgan auto stories in which the late Wallace Reid won fame will welcome the announcement that Ben Lyon will appear at the ——— theatre on ——— in an original tale by this author which furnishes as many thrills as the most jaded fan could desire. Ben seems an ideal successor to Mr. Reid as a portrayer of exuberant youth. He is supported by beautiful Mary Astor, and a fine cast including Tully Marshall, Thomas Holding, Charles Beyer, Wheeler Oakman and others.

The big thrill of the picture is the auto race.

CATCH LINES

"The Winding Stair"

(Fox—5700 Feet)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS story, a mixture of intrigue, romance and fighting, nicely moulded together and rather tastefully dished up is almost sure fire stuff to the general run of picture patrons. The story is very implausible in spots and at times the cast is inclined to overact a bit, but these are things that can easily be overlooked in the continuous action. It is a war story, starting in Morocco and winding up in the trenches of the world war, where the hero vindicates himself, if vindication is necessary, for his desertion of the Moroccan forces.

Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe and Mahlon Hamilton head the cast, and do generally good work, though Lowe is inclined at times to overact his heroic role. The work of Miss Rubens is an outstanding feature.

THEME. A romantic war story in which the hero, an officer of the French Foreign Legion, deserts for love of the girl and to save her from mutinous tribesmen, only later to re-establish himself as a hero of the world war.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The hand to hand fighting between the French Foreign Legion and the mutinous tribesmen. The realistic reproduction of world war scenes. Paul's heroic dash to reopen the gates for the returning soldiers.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The fierce fighting between the Legion and the tribesmen; the world war scenes, which have been realistically reproduced, and the exceptionally good cast.

DRAWING POWER. Should go well in almost any type house, but will be particularly attractive in all but the largest cities.

SUMMARY. This is a picture replete with action, having an abundance of suspense and particularly appealing in its battle scenes. It is well acted and the story is well sustained throughout.

THE CAST

Marguerite	Alma Rubens
Paul	Edmund Lowe
Petras	Warner Oland
Gerard	Mahlon Hamilton
Mme. Muller	Emily Fitzroy
Onery	Chester Conklin
Andrea	Frank Leigh

Story by A. E. W. Mason. Directed by John Griffith Wray.

SYNOPSIS. Paul Ravenal an officer in the French Foreign Legion deserts the Legion for love of Marguerite Lambert, who through unfortunate circumstances has been forced to become a cafe dancer in Morocco. The desertion is the result of Paul's knowledge that the girl is in imminent danger of being slain as a foreigner by a rebellious mob, who through a ruse have drawn the army from the city. Held as a deserter, Paul makes his escape and joins the American army in the world war. He becomes a hero and is decorated for his bravery. Wounded, he is rejoined in a hospital by Marguerite, who is serving as a Red Cross nurse. She takes her place as his wife.

"The Winding Stair" (Fox)

PRESS NOTICE

"THE WINDING STAIR," a Fox picture, which comes to the ——— Theatre next ———, is a thrilling tale of romance, intrigue and fighting, with the battle scenes laid in Morocco and the trenches of the World War. The story is enacted by a stellar cast which is headed by Edmund Lowe, Alma Rubens and Mahlon Hamilton.

This is out of the usual run of war pictures, though battle scenes of the world war have been accurately reproduced. It abounds in suspense with most of the action laid in Morocco.

Both Edmund Lowe and Alma Rubens contribute sterling performances in their respective roles.

CATCH LINES

You have seen war pictures before, but not one of this type. It is gripping in every foot of film and will thrill you as you have rarely been thrilled by a picture before.

Classified

(First National—6927 Feet)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

FOR its brightness, pace and the telling appeal of its characters "Classified" deserves a high rating as screen entertainment. This most recent Corinne Griffith vehicle seems to this reviewer one of her best in a long while and there is a disposition to rate the picture this star's best box office bet since "Black Oxen."

"Classified," while totally dissimilar, has that swing and brightness which we think won the applause of reviewers and fans for "Manslaughter." It is smart entertainment, with a buoyant quality of mirth rippling over the surface of a very substantial story of life-like and likeable people. It has its emotional appeal as well. Indeed, no hectic devices of roaring melodrama could stir the spectator to a keener interest in the characters or give more "punch" to the situation in which the heroine finally triumphs. Miss Griffith has excellent support from Jack Mulhall, capital as the hero, Ward Crane, Charlie Murray, Carroll Nye and the other principals of the cast. The work is a glowing tribute to the taste and skill of Al Santell.

THEME. Comedy of New York dealing with a girl who lives in a tenement and uses her wits to enjoy the pleasures and luxuries of those who reside on Fifth Avenue.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The extraordinarily human and likeable characters and superb acting. The appeal of the story and its convincing portrayal of an interesting phase of New York life.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. The star, of course, and her supporting cast. The author, Edna Ferber, who has a big following. Stress it as a very human vehicle.

DRAWING POWER. Seems capable of attracting big audiences everywhere.

SUMMARY. A sparkling comedy of New York life. Story is finely treated and acting and production just about perfect. One of the best pictures Miss Griffith has done.

THE CAST

Babs Comet	Corrine Griffith
Lloyd Whiting	Jack Mulhall
Spencer Clark	Ward Crane
Mart Comet	Carroll Nye
Old Man Comet	Charles Murray
"Maw" Comet	Edythe Chapman
Jeanette Comet	Jacqueline Wells

Story by Edna Ferber. Directed by Alfred A. Santell.

Synopsis. Deals with a girl who spends all her salary for clothes and bluffs her way into acquaintance with wealthy men about town. Her wits are always equal to the occasion which may arise but finally she gets into a compromising situation, walking home from the country where her escort's car "broke down." The escort is confronted by parents and he answers by asking their consent to his marriage with Babs. But Babs loves a garage mechanic and refuses wealth to marry him.

PRESS NOTICE

A BRILLIANT adaptation of Edna Ferber's "Classified" will be offered on the screen of the ——— on ———, with Corrine Griffith in the role of the New York working girl who uses her wits to gain her acquaintance with men of wealth and position.

The picture has been commented upon as Miss Griffith's most appealing and interesting vehicle since "Black Oxen." It is a bubbling comedy concerning life-like people and endowed with many striking dramatic situations. The star is supported by Jack Mulhall, Ward Crane, Charles Murray, Edythe Chapman, Jacqueline Wells and George Sidney.

CATCH LINES

A sparkling comedy of New York life, filled with genuine, clean humor and moving dramatic episodes.

Corine Griffith in the most interesting characterization she has ever done for the pictures.

The Fear Fighter

(Rayart Pictures—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE pugilistic arena has been utilized as the background for so many pictures of mediocre grade and inferior material that it comes as a pleasant surprise when one runs across such abright and entertaining film of gloveland as "The Fear Fighter." There are certain localities where this picture should go over big, there are others where some of the situations may be sneered at as over-melodramatic and impossible.

One thing is pretty certain, however, its admirers will outnumber the detractors. As to the ring episode, any old-time pugilist, or writer of the game can tell you of incidents where a man has battled for several rounds, "out on his feet," as they say, finally recovering from what amounts to a state of coma and coming home a winner.

The sporting element will like the feature sure, Billy Sullivan is as pretty a boxer and alluring hero as one could wish to see, and the ordinary fan will hail the yarn as a real thriller.

THEME. Comedy-drama. Hero young chap who learns the fighting game during a period when he is suffering from loss of memory, recovers after curious adventure, makes good and gets girl he wants.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Lively action, good stunt stuff, comedy touches, fight scenes, capable direction and great finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up hero Billy Sullivan as the young fellow who made good in the "Leather Pusher" and "Fast Stepper" series, as the fans are sure to remember his good work in both.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where patrons want quick action, fun and thrills for their money.

SUMMARY. A fast-moving bright comedy-drama where circumstances make a young chap a pugilist against his will. Plot has unusual twist, holds interest throughout and speeds into fine climax. Should do well at box office.

THE CAST

Billy Griffin.....Billy Sullivan
Katherine Curtis.....Ruth Dwyer
James Curtis.....J. P. McGowan
Mother Griffin.....Billy Bennett
Young Dillon.....Phil Salvadore

Author, Grover Jones. Director, Albert Rogell. Photographed by Ross Fisher.

SYNOPSIS. Jim Curtis, boxing manager, refuses to allow Billy Griffin to wed his daughter Katherine, unless he proves he can fight for her. Billy, knowing nothing of the glove game, tackles Jim but is knocked out and loses his memory. A former ring champion, recognizing the value of Billy's undeveloped punch, takes the lad in hand. While still in a memory daze Billy encounters and defeats several good men. Finally Curtis matches him with Dillon. Just prior to the fight he injures his head and his memory returns. This results in his being nearly whipped, but Katherine wisely taunts him into fury and he knocks out Dillon. The lovers are united.

PRESS NOTICE

"THE FEAR FIGHTER," which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———, stars Billy Sullivan whom so many fans will recollect as the hero of the "Leather Pushers" series. It is a bright comedy-drama, alive with thrills and snappy action, and sympathetic love romance which ends happily.

How his memory returns at a crucial moment in the ring, when he hears the voice of the girl he loves, is set forth in one of the most exciting fight scenes ever filmed. Ruth Dwyer is the heroine. J. P. McGowan and other celebrated players are in the cast.

CATCH LINES

A story of the ring, showing how Love conquered Fear.

He was staggering to defeat, the insults of the mob failed to thrill him, but the voice of the girl he loved turned him into a raging demon of vengeance, and his opponent crashed into oblivion.

Off the Highway

(Producers Distributing Corp.—7641 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

IF the title of this picture is meant to suggest that it travels far off the beaten trail, there is no disputing its accuracy. For "Off the Highway" offers an ingenious and altogether unusual plot, handled with rare good judgment by director and players, an attraction registering undeniable audience appeal. The melodramatic effects may be stretched a bit, but that doesn't detract in the least from the entertaining powers of the film, which is beautifully photographed, well acted and a credit to all concerned in its production. John Bowers and Marguerite de La Motte do very fine work in the hero and heroine roles, but it must be conceded that the masterly work of William V. Mong in the dual portrayal of Caleb Fry and Tatterly stands out in bold relief.

THEME. Heart interest tale with melodramatic punches. Chief character miserly old uncle whose meanness almost blights lives of young lovers, but repents at end.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The capable direction, good acting of principals and supporting cast. The excellent photography, including really unique double exposure effects and lavish displays of life in artist quarter.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this one up not only as an unique story in which a man pretends to die in order to get a line on his relatives, but, as it deals with the struggles of a young artist, you would do well to have your throwaways cut in the shape of a pallette.

DRAWING POWER. Good investment for any house, big or little.

SUMMARY. Has general audience appeal, unusual plot and puts over some great emotional and melodramatic punches. Work of the cast especially deserving of praise.

THE CAST

Caleb Fry, Tatterly } William V. Mong
Ella Tarrant.....Marguerite De La Motte
Donald Brett.....John Bowers
Hector Kindon.....Charles Gerard
The Master.....Joseph Swickard

Adapted from Tom Gallon's Novel, "Tatterly." Director, Tom Forman.

SYNOPSIS. Old Caleb Fry lives alone with Tatterly who resembles him strongly. Caleb is guardian of his nephew Donald Brett, who refuses to follow up a mercantile career, separates from his uncle and turns artist, incidentally falling in love with Ella Tarrant. Caleb, enraged, settles fortune on cousin Kindon, finds Tatterly dead and assumes his personality. In his disguise he is able to watch his relatives, finds that Kindon is a worthless scoundrel and Donald and Ella the only ones who treat him kindly. Finding Kindon hopelessly drunk, Caleb takes a large sum of money, a panic starts on the Exchange, Kindon wakes to find himself ruined, kills himself, Caleb sends the money to Donald and Ella, who wed immediately and he goes to them in the country.

The Last Edition

(Emery Johnson Production-F. B. O.)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

EMORY JOHNSON has scored again. This time, after doing the honors to the firemen, mailmen, railroad workers, etc., he has woven a stirring story around the business of getting out a big daily newspaper and in the telling takes the observer through every step the "story" goes in getting in on the street.

"The Last Edition," like other Johnson offerings, is loaded with sure-fire punch scenes. There is excitement galore as the newspaper seeks to bring to justice a notorious bootlegger who in turn has framed a bribe charge against the assistant foreman's son. The explosion in the newspaper plant and the subsequent fire which calls out the whole Frisco army of flame fighters is a climax few will forget.

THEME. A melodrama of newspaper life in which a bootlegger and a crooked assistant district attorney seeks to frame a bribery charge against the son of the assistant foreman of a newspaper composing room.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The scene in which young McDonald is arrested on a charge of bribery. The sequence showing "getting out" the "extra." The fight between McDonald and the bully foreman. The explosion and fire. The crash of the Chronicle building.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Arrange with your local newspaper to print a front page like the one the Frisco Chronicle got out, copy of which F.B.O. office will furnish.

DAWING POWER. Exploitation possibilities should make this a box office winner in most any house. Has action that will entertain any audience.

SUMMARY. One of the best pictures F.B.O. has released in many, many moons. There is something doing every minute, the cast is well selected, there is a climax with a punch plus.

SYNOPSIS. Dan McDonald, because of his age, looses out when a new foreman is appointed in the Chronicle composing room. Dan's son Rey is arrested on a trumped up charge of bribery, framed by a crooked district attorney's deputy who is mixed up with a notorious bootlegger. When the story comes out, Dan tries to wreck the presses to stop its publication. He is knocked out by "bull" Collins, the new foremon. The plant is blown up by "Red" McGann, but Dan is accused of the deed. Later the guilty persons are discovered by Polly McDonald, Dan's daughter, phone operator. Dan and Rey are freed. Dan is made foreman. A new newspaper plant is built.

Wandering Fires

(Arrow—Seven Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS picturization of Warner Fabian's "Wandering Fires" is cut to the popular pattern and it should register as a box office attraction everywhere. The play introduces the late war and goes into the trodden path by showing a character, who was thought killed in action, returning after several years of roaming as a victim of mental aphasia. But before this happens the author, and as regards the picture the director as well, has so involved the spectator's interest in a situation that is more novel and convincing, that the reaction to the Enoch Arden device is not one of apathy by any means.

Wallace MacDonald has the leading male role, which he does creditably on the whole but overacts considerably in spots. Constance Bennett does splendid work as the heroine and George Hackathorn contributes a telling performance as the soldier. The plot is an interesting one and has been handled very effectively. It is an excellent picture of its type, and we think it will score as a box office attraction.

THEME. Romantic melodrama concerning a girl whose lover was supposed killed in the war, but who returns years after when she is married to another.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Melodramatic power of scene in which heroine exposes herself to scandal to clear the name of her lover. Effective flashes of the war and a genuine air of conviction which pervades the entire work.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up author, Warner Fabian, who is famous for his "Flaming Youth" and "Sailors' Wives." Cast provides many good names for publicity purposes.

DRAWING POWER. Romantic melodrama of a type that should appeal. Should score in all types of theatres.

SUMMARY. A rather compelling melodrama employing many effective and unusual situations in combination with familiar devices introduced by plays dealing with the war. Well plotted and treated with considerable skill. It is a bit long-winded but has dramatic power.

THE CAST

Guerda Anthony.....Constance Bennett
Raymond Carroll.....George Hackathorne
Norman Yuell.....Wallace MacDonald
Mrs. Carroll.....Henrietta Crosman
Mrs. Satorius.....Effie Shannon

By Warner Fabian. Directed by Maurice Campbell.

SYNOPSIS. Despite the scandal connected with her name, Norman Yuell, a youth of Puritan ideas, marries Guerda Anthony. The scandal resulted from her confession that she spent the entire night with Ray Carroll, to whom she was engaged, before he went overseas, where he was reported killed, subsequently. The confession was made to clear his name of a charge of giving information to the enemy, a charge brought by an enemy spy after the boy was reported dead. Ray returns after years of roaming as the victim of mental aphasia and he prevents the marriage of Guerda and Norman going on the rocks, because of a brooding jealousy which the husband develops.

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THE story of the girl who forgives the sins of her sweetheart but whose own go unforgiven by him until it is too late, receives a sincere and earnest treatment in this presentation. This trait of sincerity and an adequate production give the picture a quality which makes it hold the interest despite an inherent lack of dramatic substance. It is a play which gets the characters nowhere in particular, the end showing the heroine bathing her bridal boquet with tears of bitterness over the fact that the man she loved and was faithful to had come back to her just a few moments after she had married another.

There is a glittering background of theatrical life, for it is a play concerned with a girl who starts as a dancer in an East Side saloon and later achieves stardom on Broadway. The author has been kind to theatrical managers.

Elaine Hammerstein has a very emotional role as the heroine and succeeds fairly with it. Theodore Von Eltz gives a consistent portrayal as the hero and John Sainpolis is interesting as the theatrical manager. Stuart Holmes does the villain role.

THEME. Melodrama about an actress who is misjudged by her sweetheart, though she has remained faithful to him even through his days of adversity and misfortune.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The acting and production, both of which are sincere. The several melodramatic situations and the glamor of the back-stage scenes. The appeal of the character of the actress.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a romance of the stage that remains faithful to the end to real life. A story that is different and that daringly adheres to realities.

DRAWING POWER. Has many qualities that will appeal, but is for adults of a sentimental trend. A fair program attraction.

SUMMARY. Is rather interesting but sentimental melodrama, well played and staged but story gets you nowhere in particular.

THE CAST

Mary Dolan	Elaine Hammerstein
Jimmy Evarts	Theodore Von Eltz
Mrs. Evarts	Mrs. Chas. G. Craig
Mark Kelsey	John Sainpolis
Phillip Andrews	Stuart Holmes

Story by Harvey Gates. Directed by Hunt Stromberg.

SYNOPSIS. Sweetheart of girl who dances at an East Side saloon steals a purse from a man who picked it from the pocket of a leading theatrical producer. He is caught and sent to jail but the dancer, now in a Broadway show remains faithful to him. Afterwards he spurns her because he finds her in compromising position at apartments of libertine. He roams about and then comes back to forgive Mary but is too late, for she has married the producer of the show.

Elaine Hammerstein, starred by Chadwick Pictures in "Paint and Powder."

PRESS NOTICE

THE romance of a dancer, who wins fame as the star of a Broadway musical comedy is presented with a realism which mirrors life itself in "Paint and Powder," the feature attraction announced by the ————theatre for ————. No concessions to romance are made in this unusual picture, which shows the glamorous backgrounds of Broadway theatrical life during the unfolding of an appealing drama concerned with a dancer who forgives the sins of her sweetheart but lives to know the irony of having forgiveness withheld

Elaine Hammerstein has a highly emotional role in that of Mary Dolan, a part that affords the actress a wide scope for her talent and personal charm.

CATCH LINES

A picture that will win your heart and engage your eye. Moving romance set against a background of glittering Broadway's theatrical life.

Married?

(Jans Productions—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

SHADES of the ten-twenty-thirty! How they will applaud when they sit in on this one and see the hero, lashed to a log, heading for the big buzz saw as the half breed girl swims through the treacherous stream and turns off the water power just as the teeth of said saw are about to give our hero a boyish bob and then some. What a treat the gallery gods of yesteryear would consider the climax of this film "meller." There is nothing new in the plot which once again shows the "cave man" carrying off the spoiled society girl into the wilderness to tame her. In the background of this theme is the battle for a large estate valuable for its water power resources.

THEME. A melodramatic romance of a marriage by proxy in which a head strong flapper is borne away by her husband into the big woods to be tamed.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fights between the rival bands of woodmen. The wedding by telephone. The meeting of the husband and wife. The "kidnaping" of the bride.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Owen Moore and Constance Bennett. This is your best selling point. Try and get a couple to be married on your stage and tie up with local merchants to offer prizes to the newlyweds.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for second class downtown houses, community theatres and towns. Also O. K. for houses playing double features.

SUMMARY. A fair program picture with a rather hackneyed plot and a climax that recalls the old "meller" days. Popularity of leading players will help you sell it.

THE CAST

Dennis Shawn	Owen Moore
Marcia Livingston	Constance Bennett
Mary Jane Paul	Betty Bilburn
Judge Tracey	John Costello
Chuck English	Antrim Short
Harvey Williams	Frank Walsh
Kate	Evangeline Russell

From the novel by Marjorie Bention Cooke. Directed by George Terwilliger. Scenario by Jean Conover. Photographed by Louis H. Dunmyre and Walter Blakely.

SYNOPSIS. Deals with the battle of two great interests to obtain title to a vast estate on which mountain streams furnish water power. An old lady living on an adjoining estate controls original title to all the holdings. Her manager, Dennis Shawn, advises her against selling out to rival interests, but the old lady, pretending illness, threatens to do so unless Dennis marries Marcia Livingston, spoiled heiress to the land. After many difficulties this is arranged. There is a phone wedding. Later the husband "kidnaps" his bride and takes her into the wilds to tame her. The rival interests attempt Dennis' life, but he is saved by a half breed girl. All ends happily.

Owen Moore, who plays a featured role in "Married," a Jans production.

PRESS NOTICE

CONSTANCE BENNETT, who did such creditable work in "The Goose Hangs High," and "My Son," and Owen Moore, hero of countless picture successes, are co-starred in "Married," a melodramatic romance of the western timber country and New York's social whirl which will be shown in the ———— theatre on ————. There is an abundance of dramatic incident in this action-packed tale.

The production abounds in attractive outdoor scenes, as well as views of the New York mansion interiors. The tenseness of the plot is relieved now and then by some clever comedy. There is an excellent supporting cast.

CATCH LINES

Rare drama, delightful outdoor scenes, a good story, an all-star cast. All here.

The man disliked the girl, the girl hated the man, but they were told they must marry. The story of a young couple who were not sure whether they were wed or not.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Tower of Lies"—M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Telegram: "Now and again we are privileged to behold an offering of the silent drama of such merit and character that our supplementary diet of pictorial pille is almost forgotten in a floodtide of gratitude. Of such a rare order is 'The Tower of Lies.' Unlike most motion picture adaptations, characterizations has not been systematically reduced to action. There is none of the automatic 'going through the motions' when the director pulls the strings. We have four clearly defined studies of the four leading characters, each carefully conceived and sincerely portrayed. And the genius of Victor Seastrom, who credits the average spectator with a grain of intelligence and a suspicion of imagination, has combined them into one of the most harmonious and well constructed pictures that Broadway has seen in a long while."

Sun: "The talents of Victor Seastrom, bloom in their finest flower in 'The Tower of Lies,' a poetic, imaginatively staged photoplay. That should be considered in the nature of a command to attend one of its showings at the Capitol this week, where additional delight may be obtained through witnessing Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer in the distinctive acts of giving their finest performances."

Graphic: "The picture is a triumph of artistic directing and acting. While Lon Chaney has done more spectacular things, he has never been called upon to do anything which so indelibly stamps him as perhaps the greatest character artist on the screen. Norma Shearer as Glory is perfect. The role couldn't be better done. The same may be said of the mother, Claire McDowell."

Daily News: "Here, you feel, are great gifts. Rarely has a director put a story on the screen with such fine restraint, such poetical simplicity. 'The Tower of Lies' is drama at its best. It is realism coated with romance. Seastrom has set his moods with the wind and the rain and the sun, and achieves some unforgetable pictures. You are carried away to another land, other people, by the moving story and the fine characterizations by Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer."

Telegraph: "There is an outstanding fine bill at the Capitol Theatre this week. 'The Tower of Lies' is an exceptional moving picture, beautifully directed and a far cry from the hackneyed, trite stories which our producers glory in producing. To my mind the performance of Katrina, the mother, by Claire McDowell, is one of the finest bits of acting the screen has ever shown. Norma Shearer is splendid. Lon Chaney is very fine as the father, and William Haines is sincere as the young man."

World: "What this reviewer would wish to say at the earliest possible moment is that Lon Chaney's performance in 'The Tower of Lies' is one of the most fascinating which he has seen in months. This serious-minded and prolific screen actor is one of the very best and certainly the foremost player of parts whose moods are primarily those of grotesque tragedy. Then there is the starry-eyed and wholly beautiful Norma Shearer. Let us advise the discerning to go and see this film and be pleased with the journey."

Vera Reynolds in "Without Mercy," a Producers Distributing Corp. release.

Evening World: "'The Tower of Lies' is an absorbing drama of the lives of simple folk, simply, beautifully and convincingly portrayed on the screen. It is a credit to all concerned in the making, but most of all to the director, Victor Seastrom. No outline can do justice to either the novel or the photoplay. Each deals with real people. Each is strong in the power of simplicity. Director Seastrom repeatedly uses the device of symbolism with telling effect. Intelligent and adequate direction and action reduces the need for subtitles."

American: "I have seldom seen anything finer than the work-ridden old peasant played by Claire McDowell. And what a performance Lon Chaney gives as Jan, the hard-working, poverty stricken farmer! Norma Shearer is excellent as Glory. Ian Keith gives a most creditable account of himself. In fact, all the characterizations are exceptionally well done, even the one of the boy, played by William Haines."

Post: "This film, featuring the work of that trio responsible for 'He Who Gets Slapped'—Lon Chaney, Norma Shearer and Director Victor Seastrom—is brilliantly conceived and acted with a sincerity that is impressive. Yes, impressive is the only word for it. Down to the smallest detail it is effectively worked out and executed with a smoothness not even encountered in week-to-work movie fare. So plausible, so inevitable, are the happenings of this tale, the reactions of its characters, that all seems in harmony. Mr. Chaney and Miss Shearer do their best work in months,—in fact, it may very well be the best so far."

Brooklyn Eagle: "'The Tower of Lies' is as artistic and as moving a production as has appeared in some time. Victor Seastrom, who directed it, deserves a good deal of credit for the sincere artistry with which this tale has been picturized. He has been aided and abetted by the services of Lon Chaney and Norma Shearer."

"The Dark Angel"—1st National, Loew's State. L. A.

Times: "'The Dark Angel' really proves to be a winning dark horse on the race course of romantic film drama. Ronald Colman is superb as the soldier. Not only is his acting excellent, but for some reason or other he is romance incarnate on the screen. There is always something entirely inscrutable about him for one thing, despite his fire, magnetism and looks. Vilma Banky is exquisitely appealing."

Examiner: "'The Dark Angel' as done for the screen, proves a drama of intensive emotion and well balanced comedy and pathos. It is also an outstanding vehicle for Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman. Vilma Banky has beauty, grace and remarkable personality. Beside that she can act. Colman presents a splendid figure throughout the production, and takes advantage of his many opportunities with skill and artistry."

Express: "War and its aftermath have rarely been given a more sincere treatment than as found in the 'Dark Angel.' An intensely gripping story. 'The Dark Angel' is sentimental without being mawkish and romantic without being silly. It treats of the World War without spending too much time in the trenches."

Herald: "'The Dark Angel' is one of the few great war pictures. It is pure screen romance. Vilma Banky is a fine actress, playing her part with sympathy and power. As fine as Vilma Banky is, Ronald Colman's portrayal of Alan Trent is the outstanding feature of the picture. The understanding with which he plays the blind soldier is touching."

Record: "A powerful drama of love and devotion. Vilma Banky is an actress of genuine talent. She has a perfect screen personality. We consider her in the future's lineup of stars. And Ronald Colman gives a supreme performance. The heart interest is sustained throughout. The film is brimful of sentimental lure and is always convincing. It is beautifully photographed."

Times: "Quite in the foreground among the more romantic themes in the revival of interest in filming stories of European conflict is 'The Dark Angel.' Taste and sympathy are disclosed to an interesting degree in the treatment accorded the more serious scenes. Ronald Colman gives one of his finest performances. Colman's interpretation is quite an achievement in technique. Miss Banky is possessed of a radiant refinement and loveliness. She may indeed be hailed as a truly notable screen 'find.'"

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Roosevelt, Chicago

Tribune: "I just love 'The Freshman'! Haven't seen its like in good, clean, original, spontaneously funny entertainment for an aeon—more or less. Do you know that you can almost bank on Harold Lloyd to turn out winners, and it doesn't take him three years, either. This time you see him in the humorously pitiful guise of what the press notices call a 'Sport model freshman'—and I know of no better description. The picture is full of thrilling, funny and pathetic incident, with all the folk in the supporting cast doing great work and the star outshining his always fresh self."

Herald-Examiner: "Gloom doesn't stand a chance against the line plunges of Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman.' As the dumb hero of this comedy, Harold does his darndest for dear old Tate, and the final score is:

Gloom, 0; Joy, 100"

American: "Harold Lloyd's horn-rimmed glasses this time surround the eyes of one of the funniest of the many college boobs, who, although they do not attempt to give—or, at any rate, seldom succeed in giving—a true picture of campus life, have essayed to enliven an hour in the theatre. This overdone freshman is a genuine comic spectacle—or pair of spectacles."

Journal: "Balaban & Katz went rather out of their way to commend 'The Freshman,' showing at the Roosevelt, and in this commendation, as in other things, they prove they know what they are doing. Harold Lloyd after the fashion of Chaplin, gets his fun from being downtrodden—not in any big tragic way, but in the simple, heart-rending moments that come to most of us. There were times at the Roosevelt yesterday when I didn't know whether to ripple with laughter or sob, or go out to some collegiate campus and ask a lonely freshman to tea."

Post: "Harold Lloyd goes to college for his fun in this picture. It is his usual style of comedy, whimsical, gentle, shaded with pathos. His hero sets out with high ambitions for popularity in college, but he becomes the star 'boob' of the freshman class. The little drama has been worked out with great care. Each incident is neatly and expertly presented with its humorous possibilities brought out well. Slapstick as such has been avoided. No one tumbles and no one is struck to make you laugh. When such accidents do occur, they come in as part of the story. 'The Freshman' is very entertaining and has a charm all its own."

"Man on Box" — Warners, Warners, N. Y.

American: "I know very little of what constitutes a box office record, but I do know Syd Chaplin should come very near qualifying for that distinction. The theatre was packed to the doors. The audience laughed loudly at every comedy situation. Warners have enchanced the value of Harold McGrath's story rather than detracted from it. The direction of an involved comedy like this is the most difficult directorial feat in the world. And Chuck Reisner comes out with credit due by the deftness with which he plans his various situations. If you feel in need of a laugh take yourself to Warners Theatre."

Daily Mirror: "Syd Chaplin covers himself with glory and sends his audiences into gales of merriment. Even the Sphinx would shriek at Syd Chaplin's canny giftie o' fun, his clever acrobatics and female impersonation. Director Charles ('Chuck') Reisner has sustained the laughs until the final fadeout. He never permits the story to drag. Take our tip and put 'The Man On the Box' on your 'must' list."

Evening Journal: "Syd Chaplin as 'The Man On The Box' is a comedy riot. Yesterday's audiences shricked at his exploits, and while Harold McGrath's novel was funny, this is one of those rare cases where a picture is an improvement on the original script. Chaplin is an excellent pantomimist. Toward the end of the film he disguises himself as a lady's maid, and if you thought he was good as Charley's Aunt you'll have a treat in store for you at this masquerade."

Evening Telegram: "Credit for the smoothness of the production is due in considerable measure to Charles Reisner, the director. With little straining after effect and not a few novel twists the picture romps along from start to finish in boisterous good humor. As an exponent of the gentle art of pantomiming the younger Chaplin has made quite a niche for himself in this latest comedy of his."

Morning Telegraph: "It is a pleasant, laugh-provoking farce, with enough merriment to please any audience. Alice Calhoun is quite lovely as the heroine. Helene Costello, daughter of the old-time favorite, Maurice Costello, makes her film debut as Syd's sister. She is very beautiful and her screen success is hereby predicted. 'Chuck' Reisner and David Butler also contribute to the success of the picture. That the film is a success there can be no doubt. It is certainly highly amusing."

The Sun: "So far as I am concerned 'The Man On The Box' is every bit as worth while as was the screen version of 'Charley's Aunt,' through which the same Syd Chaplin bounced in petticoats. At yesterday's matinee Warners Theatre was filled to standing with an audience that seemed to relish the picture highly."

Evening Post: "It may be recommended as a picture with some very amusing scenes."

"Vanishing American" — Paramount, St. Francis, S. F.

Bulletin: "Magnificient in its setting, powerful in its realism, 'The Vanishing American' is more than a motion picture; it is an artistic historical chronicle of the American Indian; it tells of his rise and fall, and the picture is given just enough of romantic fiction to intensify interest and help impress indelibly upon the mind a true story of a race rapidly disappearing from the face of the earth."

Daily News: "Once more has Paramount selected San Francisco for the world premiere presentation of a superfeature and again has San Francisco placed upon that feature the stamp of its enthusiastic approval, if, in making this statement, the writer may be governed by his own impressions of 'The Vanishing American' and the crowds which he has seen storm the doors of the St. Francis theatre for the initial showings Saturday and Sunday. If there were no more to 'The Vanishing American' than the inspiringly beautiful scenes which picture the coming of the Redman as we know him and the emotion-gripping sequence which signalizes his passing, the picture would find a place in the forefront of film productions."

Chronicle "An epic of the Indian, his beginnings, his rise to power and glory, his fall and the tragic qualities of his existence today."

Examiner: "'The Vanishing American' is destined to general popularity and ranks with the best of its type. Further, the music is worth going a long way to hear. It was composed especially by Charles Wakefield Cadman and its themes of Navajo chants with fluting and intricate drum rhythms are handled with exquisite feeling."

The Herald: "The credit for the success of 'The Vanishing American'—and it is unqualifiedly a success—must go to George B. Seitz, its director. The picture is superb. 'The Vanishing American' is destined to achieve general popularity and it's an important link in the chain of historical drama toward which picture producers are turning nowadays for their greater efforts."

Call: "Perhaps the most thrillingly picturesque photography as yet displayed on the motion picture screen, backed up by a story of unusual pith and interest, to say nothing of its coherence, consistency and pathos, is to be seen in the world premiere screening of Zane Grey's powerful tale of the Great Southwest entitled 'The Vanishing American.' The writer sat enthralled for upwards of 100 moments while this screen story of the semi-final chapters of the supremacy of the American Indian of the continent over which his forbears once held undisputed sway was unfolded before our eyes."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, West Coast, San Bernardino

Sun: "San Bernardino approves of 'Stella Dallas,' Belle Bennett is excellent in the role of Stella, mother of Laurel, played by sixteen-year-old Lois Moran. Their work raises the picture to a high standard and bids fair to make of it one of the sensations of the coming winter season. To Ronald Colman and Alice Joyce high honors must be given for their work as Stephen Dallas and Helen Morrison."

"Stella Dallas"—United Artists, Florence, Pasadena

"'Stella Dallas' is destined to be the outstanding production of the year. If a preview-saturated city can view a picture and applaud it for full five minutes, that picture is a success. If a picture can hold every man, woman and child in the theatre, that picture is a success. If, throughout the preview, men and women permit tears to gather in their eyes, that picture is a success. If any actress can live her role so completely as Belle Bennett as Stella Dallas, that picture is a success. In all these phases 'Stella Dallas' excels. 'Stella Dallas' will make the nation weep; it will make the nation happy, and will cause discussions in every walk of life."

OSCAR NEUFELD, President and Sam Stiefel, Vice-President and Treasurer of the De Luxe Film Exchange have entered the real estate field in addition to their other activities. They have established the Neufeld Realty Company, with offices at 541 Market St., Camden, N. J., and expect to be able to interest motion picture men in the possibilities of New Jersey real estate with the new Delaware River bridge nearing completion.

N. J. Ayres, formerly manager of the local Independent Film Exchange, has been transferred to the Washington office in the same capacity.

Sidney Lowenstein, who has a nation wide reputation as a musical director, is now appearing as guest conductor at the new Stanley Theatre in Atlantic City.

Marcus Benn has recently installed a new $2,000 electric sign over the marquee of the Benn Theatre in this city.

The four theatres recently acquired by the Stanley Company in Wilmington are being thoroughly renovated for the winter season.

Frank Cook has been appointed manager of Marcus Benn's Orient Theatre. William Harvey, who preceded him, is in charge of the Stanley Company's Arcadia Theatre in Wilmington.

Seattle

EXHIBITORS and film men over the entire territory were shocked last week to learn of the death of Claude A. Thompson, veteran theatre operator of Pomeroy, Wash., as a result of pernicious anemia. Mr. Thompson was 44 years of age, and had been interested in the theatre field in this state for twenty-five years. At the age of nineteen, he had managed the Seeley Opera House in Pomeroy, and the new Seeley Theatre in that city was built principally through his efforts. As a mark of respect to his memory, all business houses in Pomeroy remained closed for the hour of Mr. Thompson's funeral.

L. O. Lukan, manager of the local Universal exchange, and A. J. Kennedy, publicity, advertising and exploitation director, have just returned from Spokane, where they put across one of the Carl Laemmle Exhibitor Parties. Approximately 150 exhibitors of the Eastern Washington territory attended the event.

H. W. Bruen's Arabian Theatre at Woodland Park Avenue and Seventy-Seventh Street in this city was opened with appropriate ceremonies the end of September, and has taken its place among the leading suburban houses of this territory.

Announcement was made last week to the effect that the lease on the Connell Theatre in Aberdeen, acquired last month by the Elbe Theatres Company, has just been disposed of to the Ed Dolan interests of that territory. Arthur Bishell, former manager of the Will Starkey Amusement Enterprises in Spokane, who was taken as manager of the Connell Theatre by the Elbe Company, has returned to this city, following the closing of the house by the Dolan organization. Further plans for the house have not yet been decided upon, it was reported.

Matt Apperton, well-known film salesman of this territory, left Manager W. H. Drummond's local Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange last week to take over the management of the Universal exchange in Salt Lake City. Mr. Apperton's position in a sales capacity here will be filled by "Cherry" Malotte, whose association with local film exchanges dates back for a number of years.

Roy Cooper, former manager of the Anzier Theatre in this city, last week announced his association with the John Danz interests. In his new capacity, Mr. Cooper will assist Harry Carey in the management and operation of the Roycroft Theatre, Mr. Danz's new suburban house in this city.

William C. Roach, owner and manager of the Sellwood and new Oregon Theatres in Portland, was a visitor on Film Row last week. The Oregon was opened by Mr. Roach only last month and represents one of the finest small theatres in the Oregon territory, according to reports.

A. A. Bruce, formerly associated in a sales capacity with Manager Al Rosenberg's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange, last week announced his resignation with that organization, and had joined the sales staff of Manager L. O. Lukan's local Universal office. It is expected that he will cover the Eastern Washington field for Universal, as he did for DeLuxe.

John Hamrick, owner and general manager of the Blue Mouse circuit of theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, announeed last week that he plans to leave this city soon for a combined business and pleasure trip to New York City, where he will remain for several weeks the latter part of October.

New England

THE world famous Boston Theatre which for several generations has been the scene of music and drama, closed its doors for the last time Saturday night, Oct. 3. Bright and early Monday morning building wreckers started the demolition of the famous playhouse to make way for a modern business block. During recent years the theatre was under lease to the Keith-Albee interests.

Monday morning without any particular formalities, the New Boston Theatre, built by Keith-Albee interests, opened diagonally across from the old Boston, at Washington and Essex streets.

Ben Laurie, for some time associated with the Franklin Film Co. at its Connecticut offices and more recently with Warner Brothers, has acquired the Keith Theatre in Campbello, Mass.

George Solomon of the Thompson Square Theatre in the Charlestown section of Boston, has taken over the Victoria Theatre in Lawrence, Mass., purehasing from Louis Rothenberg.

H. T. Skelly, general manager of United Artists distribution for New England at Boston, has returned from a week's business trip in New York.

The new Lake Pleasant Theatre in Providence, R. I., is nearing completion and the finishing touches will be given within a few weeks. A. A. Spitz, who is owner of the Palace Theatre in Cranston, R. I., and the Park Theatre in Auburn, R. I., is owner of the new playhouse.

Philip Markell has added the Magnet Theatre in the Dorchester District of Boston to his already extensive string of theatres.

Arthur J. Viano, owner of the Teel Square Theatre in Somerville and other playhouses in Suburban Boston, has purchased a site in Davis square, Somerville, Mass., and is planning the erection of a new theatre on the site.

Commencing this week, Gordon's Washington Street Olympia Theatre, Boston, changes its policy to four instead of three shows each day, with orchestra and vaudevile at each show.

Canada

J. E. LEDDEN, manager of the Papineau Theatre, Montreal, has a ball team that has earned a great record in baseball circles of the district during the past season. The Papineau Theatre team, headed by Ledden as catcher, won its 14th straight victory of the season when it captured an encounter with the Richilieu Club by the score of 4 to 3.

Cobalt, Ontario, one of the chief centres of the Northern Ontario mining district, is to have a new moving picture house and hotel combined. Incorporation of a company under the laws of Ontario to be known as the Cobalt Hotel and Theatre Company, Limited, with headquarters at Cobalt, has been announced. The company is capitalized at $100,000.

William Mitchell, sales supervisor of First National Exhibitors, Toronto, has gone to Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he will cover the territory out from that city. He was a guest at the September luncheon of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association.

Maurice Milligan, Canadian manager for Paramount, has been spending recent weeks at Winnipeg and in the Canadian Middle West in the interest of Famous-Lasky Film Service. Mr. Milligan formerly lived in Winnipeg.

Steve Ladas of Ottawa, Ontario, a prominent local merchant, has entered into an arrangement with Montreal interests to take over the lease of the Family Theatre, Ottawa, one of the two local moving picture halls operated for years by the late Harry Brouse of First National fame. The Family, which is a downtown theatre, is to be renamed and will be re-opened after extensive renovating.

St. Louis

THE Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard at Lucas avenue, St. Louis, owned by the Paramount-Balaban-Katz interests, has joined the national movement to encourage Saturday morning motion picture shows for children.

The New American Amusement Company, controlled by Oscar Lehr and relatives, has closed a deal for the New American Theatre, 2406 South Twelfth street, and the New Shenandoah Theatre, Broadway and Shenandoah avenue, St. Louis. The purchase was made from Samuel Lewis. The deal is said to have involved $50,000.

The members of the New American Amusement Company are Oscar Lehr, Marshall Lehr and Ida Lehr. They also control the Peerless, 1911 South Broadway; the Family, 1440 South Broadway, and the New Broadway, 1719 South Broadway. The New American seats 704 persons and the New Shenandoah 1381. Both have airdomes. The other houses owned by the Lehrs range from 637 seats to 670 seats.

It is reported along Picture Row that George Skouras will add a prominent North St. Louis theatre to his increasing chain of amusement places. The deal is "on" but has not as yet been consummated those on the inside say.

Construction on George's beautiful new house at Southwest and Columbia avenues is well under way. It will rank with the city's best outlying house and contain about 1500 seats.

Work has started on the New Marshall Theatre, Sutton and Manchester avenues, Maplewood, Mo. It will cost about $150,000 and have 1500 seats. It was promoted by Maplewood business men.

New York and New Jersey

THE Essex County Theatre Owners Association under the leadership of Louis Rosenthal and Eugene Steinhardt are to hold their first meeting on Wednesday of this week at the Newark Athletic Club.

The opening of Filmland Theatre at Church and Nostrand Avenue, Brooklyn, a couple of weeks ago, has completed the final chapter of an interesting story. About two years ago the original promoter conceived the idea of erecting a strictly modern theatre in that section of Flatbush and started the scheme as a Community project. Owing to lack of funds the construction proceeded by fits and starts and for long periods there was no sign of work around the house. Messrs. Ryan and Buckley then organized Filmland Players, Inc. and took over the task of re-organizing, financing and building and have at last presented the neighborhood with a beautiful new theatre.

Thomas J. Buckley is head of the Buckley Engineering Company with offices at 50 East 42nd Street, New York City. John L. Ryan is President of the Interboro Mortgage Company of 29 Broadway, City. The rest of the directors include several other names that are well known, one being that of the Hon. George W. Martin, Kings County Judge.

Fred J. Dollinger, well known showman, has been selected as manager of Filmland. Mr. Dollinger went on the stage at eight years of age and his experience in motion pictures theatres dates back to the days of the Nickelodeon. He was manager for twelve years at the Claramont theatre, 135th St. and Broadway, General Manager of the H. & S. Theatres, New York and assistant on many Broadway prologues for big feature photo-plays.

The balance of the executive staff include, Miss Virginia Early, Treasurer and House manager, Anthony Devodier, orchestra leader, Thomas McLucy, organist and John Palmerton, chief electrician.

Filmland is strictly up to the minute in every respect in the way of modern theatre construction with a seating capacity of about 1,700. A two manual Kramer organ has been installed. Typhoon ventilation system, novelty scenic stage settings and the lighting fixtures were installed by Lightolier. The seats were furnished by the Superior Seating Company.

Other important theatre openings that are scheduled for this territory within the next two weeks are Charlie Goldreyer's Manor, located at Ave K and Coney Island Ave., Brooklyn. Leo Brecher's New Boston Road theatre, at 167th Street, New York and the Berkshire Theatre, 60th St. and 8th Ave., Brooklyn, the latter owned and operated by Morris Ginsberg.

Ed. Carroll, the prize winning salesman who covers New Jersey territory for Associated Exhibitors, has returned from his summer home at Avon, N. J. to his apartment in Montclair where he will put up for the cold weather. Ed has recently purchased a piece of property in Montclair and contemplates building a home.

Sam Perry, hustling exhibitor from Englewood, N. J. was in town Tuesday and in addition to shopping for pictures was seeking information concerning a new electric sign for the front of his theatre.

Arron Schusterman, who operates the Cozy-Bijou at New Brunswick, N. J. is giving up his residence at that city and will make his home in New York City for the winter.

A. A. Adams, of Newark and Patterson theatres is en route to this country from Greece.

A. Padgett is the latest addition to the Pathe local sales force and will specialize on the two reelers. Mr. Pargett former connections were with the electrical supply business and has also worked out of Cleveland for Associated Exhibitors.

The new theatre at Madison, N. J. will open about the middle of October.

Jos. Stern has purchased property at Cranford, N. J. as a prospective theatre site. Cranford is the headquarters of Alec Okin who operates the Cranford theatre at that point. It is also reported that Mr. Stern is looking over ground at Rahway, where Louis Heiman holds forth.

Roth Bros., of Morristown and Summit, N. J., have purchased from Messers. Bradder and Pollack, the theatre building that is at present under construction in Summit. The new house will have a seating capacity of about 1,500 and it is expected to be ready for business on November 15th. Manager Hoffman has been appointed managing director of all the Roth Bros. enterprises.

George Ellison, formerly with the Yost and the Proctor circuits for many years, is now the managing director of the Dyckman theatre at 207th St. and Sherman Ave.

Several more theatre openings are scheduled for this month and next. Rachmiel's New Ambassador in Brooklyn will open November 15th, The Forsyth, on the lower East Side, on October 15th, Alexander Fabian's new house in Patterson, on November 15th and Louis Rosenthal's Lyceum and Colonial in East Orange will be ready about October 15th.

Matthew Christmas has leased another theatre in Yonkers, this one being on Riverside Ave. This is the fourth one for Matthew this season and makes a total of eleven in the circuit at the present time.

Joe Hornstein and his staff at Howell's Cine Equipment Co. are keeping on the jump these days. Theatres recently equipped include Roth Bros. new house in Summit, Walter Reade's New Main St. theatre at Asbury Park, Rachmiel's New Ambassador in Brooklyn, the Forsyth, Bradler and Pollack's Hawthorne at Newark which will have its opening October 15th, the Hollywood in Brooklyn, and Sol Brill's Inwood in the Dyckman Heights section. Joe is in receipt of a letter of thanks from Abe Fabian, of the Mosque Theatre, Newark, complimenting him on the services that he rendered on the opening night. Dave Soloman, a go-getter on Joe's sales staff has captured another prize, this one being the result of selling a lot of curtain control motors.

A luncheon at the Hofbrau House was tendered by F. B. O. to the New York salesmen of the company last Monday in celebration of the sale of 50% of the year's quota.

Charles Rosenzweig, manager of the New York exchange presided. Major H. C. S. Thomson, president of the F. B. O., Colvin W. Brown, vice-president, David Poucher, treasurer, Lee Marcus, sales manager, Nat. G. Rothstein, publicity and advertising director, Al Boasberg, sales promotion director and Cleve Adams, division manager of Chicago, attended. The F. B. O. salesmen who partook of the feast were G. William Wolf, H. Kram, Jack Ellis, L. C. Wechsler, Leo M. Fox, L. B. Cherwood, J. W. Holden, Phil Hodes and Frank Leonard, exploiteer connected with the New York Exchange.

Major Thomson, in a brief talk, thanked the men for their loyalty and splendid service.

Manger Brodsky held a successful opening at his West End Theatre last Saturday. The West End is a 900 seat house.

Moe Kridel who operates the Globe at Irvington, N. J., has completed the extensive alterations to the old Victory theatre and will open this week. The new house will be know as the Congress and there is hardly a trace of the old theatre that shows.

Managers Daress of Boontoon, N. J. and Coucolos of Elizabeth were visitors around the exchanges this week.

It is reported that Walter Reade, of the Walter Reade Enterprises, has purchased an interest in the Strand theatre at Freehold, N. J. Harold Burns has been the proprietor of the Strand.

Ben Smith, formerly with Select, is now associated with the Warner brothers exchange in Albany. J. M. Klein, recently named as manager of the exchange, moved his family and household effects here last week from Lynn, Mass.

John Christy, of the Third Avenue theatre in Watervliet, has further improved his property during the past week or two by repainting the house as well as the new sidewalk.

Charles Sesonske, of the Grand in Johnstown, installed a ten-piece orchestra in his theatre last week, with Walter Smith conducting. From October 26, on, vaudeville will be run the first three days each week and pictures the last three days. Mr. Sesonske will spend $5,000 next month in a new lobby and marquee.

Mike Freedman reopened the Rialto in Schenectady last Sunday, the house having been closed for the past six months. Mr. Freedman also owns the Woodlawn in the same city, being run at the present time with Ida B. Eisenberg.

A new theatre in course of erection in Coxsackie was saved from firebugs last week, owing to the fact that oil soaked rags found after the blaze had been discovered failed to make an impression on the green timber used in the sidewalls.

Father Nolan has closed the theatre which he has been running the past summer in New Lebanon.

B. W. Griffin, running the Lyceum in Red Hook, had troubles of his own last week when he found that the building housing an ice cream and confectionery business which he runs had been quietly sold to New York city parties. Mr. Griffin is now endeavoring to acquire the building from its new owner.

Mrs. James Rose, wife of one of the best known exhibitors in Albany and Troy, is ill at the Albany hospital.

Sam Hochstim, owner of the Star theatre in Hudson, was in town last Friday.

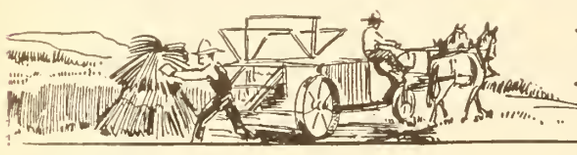
Arthur Austin, former manager of the Pember theatre in Granville, is now running the Grange Hall in that village, two nights a week.

James F. Gilmore, organist at the Leland theatre in Albany, was named last week as organist and choir director at St. Patrick's church in Watervliet.

Although Arthur Whyte, of New York city, carried off one of the prizes in a recent golf tournament there, he has failed to reply to the challenge issued by golfers along Film Row. The next time Mr. Whyte comes to Albany he is earnestly requested to bring his clubs with him.

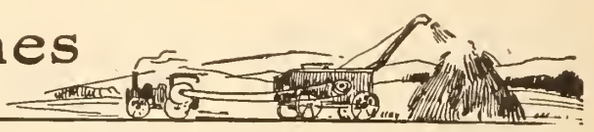
Meyer Schine, one of the heads of the Schine chain of houses in New York state, and who was recently married, is now spending all of his time furnishing his home in Gloversville. Mr. Schine did manage to take a few days off, however, last week, indulging in a business trip to New York and Boston.

J. A. Fitzgerald, manager of the Strand in Hudson Falls, announces that vaudeville will be run with pictures at the house during the winter, and that road shows will also be booked.



The new Park theatre in Glens Falls, through Manager Conklin, announced a cut-rate admission for children fourteen years and under, at special matinees.

Michael Reznick is now covering this territory for Chase pictures in place of Mr. Sternman, who resigned.



The condition of Mrs. Elizabeth V. Colbert, member of the New York State Motion Picture Commission, and a resident of Albany, has materially improved of late.

The Bijou theatre, in Lowville, opened on October 5, as one of the Schine group of houses, having been leased from E. J. Wolfe, for a term of years. Mr. Wolfe, however, will continue to handle the house. L. J. Carkey, formerly of Carthage, and now district manager for the Schine brothers, was present and handled the opening night.

Seven years ago, L. L. Connors came to this section from Boston, and started in the motion picture business. Mr. Connors has leased his houses and is now employed as a salesman for F. B. O., out of Albany.

Des Moines

FUNERAL services for Nate Chapman, 34 years old, former resident of Des Moines, who died at his home at Iowa City, following an attack of heart disease, were held from the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Solomen Chapman, 1411 West Eleventh street, last Friday.

The Ancient Craft lodge, No. 647 of the Masonic order officiated. Burial was in Jewish Glendale cemetery.

Mr. Chapman was manager and part owner of the Englert and Garden theatres at Iowa City, being associated in the enterprise with A. H. Blank.

Mr. Chapman had been in poor health for some time. He spent several weeks at different times at the Springs and in trips to Florida in order to recuperate his strength.

W. G. Smith, formerly salesman for the DesMoines branch of Universal, has been transferred to the office of Universal in Pittsburg. It is probable that Harry Harsha who for several years was on the road in Iowa territory will take Mr. Smith's place. Mr. Harsha has been in the booking department of Universal most recently. Mr. L. J. Allison, who comes to DesMoines from Kansas City, will be the new booker for Universal.

The annual Golf tournament started here this week between a large number of theatre and exchange men. Those who qualified were Neil Schettler, Victory Theatre orchestra leader, Ernest Jones, Victory Theatre drummer, Robert Runswick, Pantages Theatre orchestra leader, and George E. Carpenter, manager of the Paramount Empress Theatre. These four men will now fight to a finish for the cups and to prove who's who and why. Carl A. Porter announces that the cup is already theirs as far as his mind is concerned.

Among exhibitors visiting Film Row this week are: Nick Salevurakis, owner of the Lyric Theatre, Price, Utah; Harmon and Lou Peery of the Egyptian Theatre, Ogden, Utah; M. S. Stringham and H. E. Skinner of the Colonial Theatre, Ogden, Utah. Stringham is reported to be buying the entire interest of this theatre from Skinner who is said to be going to buy a gold mine; Mike Neilsen, formerly of Buhl, Idaho, is building a new theatre in Nampa, Idaho; C. R. Potter, owner of the Liberty and Strand theatres of Nampa, Idaho, has reopened the Majestic Theatre at Nampa after doing extensive decorating and after installing a large Kimball Organ. C. H. Archibald of the C. and A. Amusement Company of Pocatello, Idaho, and S. R. Rich, owner of the Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho, were also here this week.

Central Penn

AN apartment building at Seventh and Turner streets, Allentown, has been purchased by Nicholas Iococca, former owner of the Franklin theatre, in that city. It is reported he plans the erection of a new theatre.

Improvements being made to the theatre recently purchased in Bethlehem by Lou Berman, of Philadelphia, include installation of a Solar cooling and ventilating system. This theatre is to be known as Savoy.

According to the Williamsport newspapers, the Chamberlain Amusement Enterprises, of Shamokin, who operates numerous theatres in Central Pennsylvania, have abandoned their intention of erecting a large new theatre on the site of the old Sterling Hotel, in Williamsport.

The seating capacity of the Freeland theatre, in Freeland, is to be increased from 500 to 1500, under an improvement and enlargement program now being worked out. A stage will be installed and the theatre equipped throughout so as to present vaudeville as well as motion pictures. The Freeland has been an exclusively picture house.

After some delay in the construction of the new Arcadia Theatre, Shamokin, due to difficulty in obtaining some of the materials promptly, it is now expected the house will be ready for formal opening in the Christmas holiday season. The new structure is on the site of the old Family theatre.

Lou Berman, new owner of the New Strand, in Shenandoah, has selected Orban E. Taylor, of New York City, to succeed Wash Weil, as manager of the theatre.

Improvements including the installation of a new organ are being made to the M. G. Pilosi Theatre, in Old Forge. A new organ is being placed in the theatre.

Announcement was made October 1 in the Lancaster newspapers that George M. Krupa, of that city, expects to open the Capitol Theatre, formerly the Oldine that was swept by flames on December 29, last—on or about Thanksgiving Day. Work is now been rushed to that end.

While the old Oldine had a seating capacity of 900, the new Capitol will seat 1,300.

Chicago

CHARLES CASANAVE has severed his connection with Lynch Theatres, Inc., to become associated with the Karzas-Cooney-Coston group of theatres and for the present is making his headquarters in the office of the 63rd Street Theatres at 845 S. Wabash Avenue.

Otto W. Bolle, manager of Famous Players-Lasky Detroit exchange, was a Chicago visitor this week and reports business good throughout his territory.

C. W. Spanuth, former Chicago exhibitor, is now operating the Majestic Theatre at Harvard, Illinois.

David Hellman of Reelcraft, is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in the Eagle River country and expects to bring back some record breaking muskies.

Wilbur Robinson, former popular film salesman, has practically regained his normal health following a long siege of illness caused by the serious automobile accident in which he was injured some months ago, and expects to get back in the film business at an early date.

A fall convention of Paramount executives will be held in Chicago, November 5, 6, and 7th at the Drake Hotel. About eighty executives from the home office, branch and district managers, are expected to be in attendance.

Irene Rich stopped off in Chicago for a few hours last week and before leaving for New York was at home to members of the press at the Blackstone Hotel.

At the last meeting of the Exhibitors Association of Chicago, it was decided to hold a motion picture ball some time in the near future and a committee, comprising Samuel Abrahams, chairman; James Plodna, L. Weil, Sam Meyers, Norman Fields, J. J. Daly and Earl Johnson was appointed to make plans for the event. It is several years since Chicago has had any similar function and it is the opinion of exhibitors that it will be a great success, especially if some of the leading stars can be present. It is probable that the ball will be held at the Trianon, Andrew Karzas' palace of dance on the south side.

Butte

TOM McDONALD formerly a newspaper man associated for years with the Butte Miner and later with the Great Falls Tribune drifted into theatre work. He was for sometime manager of the American Theatre of Butte and also ran the Peoples Theatre making a popular success of both theatres. He was elected to the Montana legislature from Butte in 1921. He left Butte for California almost a year ago and now comes the news of his being chosen manager of the magnificent new Alexander Theatre, erected as the latest link in the West Coast-Langley chain, at Glendale, California.

There is a rumor current that the American Theatre, which was redecorated and made into a modern up-to-date Movie house late last year and is now known as the "Theatre Beautiful" is to be opened early in October. Manager W. J. Sullivan in a recent interview said the date had not been set for its opening but it would be opened early in October.

The Temple Theatre, the newest and most elaborate Theatre in the City is still closed with no promise of its opening.

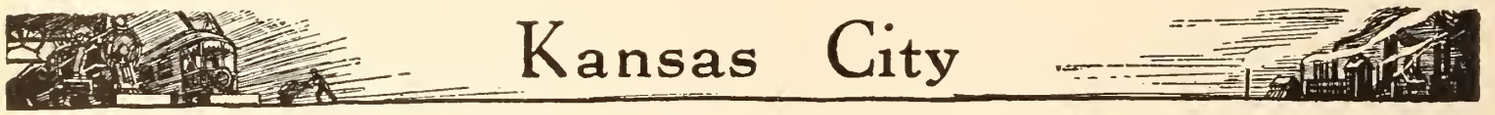
Every indication points to a properous year in Montana and this has added impetus to all business enterprises and the theatres promise to share in the general good times. The Rialto theatre is playing to capacity house every night. Manager W. J. Sullivan is using every inducement to urge the pleasure-loving public to attend the Rialto program.

Montana is experiencing a lot of snow, and the cold weather has had a marked effect on all the places of amusement. so that once more there is a decided lure to the warm attractive theatres, where there are in all the houses splendid programs.

Pat Dowling representative of the Christie Film Company is in the City from Hollywood. He is making a seven weeks swing around the chief distributing centers of the country and has not overlooked Butte.

J. J. Harrington, former Booker for the First National exchange here, has been promoted to head-salesman for the Montana territory and manager of the shipping office in Butte. He arrived in Butte out of the Salt Lake office last week and left for the key cities of the state. Mr. Harrington is one of the genial, efficient salesmen that the busy theatre men enjoy meeting.

Wm. Hughardt, former manager for the Associated First National, has resigned his position in Montana to have charge of the Fox Exchange of Salt Lake City. Montana regrets the loss of Mr. Hughardt and Mrs. Hughardt.



R. C. Hudson, former manager of the Universal exchange in Butte has accepted a position with the Producers Distributing corporation in Portland and W. J. Heineman has been appointed to his position here. Mr. Heineman was formerly with the Warner Brothers here.

R. S. Stackhouse, Salt Lake, manager for Warner Brothers is in Montana in the interest of distribution.

Manager Davis of the Salt Lake Fox exchange is in Montana this week attending to the Fox products. Since the Fox office closed in Butte the business of the state is attended by the Salt Lake branch.

Kansas City

IT was a gay throng which welcomed home Frank L. Newman in Kansas City Thursday. Mr. Newman, now manager of a trio of Paramount theatres in Los Angeles, returned to close contracts for the sale of the Newman and Royal theatres, Kansas City, to Paramount. Leo Forbstein, former director of the Newman theatre orchestra, will accompany Mr. Newman on his return to Los Angeles where he will direct the orchestra of the Metropolitan theatre.

With all the details of Greater Movie Season now a thing of the past, C. E. "Doc" Cook, business manager of the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri, will leave soon for a tour of the territory in behalf of the membership drive, which was cut short by an avalanche of routine details. The policy of inviting an exhibitor once—just once—to enter the organization will remain in force.

If there was as much business as there was "activity" along Kansas City's movie row last week it was a whale of a week for all concerned. The Standard Film Exchange found its quarters too small, so proceeded to lease more space at 113 West Eighteenth street. Harvey Day, general sales manager for Kinograms, was in Kansas City on a business tour.

Joe Klein, Chesterfield Picture Corp., representative, was busy calling on the independent distributors, while Mrs. G. K. Chetwood, Fox contract clerk, has a new Chevrolet coupe.

George Hartman, former First National salesman, has joined the Educational sales force, while C. F. Senning, Educational branch manager, returned from the territory with word that cool weather had made a great improvement among the smaller exhibitors.

C. J. Sonin, purchasing agent for the Metro-Goldwyn and Loew theatres, was a business visitor in Kansas City. Mrs. L. Mayhue, formerly Miss Lucille Hickman, Fox billing clerk, resigned Saturday to step into the home duties of married life.

Hollywood, the mecca for Kansas City's movie row, will move to a new location directly across the street from its present site on Eighteenth street, where a film club for out-of-town visitors and an up-to-date restaurant will be established.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market last week were: George Planck, Sedalia theatre, Sedalia, Mo.; C. M. Pattee, Pattee theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; M. W. Reinke, manager of Universal of St. Joseph, Mo.; C. R. Wilson, Liberty theatre, Liberty, Mo.

The Isis theatre, suburban house of Kansas City, in the future will have the first suburban run on all Fox product, according to M. A. Levy, Fox branch manager at Kansas City.

Roy Phipps, assistant treasurer of the Missouri theatre, Kansas City, and Miss Mary Frechin, formerly cashier at the Mainstreet theatre, Kansas City, were married the other day and left for Pittsburg, Pa., where Phipps will be assistant manager of Loew's Aldine theatre.

The opening of O. K. Mason's New Regent theatre in Winfield, Kas., last week took its place in the history of that town as an auspicious event. Film men from Kansas City and adjoining towns attended the opening, refreshments being served on the stage after the closing performance, followed by dancing. The New Regent formerly was the Grand theatre, but has undergone complete remodeling and now is one of the most modern theatres in Kansas.

San Francisco

BUILDING permit for a class A construction theatre at 39th and Telegraph Avenue was issued yesterday by A. S. Holmes, Oakland building inspector. The Alameda County Title Insurance Company is named as builder and contractor of the theatre which will be known as the Transbay Theatres, Inc. The total cost of the construction will be $175,000. A. A. Canten is the architect.

The new $600,000 theatre, now rapidly nearing completion in Fresno, will be called the Wilson Theatre, and will formerly open its doors on Dec. 1st, it was announced by Ackerman & Harris, San Francisco theatrical firm which is building the Fresno theatre. The Wilson Theatre will feature first run film productions with elaborately staged prologues and vaudeville.

A new theatre will be built on Haight street, between Fillmore and Steiner, by the Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation. it was announced. It will be the fourteenth community house under construction in a $2,000,000 program. The Golden State Theatre and Realty Corporation also has under construction in San Francisco the New Sunset, Irving Street, between 14th and 15th Avenues, and the State, Mission and Oliver Streets, and a site for another house has been acquired at Mission and Geneva Avenue.

R. M. Ford, for a large number of years associated theatrically in San Francisco and more recently at the Broadway Theatre in Oakland, has purchased the interest of Mortimer Thomas in this theatre which now makes him the heaviest stockholder in that house.

Walter W. Kofeldt, for many years connected with the Pathe Corporation on the Pacific Coast and for some years local manager of the Pathe corporation recently resigned to make a special trip to Paris and Germany for the Producers Film Corporation. Before Kofeldt left, a dinner was given him by his friends.

Cleveland

JOHN PALFI is remodelling his Princess theatre, Canton both inside and outside. He also has the Opera House in Canton.

Allen Simmons of the Allen and Dome theatre, Akron, has returned from an extensive fishing trip in Canada.

Public weddings are Sam Stein's best bet. Stein is manager of the Columbia theatre, Cleveland. He staged one last year. It was the biggest thing he ever put on. Now he's getting ready to stage another one and the whole neighborhood's excited about it. Advance notices of the public wedding, to be held on the stage of the theatre is advertising his house far and near.

William Selman, of the local Paramount sales force has been transferred from the Canton territory to the Toledo territory. And R. H. Ramsey, who formerly covered the Toledo territory, is now traveling in and about Canton.

Maurice Safier, manager of the Cleveland exchange for United Artists.

Lemotto Smith, head of the Smith Amusement Company of Alliance and Warren is home from a five month's trip abroad. During his travels Smith visited thirteen different countries, he says, but none of 'em look as good as the old U. S. A.

Christy Deibel, of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, was in town all last week playing the Ohio State Golf Tournament.

Hal Smith, of the Cleveland Fox family, has joined Frank Drew's Detroit Fox family as city salesman. Al Goldman has succeeded Smith in the eastern Ohio territory.

The home office of the Standard Film Service Company has moved from the second floor of the Film Exchange Bldg. to the sixth floor, and is now combined with the Cleveland exchange of the company. The consolidation of the two offices makes for a big saving of time as well as of elevator service.

The Skirboll brothers, Bill and Harry, were in New Philadelphia to attend the formal opening of their Opera House. The theatre has been closed for several weeks while it underwent a complete transformation starting with the lobby entrance and going right through to the back door.

J. E. Beck, former local Vitagraph exchange manager, is now handling the city for Producers Distributing Corporation. This used to be Fred Schram's territory, prior to his recent resignation.

R. V. Anderson, sales manager for the International News reel has been in town for the past few days.

June Marlowe in "Below the Line" for Warners.

Bill Moore, son of George Robert Moore, who died suddenly last week, is running his father's Lion theatre in Bellevue, with marked success. Although only seventeen years old, local film men say that young Bill is showing a decided talent in the exhibition field. The Southern theatre in Bucyrus, another one of Moore's houses, is being run by Dick Hertzer, who had previously been house manager for Moore.

The Gilger Opera House in Norwalk has changed everything, including its name. It is now called the Moose Theatre. The place has been thoroughly remodelled and has been newly decorated from start to finish. The Moose theatre is located on a side street, just off the main downtown business street of Norwalk. In order to attract attention from the main street, Manager Charles Frederick has put up a string of colored electric lights leading from his theatre entrance to the main street corner. Then at this corner, he has erected an electric sign pointing to his house. It's great stuff, and is doing him worlds of material good.

Henry Pfeiffer, who owns the Opera House at Kenton, Ohio has recently acquired the Royal theatre of Kenton, also. The Royal formerly belonged to Messrs. Rose and Deardourff.

C. B. Moore has sold his interest in the Rex and Strand theatres to John Stoll. Stoll also has the Linwood Square theatre in Norwalk.

H. J. Walters is extending his motion picture interests. He has bought the Classic theatre in Mantua, Ohio from John Kleinfeld. Walters owns the Opera House in Butron, too.

Buffalo

MICHAEL SHEA, head of the Shea Amusement company of Buffalo, operating the Hippodrome, Court Street, North Park, and building the new Buffalo, has been elected president of the Buffalo branch of the Catholic Actors' Guild. Philomena Cavanaugh has been elected first vice president; Thomas Reese, second vice president; Helen Douris, social secretary; Dr. William Stapleton, executive secretary, and Margaret Crowley, recording secretary. Directors of the organization are: Al Beckerich, manager Loew's State; Basil Brady, manager Pathe exchange; Dr. Joseph Burke, William J. Conners, Jr., the Rev. Charles Duffy, Vincent R. McFaul, managing director, Shea's Hippodrome; Garry McGarry, John R. Oishei, Mayor Frank X. Schwab, John Laughlin, Mae Forrestel, Joseph Gavin, Clayton Sheehan, district manager, Fox Film company; Harry Yates, Mrs. Ruth Ashley Smith, Mrs. Orson Yeager, Alice Ryan, P. T. O'Connor, the Rev. C. J. Sloan, Mrs. J. J. Zimmerman, Mrs. John Lascelles and John Kloepfer

Helen Lynch in "Bustin Through," Universal.

Harry L. Knappen, former manager of the Buffalo First National exchange, has been appointed manager of the New Orleans Pathe office. Harry was in Buffalo recently on special sales work for the Pathe company.

The employes of the Buffalo Universal exchange held a get-together party last Monday night in the form of a visit to Shea's Court street theatre and a supper afterwards at the Palais Royal. At the latter place Bob Murphy acted as head waiter, assisted by Elmer Lux, F. B. O. booker, who was a guest. Al Barnett put on a Charleston. Branch Manager Earl L. Kramer arranged the proceedings.

It is reported that the Yellen family of Buffalo, of which Jack Yellen of popular song fame, is a member, is interested in a new motion picture theatre soon to be built in Tonawanda, N. Y. Well, if Jack does his stuff at each performance they ought to do business.

George Eastman and party, after hunting in Alaska and British Columbia, will arrive back in Rochester on October 11, according to word received. Good weather and fine hunting were encountered by the group which is made up of Mr. Eastman, the Rev. and Mrs. George E. Norton and Dr. Albert D. Kaiser. The party has been gone about two months.

Hiding in the cellar of the Capitol theatre, Syracuse, the other night, burglars waited until the performance was over and then after the place had been closed for the night, looted the house. The thieves left through the front door of the theatre, which was found open later by a patrolman. Little of value was stolen.

George T. Cruzen, manager of the Palace theatre in Lockport, N. Y., is going to inaugurate a series of Saturday morning programs for children, similar to those presented by the Eastman in Rochester. The Lockport programs will begin October 10.

The return of regular time has brought a noticeable increase in business in western New York picture theatres. Daylight Saving is a terrible thing for exhibitors, especially in Buffalo. Many of the towns, however, do not recognize it and profit accordingly.

The little Hippodrome and Keith's theatres in lower Main street, Buffalo, are having a new fall dress put on their fronts, adding about 100 per cent. improvement in looks.

Three new specially built Simplex machines will be installed in the new Shea Buffalo theatre.

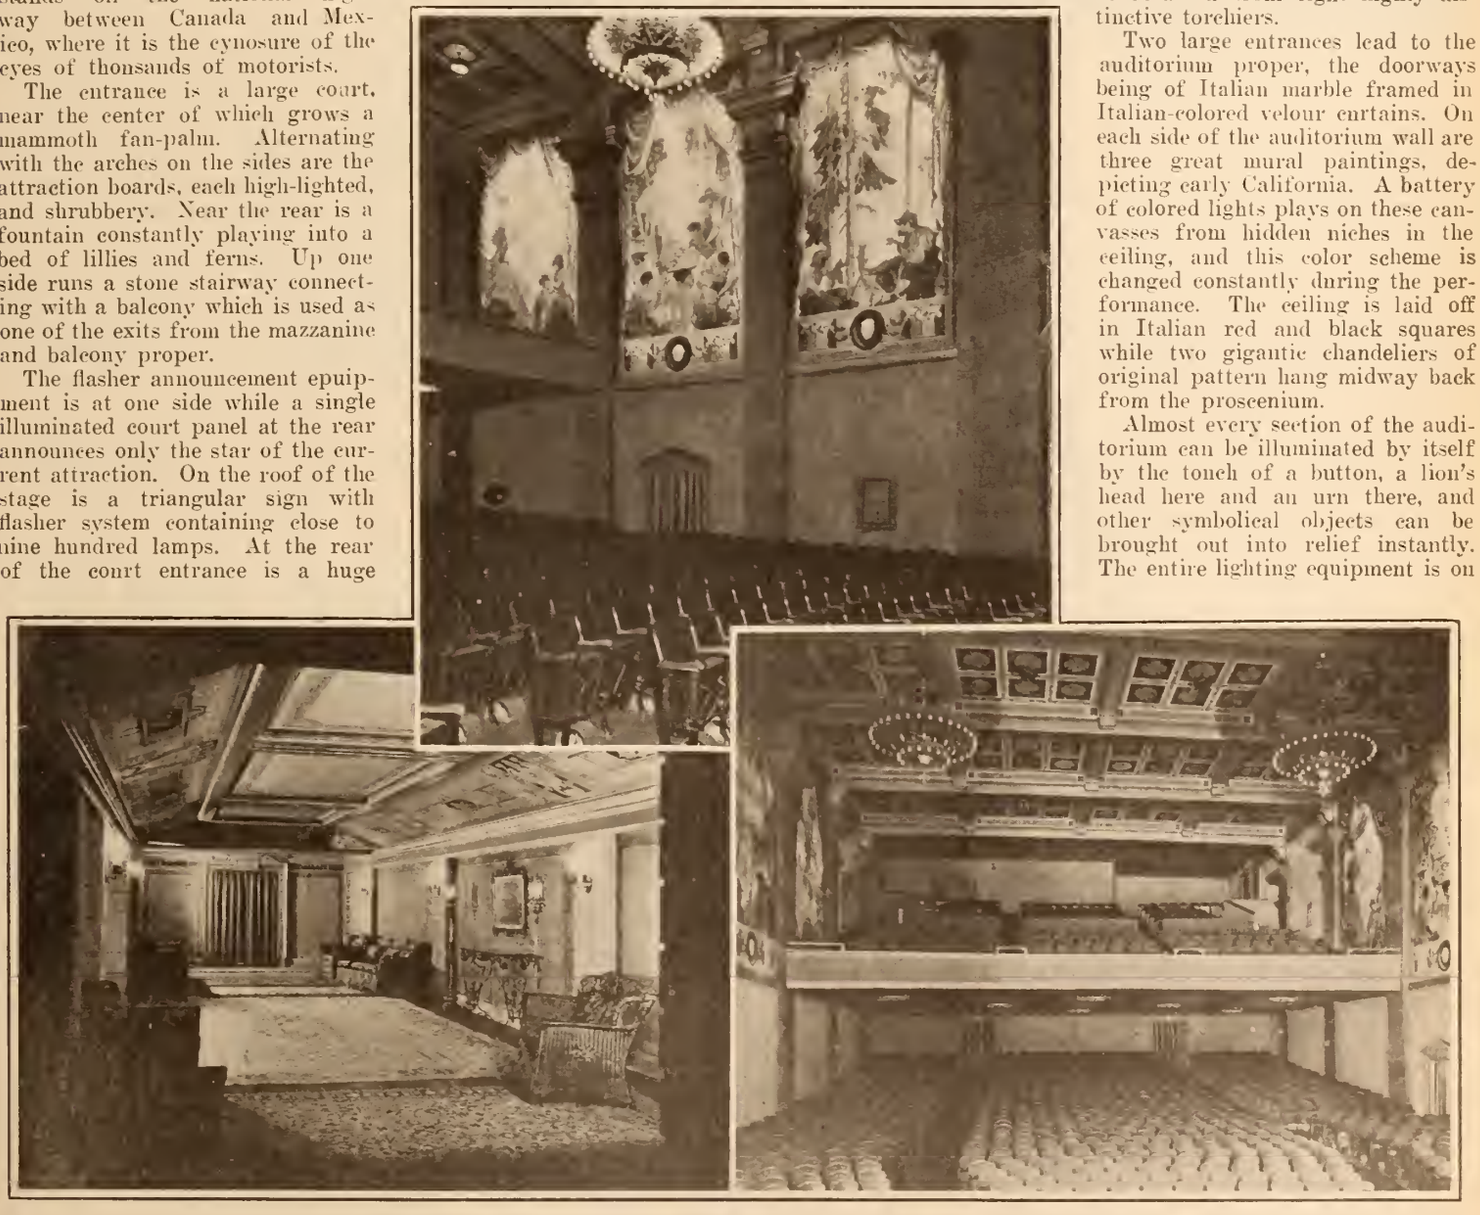
Chapman's Alician Court Theatre is Model

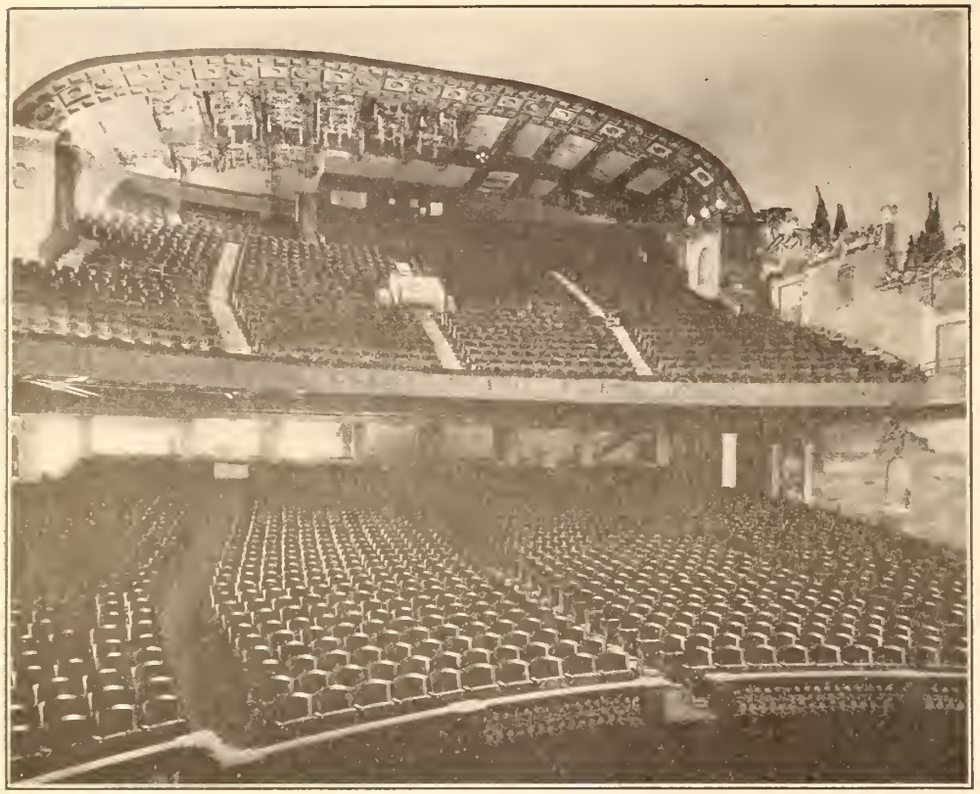
California House Elaborately Decorated and Appointed; Has Unusual Features

CHAPMAN'S Alician Court theatre at Fullerton, Orange county, Calif., recently opened, represents the final word in architectural novelty and beauty as well as in modern equipment. Erected at a total cost, with the ground, of close to half a million dollars, the structure stands on the national highway between Canada and Mexico, where it is the eynosure of the eyes of thonsands of motorists.



The entrance is a large court, near the center of which grows a mammoth fan-palm. Alternating with the arches on the sides are the attraction boards, each high-lighted, and shrubbery. Near the rear is a fountain constantly playing into a bed of lillies and ferns. Up one side runs a stone stairway connecting with a balcony which is used as one of the exits from the mazzanine and balcony proper.

The flasher announcement epuipment is at one side while a single illuminated court panel at the rear announces only the star of the current attraction. On the roof of the stage is a triangular sign with flasher system containing close to nine hundred lamps. At the rear of the court entrance is a huge terra cotta urn with smoke-effects and also an old Greek theatrical mask with color illuminated eyes and mouth.



Through quaint, massive doors of old iron effect, one enters the foyer with its cement floor, squared and stained. Imported rugs of rare pattern cover this room as well as that of the mezzanine above, some of them being fifteen feet square. The ceiling of the foyer is a marvel of decorating, blue and gold being the predominating tones. Stone benches and Italian table and lamps grace this room and further light is obtained from eight highly distinctive torchiers.

Two large entrances lead to the auditorium proper, the doorways being of Italian marble framed in Italian-colored velour curtains. On each side of the auditorium wall are three great mural paintings, depicting early California. A battery of colored lights plays on these canvasses from hidden niches in the ceiling, and this color scheme is changed constantly during the performance. The ceiling is laid off in Italian red and black squares while two gigantic chandeliers of original pattern hang midway back from the proscenium.

Almost every section of the auditorium can be illuminated by itself by the touch of a button, a lion's head here and an urn there, and other symbolical objects can be brought out into relief instantly. The entire lighting equipment is on a dimmer system with corresponding superb effects. The 1,000 opera chairs run from 22 to 24 inches in width.

A grand stairway runs to the mezzanine with its dozen or more easy chairs and lounges, fireplace with glowing coals, phones, fountains, Oriental rugs and other attractions. From this mezzanine, the balcony and loge section are reached by easy ramps. The loges are in the front of the balcony and consist of two hundred wired wicker single and double chairs with massive cushions. Back of these is the balcony proper.

The stage is thirty-two feet in depth and sixty-five feet wide with a proscenium sufficiently large and decorative to do justice to the finest theatres in the country. Ten dressing rooms, completely equipped with hot and cold water, shower baths, ventilating fans, individual wash bowls, individual stoves, etc., and a large club room with ironing board, sewing machine, lounges, etc., are beneath the stage. The latter is equipped to handle the largest road shows and the lighting system is extensive and modern. An automatic sprinkler system protects the entire stage and dressing rooms.

An orchestra is used on vaudeville road show days and for the picture programs, the theatre has a mammoth Marr and Colton organ with Tim Crawford, one of the cleverest young fellows in the business, at the console. The organ has one hundred stop controls and is in six different sections. An echo organ hidden midway back in the ceiling carries five ranks of pipes. This is the only echo in this part of the state.

Power's projectors with mirror reflectors are used in the booth which is in charge of Richard L. Martin.

Three mammoth gas furnaces furnish heat for the theatre, all automatically controlled. For ventilation, a ten foot fan drives the air through a large chamber shot through with sprays of cold water. This air is forced upwards and has an egress from under each seat in the entire house. The temperature in the hottest months never runs above 69 degrees. An automatic temperature regulator is one of the equipments of this amusement palace.

In conjunction with the theatre itself is the Fullerton branch of the famed Mary Louise cafe of Los Angeles, under direct supervision of the proprietors, Mr. and Mrs. Will C. Harris.

Chapman's Alician Court theatre is named after Alice Chapman, wife of C. Stanley Chapman, the builder and owner. Mr. Chapman has in this theatre, realized an ideal of years and his enterprise well merits the support that this entire section of the country is bestowing upon it. The Orange Belt Theatres, Inc., is the operating company, controlling also the Rialto theatre in Fullerton. Harry Lee Wilber is managing director of both houses. Meyer & Holler, who erected Grauman's Egyptian theatre at Hollywood, were the architects of Chapman's. The mural paintings were the work of C. F. Brunckhorst.

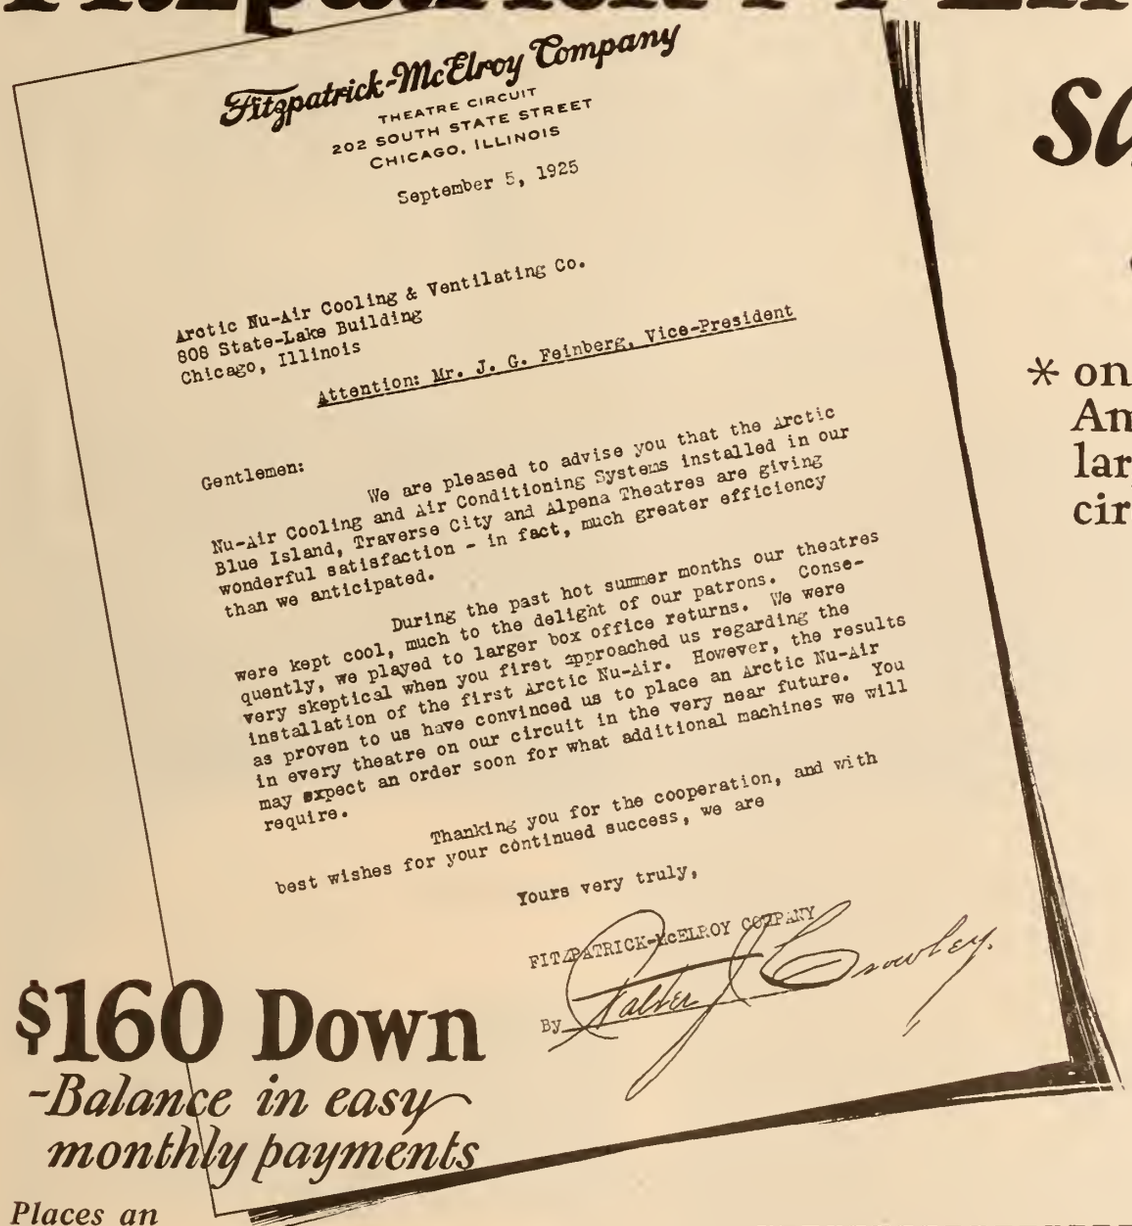
New Keith-Albee Theatre for Rochester, N. Y.

Work on the construction of a new $2,000,000 theatre by the Keith-Albee interests will begin in Rochester next June. This company now operates the Temple theatre in Kodak Town. The site of the new house has not been announced although it has been rumored for some time that the company has been negotiating for the purchase of the Gordon theatre site in Clinton avenue north about two blocks from Main street east, presumably with the idea of erecting the new theatre on this property. With the building of the new theatre, it is not proposed to abandon the Temple. The property on which this house stands has been leased for a comparatively long term of years. When the new theatre is ready the Temple's policy may be changed to vaudeville and pictures. The new house will seat 2,500 and will be an exact replica of the Albee theatre in Brooklyn. The Temple has a seating capacity of 1,700. Harry Mitchell now is managing the Temple.

New Neighborhood Houses in San Francisco

Theatre competition in the beach end of the Park-Presidio district looms as a possibility with the announcement by the Oceanside Amusement Company of the building of a theatre to seat 1,000 on the corner of 48th avenue and Cabrillo street. This in addition to a theatre being built at 39th avenue and Cabrillo. Work on the Oceanside project is scheduled to start by Oct. 15th. Ten store compartments will be embraced in the building.

Plans are complete for a class "A" moving picture theatre with a seating capacity of about 2,000. The structure will be erected in Telegraph avenue between 38th and 40th streets, Oakland, and will probably cost $250,000. The Trans-Bay Theatres Corporation will be the owners.



Begin Work on Hippodrome at Portland, Ore.

Reports received here this week from Portland indicated that work was to begin immediately upon construction of the new $850,000 Hippodrome Theatre, which will be occupied on and after August 1, 1926, by the Ackerman and Harris circuit. The house will be operated under a combined motion picture and vaudeville policy, will seat 2,500 persons, and will include store rooms and office space in the building. Construction will be of reinforced concrete, and the theatre will be Spanish in design. The present Hippodrome Theatre will be occupied within a year by the Pantages Theatre shows, the latter's present showhouse being taken over then by Warner Brothers.

Theatre Building Will Be Erected in Magic City, Va.

Plans have been completed for the erection of theatre and office building on the northwest corner of the intersection of Jefferson street and Kirk avenue, Roanoke, Va. to cost between $1,000,000 and $1,250,000. Plans call for a ten story building, but will probably be fifteen stories when completed. When completed the theatre will have the largest seating capacity of any theatre in Virginia.

808 State-Lake Building
Chicago, Illinois

Attention: Mr. J. G. Feinberg, Vice-President

Gentlemen:

We are pleased to advise you that the Arctic Nu-air Cooling and Air Conditioning Systems installed in our Blue Island, Traverse City and Alpena Theatres are giving wonderful satisfaction - in fact, much greater efficiency than we anticipated.

During the past hot summer months our theatres were kept cool, much to the delight of our patrons. Consequently, we played to larger box office returns. We were very skeptical when you first approached us regarding the installation of the first Arctic Nu-Air. However, the results as proven to us have convinced us to place an Arctic Nu-Air in every theatre on our circuit in the very near future. You may expect an order soon for what additional machines we will require.

Thanking you for the cooperation, and with best wishes for your continued success, we are

Yours very truly,

St. Francis Theatre, San Francisco, Follows Spanish Style of Decoration

ANOTHER magnificent theatre was added to the present group of motion picture palaces of San Francisco recently when the new St. Francis on Market opposite Mason was thrown open. The St. Francis occupies the site of the former Strand but it is in every respect a new theatre. Nothing but the four walls of the former structure have been used and those who remember the former theatre cannot recognize one feature that has been retained in the present palatial structure.

The general decorative scheme of the new theatre is carried out in strictly Spanish. The entire interior decorative scheme carries out the Spanish theme. All the walls are of decayed marble, giving a delicate pinkinsh tint. There are four large wall panels, two on each side of the main auditorium, which are partly covered with rich tapestry drapes, attached at the top with decorative shields. The ceiling is paneled with designs of Spanish heraldry and the lighting fixtures in entire harmony with the decorative scheme, are artistically arranged. There are no side boxes, an impressive Spanish grill occupying the position of the usual theatre boxes and covering the pipes of the large new organ.

A new ventilation system has been installed and there will be a vent under each seat. The seats are also to be of the newest type. The boxes to the rear on the first floor and the loges in front of the balcony are fitted with roomy chairs finished in Spanish leather. All seats in the theatre have Spanish leather finish.

The orchestra pit has been elevated and moved forward.

With the motion picture portion of the performance will be stage presentations. They will be arranged by Jack Partington and are to be not only elaborate in stage effects but will offer only the best talent.

Howard Price Kingsmore, the manager of the new St. Francis Theatre, was for some time manager of the well known Howard Theatre at Atlanta, Georgia.

Owner of New Star Theatre, Ark., to Build Another

D. W. Strong, who will open his new Star Theatre, at Gould, Ark., in the near future will also erect a new $10,000 theatre building at Pine Bluff, Ark.

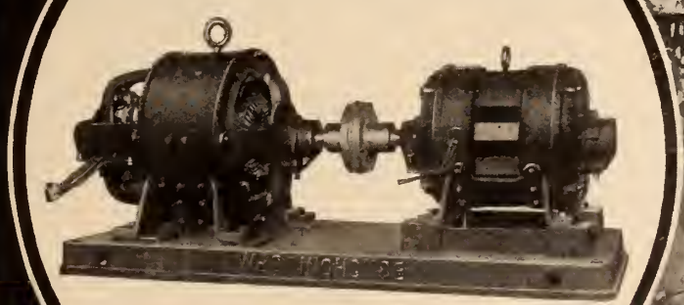
Record Made in Renovating Loew's Colonial, Reading

A record for speed in effecting extensive improvements to the interior of the Colonial Theatre, Reading, was made by the Marcus Loew interests, who have acquired the house from the Carr & Schad, Inc., chain, when they renovated and considerably improved the picture house in the brief period of the week-end just prior to September 21, without interfering with any performances.

It was on September 21 that Loew took over operation of the theatre, showing as the first attraction, "Never the Twain Shall Meet." Part of the rapidly made improvements included installation of facilities for providing 40,000 additional watts of electricity for the theatre's daily use. This will be used chiefly in the large "Loew's Colonial" electric sign erected in front of the theatre. A new high-power projector and other improved mechanical devices were put in the projection booth, and more spot lights were placed in the orchestra pit.

The big organ has been repaired and retuned. A new concert orchestra will be in charge of Harry C. Fahrbach, and the organist will be Robert C. Henke. A feature of the first week's program was the presence of the Capitol Quartette, sent to Reading through the courtesy of Major Edward Bowes of Loew's Capitol Theatre, New York city.

The Sign of "Better Projection"



IN the largest and most exclusive motion picture theatres, Westinghouse Motor Generator Equipment is the sign of "BETTER PROJECTION."

There, the projection light must be as faultless as the ultra-modern appointments which are so carefully designed to attract patronage.

Correct light of unvarying intensity—utmost dependability—freedom from attendance and maintenance worries—and complete accessories for every installation are the advantages which have made Westinghouse Motor Generator Equipment so favored. Your theatre can enjoy the same advantages of "BETTER PROJECTION." Wire a Westinghouse Distributor tonight for detailed information.

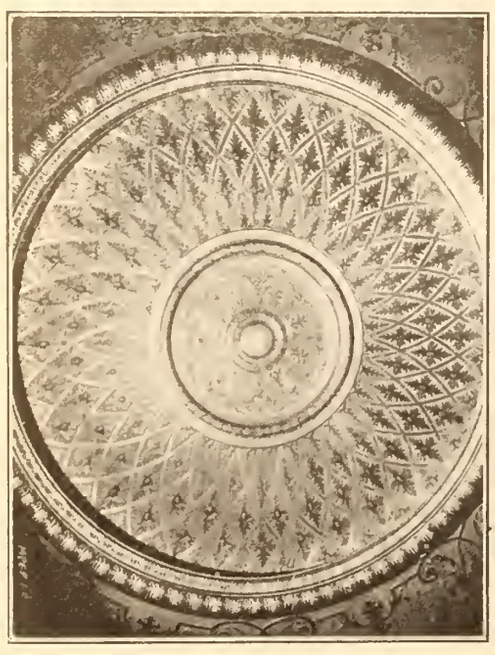
Terminal Theatre, Brooklyn, Opened by Small-Strausberg Circuit



SMALL and Strausberg enabled 4th Avenue and Dean Street to come into its own on Wednesday, September 30th, when the Terminal Theatre held its premiere. The Terminal is controlled by the Fourth Avenue and Dean Street Corporation and under the personal supervision of the Small-Strausberg Circuit. The officers of the Fourth Avenue and Dean St. Corporation are S. Shotten, president, S. Strausberg, vice-president, W. Small, secretary and S. Kalkin, treasurer. William Small, Samuel Strausberg, Henry Rosenberg and Samuel Small are the officials of the Small-Strausberg Circuit. Most of these men mentioned were at the entrance of the theatre to take care of the patrons.

Lester Evans, under whose management the new house opened, is a showman in every sense of the word.

The Terminal is a modern, fireproof structure in every respect and was constructed from plans furnished by Eugene De Rosa of New York City. Building troubles were encountered with a piece of property on the corner which the owner refused to sell except at an exorbitant figure. However, Mr. De Rosa burrowed around it and the theatre is finished today. The seating capacity is about 1,800 and consists of two balconies and main floor.

Among those present at the premiere that are prominent in the exhibition and exchange circles of New York City, were Charlie Goldreyer, Chas. Steiner, Morris Goodman, Charles Schwartz, all well known exhibitors; Sam Moross, Sec'y of the T. O. C. C. of N. Y.; George Dillon, New York Exchange manager for Producers Dist. Corp.; Phil Meyer of Associated Exhibitors, Jack Bellman of Renown, Jack Goetz, Sol Edwards and Henry Siegel of Apollo, H. Thomas and Jack Levine of the Merit Exchange, Ben Levine and Jack Levy of Oxford, Louis Wexler and H. Kram of Film Booking Offices, Al Carlock of Educational, Fred Meyers and Jack Weinstein from the Warner Bros. Exchange and Harry Furst of the Big U, Dave Gross, Gus Solomon, Ed Schnitzer and Bernard Scholtz, chaperoned by Miss Sadie Robinson, Harry Buxbaum's capable secretary, were also there.

The Terminal is equipped with a Rudolph Wurlitzer organ, lobby frames by the Libman Spanjer Corp., Automatic Ticket Register, and electric equipment by the Unit Electric Co. of New York City.

Installations of the Vallen Curtain Machines Gain

The many recent installations of the Vallen Automatic Curtain Machine and Noiseless Track clearly prove, according to reports from the company, the faith in the product and the growing realization of its value.

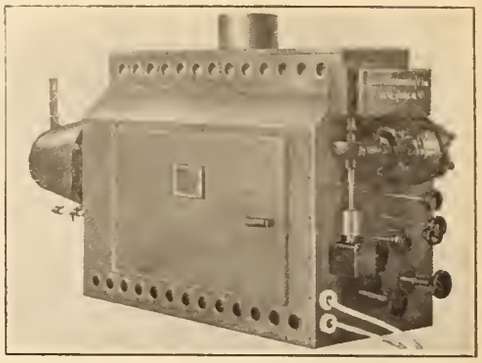
Among more than a score of installations during the month of August, the following are reported by the E. J. Vallen Electric Company: Strand theatre, Shreveport, La.; Alhambra theatre, Ogden, Utah; Strand theatre, Trenton, N. J.; Ambassador theatre, Cleveland; Casino theatre, Des Moines, Ia.; Grand theatre, Gary, Ind.; and the Mount Morris theatre, New York City.

Atlanta Supply Co. Moves to New Quarters

Theatre Supply and Equipment Company of Atlanta, Ga., recently moved into their new home at 102 Walton street, the former address of Pathe Exchange, which moved farther down on film row several months ago.

Theatre Supply and Equipment Company was formerly located at 158 Marietta street, where they have been engaged in business for the last ten years. They made the move to become more accessible to exhibitors visiting film row.

Attractive Theatre Planned for Reno, Nevada



Plans have been completed for the erection of a pretty new movie house to be erected on North Virginia street adjoining the Reno Hotel. It is to be 30 feet wide and 100 feet long, and its seating capacity will be 800. There will be only the highest class pictures shown according to the owner, George Simi.

2,000 Seat Theatre is Planned for West Bronx, N. Y.

Louis H. Kaplan, architect, plans to erect a theatre building at the southeast corner of University and Tremont Avenues, West Bronx, N. Y. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of 2,000. Owners of the new theatre are Louis H. Kaplan and Silverman, Willett & Ballatin.

Plans 1,000 Seat House for Philadelphia

Plans are being drawn by Hodgens & Hill, architects, for a 1,000-seat theatre, 7 stores and 14 apartments to be built at City and Bala avenues, Philadelphia, for the Bala Theatre Company.

Many "HC" Reflector Arcs Go Into Leading Houses

The "HC" Reflector Arc Lamp, the newest product of Hall & Connolly, Inc., 135 Grand St., New York City, has already been installed in a remarkably representative group of theatres, both in New York and elsewhere through the country.

Houses in New York City now using this reflector lamp include: Capitol, Strand, Embassy, State, Cohan, Lyric, Astor, Colony and Century. In addition, the lamp has been installed in all of the Loew houses, in New York and elsewhere, in Sol Brill's new Inwood theatre, New York, and the Mosque theatre, Newark, N. J.

$500,000 Picture Theatre for Milwaukee

Architects Dick & Bauer, 811 State street are drawing plans for the erection of motion picture theatre to be erected on Farwell avenue between Ivanhoe and Kenilworth, to cost approximately $500,000. The owner of the new theatre is the Mal Investment Company, Hy Weiss, Manager, located at 425 E. Water street, Milwaukee.

Plan Big House for Topeka, Kansas

Thomas W. Williamson, Architect, is drawing plans for the erection of a new motion picture theatre on Seventh street, Topeka, Kansas. The new theatre will have a seating capacity of from 1,000 to 1,500 persons. The theatre will adjoin the Hotel Jay Hawk at Seventh and Jackson streets.

Plans Announced by Sigried Malm Co. for Derby House

Derby, Conn., is to have a new motion picture theatre according to plans which have been recently announced. The new theatre will be erected on Elizabeth Street. The owner of the new theatre is the Sigried Malm Amusement Company.

Plans for Superstructure for Malden Theatre Completed

Plans for the superstructure for the new Middlesex Theatre in Malden, Mass., call for a structure 126 x 176 feet, to be located with entrances from Pleasant and Dartmouth streets. The structure will be of brick and cost about $300,000.

Inquiries and Comments

Projection School

A LITTLE while ago Geo. McBride of Trafford, Pa., wrote in requesting information as to the whereabouts of a School for Projection. As we recall it, Friend McBride asked if such a school were located in New York City, though we may be wrong as to this item. Be that as it may, the reply stated that we were in ignorance of the existence of any such school and went on to describe the subjects which should be covered in order for such a school to effectively accomplish its purpose.

Evidently we must have erred in our belief concerning the non-existence of a projection school for O. Record, Royal Theatre, Grain Valley, Mo., takes us to task and refutes our statement swearing by all that is holy and sacred that there is such a school and gives its address to substantiate his claim. He neglects to mention, however, the official title or name so that we cannot directly verify it by sending a letter to the school in question in order to obtain further information concerning its curriculum.

If Record will do this—send the name of the school—we will follow it up by getting in touch with the conductor of the school and give it our approval, PROVIDING, it teaches what we believe to be essential to a complete course in Motion Picture Projection. How about it Friend Record, will you do this?

Record writes as follows:

Sirs:—I have read in the Mid-Week edition of Motion Picture News, August 29th, that Geo. McBride of Trafford, Pa., inquired about a Projection School and your reply that no such school was in existence.

I must state that there is such a school at 109 W. 18th Street, Kansas City, Missouri, and that this school teaches projection in all its branches and gives a thoroughly practical course in projection and electricity as applied to a theatre.

I cannot say whether or not this school has a correspondence course, but it has some of the best fitted men that can be procured as instructors. This course includes instruction in the handling of all types of projection apparatus.

New Fire Shutter Control

As this is my first letter, I won't make it tiresome but here is some dope on a fine shutter for either the Powers or Simplex projectors. I use a centrifugal type governor similar to the one regularly used by Powers on their projector with the difference that I place it below the lower idler sprocket.

The travel of the film over this sprocket causes the governor to revolve. The governor mechanism is connected, by means of a long thin rod to the shutter lever so that when the governor is in operation this rod raises the fire shutter and when the governor slows down it lowers the shutter.

In case of film breaking or jamming the idler sprocket stops which causes the governor to slow down thus lowering the fire shutter. I have tested this device and found that it is positive in its action and that as soon as the film stops the shutter will close instantly.

Even should the lower, or takeup reel fail to work the shutter will close. To regulate the speed of the governor, it must be tightened on the ring shown in drawing.

This device has been submitted for patent application so that further information will be supplied on request.

Am attaching a very crude drawing illustrating just how this thing works.

Doubtful

As can probably be gleaned from Friend Record's description of his device it consists essentially of a governor patterned after the present Powers type with the difference that instead of placing the governor at the fire shutter location such as Powers and Simplex do he mounts it on the same shaft with the lower idler sprocket and then connects the governor to the fire shutter with a rod of suitable length.

The difference then is primarily one of location. Friend Record mentions that he has applied for a patent on this device. The question that rises in our mind, however, is this. What improvement results from changing the governing location from the fire shutter position to the lower sprocket? Is there any? What is wrong with the present practice followed by both Powers and Simplex. Do not both these governors do their work satisfactorily at their present location. If not, then your device will bear investigation as to its merits.

Patents

Concerning the patentability of an article or device, Friend Record, we would like to say a few things of a general nature. The writer is not an expert on patent affairs or procedures but there are a few common sense questions which should be asked before expense is incurred in filing a patent application. A few of these questions are as follows:

1. Is the idea new and original?
2. Is there a need for such a device?
3. If the idea represents an improvement on an existing device is there any actual improvement in the way of better operation or reduced costs? In other words is there anything that would make people use your device in preference to others?
4. Will your device do the work you claim it will? In other words DOES IT WORK?

These are a few of the questions which should be answered before spending your good money for a patent. Incidentally it would also be advisable to secure the opinion of some person familiar with that line of work for which the device is intended.

You need not necessarily remain unprotected in doing this for all that is necessary to protect yourself is to write up a clear, concise, complete description of the device and how it works, supplemented by simple sketches or drawings and then have this sworn to by a notary public and signed by two witnesses. Also have it dated. This will establish your priority of conception of the idea so that even should a person file a patent application on your device before you do, you can prove the idea was first yours and so secure the patent.

Because an idea or device is granted a patent is no indication that it is valuable. The device must possess real merit for which people are willing to pay money. In other words, it must possess sales value Many people believe that once a patent has been granted they can sit back and watch others flock forward with money in either hand to buy the device.

Not so. A patent is merely the government's word that you will be protected in the exclusive rights to manufacture and sell the article in question for a certain period of time. In other words, in order to inspire new thought and original endeavor the government gives you the edge, so to speak, on other persons for a limited number of years which vary from 3½ years, I believe to 17 years, depending upon whether or not the idea is basic.

More often than not, in the case of patents or valuable ideas, the patent merely proves to be a governmental privilege to sue infringers at a considerable cost in the way of litigation. Many times the patent plus a great deal of money is required for proper protection of the patentee's rights.

Furthermore, you cannot, after securing a patent, squat idly on haunches and wait for the patent to be bought up or appreciate in value. ACTION is required if your patent rights are to remain valid and effective because if the patent is filed away in desk drawer and no steps are taken to constructively use it—that is, manufacture it or have some one else do so, another person, after about two years, I believe, can file for patent rights and it will then be up to you to prove that you have been constructively

Lufkin, Tex., Theatre, Has Its Premiere

Opening of the Pines Theatre, Lufkin, Texas, with the auditorium filled to overflowing, with the stage decorated by a myriad of baskets of flowers, the gifts of admiring friends, the handsome new Pines Theatre was formally opened to the public Wednesday with a program consisting of speeches, special music and the first run Paramount picture. The Phil H. Pierce cerns. The Famous Players-Lasky Corp. The King Scenic Co., and many local concerns. The Famous Players-Lasky - Corp. and The First National Film Co. had representatives at the opening and sent handsome baskets of flowers. The opening program was featured by a concert on the big $10,000.00 Golden Voiced Barton organ by Dwight Brown, courtesy of the Palace Theatre of Dallas.

The theatre was erected at a cost of $110,000.00, fully equipped and is of face brick with interior of plaster inlaid with face brick, with velvet curtains and handsome brass chandeliers. The stage is fully equipped for road shows and vaudeville and has an automatic working velvet curtain in front of the big Gardinier Velet Gold Fibre screen. Simplex machines equipped with Mirror Arc lamps are installed in a concrete and brick fireproof projection room. The theatre is owned by the Lufkin Amusement Co. which owns the Palace and Victory also, and is under the management of Non Binion.

Peerless Reflector Lamps in Many Theatres

Reports from various theatres throughout the country concerning Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps, manufactured by The J. E. McAuley Company of Chicago, bear out the company's contention of many successful installations of its product, according to advices received by J. E. McAuley.

Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps are at present in use in the Rialto, Rivoli and Criterion theatres, New York. They are also used by the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, where they took the place of high intensity ares.

Judging from the fact that the Caribbean Film Company, Havana, Cuba, has installed two of these lamps in its Fausto theatre, Cuban exhibitors are evidently becoming aware of the need of good projection equipment.

engaged in pursuing your rights under the patent.

The Government patent office does not tolerate inactivity on the part of patentees for any great length of time since they feel that such practice retards rather than promotes the general public welfare.

This is our general understanding of the patent laws, which, as stated before is not to be considered as expert but is merely given to enable you to pursue your rights in a little more intelligent manner.

As for your information on the Projection School, Friend Record, we wish to thank you and will look further into it upon receipt of the full address of this school.

Kissimee, Florida, to Have New Theatre

Work has just gotten under way on what is planned to be one of the finest theatres in the state at Kissimme, Florida.

Remodeling and rebuilding in part the old Casino Theatre and the entire block in which it stands to make a theatre just double in size, and a modern forty-room hotel, office building, etc. in the same building, has been undertaken by W. A. White and H. Gilbert, joint owners of a ninety-nine year lease on the old Greystone Casino Building, of which the Casino Theatre is a part.

C. C. Jordan, manager of the Casino, has obtained a five-year lease on the new theatre when completed. It is to be handsomely decorated

Automatic Ticket Co. to Equip Many Box Offices

Among recent orders to install automatic ticket machines is one for the new Madison Square theatre, of which Tex Rickard is President, which calls for a battery of six machines. These are of the Gold Seal type.

Fabian's new Mosque theatre, Newark, N. J., opened recently, is equipped with Gold Seal Ticket Registers, and they will also be used in the Metropolitan theatre, Boston, which will be opened early in October by Famous Players.

Theatre Construction

We are in a position to thoroughly analyse any theatre proposition from every point of view. We will prepare you a statement showing the probable net returns on investment, cost of construction and equipment and methods of finance. We also prepare plans and specifications and supervise the construction from inception to completion, turning the theatre over to you complete in every detail, ready to operate. Send us your proposition for analysis.

Our Motto is Efficiency with Economy

Pola's Perfect Paramount Picture!

NEVER has Pola Negri flamed with the primitive fire and emotion that she displays in "Flower of Night." Well has America's most colorful novelist, Joseph Hergesheimer, wrought in providing her with this blazing Spanish-American romance as a vehicle. Here, at last, is the incomparable Pola at her best—as a fiery Spanish beauty smashing convention and flirting, frolicking, fighting for her man. Audiences will revel in this great love-drama. They'll go out proclaiming a new and mightier Pola Negri than ever;

F.B.O.'s NEW STAR

TOM TYLER

[WITH HIS WONDERFUL HORSE AND DOG]

GOES OVER WITH A SMASH!

Motion Picture News says

Tom Tyler, new F. B. O. cowboy star, makes his debut in LET'S GO GALLAGHER. Mr. Tyler is certainly "the goods." Wherever the fans like Western pictures this one should get the money, as it amply fulfills the demand for fast, furious action. Boost personality of new star, mention that he was selected out of one thousand other candidates by F. B. O. for Western pictures. You can praise the feature as melodrama of the kind that makes the spectators wild with enthusiasm over its forceful appeal. Good for any house where Western melodrama holds the patrons. Looks like a real attraction for the box office.

THE CONSTANT CO-STAR

CO-STARRING with every unit of your program is the eternal magic of music,—magic to conjure up a thousand golden phantasies, to interpret every subtle emotion pictured on the screen, to transform a drab world into a highly bewitching land of Romance.

AUDIENCES, whose critical faculties have been sharpened by their familiarity with fine music, regard the Robert Morton Unit Organ as a permanent feature. Exhibitors, who realize the sound box-office value of good music, recognize it as an investment which pays assuredly perpetual dividends.

"IMPOSSIBLE!"

---But Kinograms Did It!

The opening game of the World's Baseball series was over

Every theatre exhibitor in Pittsburgh was waiting feverishly to flash out a specially painted sign in his lobby announcing that news reel pictures of the great event had arrived

Every news reel (there are 4 of them) had a crew on the spot battling against time to get to the theatre first

And Who Do You Think Got There First?

KINOGRAMS --- As Usual

Some time later after thousands of Kinogram fans had already seen Kinograms baseball pictures on the screen the exchange manager of a rival news reel heard about it

"Impossible," he said. "It couldn't be done!"

Of course we have to modestly admit that only a Kinograms crew could do it --- but it was far from "impossible."

In fact it was easy for KINOGRAMS

DEAR MR. MORAN:

WHAT I AM GOING TO TELL YOU WILL SEEM LIKE A FAIRY STORY, BUT IT IS THE TRUTH, SO HELP ME GOD.

I PLAYED JACK HOXIE IN "THE RED RIDER" ON SATURDAY FOR A ONE-DAY DATE AND ABSOLUTELY BROKE MY HOUSE RECORD FOR A ONE-DAY PICTURE. I HAVE PLAYED PLENTY OF GOOD PICTURES ON SATURDAY FOR ONE DAY, INCLUDING SOME OF TOM MIX'S PICTURES, BUT THIS ONE STEPPED AROUND THEM ALL.

IN ADVERTISING THIS PICTURE I JUST DID MY USUAL ADVERTISING, EIGHT ONES, ONE THREE, ONE SET, AND A SLIDE. AT THE MATINEE THEY STARTED COMING AND JUST KEPT IT UP ALL DAY LONG. I REALLY DO NOT UNDERSTAND HOW THEY GOT WISE TO THIS PICTURE, BUT THEY DID, AND WHAT'S MORE THEY STOPPED AT THE BOX-OFFICE ON THEIR WAY OUT AND BOOSTED IT TO THE SKIES. SOME OF THEM EVEN COMPARED IT FAVORABLY WITH "THE COVERED WAGON."

The New Films

AT THE STRAND

"THE DARK ANGEL"

Samuel Goldwyn presents Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky in a George Fitzmaurice version of the stage play by H. H. Trevelyan. Scenario by Frances Marion.

THE CAST

Hilary Trent.....Ronald Colman
Kitty Vane.....Vilma Banky
Gerald Shannon.....Wyndham Standing
Lord Beaumont.....Frank Elliott
Miss Pindle.....Helen Jerome Eddy
Roma.....Florence Turner
Sir Evelyn Vane.....Charles Lane

Up and down the land has the energetic, wise and discerning film-maker, Mr. Goldwyn, flung words of the beauty of his new blonde star from Vienna and of the extreme worthiness of his new picture play, "The Dark Angel."

It has seemed to the editor that over a period of the last two months every big merchant in the Middle West, every connoisseur of things artistic on the Pacific Coast and every other critic of the cinema now active in these Eastern parts has been invited to a private showing of this drama of love and war in the British aristocracy, and has rushed out to get paper and pencil with which to place himself on record as having just looked upon a lady and a screen play of at least extraordinary quality.

In spite of the intensity of this particular broadside of ballyhooing, "The Dark Angel" and Vilma Banky, now current at Joseph Plunkett's Strand, are among the two finest exhibits which the pictures have provided in years and years. I do not at the moment, and probably will not to-morrow, remember having seen a girl of more exquisite natural handsomeness than Mr. Goldwyn's importation.

She does, in fact, perform in "The Dark Angel" so beautifully and so realistically her audience is swept into tears at the climax and it may be noted with strictest adherence to truth that a young woman with the gift for persuading a New York screen audience that she is real and is really experiencing grief comes this way but about once a year, or however often Lillian Gish, Mary Pickford and May Marsh put in an appearance on the Broadway scene.

Mr. Goldwyn's drama is couched in upper class society in the British Isles during the war. The denouement arrives when, after the armistice, Hilary Trent, blind and removed to the North country where he lives alone writing novels, finally is visited by his sweetheart, Kitty Vane. She has only on this day learned that he lives. The girl, he knows, is to be wedded on the following day, and so, in order not to attract her sympathy, Hilary rehearses before she arrives, and acts in her presence an entire scene in which he attempts to deceive her and leave her ignorant of the loss of his sight.

This tense and pathetic situation is carried off by both Mr. Colman and Miss Banky with great good taste and with a dramatic effect quite out of the ordinary in the film play. I thought her especially resourceful and compelling in those brief, tragic moments in which, by some tell-tale gesture of the stricken and brave-hearted soldier, she realized for the first time that the man who had played a desperate game so gallantly was blind.

Mr. Fitzmaurice has photographed imaginatively and in striking designs various interesting phantom scenes, which include not only the fleeting figure of the dark angel but also dream visions of soldier dead who, on parade in the streets of London, return to the ranks and march triumphantly in uniforms of white alongside the comrades who actually did come back.

You will see this picture play and be thrilled and touched by it, and so will your wife and so will your old man. It is not at all the kind of thing to be ignored, and somehow I am possessed with the feeling that it will also make, to state it brightly and with a certain originality, a barrel of money.

QUINN MARTIN.

with

Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky

From the stage play by H. B. Trevelyan Scenario by FRANCES MARION

Says N. Y. TIMES: "This is by all means the best picture George Fitzmaurice has to his credit. One cannot help being stirred by the gentle charm of the love story and also by the echoes of the world war."

MORNING TELEGRAPH: "One of the most thoughtful and worth-while films ever produced."

HERALD TRIBUNE: "Fitzmaurice's best picture which insures it long life and prosperity."

N. Y. AMERICAN: "Visit the Mark Strand Theatre if you have to travel in a wheel chair. 'The Dark Angel' is worth it."

DAILY MIRROR: " 'The Dark Angel' is a gorgeous picture. Director Fitzmaurice has contributed a picture that will enchant every picture-goer in the country. Ronald Colman gives one of finest performances of his career. It is a glorious photoplay."

Here's a real breath taking intensely thrilling picture if there ever was one.

It's the story of a movie star—who refused to take chances and as a result was branded a coward.

The climax comes when he enters a great auto race and by his daring proves to the girl he loves and all that he had a reason for his actions—his mother.

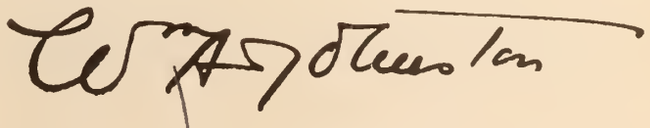
A Plain Matter of Business

THERE are rumors of a collapse of the independent or state rights market. Which is not surprising; it has been predicted. Nor is it at all alarming. The state rights market, in the past twelve years, has been sharply up and down every year, and at times pronounced dead. We look for the usual revival—some time ahead. And we except those well established exchanges not overstocked and concentrating on a few pictures and doing well.

The immediate crisis is that a number of exchanges are unable to lift negatives, even those of some recent first-rate productions. And the situation is due to such major causes as over-production and to the sharply competitive selling of the large national distributors—aimed by the way at each other, not at the independent exchanges.



Some time ago, in speaking of the entire independent group (as distinguished from the so-called Big Three), we said that the situation would be worked out along the straight lines of business economics. And so it has. It is a plain matter of the making and selling and buying of films; nothing else has counted at all.

The Milwaukee Convention has been, so far as we can see, a fizzle. Some independent producers—producing for the state rights market, are bitter; they say that because of the support promised they entered into heavy production cost and volume. And nothing has happened. The Play Date Bureau has sent out bulletins, the appeal of which has, naturally, scored no definite results at all. The association of independent producers and distributors has acquired membership, and that's about all. All the sentiment that has been spilled hasn't counted one iota. The exchanges—all of them, have been selling films, and the exhibitors—all of them, have been buying films along purely unsentimental lines. We repeat—all exhibitors. If any at all have been sentimental toward the independent companies we will gladly correct this statement and give the facts; also we will be glad to report any sentiment toward exhibitors from any exchanges.

We might remark, in this connection, that the spillers of sentiment within a business have always good business motives, and only business motives. They deal in sentiment for what it does—for them. It's about time to recognize this truth and shape the future accordingly.

Since the Milwaukee Convention the film industry has gone on just exactly as it did before. This is a sharply competitive year. Selling is keen. If there is any collusion, as hinted by the irresponsible or uninformed, between some of the larger companies, we daresay their Sales Managers are not aware of it. They are too busy fighting each other. The industry is also getting into the era of big business. Capital counts, theatres, foreign organization, studio facilities, sales organizations—all count, and heavily. And the weaker exchanges have been caught—temporarily—between the millstones of business resources and efforts greater than their own. That's the sum and substance of it.

In the meantime the exhibitor is looking on dispassionately; he considers quality, advertising and price—especially price. Regardless of any other consideration he is buying low—too low in many cases, in the supine belief that people are going right on and make and distribute pictures for him when there has ceased to be any profit in the operation.

The Week in Review

OFTEN you can look right into Hollywood from Broadway — and more clearly.

There's "Ben Hur," for instance. With the filming of the chariot races the big picture is all but finished; and we had wired and written Los Angeles, hoping to get an advance and inside story, a real appraisal of the picture by someone in the know—hoping, when along comes Marshall Neilan.

From Hollywood to Broadway.

He has seen the film, every bit of it, and seen the chariot races. And when I bumped into him, on Broadway, he had just seen Marcus Loew and had aired his opinions at length and emphatically.

View of a portion of the Circus Maximus set during the running of the chariot race for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Ben Hur."

"You can quote me," he said, "and you can go the limit."

So we take him at his word.

"Micky" Neilan is given somewhat to joking, himself; but he says that "Ben Hur" is the point where joking ceases. Somebody started making funny remarks about it—over its huge expense, the time it had taken, etc., and now it is the stock joke of the after-dinner speaker. "For all of which," said Mr. Neilan to Mr. Loew, "someone ought to be shot. Joking about 'Ben Hur' is as out of place as skylarking at a coronation or funny stories in a President's inaugural address."

For—and now take a good breath and take the estimate of "Ben Hur" as given by one of the most experienced, keenest and best producers in the business: take it or leave it.

"'Ben Hur' is the greatest of all pictures, past, present and future. It is so big that no one will ever attempt to outdo it. The most ambitious will say: 'there's "Ben Hur."' What's the use? It will go down in history as the great climax in magnificence of production.

"Its backgrounds are stupendous. That's the word. Overwhelming. The greatest efforts at atmosphere are as nothing beside this. It is 'way beyond the movie horizon. It not merely takes you out of yourself, but out of your country. I have sat in the projection room hour after hour and scarcely realized I was breathing. The color scenes are beautiful—beyond description. It all is; it is just—great!

"I have just told Marcus Loew that simply to have his name on the picture he will regard as his greatest accomplishment—greater than all his enterprises and wealth, anything he has done."

"But the expense," I argued.

"Well, it cost three and a half million dollars," he replied. "That's staggering. But, if 'The Four Horsemen' grossed four and a half million, this picture should do eight million. People went to see 'The Four Horsemen' time and again. This picture has a similar quality of appeal—but vastly greater. It will last forever, and always be new. They won't approach it again, I tell you.

"You see, you've got to view its box-office by new standards. This picture could well open in Saint Patrick's Cathedral. Why not? That would be appropriate. It ought to play—it will—in every church that has a projection machine. All the theatres, halls and churches in the world, wherever people can be gathered. Its appeal is universal. It should run in Tex Rickard's stadium—over there, and be seen by the millions. Yes, you'll have to forget past standards of exhibition—with this picture. Not only will it break all past records, but it will demand new schemes of exhibition—and some mighty good ones. Somebody ought to get busy—" Mr. Neilan, now out of breath, waved his arms and walked rapidly away.

So we give—and literally—this Neilan review of "Ben Hur." Lest the cynical reader think he had something to do with the making of the picture, we append that he did not—except in this respect: he was first sent to Europe to report on the advisability of making the picture there. He reported that it should be made in Hollywood—as, finally, it was.

* * *

SPEAKING of Tex Rickard's big stadium—the new Madison Square Garden in West Forty-eighth Street, I understand it will seat twenty thousand people, and that Rickard is thinking of showing pictures there, along with dancing, at ten cents admission. Which is an item!

* * *

ANOTHER man-in-the-know arrived from Hollywood this week. He sees a lot of pictures before they reach the cutting room; and, generally, he picks them right. "'Tumbleweeds,' the new William S. Hart picture, looks fine and promising," he says. For which we are glad. It will be great to have Bill Hart back on the screen as he was, is and should be. And, according to the same source of information, Doctor Joe Schenck has done the right thing with another star who also needed some management. The other picture our friend speaks enthusiastically of is "The Lone Eagle," Valentino's new production. "It should be fine," he says, and he added: "Vilma Banky also stands out. She's a coming star." And he added: "Of course, you've heard about 'The Viennese Medley.' By all the signs that will be a big one."

ERNST LUBITSCH is to do his first big American picture. He has just finished "Lady Windermere's Fan," which differs from his cycle of light comedy dramas in that it has an undertone of heavier drama. "It is light and sparkling," to use his own words, "but also it has the shadows—light and heavy shadows intermingled. I think it will have a broader appeal."

And now as to his big picture. "Please use quotations with 'big,'" suggested Mr. Lubitsch. "How shall we say that a picture is big? Certainly its length does not make it big. I think that we are in much the same position as years ago when pictures were made—all of them at so much per foot. If you made more feet you made a bigger picture. Then came pictures, big because they were better. Now with better pictures we call the big ones those that are exceptionally long. But I believe that a picture should only be as long as it must be and not as it may be. I hope that exhibitors today are not judging big pictures by their length. Surely an eight reel picture may be big, and a twelve reel picture may be tiresome.

"Then as to the cost. Messrs. Warner have asked me to set a cost figure for my big picture, and I know they will agree with whatever figure I suggest. But I have set no figure and I do not want to. There again—bigness is surely not a matter of cost. You will recall that, when I saw you in Hollywood, I said that the budget for exploitation was in my opinion quite as grave a question as the budget for production. That is another thing to consider. There are many things to consider with the so-called big picture. I am earnestly at work upon it—upon the whole matter.

"And now what shall the picture be? I have not decided. I have thought and planned about it a long time—and I know pretty well. But I am here in New York—it is a great inspiration, your city—and still thinking and listening, and planning. Well, we shall see."

It is a real pleasure to talk with Ernst Lubitsch. He is that rare combination of the artist and the sensible, even trained man of affairs. People are generally agreed as to his ability; they respect him highly and wholly, and I think for the above reason. He has no pose. He works with all the punctuality of the business executive. He doesn't hesitate to ask advice, to court suggestions from all sides. He is an earnest student.

I am glad that he is to do—well, a big picture. Probably he will do many. He has been waiting and studying. One idea he imparted in confidence is astounding. But he can do it. And it gives you a conception of the wonderful things the future has in store for motion pictures.

"The great trouble today," said he, "is that we borrow too much—from books, plays, magazines. We must think in motion pictures. Our great writers must conceive in motion pictures. Great advances are made in picture technique, but we lag behind in stories, in ideas for pictures, simply because it is a new language and we don't know how to use it for self expression. There are great things all about us—especially here in America—marvellous developments which we look at half blindly, apathetically, because pictures which can only express them, do not—that is, not adequately. We do not create—not enough, in and for motion pictures."

LAST week we "rumored" that J. D. Williams was building another "First National" in Great Britain. This week we hear from him direct and through the columns of the London Daily Mail. His first company has been organized and registered under the name: "British National Pictures, Ltd." and with the slogan: "British National Pictures demands for Britain her place on the screen." The company is all British, with the sole exception of the organizer. He will be back in this country in about six weeks and then return to begin a five-year contract with British National Pictures. He gives no details beyond the formation of the company, which we assume will engage in production; and we also assume that its relations with the market will be worked out on some franchise plan with the exhibitor.

"Well," said a prominent film man who happened to be in our office, and to whom we gave the news, "J. D. will put it over."

We happen to know that the international picture has long been one of Williams' cherished dreams. I was one of several who discussed the matter at length with him some years ago. And I'll say this, that his ideas are the best I have heard on the subject.

As to his solid ability as a promoter, no one questions that. But people, perhaps, do not stop and think that the man who promotes successfully in this peculiar business—and there have been few—must be an exceptional showman, a man of remarkable vision both as to pictures and theatres. Yes, and as to their successful relations, too.

We also have noted over a period of a dozen years that J. D. always foresaw the big moves of the industry and was in the lead when they happened. The big problem of the day is international film relations. We have a world film industry today, not merely an American. That's a certainty. And J. D. Williams is big enough to fit this bigger development.

* * *

ENCOUNTERED D. W. Griffith in the Astor. He is going back to big pictures and looks happy about it. He gives no details, but his repressed enthusiasm gives me the hunch that you'll see his name, next year, in big electric lights on the main thoroughfares. "Sorrows of Satan," the Corelli novel, is the vehicle, and he has had it in mind for years. Famous Players-Lasky will throw their heaviest resources back of it. The cost of production figure, we learn elsewhere, will be huge.

* * *

"CLOTHES Make the Pirate," by all signs an exceptional picture, will set a stiff pace for Leon Errol's further pictures. But First National has picked two excellent vehicles: "Lunatic at Large" and Harry Leon Wilson's "Boss of Little Arcady." The latter, especially, should give full play to Errol's delightful whimsicality. "Clothes Make the Pirate," we predict, will put this excellent actor high in the screen world.

Members of the famous Hal Roach-Pathe "Our Gang" with Frank L. Newman, managing director of the Metropolitan, Rialto and Million Dollar, Los Angeles, and Robert McGowan, their director, when they made a personal appearance at the Metropolitan with "Mary, Queen of Tots."

W. R. SHEEHAN, Vice President and General Manager of Fox Films, is back from Europe, looking rotund and happy over Fox's strong position in the field this year. "Nothing to say," said he. "That's our policy. We never announced this New York studio building until the walls were up. There are big developments in the offing, under way in fact. But we'll announce them when they're completed." He referred to the fact that the real estate holdings of the Fox Film Corporation exceed the capitalization, a remarkable and enviable position.

Unfair Type of Exhibitor is Scored by Laemmle

Universal Chief Defines Theatre Policy

By William A. Johnston

(Copyright, 1925, by Motion Picture News, Inc.)

UNIVERSAL has been buying a good many theatres. Also Carl Laemmle has a reputation for open and plain speaking. So, putting these two facts together and placing before him Mr. Zukor's explicit remarks on producer-owned theatres, I invited him to set forth his company's policy in this important respect. It was an interesting interview and a lively one.

"The single rotten thing about this business," said he, "is greed! Clean that up and we'll clean up our business and not before."

But I'll let him speak. Here, boiled-down, is what he had to say:

"I admire Mr. Zukor for his fearlessly frank statement. Nothing but good can result from it.

"There is not the least doubt that the exhibition end of this business is the best. Everybody who knows all three branches of the industry realizes that the producing and distributing departments require more investment and more work and worry for an equal return than the theatre department. I was an exhibitor before I became either a distributor or a producer, so I know. There is plenty of profit in the theatre business, provided the house is properly managed, well located and has the right kind of a show.

"I have felt many times that the producer is the goat of the business, especially when I have seen a handful of theatres making more net profit in a year than any producer made in the same period with a world-wide distributing and producing organization.

"I am strong for the fair exhibitor, but it is the unfair exhibitor who has made the producer the industry's pet goat. I'll confess there have been times when I felt like giving the unfair showman the battle of his life. I refer to the smart-aleck type who thinks it is good business to screw down rentals to a point where it is impossible for the producer to make a profit. I refer to the overly ambitious or grasping exhibitor who either controls a territory or has a vast buying power which he uses as a club on the producer's head. I refer to the man who pays less for a whole week's run of a picture than he takes in in one performance, and then gloats over the producer's discomfiture. Every producer in the business, great or small, has suffered bitterly from this type of exhibitor.

"But when it comes to the square shooter, the exhibitor who is willing to pay a fair price, it's another story of course. He is entitled to prosper without interference, and I'll go the limit to see that he does.

Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

"Universal will never disturb the peace and prosperity of that type of exhibitor, regardless of how much money he makes. We will never be tempted to own theatres that will hurt him. We have never yet built or bought a theatre which would compete with any customer who showed an honest desire to give us a fair break. We have built or bought only in those places where we were frozen out, and that's the course we intend to continue.

"There are still many places where Universal is deliberately shut out or offered starvation prices. I would be a mighty poor business man if I made no effort to get a fair representation in such places, and of course that's what I am going to do.

"I'll tell you one thing more. The evils of this industry are not due to producers alone nor to exhibitors alone. It's about a fifty-fifty split, and it is due in every case to one single rotten thing—greed. When we all reach the live-and-let-live frame of mind, we'll clean up our business and not before."

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Joan Crawford, the Irene of "Sally, Irene and Mary" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), takes lessons in the Charleston from Jimmy, the acknowledged studio champion in the art.

Dorothy Devore, who plays Primrose (after whom the well-known path was named) in "The Gilded Highway" (Warner Bros.), all dressed up in her Charleston clothes.

William Haines and Dale Fuller indulge in a novel terpsichorean travesty with all the trimmings between scenes of John M. Stahl's "Memory Lane" (First Nat's).

HAIL THE PRODUCTION MANAGER

WHY is the production manager? Milton Hoffman, who occupies that post in connection with Cecil B. De Mille, and William Sistrom, general manager of Metropolitan pictures, step forward to explain.

Says Mr. Hoffman: "The production manager came logically in the wake of increased speculation. In the old days when directors were at the same time actors and even writers, functions overlapped. This was not good because while it gave the individual a general view of the whole field, the view was purely superficial. With the advent of specialists, came more intensive development of production and the deeper penetration and close study it entailed, so tied directors and scenarists to their studios and subdivisions as to dissociate them from the trend of the demand in the theatres which ultimately consume the product. As a result, these production specialists have welcomed the coming of a 'third party' whose chief value lines in his broad rather than specialized viewpoint. You might call the Production Manager the mirror of Sales Realities to which directors and writers appeal for the commercial reflection of their inspirations.

Says William Sistrom: "The Production Manager has come to fill in motion pictures the place held in other business corporations by the 'outside-minded' member of the Board of Directors."

The work of Production Manager Milton Hoffman is being watched with peculiar interest by the trade because of his re-association with Cecil DeMille for the purpose of taking from the producer-supervisor, production details of the current De Mille schedule which calls for twelve pictures during the ensuing season.

During the recent visit to Hollywood of Paula Gould, of the F. B. O. publicity department, she spent some little time with the "Adventures of Mazie" unit. The feminine members of the photo are, left to right: Miss Gould, Adamae Vaughn, Alberta Vaughn and Doris Anderson, continuity writer. Al Cooke, Kit Guard and Larry Kent may also be recognized.

Thomas Meighan snapped in front of Blarney castle, Cork, Ireland, while filming exteriors for "Irish Luck" (Paramount), about to ascend and kiss the famous Blarney stone.

Lupino Lane, Educational's new comedy star, with Mrs. Lane and little Lauri, peer around the corner to see how the public takes to "Maid in Morocco."

This is the room in which Charles Wakefield Cadman, celebrated composer of Indian music, wrote the score for "The Vanishing American" (Paramount).

Dorothy Gish designed a Leon Errol Pirate Hat in honor of her co-star in Sam Rork's "Clothes Make the Pirate" (First Nat'l), which she is here wearing.

Maurice Costello, one of the first screen idols, who has been engaged by J. Stuart Blackton to direct Dolores Costello in "Maryland, My Maryland" (Warner Bros.).

One of the subjects taught the students of the Paramount Pictures school is practical make-up. This is Thelma Todd, one of the Junior Stars.

TALMADGE RESTING UP

RICHARD TALMADGE is taking a brief vacation in New York, where he expects to remain for three weeks. Incidentally, he is on the lookout for fresh story material, as he hopes to get back to Hollywood equipped with several yarns ready for immediate production.

After having witnessed a long series of Talmadge's wild stunt pictures, we'll say that he has earned a rest if ever a man did. At the Elk's Club the agile Richard made a short speech wherein he dwelt upon the risks he takes in making films, and stressed the fact that he has never used a double. Everyone in filmland will endorse that statement. They all know that Talmadge is the genuine article when it comes to risking his neck — incidentally it isn't so long ago that he broke the said neck, while executing a mad jump — but what would surely have killed the average citizen had little effect on robust Dick. He had to go to hospital, of course, but was out within half the period predicted by attending physicians, and back at work again. You can't call him a restful guy even when he's supposed to be resting. For instance, when leaving the Elk's Club, he spied a large automobile parked at the curb and executed a flying leap over the machine that gave the hundreds of spectators waiting for a glimpse of the F. B. O. star a real thrill.

IN our opinion F. B. O. has in "The Last Edition" a great exploitation picture.

Thrills, fast action, good action and a well knit story, the production has, too, but it is in the exploitation angle that "The Last Edition" shines. Every daily newspaper in the country, except maybe a few still printing on "flat beds," should jump at the chance of tieing up on "The Last Edition," not because they necessarily will want to help put over the picture just because it is a newspaper yarn, but because there is a great opportunity for the newspaper to get for itself a lot of prestige and advertising.

Emery Johnson has turned out some real tie-up pictures in the past, but this one has everything that "The Third Alarm," etc., contained and then some. It is clean, wholesome entertainment, plus opportunities for publicity smashes that have never been equaled.

WILLARD C. PATTERSON HERE

WILLIARD C. PATTERSON, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., paid a flying visit to Gotham with a two-fold object, first on business for his house, secondly, to meet his wife, Mrs. Anna Aiken Patterson, publisher of the Weekly Film Review, who returned from foreign parts October 10, aboard the S. S. Ryndam, having completed a three months' tour of England and Continental Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson expect to return to Atlanta shortly.

Margaret Quimby, to be seen in "The Radio Detective" (Universal), was a dancer in the Scandals, the Music Box and the El Fey club, and still retains her efficiency.

A charming study of Marion Davies, star of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Lights of Old Broadway," directed by Monta Bell, in which she has an unusually appealing role.

Painted decorations on the dimpled knee are not new, but Ralph Graves gives it a different twist in "Hurry Doctor," Mack Sennett-Pathe comedy. Thelma Parr is the girl.

Director James P. Hogan (third from the right) and his staff on location filming "S. O. S. Perils of the Sea," a Columbia production.

THE NEW FILMS

OF the five new pictures on Broadway this week, "The Dark Angel," First National's production, at the Strand Theatre, carries off the honors in point of artistic excellence and genuine human appeal. It is a most touching story, with the World War for a background and a blind hero; replete with tense, pathetic situations, and introducing Vilma Banky, Samuel Goldwyn's new star from Vienna. The latter is an exquisite beauty and actress of great merit, with the gift of moving her audience to tears by effective, simple pantomine. As a matter of fact "The Dark Angel" is the sort of attraction sure to please those who "take their pleasures sadly," for the note of pathos is sustained to the finish, even if hero and heroine are finally united.

At the Rivoli, Bebe Daniels, cute and vivacious, scores a palpable hit in a most amusing Paramount comedy entitled "Lovers In Quarantine," with the able assistance of Harrison Ford as leading man. A light, but unquestionably funny picture, certainly one of the best features in which Miss Daniels has starred up-to-date.

Another good box office attraction is "The Midshipman," starring Ramon Navarro, and holding forth at the Capitol under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner. They certainly picked a dandy vehicle for Navarro this trip, comedy and drama mingled in equal quantity, colorful atmosphere, and excellent acting by the star and entire supporting cast.

Tom Mix and his wonder horse, Tony, are seen at the Rialto in one of those typical Mix melodramas of the West that stir Thomas' admirers to frantic enthusiasm. It is "The Everlasting Whisper," a Westerner of uncommon merit, quite up to the standard of the best Mix offerings, and a credit to all concerned in its production.

Warner's Theatre comes to the front with an exciting melodrama of high and low life in Paris, a Warner Brothers production with the alluring title of "Satan in Sables." It isn't explained just why his Satanic Majesty should find it necessary to don furs in the somewhat torrid climate where he is supposed to reside, but that doesn't matter. It's a title pretty sure to catch the attention and arouse the curiosity of the feminine contingent, so, what would you? Lowell Sherman as a Russian prince, going the pace in Paris, is the hero, and the story, while decidedly ultra-theatrical, moves fast, supplies a natural note in the performance of petite Pauline Garon, as an Apache girl, and registers as an offering likely to please a majority of the fans.

LOEW'S INK

HAVE you seen that snappy little monthly entitled "Loew's Ink" and devoted to the interests of the Loew-Metro-Goldwyn Club? If not try and get hold of a copy, which isn't so easy unless you can creep inside the magic circle wherein its wit and wisdom hold sway. Brilliant paragraph stuff, gingery verse, clever editorial musings — all to the good and smart as they make 'em. We don't mind admitting in confidence that the editor of the sheet is none other than R. W. Baremore, known to local fame under the sobriquet of "The Vulture." Those who know him well, know best why this title was conferred upon him in days long gone by. The present scribe could throw considerable light upon the subject, but what good would it do? The "Vult" is making good.

WE STAND CORRECTED

IN an article in our issue of October 10, the Weaver Studio was mentioned as being located at Seattle. This was an error, and one which aroused popular indignation around Tacoma. Mr. A. B. Crain, manager Tacoma News Tribune Development, calls our attention to the fact that the Weaver Studio and General Ashton are Tacoma property, and one hundred and twenty-five thousand Tacomans want that geographical fact made public. So here goes, so far as our humble efforts can repair the mistake. There is real activity ahead of Weavers, and it is perfectly proper that Mr. Crain should see that Tacoma gets all the credit due that enterprising city.

The luncheon to Richard Talmadge, F. B. O. stunt star, at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, New York City, last Friday. Sixty-five guests, including F. B. O. executives, exhibitors and writers on the trade, fan and daily papers, were present. Talmadge did several novel and daring stunts to entertain the guests.

ERNEST VADJA ARRIVES

ERNEST VADJA, one of the advance guard of Hungarian playwrights who have been engaged to write original screen narratives for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, arrived on the Mauretania, Friday. Mr. Vadja had four plays on Broadway recently, including "The Harem," "Grounds for Divorce," "Fata Morgana" and "The Little Angel." He is still a comparatively young man considerably under forty and speaks English perfectly.

Melchoir Lengyel, another of the famous Hungarian literary group came here about a month ago to attend rehearsals of his play "Antonia," a Charles Frohman production. The negotiations resulting in the engagement of these noted authors were made through Dr. Edmund Pauker, the representative of the Society of Hungarian Playwrights.

Jesse Lasky, first vice-president in charge of Famous productions recently said: "I believe that the theatres of Budapest and Vienna are storehouses of wonderful screen material that we have not touched. Originality of theme and treatment marks the work of the dramatists of middle Europe, and by bringing these men to this country to write directly for the screen, we hope to introduce a new note in film literature."

Vilma Banky, Valentino's leading woman in "The Lone Eagle" (United Artists), about to serve something from a "phoney" Russian wine-cellar to Clarence Brown, director, and Hans Kraely, scenarist.

A "GREEN ARCHER" HITS THE MARK

AS announced last week, the Pathe studio party to the press scribes, in connection with filming of "The Green Archer," came off on schedule last Friday. Three large buses took the guests to the Long Island studio, where a novel, well filled program of amusement was provided. The guests danced, had tea with Allene Ray, the star, engaged in an archery contest, and otherwise amused themselves. Paul Yawitz, publicity director for the Ned Wayburn enterprises, brought Ruth Laird and Mildred Leisy, scheduled to appear in "Fez," who staged several exhibition dances. The wife of Walter Miller, formerly a vaudeville star, also danced several numbers. Miss Ray was crowned Queen of Serials, Burr McIntosh delivering the coronation address. Several of the Pathe executives dropped in later in the day, including Elmer R. Pearson and J. E. Storey. At the conclusion of the party the guests voted Edmund F. Supple, publicity director, a most thoughtful and efficient host.

YE WEDDING BELLS

SYLVIA HIRSH, daughter of Nathan Hirsh, President of Aywon Film Corporation, was married last Monday to Henry R. Arias, well known in the export end of the picture business. The wedding took place in the Crystal Room of the Ritz, and was attended by friends of both families, and many prominent members of filmdom. Mr. and Mrs. Arias will spend their moneymoon, and later reside in New York City. THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS extends congratulations to the happy pair.

WARNER BROTHER'S LUNCHEON

ERNST Lubitsch, director, and Irene Rich, star of the Warner Brothers' organization, were recently the guests of that company in this city, a luncheon in their honor at the Park Lane Hotel being attended by representatives of all the New York dailies and film magazines. They came from Toronto, where for several days the company producing the Oscar Wilde play — "Lady Windermere's Fan," had been making race course scenes. With Irene Rich were her daughters, Frances and Jane, and her mother. The four left October 17 for Europe, where the star will place the girls in a Switzerland school, her mother remaining with them. Miss Rich will then return to this country and go to California to appear in other Warner productions.

RED SEAL RECORD

DURING the week of September 6, Red Seal Pictures Corporation scored a decided hit by having three subjects on view on Broadway at the Capitol, Rivoli and Strand Theatres. These subjects were representatives of three of Red Seal's novelty series, "My Bonnie," a Ko-Ko Song Car-tune, appearing on the Capitol program; "Marvels of Motion" at the Rivoli; and "Ko-Ko on the Run" at the Strand. This is something of a record, and adds fresh luster to the Red Seal laurels as a purveyor of high-class novelties to the leading houses in the picture business.

Jack Mulhall, Helen Ferguson and other members of the cast of "Wild West" (Pathe), on location with performers of the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch Wild West show, who also appeared in many of the scenes of the Pathe serial.

Moderate Number of Producer-Owned Houses a Benefit, Says Exhibitor

KANSAS CITY just now is in the grip of a question, one so delicate that it has caused a factional division of opinion. The subject is mentioned only in guarded undertones. There is one exhibitor, however, Adolph M. Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City and owner of the Circle theatre, Kansas City, who is prone to voice his sentiment without "coloring." He says:

A. W. Eisner, owner of the Circle Theatre, Kansas City.

"Why all this howl if an exhibitor expresses an opinion on producer-owned theatres, which might conflict with the usual 'panic yell' voiced- If we think a conservative number of producer-owned theatres is such a terrible thing for the industry, why do we continue to sell our theatres to Universal and Paramount, who have been actively buying in the Kansas City territory of late? I have in mind not less than ten widely-known and prominent exhibitors in this territory, who in the past at some time have assisted in singing the 'death hymn' of producer-owned theatres. Today every one of them has sold at least one theatre to a producer within the last year. Do we expect people to take us seriously when our actions are so inconsistent? Are exhibitor organizations to be strictly an individual proposition, with the motto—'Wait till I get mine, then to hell with the others—in force?'

"One may say: 'It's only a comparatively few exhibitors who would sell their theatres to producers.' What 'one' really means is that it's only comparatively few theatres the producers want, but that they could buy from any exhibitor under the sun if the latter happened to need a buyer. Let's be honest about it. We—part of us, at least—are fighting among ourselves, trying to beat the other fellow to it by buying all the pictures that are made. Pretty soon we awaken and find that we are woefully over-booked, facing a big financial loss. We want to sell out. Do we think of the dear brother exhibitor who sat alongside of us at the meeting or convention and aided in passing a resolution against producer-owned theatres? It is to laugh. We would sell out to Jesse James if he had the cash.

"Personally I can see no harm, but a benefit, in a conservative number of producer-owned theatres in each territory. It will aid the owners of individual theatres to obtain better prices on rival product which must have an outlet. There are comparatively few theatres in each territory that producers want. Let them have them. It will make business all the better. The saddest thing of it all is that we exhibitors have to keep fighting among ourselves, with those who do the loudest bellowing usually the biggest hypocrites. If we must remain children all our lives, then the industry simply will have to wait until we catch up with it. It's time we sober up. We're overdue."

Propose Blue Law For Alabama

Sunday Closing Bill to Be Introduced at the Next State Legislative Session

A SUNDAY closing law, aimed at the operation of moving picture shows, vaudeville and delicatessens, looms as a subject to be bitterly fought during Governor Brandon's special legislative session next January in Alabama.

Forces advocating a Sunday blue law are said to be actively at work and additional strength has been mustered. Senator Bonner of Wilcox, leader of these forces, is expected to introduce the measure in the upper house. Bonner introduced a similar law during the 1923 session, which was defeated by only a few votes.

The coming of Gipsy Smith, Jr., noted evangelist, to Montgomery next month will have considerable influence in mustering strength for a Sunday observance law, religious leaders of Alabama state. Gypsy Smith is expected to throw considerable strength to the advocating forces and a general organization to seek the bill's passage may result, it is said.

Senator Bonner's bill in 1923 lacked only a few votes of passing. Before the session ended, Bonner claimed he had enough strength to pass it, but decided to let it remain on the adverse calendar until the next session.

Governor Brandon is not expected to include this bill in his call. The administration is said to be willing to leave this question to municipalities to settle within themselves. However, the legislature was divided in opinion at the general session.

If the measure is passed in January, it means that moving picture and vaudeville houses will be closed in every city throughout the state. Prominent religious workers of Montgomery will join forces with those of other cities in seeking passage of this bill, which will also seek to eliminate Sunday baseball and other amusements where an admission price is charged.

Miss Bauersfeld Appointed to Kansas Censor Board

A new member of the Kansas State Censor Board was appointed last week by Governor Ben. S. Paulen. She is Miss Fern Bauersfeld of Topeka, Kansas, who will succeed Miss Etta B. Beavers, who resigned.

Theatre Censorship Beaten in Atlanta Council

By a vote of 24 to 7 the City Council of Atlanta defeated an ordinance providing for a censorship of vaudeville shows, legitimate theatre attractions and special stage numbers at picture houses. The measure was supported by Councilman Horace Russell and John A. White. Opposition speeches were made by Alderman Jesse Armistead and Councilmen T. L. Slappey and A. J. Orme.

Mr. Orme said he "saw no reason to allow one group of people, or any one person, say what was good for everybody.

"I have never seen anything on the stage in Atlanta that called for such drastic action," he said. "As chairman of the police committee, I can say that nothing indecent will be tolerated here, and all people have to do is to call the chief of police and make complaints in order to get action if it is warranted."

Kansas-Missouri M. P. T. O. Directors to Meet

A meeting of the board of directors of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri has been called for Tuesday, October 13, at the Hotel Baltimore, Kansas City. The question of holding a semi-annual convention this fall and producer-owned theatres probably will be among the more important questions to be discussed. Sentiment among some of the exhibitors favors an annual convention instead of a semi-annual meeting. In that case the meeting would not be until next spring.

Pathe's Public Relations Director on Trip

Miss Regge Doran, director of Pathe's newly established Public Relations Department, has started on a trip that will take her to Chicago and Columbus, Ohio. At Chicago she will appoint a field representative to cooperate with exhibitors in the mid-west territory. Miss Doran will attend the convention of the Child Conservation League of America, where she will address the league on the subject of "School Matinees."

To Discuss Tax Removal on October 24th

A TENTATIVE program of the hearing on revenue revision to be held by the House ways and means committee beginning October 19, has been prepared by Representative Green of Iowa, chairman, under which part of October 24 will be given over to discussion of the removal of the remaining admission taxes. The witness for the motion picture industry will be Jack Connolly, Washington representative of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors.

Representative of the Treasury Department will discuss their recommendations for tax changes at the beginning of the hearings, and will be followed by the various interests who are desirous of relief. Publicity of income tax returns will be considered on October 22.

F.P.-L. Denies Rumored Circuit Deals

Claim They Are Not Negotiating With Skouras and Butterfield Interests, Except for Booking Arrangement with Skouras

THAT Famous Players Theatres is involved in a deal with Colonel Butterfield regarding the taking over by Famous of the Michigan Circuit controlled by Colonel Butterfield, is denied by Famous, as is the deal which rumor says is on between Famous and the St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Skouras Brothers operating twenty theatres in St. Louis. The only item of authentic news is that Famous is negotiating for a booking arrangement with the Skouras interests for the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol in St. Louis.

In denying the rumor regarding the St. Louis Amusement Company Spyros Skouras said that there was no deal under way involving a transfer in management of the twenty St. Louis theatres. He said:

"Skouras Brothers have no such idea in mind. We intend disposing of the management of our properties to nobody. We own the First National Franchise and have millions involved."

Regarding the rumors concerning the Michigan chain of Colonel Butterfield and the St. Louis proposition Famous says:

"There is no deal on between Famous Players Theatres and the Michigan circuit controlled by Colonel Butterfield. No such deal has ever been contemplated. There has been a move contemplated to add the downtown first run houses of the St. Louis Amusement Company to the Famous Players chain, but nothing has been definitely settled."

According to the rumor Famous is negotiating to take over the management of the Butterfield Circuit and the Skouras chain with the ultimate idea of merging these interests totaling sixty-six houses, in the new theatre corporation to be formed by Famous and B. & K.

In July the Skouras interests made a booking arrangement with William Goldman involving the King's, Garden and Rivoli, representing the Goldman interests and the Capitol, New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome of the Skouras chain. This circuit practically dominates the theatre situation in St. Louis.

Meantime the St. Louis Amusement Company, controlled by Harry Koplar and Skouras Brothers have announced that subscriptions for an issue of 12,000 shares of Class A common stock of the company have been far in excess of the offering and that the shares will have to be pro rated to the prospective stockholders. The subscription price was $38 per share.

The Class A stock will have priority over Class B common to non-cumulative dividends of $4.50 per share in any one year. The authorized capitalization of the company is 40,000 shares of Class A with 20,000 shares outstanding and 30,000 shares of Class B with 30,000 shares outstanding.

The plans of the company contemplate the acquisition in the very near future of additional theatres in St. Louis and elsewhere and negotiations are now under way involving the transfer of eleven prominent St. Louis and suburban houses.

The earnings of the company for the two years prior to December 31, 1924, was sufficient to pay $3 per share on the Class A stock while for the six months ended June 27, 1925, the earnings were $45,246 or more than sufficient to pay $4.50 per share on the Class A stock.

A number of other deals involving many houses have been in negotiation during the past week.

The King Bee Theatre, 1710 North Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, for many years operated by Mike Nash, pioneer St. Louis motion picture exhibitor, has been taken under a 10-year lease by the King Bee Amusement Company, controlled by George P. Skouras.

D. Coston, one of the officers representing the Eastern Iowa Theatre Company, was in Des Moines booking pictures during the week and stated that they have secured options on a number of theatres which they are planning to add to their circuit. He did not wish, however, to be quoted upon the names of the theatres which the company is contemplating buying.

For some time it has been a mystery as to who would operate the new theatre in Quincy, Mass., which is being erected by ex-Mayor William A. Bradford and which will be one of the largest theatres in Massachusetts outside Boston. Announcement is now made that negotiations have been completed by the Moe Mark interests for a long lease of the house. It is expected that the playhouse will be completed and ready for opening about New Year's day.

The Buffalo Strand Theatre corporation has been incorporated in Albany with 500 shares of no par value. The policy of the company, as announced, is to conduct theatrical business and it is also stated that the incorporation was formed at this time merely to protect the name—Buffalo Strand. The directors are Walter Hays, Eugene L. Falk, Ira W. Smith, Stanley G. Falk, Raymond A. Williams and Lillian Olsen.

The Aldine Theatre, Wilmington, which was recently purchased by Loew's, Inc. from the Topkis-Ginns interests, has been acquired by the Stanley Company of America, being the last of the four Ginns houses in that city to pass into the Stanley Company hands. The house, which is now undergoing extensive alterations and improvements, will be opened in two or three weeks under the same policy now obtaining in other Stanley houses in Wilmington. The Loew's are said to have paid $450,000 for the theatre, but the price at which the Stanley Company took it over has not been disclosed.

No sale has been consummated between the Whitehurst Combined Theatrical Interests of Baltimore, Md., and any out-of-town theatrical or film producing company for the theatres controlled by that company in the Monumental City up to this writing. The playhouses operated by that company include the Garden, New, Parkway and Century.

Rumors concerning the sale of the theatres have been flying thick and fast for a number of days and negotiations have been going on, it is said, between the Stanley Company of America and the Marcus Loew Interests. Mr. Loew has admitted that he has been negotiating for the properties but Jules Mastbaum has denied that his company is dickering for the theatres.

Two sums have been mentioned in connection with the proposed transaction. The first is $3,286,000 for all four of the playhouses while $1,859,000 is given as the price for the Century and Parkway. Mr. Loew is ready to accept either proposition, it is reported.

A. M. P. A. Members Name Twelve Biggest Men

MEMBERS of the A. M. P. A. at the weekly meeting held at the Hofbrau House, New York, Thursday, October 8th, named the "twelve biggest men of the industry" as follows: Adolph Zukor, William Fox, General Will Hays, Sam Rothafel, Sam Katz, Carl Laemmle, Richard A. Rowland, Joe Schenck and Sidney Kent.

Each of the above candidates for the honor of classification as one of the twelve biggest men in the industry, will be invited to preside at forthcoming meetings of the association.

Reorganize Censor Board of British Columbia

An important reorganization of the British Columbia Board of Moving Picture Censors has been announced at Victoria, B. C., by Premier John Oliver, and, incidentally, a hot political situation has developed through the dismissal of one official.

The member of the board who has been released is John R. Foster, who is the president of the Motion Picture Operators Union at Victoria. The dismissal has been taken up rather warmly by the Victoria Trades and Labor Council, with which the Operators' Union is affiliated.

The new personnel of the board now includes two new members as well as two who had formerly held office. The two new men are J. H. Fletcher and J. H. Leslie, both of Vancouver, B. C. Mr. Fletcher is the proprietor of the Collingwood Theatre. and Mr. Leslie is a motion picture operator at the Dominion Theatre, Vancouver.

The two censors who have been retained are Joseph Walters and W. A. Oswald.

Test Vote Shows Sanborn Favors Sunday Movies

At a test election held last week in Sanborn, Iowa, to learn the sentiment in favor of Sunday shows, the shows won by a vote of 170 to 37. The council had previously agreed to ban Sunday pictures providing the majority wished such action. The test developed the fact that the majority were opposed to the ban and in favor of open Sundays.

The election followed a heated campaign between the liberal element, headed by Anna C. Jacobsen of the Princess theatre, and the reformers.

B. & K. Show "Her Sister from Paris" Despite Censor Board's Refusal of Permit

DESPITE the official ban of the Chicago Censor Board and efforts by that body to force Balaban and Katz to withdraw the picture "Her Sister from Paris," the First NaNtional feature starring Constance Talmadge was continued as the main attraction at the B & K Chicago theatre from Sunday until Thursday, up to which time the censors were unsuccessful in their endeavors to have the management withdraw the production from exhibition.

When a permit was refused by the board on October 8th, First National's attorney's appealed to Judge Pam for writ of mandamus to compel the board to grant a permit. Under this action two juries approved of the picture. The city served notice of appeal, automatically suspending the mandamus and on Saturday Corporation Counsel advised Police Chief Collins it was his duty to suppress the picture and that he could either seize the film, revoke the license of the theatre or cause the arrest of the management.

In definance of this order Balaban and Katz opened their week's bill with the picture. On Tuesday Chief Collins declared he would telephone Mayor Dever at Pittsburgh, where the latter was attending the world series, and ask him to revoke the license of the Chicago theatre, but up to Thursday no action had been taken.

Should the city take any drastic action a long drawn legal battle seems assured, as both Balaban and Katz and First National are determined to fight for their rights in the court and in every other legitimate way.

M-G-M London Studio is Rumor

Reports American Producing Company Will Build Large Plant Persist in England

IN an article commenting on persistent rumors to the effect that two important American producing concerns would build large studios near London, "Kine," the London film trade publication, mentions Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as one of the organizations referred to in connection with the reports.

"As regards one of the companies," the article states, "Metro-Goldwyn, we have been acquainted with certain facts which suggest that arrangements for this purpose are very far advanced.

"Our information is that, as a result of investigations made while Robert Rubin, the vice-president, was recently in London, Metro-Goldwyn has acquired a site and will shortly begin the erection of a studio close to North Acton station and that it will engage in production on a large scale in England.

"Acton, according to air Ministry statistics, suffers less from fog than any other London district and to this supporting circumstanee should be added the further one, that of the several British producers who have just returned from the States, some are believed on the other side to be on a production mission for Metro."

In answer to an inquiry as to whether his company contemplated producing in England, Nicholas M. Schenck, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, replied "I ean neither eonfirm nor deny."

Fox-Defa Tie-up in Germany

Deutche Vereinsfilm A.-G. Productions to Be Released With American Features

CURRENT announcements in Der Film, a German film trade paper, indicate that Fox Film Corporation has entered into an arrangement for production in Germany in co-operation with Defa. The precise nature of the arrangement is not disclosed, but the pictures are advertised as German Fox films, and will include such prominent European players as Werner Krauss, Diomira Jacobini, Mareella Albani, Frieda Richard, ans Mierendorff and others.

The first titles to be announced are: "Troedler von Amsterdam" ("The Old Clothes Dealer of Amsterdam"), after the story by Dr. A. Schirokauer. Werner Krauss will play the title role, with Diomira Jacobini, ans Mierendorff and Hermann Picha supporting. Viktor Janson will direct. "Das Geheimnis der alten Mamsell" ("The Secret of the Old Housekeeper"), from the novel by Marlitt, directed by Dr. Paul Merzbach. Two others announced are "Der Mueller von Sanssouci" ("The Miller of Sanssouci") and "Gretchen."

It is also rumored that Warner Brothers will produce in Germany, and perhaps France. This has not been denied by the Warners, who have not, however, given out any statement as yet on the situation.

These varions moves, others of whieh are rumored, are probably to be attributed to the "Kontingent" system.

Complete Hearings in "Ten Commandments" Suit

Testimony in the suit against Famous Players-Lasky Corporation by Mrs. Mattie Thomas Thompson for royalties claimed as author of "The Ten Commandments," which she alleges was written by her, was completed in the Federal Court at Atlanta last Saturday before Judge Samuel H. Sibley. The case will be re-opened for argument next Saturday.

Miss Jeanie MacPherson, scenarist, and Barrett C. Kiesling, director of publicity and advertising at the De Mille studios, were the star witnesses for the defense.

Camera Work Completed on Sam Rork Production

With the filming of elaborate scenes depicting a sea battle and the arrival in New York harbor of the pirate ship Sea Tiger, the camera work on "Clothes Make the Pirate," the new Sam Rork production starring Leon Errol, was completed recently. The film is now being assembled and titled.

Those who will be seen in support of Errol in this screen comedy, directed by Maurice Tourneur, are Dorothy Gish, Nita Naldi, Tully Marshall, George Marion, Edna Murphy, Reginald Barlow, Walter Law and James Rennie.

School for Screen Students at "U" City a Success

Raymond L. Schrock, general manager of Universal City has arranged for the extension of the school for screen students recently established there. The success of the venture is said to be so pronounced that its further development is considered advisable.

Among the lectures that have been conducted at the classes last week were addresses on "Screen Poise," given by Laura La Plante, and "The Screen Noviee," delivered by Pat O'Malley.

Lieber Month Drive Booms First National Sales

The Lieber Month Drive of First National has been a tremendous success as far as it has progressed, according to First National. A large percentage of the branches have exceeded the quotas set for them. At the end of the third week Salt Lake City stood in first place, with New York second and Cleveland third, and Indianapolis and Montreal tied for fourth place.

Industry to Urge Tax Repeal Before House Committee

ARGUMENTS for the complete removal of the tax on theatre admissions will be made by representatives of the industry before the House Ways and Means Committee at Washington on Saturday, October 24.

Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel for the Hays organization, will appear for that body. On behalf of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the following committee will be present: Joseph M. Seider, chairman; R. F. Woodhull, Sydney S. Cohen and A. Julian Brylawski.

National headquarters of the M. P. T. O. A. are sending out 15,000 letters to exhibitors urging that they take up with their representatives in Congress the matter of admission tax repeal before the session opens.

The House Committee will hear some forty witnesses from all industries seeking the revision of various items in the revenue bill. For this reason it is probable that the time allotted to the picture representatives will be short.

The M. P. T. O. A. will also file a brief with the House Committee.

J. D. Williams Forms British Company

Well-Known American Film Executive Announces Initiation of Extensive Plans Abroad

AS foreshadowed in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, announcement has now been made by J. D. Williams of the formation of British National Pictures, Ltd. This information comes direct to William A. Johnston from Mr. Williams himself.

British National is the first of the companies to be formed by Mr. Williams in furtheranee of his plan to put Britain definitely on the picture map. The company is an all-British concern, with the exception of Mr. Williams. Among his associates are Sir Harold De Courcy Moore, who is also interested in a newly-formed British producing company and was until recently a director of British First National and George C. Eaton.

Sir Harold Moore's company is W. & M. Ltd., the "W" standing for Herbert Wilcox, and it is now engaged in producing "Nell Gwynne," with Dorothy Gish as the star.

It is reported that J. D. Williams has made a deal for the American rights to "The Rat," the Graham Cutts production, with Ivor Novello and Mae Marsh.

The letter from Mr. Williams to the Editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS says in part: "You have given a great deal of publicity in your paper recently regarding the European situation and there is no doubt that the time is now ripe for this country to be placed definitely on the picture map. Nearly two years ago (January, 1924 to be exact) I gave an interview in London in which I said:

"'The next great move in the business, in my opinion, will be the internationalization of the industry. The American public is waiting for the big foreign picture, and the British producer must face the problem and devise ways and means to make British pictures acceptable for the market which is ready for them in their Colonies as well as in America and in the other parts of the world. Everyone engaged in the industry in Britain should work with this end in view and in a short time we shall find the British picture a welcome rival.'

"British National Pictures, Ltd. has been formed to carry out this idea."

With a view to educating the American public and American exhibitors on the subject of foreign pictures. Mr. Williams plans extensive advertising campaigns in trade papers as well as national mediums.

J. D. Williams, who has organized British National Pictures, Ltd.

Mr. Williams expects to be in New York in about a month or six weeks for a brief visit before returning to England to fulfil a five years' contract with British National.

The London Daily Mail of October 2 printed a lengthy article by Mr. Williams which read in part:

"All over the world the mark Made in England is regarded as a sign of quality that is supreme in many things. Few Americans of standing think of having anything but English cloth for their clothes. Sheffield cutlery is the standard of excellence, as the British car is the high-water mark of quality the world over.

"Unfortunately for Britain, this has not been the case with her motion pictures. It is not because you have not the material or the men; not because the frequently blamed climate is a handicap, for, indeed, it is not; not because you have not the actors or the stories. It is almost entirely because no one has so far attempted to organize what is, perhaps, the most technical business in the world on a sound and sufficiently large and stable basis.

"It is a fact that about 90 per cent of American-made films are produced under artificial light. Consequently climatic conditions no longer affect production.

"There are many British actors, directors, scenario writers, technical experts, camera men, and others at present working in America who could be induced to come back home if proper and permanent facilities existed here for the making of British motion pictures. And there are many others right here now who only need the opportunity to develop into as capable workers as those found anywhere.

"The motion picture does not belong to any one nation. The French and Italians were the first to show us how to make motion pictures. I think the first really big picture success in America was 'Quo Vadis?' an Italian picture. 'Du Barry,' renamed 'Passion,' which was an enormous success in America, was a German-made picture of a French story. But up to the present time there has been no outstanding British picture.

"The American public, despite rumors to the contrary, are always looking for good pictures from any country. There are 16,000 exhibitors of films in the United States, the majority of whom would be glad to show really first-rate British pictures. When such pictures are made here they will be just as successful in America as those made in Hollywood."

Non-Theatrical Pictures Lose in Kansas

AFTER a trial period covering several months, non-theatrical competition in Kansas apparently has been conquered. Under strict fire regulations of the state, covering projections booths, and an unwritten agreement with the Kansas City Film Board of Trade not to serve non-theatrical enterprises, exhibitors virtually are free from trouble of this source, if the small number of complaints coming into the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri headquarters may be accepted as a barometer.

India Production Shows Big Increase

A natural consequence of the increased popularity among Indians of the motion picture, states a recent Department of Commerce report from American Consul William Keblinger of Bombay, is the attempt to make pictures in the country with Indian capital, Indian artists and Indian direction.

It started in a very small way but in the last year the output has been greatly increased and gives promise of becoming a substantial industry in the near future. The pictures as now turned out by the Indian studios, however, lack many of the refinements of American pictures.

The Indian producing companies have been suffering from lack of capital and want of an organized method in distributing and it is stated that at times difficulty is experienced in continuing business. Until the pictures can be improved sufficiently to appeal to the better class of Indian it will be difficult to get theatres to run them. The admission at houses showing Indian pictures runs from Rs. 1-6-0 to 3 annas (from about 45 cents to 7 cents), but very few seats are sold at the higher price. Possibly the total admissions would average 6 to 8 annas per head (about 13 to 17 cents).

Montreal Theatre Tax of $323,014 Aids Charities

The manner in which the theatre-goers of Montreal, Quebec, the largest city in Canada, are assisting in the city's charities is shown in the annual report for the past fiscal year which has just been published by the city superintendent, Albert Chevalier.

The city's share of the amusement tax which is collected on all tickets of admission amounted in the past year to $323,014, all of which was turned over to local hospitals and other institutions. Under the laws of the Province of Quebec, there is no Provincial amusement tax, such as is collected in other Canadian Provinces or in other countries. The cities of the Provinces are empowered, however, to collect an amusement tax of their own, the proceeds to be devoted to local charities.

A. M. Botsford Heads New Department in Famous Players Theatre Unit

A. M. BOTSFORD, for several years advertising manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been appointed Director of Advertising Publicity and Exploitation for the new Theatre Corporation to be formed as a result of the deal between Paramount and Balaban & Katz.

Mr. Botsford will be succeeded as advertising manager of Famous Players by Russell Holman, who has been for some time the former's assistant, and is one of the best known advertising and publicity men in the industry.

The new department which Mr. Botsford will head will be operated separately. It is regarded as a very important post. In addition to directing the work of the advertising men in the various Paramount theatres, Mr. Botsford will also have charge of a national campaign of institutional advertising on behalf of the motion picture theatre, which, it is expected, will be along new lines and will be a creator of good-will on the part of the public toward the photoplay houses of the country.

Mr. Botsford will assume his new duties about November 1.

Arkansas Exhibitors Convene

Eli Whitney Collins is Named President of Organization for Fourth Time

THE Arkansas M.P.T.O. held their semi-annual convention at T. F. Sharp's New Theatre in Little Rock last week and re-elected Eli Whitney Collins president for the fourth consecutive year. Cecil Cupp of Arkadelphia replaces H. D. Wharton as Vice-President and Wharton succeeds O. C. Hauber as secretary-treasurer. The directors elected were, W. L. Landers, E. H. Butler, E. C. Robertson, Walter Rainey, J. A. Collins, Sidney Nutt, L. B. Clark, H. D. Wharton and W. E. Blume.

Matters of considerable interest to the film industry in general were discussed at the session which lasted two days. Among the most important of these was in regard to the music tax. As a result of the compromise effected between Judge Felix D. Robertson of Texas, representing the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, and the M.P.T.O., a considerable burden was reported lifted from the smaller exhibitors. Contemplated copyright infringement suits will not be filed and the seat tax of ten cents per seat per year, which the smaller exhibitors have contended was too large, will in all probability, be reduced.

A resolution was adopted endorsing the M.P.T.O.A. and pledging the support of the Arkansas organization to the national body. It was reported that seven new members had been admitted to the local organization.

School Head Endorses Children's Shows

MANAGER GEORGE T. CRUZEN started his Saturday Morning shows for children last Saturday at the Palace theatre in Lockport, New York, and the youth of the Lock City turned out en masse for the event. Superintendent of Schools, R. B. Kelley gave enthusiastic endorsement to the idea in a letter to Mr. Cruzen in which he said:

"I have examined with interest the information sent to me by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., with reference to the Saturday Morning Movie for boys and girls.

"In addition I have checked the titles of films to be used in connection with these movies. Educators for a long time have been anxious that film programs without objectionable features should be available to school pupils.

"With his present effort, Mr. Hays seems to have achieved just this. It is highly desirable that parents have the opportunity once a week of permitting their children to attend movie programs to which there can be no objection.

"I am glad, therefore, to endorse the inauguration of these Saturday Morning Movies at the Palace theatre in Lockport."

Fire Destroys the Lyric In Reading, Penn.

The Lyric Theatre at Reading, Pennsylvania, was completely destroyed by fire early in the morning of October 8th. It is estimated it will take $500,000 to restore the theatre and equipment lost in the blaze. The house was one of the leading theatres of the chain operated by Carr & Schad, Inc., of which Dr. H. J. Schad, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, is the active head.

Rex-Hedwig Laboratories in Contract With Vital

Wm. K. Hedwig and J. A. Kent, president and vice-president respectively of Rex-Hedwig Laboratories, Inc., and Vital Exchanges, last week entered a contract, covering a period of five years, to make prints for the Vital Exchanges, releasing the Davis Distributing Division's product. The laboratory company is enlarging its plant to handle the increase in business.

Charge Cotter Violated the Labor Statute

Not having been satisfied with seeing J. W. Cotter, owner of the Fourth Street theatre, Moberly, Mo., find $50 for violating the town's blue law ordinance for opening on Sunday, the county prosecutor of Randolph County has filed against Mr. Cotter a charge of violating the state's anti-Sunday labor statute. The first case has been taken to the supreme court.

British Censorship Rules Are Made More Strict

New rulings providing for a strieter censorship of films dealing with crime have been issued by the British Board of Film Censors. The new rules regarding crime episodes in films are as follows:

(A) No serial dealing with crime will be examined except as a whole.

(B) No film in which crime is the dominant feature, and not merely an episode of the story, will receive a certificate.

(C) No film will be passed in which the methods of crime are shown or illustrated.

(D) No crime film will be passed, even in cases where, at the end of the film, retribution is supposed to have fallen on the criminal, or where actual crime is treated from the comic point of view.

New Exhibitor Members of Kansas City Board Named

In line with the usual quarterly custom, a new arbitration board was appointed in Kansas City Monday. The exhibitor members, appointed by President R. R. Biechele of the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri, are: K. L. Darnell, Alamo theatre, Kansas City; Frank Amos, New Diamond theatre, Kansas City, and A. F. Gibbons, Prospect theatre, Kansas City. The three distributor members, appointed by E. C. Rhoden, president of the Kansas City Film Board of Trade, are: Louis Reichert, Warner-Vitagraph; T. O. Byerle, First National, and M. A. Levy, Fox.

Marco Wolf Signed by West Coast Theatres Co.

West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Marco Wolf, San Francisco theatrical producer, have signed a three-year contract under which the latter will act as general stage director for houses in the West Coast circuit. The Fanchon and Marco revues are enjoying widespread popularity on the coast and are now being presented at San Jose, Stockton, San Diego, Pasadena, Long Beach, Santa Ana, San Bernardino, Pomona and four of the large neighborhood houses in Los Angeles.

Associated Field Force Has Conference

FOUR of the five special representatives of Associated Exhipitors were in conference for three days last week with General Manager John S. Woody and Sales Manager Jay A. Gove, when details of the company's new sell- and administrative policy were outlined.

The special representatives were instructed with regard to the taking over of towns of less than 2,000 population, heretofore sold for Associated by Pathe, and for the employment of bookers and a greatly increased sales organization. In this respect were discussed many details of sales work and the entire distribution campaign for the remainder of the season. The representatives in attendance were Claude C. Ezell, Floyd Lewis, Harry E. Lotz and Melville E. Maxwell. A number of the sixteen productions on the second half of Associated's schedule were previewed by those in attendance at the conference.

Seventeen Vital Exchanges To Open

Davis Distributing Division Announces Completion of System, With Fourteen Others to Open Shortly

DAVIS Distributing Division, Inc., and Vital Exchanges, Inc., who will handle their product, have completed the organization of an exchange system throughout the United States and Canada. It is announced by David R. Hochreich, President of Vital Exchanges, that exchanges are to be opened immediately in seventeen cities, and that the fourteen others completing the system, will be in operation within the next thirty days.

Coincident with the announcement of the beginning of actual distribution by Vital Exchanges, Hochreich also made known the officials of the organization as follows: David R. Hochreich, President; Arthur L. Price, Vice-President; Walter Cohen, Secretary-Treasurer; Leo A. Price, Chairman of the Board of Directors and Finance Committee, with the following Board of Directors: Leo A. Price, David R. Hochreich, Arthur L. Price, J. Charles Davis, 2nd, Walter Cohen, J. K. Adams, William Hedwig. Senator Abraham Kaplan is general counsel.

Leo A. Price makes his entrance into the picture industry through Vital Exchanges. He was formerly President of Rothenberg and Company and is now President of the Associated Banking Corporation. Arthur L. Price, his son, is Vice-President of the Associated Banking Corporation, with which Walter Cohen is also affiliated.

In discussing the organization of Vital Exchanges, President Hochreich said:

"I am delighted that Vital Exchanges, Inc., has been fortunate enough to secure the invaluable services of such men as Leo

Leo A. Price, chairman of the board of directors of Vital Exchanges, Inc., and a director of Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

A. Price, Arthur L. Price, Walter Cohen and Senator Kaplan. I consider that the entrance of these gentlemen into the motion picture industry is a tribute not only to Vital Exchanges, Inc., and the Davis Distributing Division, Inc., but to the motion picture industry itself, for they are recognized in the financial world as leaders in their chosen field and their affiliation with Vital Exchanges, Inc., is a tribute to that organization, its policies and product, as well as the Davis Distributing Division, Inc.

"Senator Abraham Kaplan, while a well-known lawyer, is recognized in the financial world and in the field of politics as one of the ablest men in his chosen profession. He is an expert on motion picture matters.

"This reorganization of Vital Exchanges, Inc., in no way effects the association with Davis Distributing Division, Inc., whose product we will handle exclusively for the next five years and whom we look to with the utmost confidence for the supply of product of sufficient quantity and quality to make Vital Exchanges, Inc. one of the leading distributing organizations in the industry."

The Vital Exchanges which are now in operation and those opening within the week are: Philadelphia—Dave Segal; Pittsburgh—O. R. Kurtze; Buffalo—Richard C. Fox; Albany—Richard C. Fox; Milwaukee—Walter A. Baier; Cleveland—Harry A. Lande; Cincinnati—Harry A. Lande; Indianapolis—Harry A. Lande; St. John, N. B.—R. J. Romney; Toronto, Winnipeg, Montreal, Vancouver—R. J. Romney; Boston—Harry Segal; New York—Moe Kerman; Chicago—Si Greiver.

Mr. Hochreich is leaving on a trip immediately to arrange the opening of the other exchanges which are waiting the word to go. He will be joined on the Coast by Mr. Davis who will spend some time in California in the interest of productions and states that all production is to be speeded up in order to keep the newly opened exchanges fully supplied with quality product. Mr. Hochreich also states that his assistant, Milton Kempner, will accompany him on the trip and that the detail of all office management will be looked after by Max F. C. Goosman, assistant General Manager.

Connecticut Tax Rehearing is Denied

Decision Declares New Law Constitutional; Appeal is Prepared for Hearing in Supreme Court

THE petition of motion picture interests for a rehearing of the Connecticut tax bill has been denied by the special Federal Court sitting for the purpose of hearing the appeal. The court, composed of Judges Henry Wade Rogers, Henry Goddard and Thomas W. Thatcher, last Friday handed down the decision which declared the new law constitutional and their decision was filed in the New Haven office of Charles E. Pickett, clerk of the U. S. District Court.

The decision did not come in the nature of a surprise, as it was not expected the three judges would grant the petition for another hearing. The action, however, paves the way for a hearing before the Supreme Court. Papers have been prepared for this petition and will probably be filed during the week. They were prepared by Benediet M. Holden of Hartford, counsel for the motion picture companies, in association with George W. Wickersham.

The text of the decision denying the plea for a rehearing in the special Federal Court follows:

"The motion for a re-argument is denied. The application is based on the theory that the court disposed of this case on the theory that the statute was passed in the exercise of the police power, but the court decided that whether the act was passed in the exercise of the police power or the taxing power, it was valid."

The motion for re-argument was brought by the Fox Film Corporation of New York and the American Feature Film Company of Boston. It was contended that the court had decided the issue on the basis that the act was passed under the police power of the state. The tax of ten dollars a reel, it was argued, could not be merely a fee to cover police supervision as it would bring a revenue several times larger than the cost of administration of the act.

A hearing on the constitutionality of the law was held in New Haven on July 10th and the court handed down a decision which favored the state and which denied the petition for an injunction. It was then argued that the court should pass upon the validity of the law as a revenue measure, rather than one coming under police powers of the state.

Meantime exhibitors and other executives in the picture industry in Connecticut, working in cooperation with the Hays organization are bending effort in a campaign calling for the repeal of the Durant law. Petitions have been distributed throughout the state and a majority of the legislators are said now to be in favor of such a repeal.

One of the best bits of propaganda in this direction was pulled by Clarence D. Burbank of the Franklin Theatre at Thompsonville when he persuaded Representative Harold J. Bromage to speak against the statute from the stage of his theatre. The Assemblyman said he voted against the bill and declared he would work for a special session of the Legislature to repeal the law. More than 1,200 residents of Thompsonville have signed "special session" cards which were distributed through the Franklin Theatre.

Tax Commissioner Blodgett has prepared a number of new regulations in connection with the operation of the tax law. The nature of the regulations has not yet been revealed, but the Commissioner stated they would not impose additional burden upon operators or exhibitors. He declared they would be of further assistance in ascertaining what films, if any, are being shown without the registration required by the statute.

The Commissioner discounts reports that independent distributors are doing any large volume of business in Connecticut. He has information to the effect that salesmen are trying to sell and that a small quantity of film has been contracted for.

Federal Trade Commission Appeals Eastman Decision to U. S. Supreme Court

A REVIEW of the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, holding that the Federal Trade Commission was without authority to order the Eastman Kodak Company to dispose of laboratories which the commission contended had been built as a means of coercing independent laboratories to use Eastman film exclusively, has been asked of the United States Supreme Court by the commission's counsel.

The circuit court concurred in the commission's opinion that an agreement between the Eastman Company and the laboratories that the former would refrain from operating its three laboratories so long as the latter used only American-made film was illegal and an unfair method of competition, but held that the Trade Commission Act did not confer upon the commission the power to require a citizen to sell property acquired in the course of business; and that as the Eastman Company had the unquestioned right to equip itself to enter the laboratory business, no court could require the sale by the company of the laboratories, holding invalid the commission's order requiring the company to dispose of the properties.

The court's view is contested by the commission's attorneys, who claim that the commission has authority under the law to make a provisional order requiring the disposition of the laboratories. The commission claims that the facts in the case disclose a deliberate purpose and intent to monopolize interstate commerce and to prevent the importation, in foreign commerce, of raw positive films; that acts otherwise lawful may become unlawful when done with an intent to violate the law, and that the sale of property acquired as part of a plan to restrict trade may be compelled.

Denial of the commission's petition is asked by the Eastman Kodak Company in a brief filed with the court, in which it is declared the acquisition and ownership of laboratories by the Eastman Company was not unlawful per se, and cannot be considered an unfair method of competition in interstate commerce. It is also contended that the commission has no power to order a sale of tangible physical property.

Walker Will Lay Cornerstone

Senator Will Preside at Ceremonies in Connection With New Fox Exchange

SENATOR James J. Walker, Democratic candidate for Mayor of New York, will lay the cornerstone of Fox Film Corporation's New York Exchange at 343-45 West 44th street on Wednesday, October 28th, according to announcement by James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the company. The event will bring together officials of the city and state, stars of the stage and screen and over 300 exhibitors of the metropolitan area.

Wilfred, Inc., are the architects of the building, which, it is said will be the most scientifically laid out exchange in the country. It will be equipped with every modern appliance for the handling and distribution of films and accessories. It will be absolutely fireproof, the building being of reinforced concrete with all steel partitions, a full sprinkling system and every other known safety appliance.

A beautiful lounge and reception room, opening out of a palatial projection room, will be fitted up for the comfort of visiting exhibitors on the third floor. There will also be vaults for the storage of films.

Harry Buxbaum, manager of the New York Exchange, will have his offices on the second floor, surrounded by the members of his staff. Plans call for large rest rooms on this floor for the office force. Lockers and other essential equipment will be found in these rooms.

A unique feature of the dedicatory ceremonies will be the placing of a can of films in the cornerstone instead of the usual papers. Great care is being taken to insure that the film will be typical of present day production.

Missouri Not to Tax Picture Theatres

THE motion picture theatres and other amusement places of Missouri will escape from the special 5 or 10 per cent tax Governor Sam A. Baker contemplated installing to provide a special fund for the maintenance of the public schools and high educational institutions of the state.

The Governor's conference will meet again in Jefferson City on October 19 to draft the proposed constitutional amendment to be submitted to the voters of the state in November 1926.

A sub-committee of the conference has drafted the proposed amendment. It will provide a 10 per cent tax on cigars and cigarettes, a severance tax on minerals mined in the state, transfer of the inheritance tax fund from general revenue to school revenue, transfer of present 5 cents per $100 property tax to school fund and similar treatment for the foreign insurance tax. It is estimated these will net $12,000,000 annually for the schools and colleges, etc.

Bert Ennis Opens Office to Handle Advertising

Bert Ennis, director of Publicity for Roxy Theatres Corporation and Sawyer-Lubin productions will open his own office for the purpose of handling general advertising, including national campaigns for commercial as well as motion picture organizations.

Ennis will conduct campaigns for Roxy Theatres, Sawyer-Lubin, Standard-Radio Corporation of Worcester, Mass., and other concerns from this office.

Musicians Return to Wells Theatres in Norfolk

Musicians of Norfolk, Va., and the management of the Wells theatres there have come to an agreement on the terms originally offered by the Wells Company, thus ending a strike which left the Colonial, Academy, Norva, Wells and Strand theatres without orchestras. The musicians returned to work Monday and with them the operators and stage employees who had been ordered out by their national officials on Saturday night.

Under the new agreement leaders draw $65 a week; men, $47.50, with the understanding that the Wells Company may employ any number of men when and where desired. Details regarding wage scales at combination houses, organists, pianists, etc., are to be entered in a formal agreement which the union is to present soon.

New Incorporations Week in New York State

Lipp, New York city; Chester Beecroft Productions, Inc., $100,000, Henry E. Stohldreier, Esther Colm, Edward Lemberger, New York city.

Film Golfers Have Great Session

Christie Deibel of Youngstown Gets Low Score at Fall Tournament Held on the Winged Foot Links

WITH ideal weather conditions, a perfect course over which to play and a "million dollar" club house for the banquet, the annual Fall golf tournament of the film industry, held Tuesday at Mamaroneck, N. Y. on the Winged Foot links, may be set down as another successful day's outing for the industry.

The attendance was not as large as in former events, owing no doubt to the holiday of Monday, but this probably added somewhat to the golfer's pleasures the two courses accommodating all those who desired to play without crowding. The banquet in the evening completed the schedule of the day's proceedings.

At this function, Christy Diebel, prominent exhibitor of Youngstown, O., acted as temporary toastmaster introducing E. A. Eschman of First National who finished the evening in this capacity.

The prize winners were announced by Mr. Eschman as follows:

Low net (Reuben Samuels Cup) by T. C. Young with a score of 75.

Low net runner-up (Pathe Exchange Cup) by Mitchell May at toss of coin with Walter Scheiber. Score, 77.

Low gross (Warner Bros. Cup) by Chris Deibel, with a score of 88.

Low gross runner-up (M. P. News Cup) by E. P. Curtis with a score of 91.

Leg on THE FILM DAILY Cup by Chris Deibel with a score of 88.

Jules Mastbaum Cup for lowest exhibitor score by Chris Deibel with a score of 88.

F. B. O. Cup for birdie by Walter Scheiber after toss of coin to decide between Scheiber, Paul H. Cohen, William H. Rabell and E. P. Curtis.

Carl Laemmle Cup for putting by Earl W. Hammons.

J. P. Muller Plaeque offered as special New York exhibitor prize by Harry Brandt after toss of coin on tie with Bernard Edelhertz.

Class A—range 70-100 (Watterson R. Rothacker Cup) by William H. Rabell with score of 92.

Class B—range 101-120 (Arthur W. Stebbins Cup) by Arthur S. Kane with score of 105.

Class C—range 121-170 (Jack Cosman Cup) by Hy Gainsboro with score of 121.

Winners of foursomes: Pat Garyn, Paul H. Cohen, G. E. Berry, W. K. Scott, Harry Brandt, Jacobo Glucksmann, Arthur Hirsh, Lee Gainsboro, Jack Kreh, George Wilson, Elmer Pearson, J. V. Ritchey, A. L. Pratchett, G. H. Oliphant, J. S. Dickerson, Bill Nolan, Dan W. Fish, F. W. Crosbie, Arthur G. Whyte, Walter Scheiber, Lee A. Ochs, D. J. Chatkin, E. P. Curtis, Earl W. Hammons, Stanley Hand, Kenneth Harris, E. A. Golden, C. C. Griffin, S. R. Burns, W. B. Frank, Gene Picker, Louis Brock and Mr. Casey.

Runners-up in their foursomes: Henry Creske, Arthur Brilant, Hyman Winik, Lou Geller, Eugene Hatscheck, Albert Sawtell, Nat G. Rothstein, John Theiss, Eddie Eschmann, John S. Spargo, Samuel Rubenstein, W. Scott, Richard Anderson, E. L. Smith, John Humm, Walter Futter, Chester E. Sawyer, Cy Fields, Joe Hornstein, W. F. Clarke, Mitchell May, Lou Young, Bobby North, Joe Miles, H. M. Scully and Messrs. Cummings, Mitchell, Bunn and Wheeler.

The duffers prize went to Jess Gourlay with a score of 168. Official handicapper Bruce Gallup of First National announced during the awarding of the prizes that there was a remarkable improvement in the skill of the golfers as a whole since the last tournament when high scores of 200 and over were made.

Mr. Gallup was the recipient of an extra prize, a silver cocktail shaker, donated by J. P. Muller. This award was by acclamation and a fine tribute to Mr. Gallup and recognition of his hard work during the many film tournaments of the past.

The Muller Agency donated a prize for the last tournament that was not awarded on account of the weather conditions and also had a new prize for Tuesday's event. The committee had decided to hold the latter over for a next competition but when Frank Hughes insisted that it be awarded it was decided to present it to Mr. Gallup.

98 Charters Issued In September

$422,473,961 is Capital Represented in Corporations Filing Papers During Month; Period Shows Slight Decline

A SLIGHT decline in the number of of companies seeking charters to engage in all branches of the film industry is noted in the records for the month of September, according to a survey by The Film Daily, which reports that 98 companies, representing a total capital of $422,473,961, filed papers during that period.

The number of charters filed, the report continues, is the lowest since February, which had 86, although the amount of capital listed in September greatly exceeds that of the last two months.

Since Jan. 1, 1,346 companies were formed to do business in the industry, with a total active capital of $422,473,961. It is expected that the figure will exceed half a million by the end of the year. All of the 1,346 units formed since Jan. 1st do not, however, represent $422,473,961, because 403 listed capital stock instead of active capital. This means that $422,473,961 was listed by only 943 companies. A resume of corporate activity for the nine months of this year follows:

Month	No. of Co.	Capital	Not listing Capital
January	166	$66,869,000	53
February	86	21,241,900	23
March	222	36,946,440	63
April	115	42,582,500	35
May	232	29,010,721	74
June	135	103,640,900	30
July	146	27,591,000	42
August	146	31,995,600	51
September	98	62,656,000	32
Totals	1,346	$422,473,961	403

Several large corporations were chartered, most of them in Delaware. The Cine Manufacturing Corp. recorded the highest capital in September, $25,000,000. This is the third largest corporation, in point of capital, formed this year. The largest is North American Theatres, with a capital of $55,000,000, and next, Universal Pictures Co., Inc., with $32,000,000. Both are Delaware corporations. Following is a list of those units chartered in September with a capital of $1,000,000 or over:

Company	Capital	State chartered
Cine Mfg. Corp.	$25,000,000	Del.
Color Cinema Prod.	14,000,000	Del.
Far West Theatre Corp.	6,000,000	Del.
Northwest Theatre Cir.	4,750,000	Del.
Far West Theatre, Inc.	4,500,000	Calif.
Assoc. Realty Operators	2,250,000	Del.
Hansen Theatres, Inc.	1,000,000	Del.
San Fran. M. P. Corp.	1,000,000	Calif.
Schumann Heink Corp.	1,000,000	Del.

New York, as usual, leads in the number of companies formed. Delaware is first in the amount of capital listed. New York granted charters to 48 companies. In the latter classification, Delaware is second, with 20 new units, and California third, with nine. The Delaware charters listed $55,171,600 in capital, California is second listing $5,880,000 and New York, third, with $948,000. Twenty-two of the New York companies listed capital instead of active capital.

Two companies were chartered in England, and one in France. Below is a list of the September corporations, by states and countries:

State	No. of Co.	Capital	Not Listing Capital
Arkansas	1	$25,000	....
California	9	5,880,000	2
Connecticut	1	.....	1

Fifteen Picture Theatres in Bombay

There are fifteen picture theatres in Bombay that might be placed in the first class, for India, states American Consul Wilbur Keblinger, Bombay, India, in a recent report released by the Department of Commerce. These theatres, the report states, compare very favorably with the ordinary picture theatres in the United States and are comfortable in every way.

Pictures dealing with the wild west in America were formerly exceedingly popular, but the craze for this type has somewhat subsided. Plays involving serious social problems are not generally liked and draw but small crowds.

M. de MIGUEL HERE

To Film "Don Quixote" in Spain

BRINGING with him a print of "Pedrucho" ("The Bull-Fighter"), filmed in Spain, M. de Miguel, pioneer Spanish distributor and producer, arrived in New York this week. This is from a story by the Duke of Tovar, and was filmed on his ranch. Senor de Miguel has already placed this in France, Germany, Italy and England.

He also announced upon his arrival that his company would film an elaborate version of the immortal novel, "Don Quixote," by Cervantes, which has been translated into more than sixty languages. This will be photographed in the actual settings of the story, with the co-operation of the Spanish government. An American director and cameraman, and perhaps an American star, are being considered for this.

Senor de Miguel is a pioneer in Spanish film circles, having been the distributor there of such pictures as "The Birth of a Nation," "Intolerance" and "Hearts of the World." His company, Repertorio M. de Miguel, the slogan of which is "La Aristocracia del Film," has offices in Barcelona, Madrid, Seville, Valencia, Bilbao, Paris, France, and Buenos Aires, in South America. He will arrange for other pictures while here.

He has done important work in Spain in establishing the motion pcture among the better class people as president of the Spanish Society of the Friends of the Cinema. His last program received diplomas from the Royal Club of Spanish Authors and the Club of Beaux Arts. He was host to Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford on their last trip to Spain.

Omaha Wins Laemmle Trophy

Takes First Annual Competition for Sales Made During Summer Months

THE Carl Laemmle Sales trophy offered to the Universal exchange making the best sales showing during the Summer months has been awarded to the Omaha Exchange, managed by Harry Lefholtz. It will remain in the possession of the exchange for the coming year. This was the first annual competition for the trophy.

The sales drive for the Laemmle Trophy was based on this summer's results in comparison with a similar period in 1924. Omaha showed surprising form in taking high honors in the contest, that exchange not having won a prize in a Universal sales contest for several years. Determined effort on the part of Lefholtz and especial efficiency on the part of his force, brought the mid-west exchange up to a high state of excellence.

The main idea behind the Trophy contest was to supply added incentive for Universal exchanges to keep up their speed during the summer months, a period which in the opinion of Mr. Laemmle is the most important in the entire year.

The Laemmle Trophy was designed by Black, Starr & Frost, jewelers of New York City. It is of silver and stands four feet high on an attractive marble base encrusted with silver filigree work. The design embodies the Universal globe with its saturn rings, surmounted by a silver figurette copied after the famous Nike statue of Victory.

Lefholtz's force consists of H. L. Craig, A. B. Seymore, B. R. Greenblatt, J. McBride, G. H. McCool, salesmen; W. H. Strickland, booker; Lowell Dollen, poster clerk; Jack Edwards, exploiteer; Helen Whitmore, assistant cashier; Regina Molseed, contract clerk; Edythe Knigge, biller; James Peterson, shipper; Estelle Maguire, secretary; Mildred Peterson, head inspector; and Cora Mortensen, Margaret Mortensen and Anna Mraskoski, inspectors.

Columbia May Increase 1926-7 Schedule

AS a result of an optimistic report made by David A. O'Malley, secretary of Columbia Pictures Corporation, Jack Cohn and Joe Brandt may decide to increase even further the Columbia program for 1926-7.

Mr. O'Malley has just returned from a six weeks' trip covering all the Columbia exchanges throughout the country.

As announced last week, independent distributors now handling Columbia pictures have laid definite plans for a national organization for the exclusive distribution of Columbia product. They will meet in New York the coming week to decide definitely on new policies.

Hollywood Physician Plans Career on Screen

Dr. Tolento Nardini, a practising physician of Hollywood who made his debut as a screen actor in "The Merry Widow," is playing another role in "Free Lips," a Norma Shearer starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer now being produced under the direction of Hobart Henley. Dr. Nardini, who was given his first acting opportunity by Erich von Stroheim, has played several small parts since his work in the "Merry Widow" and plans to give up the medical practice for a career in the photoplays.

Constance Bennett is Under Contract to M-G-M

Constance Bennett, featured player in productions by various companies, has signed a contract to appear exclusively in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures. Miss Bennett is now playing the role of Irene in "Sally, Irene and Mary," which Edmund Goulding is directing at the Culver City studios.

Mayer Addresses Fire Chiefs on "Flames"

LOUIS B. MAYER, head of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios addressed the annual convention of 2,000 fire chiefs from the United States and Canada at their annual session held in Louisville, Kentucky, last week. Mayer outlined to them plans for the production of "Flames," by C. Gardner Sullivan, to be produced by Hunt Stromberg. The picture is to be produced in the interest of fire protection and with the cooperation of every fire department in America and Canada.

A percentage of the profits from the picture are pledged to the treasury of the International Association of Fire Chiefs to be used in the promotion of fire prevention work. The film will be built purely from an entertainment standpoint, however, and will in no sense be a preachment, although its message will be clearly evident.

Mayer was warmly received in Louisville by civic and fire department officials.

Rayart President Off for Coast Conference

W. Ray Johnston, President of Rayart Pictures Corporation, and Dwight C. Leeper, Vice-President of Richmount Pictures, who distribute Rayart product abroad, left for the coast last week, where Johnston will confer with Rayart producers regarding the second group of the different Rayart pictures for 1925-26. There are six companies shooting on Rayart pictures at present.

While on the coast Johnston will assist Billy West in casting his second feature length comedy, and will go over with B. Berger of Gerson Pictures Corporation the continuity and casting of "The Last Alarm," an Arthur Hoerl story, and "The Coast Guard Patrol," both of which will be started immediately following the editing of the Picture, "The Midnight Limited," starring Gaston Glass and Wanda Hawley.

Fox Production Still Booming

Sheehan on Visit to Coast Finds Great Activity by Studio Units

WINFIELD R. SHEEHAN, vice-president and general manager of Fox Film Corporation, who recently returned from a three months' tour of Europe, arrived last week at the studios of the company in Los Angeles and found the production units engaged on one of the most active schedules ever essayed by the organization. With five units preparing to begin camera work on new features, four important productions in the cutting room and two now in active production, the Fox feature forces are at the height of a production boom that is unprecedented in the history of the company.

Tom Mix has just finished filming "The Best Bad Man" under the direction of J. G. Blystone, and is starting work on "My Little Pal." Tom's new picture is based on Gerald Beaumont's story, "The Gallant Guardsman." Lillie Hayward wrote the scenario, and Blystone will direct.

Frank Borzage's film version of "Wages for Wives" is ready for screening and is now busy on his plans for launching "The First Year," in which Matt Moore is cast for the leading male role.

With "The Silver Treasure," based on Joseph Conrad's novel, "Nostromo," in the cutting room, Rowland V. Lee is preparing to film "Daybreak," an adaptation of the stage success "The Outsider."

Victor Schertzinger has been assigned to direct "The Golden Strain," another outdoor picture. It is the first of the four Peter B. Kyne stories to be filmed by Fox this season. Madge Bellamy and Kenneth Harlan will play the leads, while Ann Pennington, Hobart Bosworth, Frank Beal and Lawford Davidson will contribute important roles. Eve Unsell wrote the adaptation. Much of the picture will be made in Arizona.

"The Golden Butterfly" will be directed by Griffith Wray. It is an original story by Evelyn Campbell dealing with the redemption of a young girl whose conniving father has taught her the world owes her a living.

Buck Jones at present is out on location filming "Her Cowboy Prince," his fifth Fox starring vehicle this season. It is a romantic drama of the old West. R. William Neill is directing.

Henry Otto is still busy with "The Ancient Mariner," which is to be presented as a special Christmas season release. Emmett Flynn will wield the megaphone on a new romantic drama now in the course of construction.

George Marshall, supervising director of Fox comedies, announced completion of "Hold Everybody," fourth of the Helen and Warren married life comedies directed by Albert Ray, and "The Brain Storm," an Imperial Comedy directed by Robert P. Kerr.

Younger and has a cast that includes Tom Moore, Eileen Percy, Mary Alden and William V. Mong. It was directed by Lewis H. Moomaw. A special exploitation campaign for the picture has been laid out by Robert E. Welsh, director of advertising and publicity for Associated.

Hal Crane Joins Scenario Staff of M-G-M

Hal Crane, well known author of several vaudeville sketches, will turn his creative talents to scenario work, which he will enter as one of the staff writers at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios on the coast. Crane, who is now in New York, will leave for the coast soon to start work under his new contract.

Marion Davies in scenes from "Lights of Old Broadway," a Cosmopolitan production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Maude Adams in Picture Field

Will Produce Kipling's "Kim" in Association With Meador-Robertson Firm

J. E. D. MEADOR, President of Meador-Robertson Pictures Corporation, accompanied by Maude Adams, celebrated stage star, and Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr., Secretary and general counsel of the corporation, sailed last week for Europe to consult with Rudyard Kipling on the production of his masterpiece, "Kim," to which Miss Adams has the screen rights. The picture will be produced by Meador-Robertson, in association with Miss Adams.

Miss Adams is not to appear in the picture, but will lend her talents in aid of the production which will be made with the assistance of Kipling on the actual locales in India called for in the story. John S. Robertson will direct the production following the completion of "Queen Calafia," the first Meador-Robertson production, which is about to be started in Nice, France.

Before sailing, Meador said that John Russell, novelist and screen writer, and Llewellyn Totman, Meador-Robertson scenarist, will be associated editorially with the production of "Kim."

While Meador is abroad he will complete arrangements for the production of "Queen Calafia," Blasco Ibanez's popular book success which is to be made in Spain, Monte Carlo and France. The cast is soon to go abroad, as shooting is scheduled by Robertson for an early start.

Joseph P. Bickerton, Jr., attorney and producer planned to arrange for a number of conferences abroad with leading English novelists, playwrights, government officials, motion picture producers and directors. It is said a number of prominent British officials already are quite favorably inclined toward a Government subsidy and active participation in film producing enterprises on account of the recent strong agitation in London against the so-called American monopoly of the world's picture producing and exhibiting activities.

Successful maturity of the plans of Mr. Bickerton, it is claimed, would result in the functioning of an organization whose scope and magnitude of operations would match those of the foremost American companies.

Archainbaud Will Direct "Men of Steel"

First National has assigned George Archainbaud to direct the production of "Men of Steel," to be filmed as a special with Milton Sills, who is the author of the story, in the starred role.

Important sequences are to be made in the steel mills at Gary, Indiana, Pittsburgh, at the iron mines and the docks of the big ore steamers in Duluth. The cast which will support the star includes Doris Kenyon, May Allison, Victor McLaglen, Claude Gillingwater, George Fawcett and John Philip Kolb.

Warner Bros. Assign New Players to Casts

Warners have made additions to the casts of "The Cave Man" and "The Agony Column," forthcoming features now in production at the studios in Hollywood. Phyllis Haver, Hedda Hopper, John Patrick and Myrna Loy have been assigned to the cast which will support Matt Moore and Marie Prevost in "The Cave Man," a Gillette Burgess story. To date the cast of "The Agony Column" includes Monte Blue and Dorothy Devore, co-features, Charles Conklin, Myrna Loy, Helen Dunbar and Otto Hoffman.

Kosloff Added to Cast of "Time, the Comedian"

Theodore Kosloff has been added to the cast of "Time, the Comedian," the Kate Jordan story being produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer under the direction of Robert Z. Leonard with Mae Busch and Lew Cody in the leading roles. Besides Kosloff the supporting cast includes Gertrude Olmsted, Rae Ethelyn, Creighton Hale, Robert Ober, Paulette Duval, Roy Stewart, David Mir, Nellie Parker Spaulding, Templar Saxe, Frank Elliott, Shannon Day, George Periolat, Lillian Langdon, Gertrude Bennett and Jacques Abbott.

Carey Western is Titled "Fighting Stranger"

Pathe has decided upon "The Fighting Stranger" as the title for Harry Carey's first feature western to be released by the company. Charles R. Rogers is producing this new series of Carey features at Universal City. The first picture is an adaptation of "Buck Up," by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven. Harvey Gates made the adaptation and prepared the continuity and Scott Dunlap is directing. In the supporting cast are Harriett Hammond, Ruth King, James Farley, Stanton Heck, Bert Woodruff, Raymond Nye and Joseph Gerard.

Julanne Johnston Joins Gilda Gray Cast

Julanne Johnston has been signed by Famous for the principal supporting role to Gilda Gray in "Aloma of the South Seas." Miss Johnston, who scored as leading lady with Doug Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" only recently returned from Europe. She will sail this week with William Powell, Joseph Smiley and nineteen Samoan natives to augment the company which Director Maurice Tourneur has taken to Porto Rico for exteriors.

"Stella Dallas" Premiere At Apollo, New York

"Stella Dallas," the Samuel Goldwyn production directed by Henry King, will have its world premiere in New York on November 15, when it will open for an extended run at the Apollo Theatre. The picture will be presented at two performances daily. "Stella Dallas" is Goldwyn's first production for United Artists release.

Mabel Van Buren Returns in "Free Lips"

Mabel Van Buren, stage and screen star who has played many featured parts in photoplays, will return to the pictures after an absence of two years as one of the principal supporting players in "Free Lips," in which Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will star Norma Shearer.

Warners To Release Four Features This Month

WARNER BROTHERS have named four features for release during October. Syd Chaplin, Marie Prevost, Irene Rich, Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller carrying the starring honors of the program for the month.

"Bobbed Hair," screened from the novel written by twenty authors, was released October 10th with Marie Prevost, Kenneth Harlan, Louise Fazenda, Francis J. McDonald and others in the principal roles. Syd Chaplin in "The Man on the Box" is the second offering, scheduled for October 17th.

Third on the program is "The Pleasure Buyers," released October 24th, with Irene Rich starred and made from the novel by Arthur Somers Roche under the direction of Chet Withey. Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller are co-starred in the release for October 31st, titled "Red Hot Tires" and filmed under the direction of Erle C. Kenton.

Weiss Bros. to Enter the Short Subject Field

WEISS BROS. will enter the short subject field with a program of comedies, novelties and serials, it is announced by Louis Weiss, head of the organization.

The company will distribute a program of shorts during the coming year, Mr. Weiss stated. "We have for some time been making tentative arrangements with a number of people with a view towards the production of several series of two reel comedies and serials and will make further and more definite announcement of our future plans as they materialize," he said.

Turpin Added to "Steel Preferred" Cast

Ben Turpin has been added to the cast of "Steel Preferred" and will team up with Charlie Murray to supply the comedy relief to the many tense situations in the picture. The cast is headed by Vera Reynolds, William Boyd, Hobart Bosworth, Walter Long, Helene Sullivan, Nigel Barrie and William V. Mong. James Hogan is directing. The picture will be released through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Weight and Travers Return From Location Trip

Harmon Weight and Douglas Travers of the Associated Arts Corporation, F.B.O. producers, returned to the Hollywood studios of the company after a location tour of six of the foremost oil fields in Southern California. Locations were found for two weeks of outdoor shooting on "Flaming Waters," a melodrama of the oil fields, in which Mary Carr, Malcolm McGregor and Pauline Garon have the leading roles.

Tom Mix is Concluding "Best Bad Man"

Tom Mix is busy with the concluding scenes of "The Best Bad Man," his fourth starring vehicle of the season for Fox. It is an adaptation from the Max Brand story, "Senor Jingle Bells" and is being directed by J. G. Blystone. In the supporting cast are, Clara Bow, Cyril Chadwick, Paul Panzer and Judy King.

"Sea Horses" To Be Dwan's Next For Paramount

"Sea Horses," an adaptation from the novel by Francis Brett Young, will be Allan Dwan's next production for Paramount. The director will start camera work upon completion of the editing of "Stage Struck," Gloria Swanson's new feature on which he is now engaged.

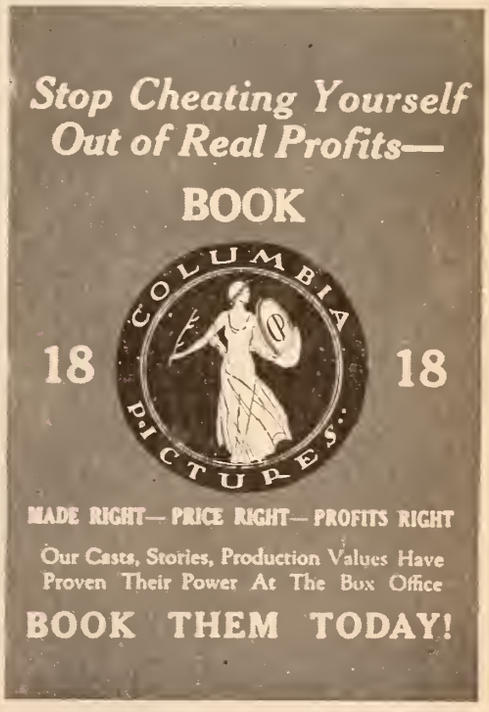
Burr Completes Cast for Johnny Hines

C. C. Burr has completed the cast that will support Johnny Hines in "Rainbow Riley," the star's second picture for First National. In the principal roles will be Brenda Bond, as leading woman, J. Barney Sherry, Dan Mason and Bradley Barker. The exteriors are being made at Delaware Water Gap under the direction of Charles Hines.

Universal Production at Top Speed

Universal is making rapid progress with its feature productions. Two have just been completed, three are nearing completion and six others are to be put into work within the next two weeks. Edward Sloman has finished directing "His People," in which Rudolph Schildkraut and Rosa Rosanova are featured. "Stella Maris" has been finished with Mary Philbin in the starring role and Elliott Dexter playing opposite her.

The three pictures nearing completion are, "The Midnight Sun," a Dimitri Buchowetzki production; "Two Blocks Away," a Harry Pollard picture, and the untitled western being directed by Edward Sedgwick.



The productions soon to get under way are, "Skinner's Dress Suit," starring Reginald Denny; "Wives for Rent," "The Brute," with House Peters; "The Big Gun," "The Perch of the Devil," starring Louise Dresser, and "Under Western Skies," starring Norman Kerry.

Jack Hoxie to Make "The Overland Trail" Next

Jack Hoxie, Universal Western star, will make "The Overland Trail," a romance dealing with the Black Hills gold rush as his next feature for that company. The leading feminine role will be played by Ena Gregory, recently signed to a long-term contract by Universal, and Francis Ford will appear in the heavy role.

Frank McGlynn Jr. Added to Fox Cast

Victor Schertzinger has added Frank McGlynn, Jr. to the cast of "The Golden Strain," which he is directing for Fox. It is an adaptation of the Peter B. Kyne story, "Thoroughbreds," which was published in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Madge Bellamy, Kenneth Harlan, Ann Pennington and Hobart Bosworth play the important roles.

Dramatic episodes from "The Blackguard," a Lee-Bradford release.

First National Busy in East

Production in New York is Gaining Momentum After Temporary Let-Down

PRODUCTION at the New York studios of First National will be going at top speed in a short time following a temporary let-down recently to permit the scenario department opportunity to catch up with the producing units, according to advices from Earl Hudson, supervisor of the eastern division of the company's studio organization.

"Men of Steel" will be the first picture to start. This will go into production between the 15th and 25th, according to present plans. The United States Steel Corporation has agreed to cooperate with First National in filming this picture. Milton Sills wrote the original story and will be seen in the starring role. George Archainbaud has been selected to direct. Doris Kenyon, May Allison, Claude Gillingwater, George Fawcett, Victor McLaglen and John Philip Kolb will comprise the principal players in this supporting cast.

Meanwhile work is being rushed for the starting of half a dozen other pictures which will be placed in production as rapidly as space at the studios will permit. Scenarios are being prepared by Olga Printzlau, John Fish Goodrich, Charles Whittaker, Jane Murfin and Harvey Thew.

John Goodrich is working on the script of "Men of Steel." Olga Printzlau is doing the script for "Pals First," which was first written as a novel by Francis Perry Elliot. Jane Murfin and Charles Whittaker are working together on the adaptation of "The Savage," an original story by Ernest Pascal. Harvey Thew is writing the script for "The Boss of Little Arcady," an adaptation of Harry Leon Wilson's magazine story. Earl Snell and C. L. Yearsley are writing the adaptation of "Mismates," the Myron C. Fagan play, and Jack Jungmeyer and Joseph Poland and are working on another script not yet announced.

Kane Starts Second Production

Now Casting "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," His Newest Feature for First National

WITH "The New Commandment," a screen adaptation of Frederick Palmer's novel "Invisible Wounds," completed, Robert T. Kane has started casting "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," his second production for First National release. At the same time, Mr. Kane has announced that "The Reckless Lady," one of the year's best sellers, has been selected as the fourth picture in the group which he will make this season.

"The New Commandment" was adapted for the screen by Howard Higgin and Sada Cowan. The cast assembled to interpret the characters in the Palmer story are Blanche Sweet, Ben Lyon, Effie Shannon, George Cooper, Pedro De Cordova, Diana Kane, Betty Jewell, Holbrook Blinn and others.

Katherine Ray, one of the featured beauties of Earl Carroll's "Vanities" has been engaged to play one of the wives in "Seven Wives of Bluebeard," which is to be directed by Alfred Santell. Other principals in the picture will be Blanche Sweet, Diana Kane, Dorothy Sebastian, Lucy Fox, Lois Wilson, Betty Jewell and Ben Lyon.

"The Reckless Lady," Mr. Kane's fourth production, will be based on a novel of the same title by Sir Philip Gibbs. It will be filmed at Kane's studios in New York. Production will be started following the completion of Michael Arlen's "The Dancer from Paris," which Kane will produce following "Seven Wives of Bluebeard."

Brooks Deserts Stage for De Mille Studio

Alan Brooks, actor and playwright, recently added to Cecil B. De Mille's personal staff has deserted the stage for pictures, where he thinks the possibilities for development far exceed those of the stage. Brooks has been given a roving commission with De Mille, in order that he may become acquainted with the various phases of studio work, before it is decided whether his dramatic ability or literary talent is to be capitalized.

At present Brooks is an interested spectator at the various conferences held on "The Volga Boatman," which will be De Mille's next personally directed production for release through Producers Distributing Corporation.

Four From First National Are Completed

Completed prints on "The New Commandment" and "The Beautiful City" are expected this week at the home office of First National Pictures. The former is Robert Kane's initial production for this company and the latter is Inspiration's new Richard Barthelmess feature.

Domestic negatives on "We Moderns," starring Colleen Moore, and "The Scarlet Saint," featuring Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes, are due to be shipped about the middle of the month. Sam Rork's production, "Clothes Make the Pirate," starring Leon Errol, and John M. Stahl's "Memory Lane," will soon emerge from the cutting room.

Sam Sax Leaves for Coast Studios of Gotham

Sam Sax, president of Lumas Film Corp. and producer of Gotham Productions, is on his way to the studios in Los Angeles to complete details for the four remaining pictures on this year's schedule of Gotham. The pictures which remain to be filmed are "Hearts and Spangles," "Racing Blood," "The Speed Limit" and "The Sign of the Claw," in which "Thunder" the dog actor will be starred.

M-G-M Buys Screen Rights to "Altars of Desire"

The photoplay rights to "Altars of Desire," by Maria Thompson Davies, have been acquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and the work will be assigned to the company's scenario staff for adaptation soon. The screen version will be made on an elaborate scale, it is announced.

Maurice Costello is Now Warner Director

MAURICE COSTELLO, once popular screen idol, is to return to the pictures with Warner Brothers in the role of a director. His first directorial effort for Warner will be with his daughter, Dolores, as the star. The picture is "Maryland, My Maryland," a J. Stuart Blackton production.

Production work on the picture is to start almost immediately, In addition to Miss Costello the cast includes: John Harron, Otto Matieson, Sheldon Lewis and Tyron Power.

It made history yesterday---
It will make greater history today

Back in the days of the General Film, Chaplin was the surest box-office bet in the business. Even then he was the great outstanding figure of motion pictures. Even then they called out the police reserves when his latest was shown.

When the old Mutual Film Co. signed him on at unheard of figures, the whole business winked wisely and said, "Great as he is, WHO can make money at such prices?" But exhibitors cleaned up and made extraordinary profits—and so did Mutual.

Then came First National looking for a sure fire attraction. They signed Chaplin for one million dollars for eight two reel pictures. Again the wise men shook their heads and grinned. Again exhibitors and distributors were amazed at the records hung up.

Chaplin has been away from the screen for three years. The boys and girls who saw Chaplin in "A Dog's Life" are seven years older, and have forgotten that picture. But they have not forgotten Chaplin. He has come back greater than ever, and the multitudes fight to see his latest feature. They will all want to see his big successes of the past.

SO PATHE PAYS A HALF A MILLION FOR THE PRIVILEGE OF RE-PRESENTING HIS FIRST FOUR PICTURES UNDER HIS FIRST NATIONAL CONTRACT.

Chaplin is Chaplin.

And "A Dog's Life," released November 22, is one of the greatest pictures he has ever made, a surer money-getter today than when Broadway and Main Street fought to see it!

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

"A Woman's Faith" Given Canadian Campaign

"A Woman's Faith" at the Victoria theatre, Quebec, was given an unusually strong campaign. Since most of the action is laid near Quebec with the climax coming at the famous shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, the theatre put up posters in French calling attention to this feature.

The engagement was started off by a special screening in the ballroom of the famous Chateau Frontenac at which many notables of the city were represented, including Justice Choquette. This is the first time that any picture has been permitted to be shown in the ballroom.

Slides were used ten days in advance; 5,000 heralds were mailed in house to house distribution; 500 half sheet window cards were taken, and a tie-up with the Chevrolet company put a car on the street three days ahead of the picture. Ten 24-sheets, 50 1-sheets, ten 3-sheets and five sixes were posted making an exceptional billing.

A drug store gave a window through the shaving soap angle. Marmont is seen shaving in the picture with a certain brand of soap. The window card read: "Even in the woods Williams Shaving cream is supreme. See it in A Woman's Faith at the Victoria theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday."

Wrecked Auto in Street to Aid "The Lucky Devil"

The strongest selling unit of Manager Chas. F. Morrison's campaign on "The Lucky Devil," playing the Imperial, Jacksonville, was a wreeked Nash sedan loaned by a local garage.

With permission of the Police department, the car with its top and one side badly smashed was placed in the safety zone in front of the theatre, facing West. The mere fact that car was on wrong side of street aroused mueh comment. A large banner was placed on auto reading:

"Turned turtle twice and not a scratch on him—Wasn't he The Lucky Devil. See Richard Dix inside in the Paramount Picture of the same name."

Dramatic lobby, showing a scene from "Don Q" (United Artists), by Manager D. Roscoe Faunce of the Strand theatre, Birmingham.

"Don Q" Campaign Aimed at College Students

The strongest selling unit of Manager E. B. Roberts' campaign for "Don Q" at the Majestic theatre, Austin, was the direct appeal made to Texas University students.

On the opening day of the picture, which was also registration day at the University, lemonade was served to the students with the compliments of "Don Q." They were also handed an extra edition of theatre's Close-Up, printed in red ink, and accompanied by a telegram from F. P.'s district manager stating that regular prices would prevail on this attraction.

The lemonade stunt met with such success that it was repeated later in the week at the first University rally, attended by approximately 5,500 people. At this meeting a telegram was read from Douglas Fairbanks in which he conveyed his best wishes to the entire student body.

The outstanding feature of the lobby display was a seventy-five foot announcement sign aeross marquee top.

Ticket Selling Tie-up is "Old Home Week" Stunt

A novel feature of manager J. P. Harrison's eampaign for "Old Home Week" at the Hippodrome, Waco, was the advance sale of tickets for the attraction.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy handled this angle of the campaign on a percentage basis, selling tickets five days in advance of opening. They had booths in the largest department drug store in the city. Over each booth was a large card announcing the picture and urging that tickets be purchased in advance in order to secure good seats.

In the lobby was an old fashioned home set back on a green lawn with a small window cutout with a sign, advising passers-by to look inside. Upon satisfying their eurisosity they read: "Thomas Meighan in his greatest picture 'Old Home Week.'" Though an old stunt, it worked to good advantage on this attraction, arresting the attention of many who passed the theatre.

A special prologue augmented the usual program. This was composed of a jazz orchestra of local chaps dressed as country boys who played rube selections. Their appearance met with a hearty reception at every performance.

Church Bulletin Exploits "As No Man Has Loved"

The Sept. 20th issue of the bulletin issued by the Church of The Redeemer, Newark, N. J., includes among its announcements, the following item. "Dr. Rose urges you to see 'As No Man Has Loved,' at the Fox Terminal theatre. It is a wonderful screen version of Edward Everett Hale's patriotic story: 'The Man Without A Country.'"

The Rev. Henry R. Rose, D. D., pastor of the Church of the Redeemer is well known as one of Newark's most public spirited and patriotic citizens. His inclusion of the picture notice among his regular parish announcements, was a splendid boost for the picture.

A cut-out from the 24-sheet on "The Coast of Folly" (Paramount) lent itself unusually well to use in this display, prepared by Don Nichols, manager of the Prais theatre, Durham, N. C., owned by Durham Amusement Company, Inc.

Keith Circuit Exploiting Pathe Short Subjects

The Keith-Albee circuit has launched a far-reaching advertising and exploitation campaign on Pathe comedies as a new feature of their big-time vaudeville programs. The lobbies and theatre fronts of the houses which are members of this circuit, now contain much of the regular publicity and accessories put out by Pathe and a great array of specially framed paintings and display material.

The comedy product is in the lights of the houses on his great circuit, in the newspaper advertising, window cards and special heralds, while exploitation stunts of various kinds are being used around the circuit to make known the fact that the comedies have a prominent spot on the vaudeville bills.

The big New York Hippodrome staged what is one of the first prologues ever produced for a two-reel picture in connection with the showing of "Your Own Back Yard." The prologue was put on by Alan Foster, the Hippodrome's producer. Six of the Hippodrome's chorus girls and two of Paul Whiteman's musicians were in the attraction. Up stage was a cottage set with a fence. Along the fence were the girls in country dress, singing with the two boys, the latter seated upon a bench. The song was "Stay In Your Own Back Yard," on which a special tie-up has been made between the Pathe exploitation department and the publishers. The Hippodrome intends to continue its prologue for the coming comedies.

"Your Own Back Yard" was played up in the Hippodrome lobby billing while a specially-painted announcement called attention of the patrons to the first run presentation of all the Hal Roach Pathe Comedies.

The Palace, New York's finest vaudeville theatre, has placed in the lobby a silver frame which will carry the black and white photos of the Pathe comedies. A large framed sign calls attention to the "Extra Added Comedy Feature" and lists the names of leading players in the various productions.

Decorated auto advertising "Lightnin'" (Fox) at the Strand theatre, St. Paul.

At the Bushwick theatre, in Brooklyn, the initial Pathe feature was ushered in with a special "Holiday Comedy Carnival." The first of the series of comedies played was "Your Own Back Yard," which was featured next to intermission.

At the Riverside, New York, "Our Gang" was given a prominent place in the list of vaudeville headliners while a comedy one-sheet was placed alongside the vaudeville billing on the theatre front. The opening scene of "Your Own Back Yard" was produced in the lobby. There was a back yard with a mechanical reproduction of the mammy of the picture washing clothes, a miniature cottage, fence, chickens, mule, goat, kids swinging on the gate, etc.

"Rainbow Trail" Sign Put in Repaired Street

Scottsbluff, Nebraska, may be considerably more than a stone's throw from the Great White Way, but its exploitation methods are not far behind Broadway's best.

The main street of Scottsbluff was recently treated to a new coat of asphalt, thereby closing the thoroughfare to all vehicular traffic, and isolating all theatres from the well known "carriage trade." This fact, however, did not deter Billy Ostenberg, Jr., from telling the world and particularly Scottsbluff that the Orpheum theatre which he manages would proffer "The Rainbow Trail."

"Goose Hangs High" Given Atmospheric Display

The lobby Manager H. J. Gould arranged for "The Goose Hangs High" at the Hippodrome, Fort Worth, was exceedingly nominal in cost.

The cottage used for "Welcome Home" was pressed into service, the house artist covering it with snow and icicles. A glass window was put in through which one saw a Xmas tree. On top of the cottage was a card reading: "The Goose Hangs High is a present day story of the American Family by James Cruze". This splendid display drew unusual attention.

Actionful Western Display for "Hurricane Kid"

For "The Hurricane Kid" at the Rex theatre, Sumter, Manager John Hannon arranged a lobby display which visualized the title.

Lobby was decorated with ropes, Western saddles, lariats, chaps, and so on. Suspended from ceiling was a six-sheet depicting Hoot Gibson on horseback trying to lasso a wild horse. A mounted three-sheet was also placed on either side of the lobby.

Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, arranged for this window on "A Slave of Fashion" (Metro-Goldwyn) in one of the local Owl Drug company stores, which used a series of them on all prominent corners. Bob Lowman, the theatre's publicity man, arranged with the studio to have Norma Shearer pose with Owl products.

Strong "Winds of Chance" Campaign in New York

"Winds of Chance" was booked for a two weeks' engagement recently at Warners theatre, New York City. Coincident with the opening date Frank Munsey's Evening Telegram commenced publication of the novel in serial form, preceded by an advertising campaign in its columns, stressing the importance of the author, the story and Frank Lloyd's film production of the same name.

Hearst's Daily Mirror, a pictorial tabloid, tied up with "Winds of Chance" on the first of the now popular "Lucky Deuce" contests, which proved to be a revelation to the newspaper world as a circulation builder. Daily stories were carried in the news columns of The Mirror illustrated with stills from the picture announcing that the "Lucky Deuces" would be handed out in change at the theatre box office.

This tie-up started four days before the opening of "Winds of Chance" and continued for fourteen days. The elements of chance and romance which figure so largely in this story of the Klondike lent themselves admirably to the tie-up. The Daily News, the other New York morning tab, also tied up with "Winds of Chance" in return for a theatre party for crippled kids a pet charity of this newspaper.

A series of seven articles collectively labeled "Yukon Yarns," each a true story of the fortunes made in the Klondike, were prepared after exhaustive research by A. P. Waxman who handled the "Winds of Chance" campaign under the direction of Mr. Glenn. These seven articles totalling some ten thousand words were edited and approved by Mr. Beach who found it necessary to change but a few words in the entire series.

These "Yukon Yarns" written as preliminary press material for the publication of the serial story were carried in the Evening Telegram and have also been published in other cities, from coast to coast, serving their purpose of creating interest in the story and the picture by describing the true romantic stories of the sourdoughs and chechahkos who found fame and fortune in the frozen fastnesses of the Klondike.

We don't know the name of this fearsome looking animal posing with the dainty usherette, but it was used to exploit "The Lost World" (First National) with great effect at the Palace, San Antonio.

Bathing Beauties Ballyhoo "Fifth Avenue Models"

A Bathing Beauty and Model contest recently awakened much interest in the neighborhood of the Star theatre, Bronx, New York. The enterprising managers of the Star, Leff and Beglichter, had more than one hundred girls in their contest, and as each beach beauty tripped across the stage, she carried a placard on the end of a gaily decorated stick giving advance notice on "Fifth Avenue Models." The winners of this contest were announced during the showing of the picture.

"Pop" Hartman, Big U's exploiteer, arranged for neighborhood dress shops to loan costumes for the amateur models. Each shop, of course, was credited with its apparel. Hartman also secured oil paintings of Universal stars and banners to decorate the lobby.

Tom Mix Hats Exploit Run of "Lucky Horseshoe"

The broad-brimmed Stetson hat which Tom Mix has made famous the world over, as part of his "cowboy dandy" attire, was used by the Kings theatre in St. Louis as an exploitation aid on "The Lucky Horseshoe."

Thousands of circulars were distributed broadcast through the city, bearing the following reading matter:

Win a $50 Tom Mix Hat Free. Five Tom Mix Stetson hats, the same as Mix presented to European royalty during his recent trip abroad, will be given away at the Kings absolutely Free. To win one, on the other side of this sheet—in 50 words or less—tell why Tom Mix is your favorite star. The best answer in each of these classes will win their writers a Mix hat; 1 to 6 years, 7 to 10, 11 to 15, 16 to 20, 21 to 60. Answers must be left at the Kings during the week Mix's "Lucky Horseshoe" is shown. Winners will be announced on the Kings screen during Circus week.

The balance of the sheet carried a brief sales talk on the picture, pictures of Mix and the hat, together with play date, etc. The back of the sheet was devoted to ruled space for the answer.

Incense Blown Onto Street for "Thief of Bagdad"

"The Thief of Bagdad," played the Galax, Birmingham, recently. In order to stimulate interest in the engagement, Manager Rodney Bush, in addition to his regular campaign, had a special display painted for the lobby.

The exhibit pictured Douglas Fairbanks flying over the city of Bagdad, with seven stills from the photoplay artistically arranged among the castles and clouds painted on the background. Illuminated by a spot light, the exhibit arrested attention.

A novel feature of the lobby display was the burning of incense in such a way that it was carried out on to the street by means of the ventilating fan. The exotic odor caused people to stop and eventually drew them into the lobby for a better look at the display.

Don Nichols, the enterprising manager of the Paris theatre at Durham, N. C., a Durham Amusement Company house, was responsible for this striking lobby display recently in connection with the engagement of "The Unholy Three" (Metro-Goldwyn).

"As No Man Has Loved" is Given Military Boost

When "As No Man Has Loved," played the Coliseum, Seattle, recently, the engagement took on all the aspects of a patriotic civic celebration, through the active participation of all the local military bodies, with parades and special performances. The first parade was staged a few nights after the opening, when the battleship Arizona arrived in the harbor. The officers and crew of the ship, responding to an invitation of the theatre management turned out in full force and marched to the theatre. A few nights later the full military personnel of Fort Lawton turned out in a body and saw the picture, and on another evening, the Marines from the Navy Yard barracks repeated the performance.

Other local military bodies that cooperated in the showing were the local posts of the American Legion, the G. A. R., the D. A. R., and the Boy Scouts. These organizations were tied in with the engagement through the medium of circular letters. The Scout bodies receiving heralds on the attraction through the mail with the official Scout organ.

The Superintendent of Schools in Seattle cooperated with the theatre to the extent of issuing with the daily circular that goes to Seattle's school-teachers, a request that the teachers urge their charges to see the picture. The students of the parochial schools were also circularized.

"East Lynne" Has Premiere in Cleveland

The world premiere of "East Lynne" took place recently at Keith's Palace theatre, Cleveland. The event was heralded by a very high class ballyhoo. Joe Shea, Fox publicity man, located an old fashioned surrey some forty miles out in the country. The double seated variety, with a cover that has a tan silk fringe all around it. You remember the kind. It is the kind that was very much in vogue at the time in which "East Lynne" is set.

A tandem bike in the lobby and an ancient gas buggy on the streets aided "Not So Long Ago" (Paramount) at Harry Gould's Hippodrome, Fort Worth, recently

Two very pretty young girls were secured who dressed up in Alma Rubens costumes,—the very costumes Miss Rubens wore when she made the picture, "East Lynne," which were shipped to Cleveland expressly for this ballyhoo. They rode in the back seat of the surrey, while two colored gentlemen, in cravats of fifty years ago, and wide brimmed silk high hats, occupied the front seat. This vehicle, horse drawn, of course, rode up and down Euclid avenue during the busy noon hour. It carried no sign. Nothing to indicate what it all was about. Crowds gathered on the curb to see a horse on Euclid avenue.

Crowds watched the girls being helped out of the surrey and going into a fashionable lunch room for refreshments. Traffic was impeded while the public asked who were the girls, and why were they appearing in these togs of their grandmothers. The second day that the vehicle appeared on the street, it carried a dignified banner, saying "East Lynne" was coming to the Palace.

Jungle Stage Setting for "Lost World" Showing

J. A. Jeffress of the Marshall theatre, Manhattan, Kans., conceived the idea for a weird and beautiful stage setting for "The Lost World," which gave his patrons something new to talk about.

Against a background of jungle, he placed cut-outs of the prehistoric monsters which appear in the photoplay, together with cut-outs of two of the human actors. As the curtain rose, the stage was illuminated with red and blue border and footlights. These were gradually dimmed until the setting was dark, with red and green spots and baby spots picking out the cut-outs. Thunder and lightning effects from back stage heightened the quality of weirdness inherent in the setting and the lighting.

The setting is one that can be duplicated at comparatively small expense by the exhibitor in any sized town. It is in keeping with the mood of the picture and will cause patrons to talk.

Brontosaurus is Oklahoma "Lost World" Boost

The brontosaurus which E. D. Brewer, First National's branch manager in Oklahoma City, had built to exploit "The Lost World" throughout the state of Oklahoma, has proved its value not only as a booster of First National, but as a ballyhoo for "The Lost World" at individual showings.

The huge, prehistoric animal is mounted on a Reo truck and is driven through the streets of the town where the photoplay is being shown.

For the second run of "The Lost World" in Oklahoma City, at the Empress theatre, the brontosaurus was called into play, and it attracted as much attention as a circus parade.

Manager J. F. Via of the Palace theatre, Blackwell, Okla., rented the brontosaurus for a street ballyhoo in his town with excellent results.

Advance lobby display, including a miniature locomotive and special art cards, for "The Iron Horse" (Fox) at the Majestic theatre, Little Rock, Ark., of which Gene Oliver is manager.

Strong Lobby Flash Given "Don Q" Engagement

Manager J. P. Harrison's campaign on "Don Q" at the Hippodrome, Waco, had many commendable features, one of which was his excellent lobby display.

Ticket window was encased in beaverboard painted with small "Don" in yellow and huge "Q" in red. Front of lobby was encased with beaverboard arch on which was painted the figure of "Don Q" brandishing a whip with a large "Q" at the end. The star's name appeared on banner in transparent lettering. The attention value of this brilliantly colored display was enhanced by the intermittent flashing of the whip and Q with the star's name.

Attached to side panels announcing the current program, were two crossed swords, such as used in the photoplay. These were donated to the theatre and provoked a lot of interest from passers-by. Special banner around marquee was done in red and yellow to correspond with balance of display.

Manager Harrison conceived a novel bally-hoo for the attraction by taking a Ford Chassis and encasing it in beaverboard with the figure of "Don Q," picture title, star's name, etc., done in the Spanish colors. Float was driven about town by a driver, who made periodic announcements through a bugle he carried. Both the week before and during the picture's showing, the bally attracted an unusual amount of attention.

Timely Cloudburst Boosts "Havoc" Engagement

It is not every exploitation man who can get an obliging cloudburst to come along and help exploit his picture, but that is what happened at Seattle, Washington, where the manager of the Liberty and the Fox exploitation representative sat down and tried to think up a new stunt for "Havoc."

Their deliberations were cut short by the news that the adjacent town of Wenatchee, had just been all but wiped out by a cloudburst. In fact the Seattle newsboys were already hawking extras on the streets, shouting about the havoc wrought in Wenatchee. Then and there, an exploitation idea saw the light of day. It was but the work of a few minutes to despatch a still cameraman to the scene of the disaster, with instructions to shoot fast and furiously. The shots were made, the pictures developed in record time, and in twenty-five choice locations about Seattle, groups of people were gathered about the stills, and reading considerable about a picture called "Havoc" that was on its way to the Liberty.

"Sunshine" and "Carnation" bread, two Seattle products, also came forward and did their bit toward putting "Havoc" over, as 150,000 printed slips advising housewives to avoid the "Havoc" of home baking, etc., were wrapped up with the loaves.

"Avoid 'Havoc' In Your Filing Systems," was the slogan that sold the attraction to a local manufacturer of filing cabinets, and resulted in some exceptionally fine window tie-ups.

"Night Club" is Heralded at Wrestling Match

"The Night Club," playing recently at the Missouri, St. Louis, received some clever exploitation at the hands of Manager Herschel Stuart and Publicity Director William Saal.

At the Stecher-Zybysco match, which took place during the showing of this picture, a special crew of boys distributed 50,000 heralds announcing that "The Silk Hat King" was at the Missouri theatre in "The Night Club." This stunt was the means of successfully reaching a large number of potential patrons, the match drawing the largest attendance in the history of St. Louis.

Valuable publicity was also gained through the Wurlitzer company, who spent over a thousand dollars in advertising Barney Rapp and Band in conjunction with "The Night Club."

The regular newspaper and billing campaign was used, with 500 extra two-sheets.

Clever Lobby Display Aids "Learning to Love" Run

For his showing of "Learning to Love," Manager J. L. Cartwright of the Rialto, Chattanooga, conceived a unique display for the Rialto lobby which drew unusual attention.

This display conveyed the idea of a school where one could "learn how to love." In the center was a huge blackboard at top of which was a three-sheet cutout in the shape of a heart with the heads of Constance Talmadge and Antonio Moreno. Inscription on slate was along the lines of enrollment, with title, admission prices and performance hours cleverly tied-in. Three smaller boards were arranged on each side of the larger one, each carrying chalked copy of comedy lines indirectly tying-up with the picture.

A huge banner with the star's name and picture title was also placed directly above lobby doors.

Three More for Peggy Hopkins Joyce

Associated Exhibitors' Executives Enthuse Over Work of Star in "The Sky Rocket," Marshall Neilan's Production

SO pleased are the executives of Associated Exhibitors with the work of Peggy Hopkins Joyce in "The Sky Rocket," just completed under the direction of Marshall Neilan, that Miss Joyce will make three additional pictures for the company. Her second production, as yet unnamed, will be started on her return from Europe where she went last week for a rest of two months.

"The Sky Rocket," in which Miss Joyce made such a favorable impression on Associated officials, was written by Adela Rogers St. John and is based on the rise and fall of a movie star in Hollywood.

P. A. Powers, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Associated Exhibitors, was the first to see Miss Joyce's qualities as a film star. He thought enough of his convictions that he was willing to gamble a quarter of a million dollars on his judgment, it is said.

At this time Miss Joyce was appearing in a Broadway musical comedy at a high weekly salary and a percentage of the gross of the show. It took considerable financial coaxing on the part of Mr. Powers to lure Miss Joyce from the footlights, but finally this was accomplished and after getting the star's name to a contract the film magnate set about to find suitable story material.

In the course of seeking the right vehicle, over seven hundred plays, short stories, and novels were considered with the final selection of "The Sky Rocket," a book length novel which met with an overwhelming success in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Marshall Neilan was next engaged to direct the film, and without any fan-fare or red fire he surrounded himself with a strong supporting cast and quietly set about to make the picture. The complete absence of the circus type of publicity during the course of production was noted and commented on by the press all over the country.

But the big surprise, and a work of master showmanship on the part of Mr. Powers, came when Hollywood society primped itself up for the arrival of the beautiful Peggy Joyce, and Peggy didn't arrive. That is to say that Hollywood society saw little or nothing of the new star. The motion picture colony expected a series of Fourth of July celebrations and what they got was a "thunder of silence."

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, star of "The Sky Docket," Associated Exhibitors release.

Even Los Angeles daily newspapers sat up and took notice. Reporters hit the trail to the studios where the Joyce picture was being filmed but very few of them saw the elusive Peggy and not a single one of them was able to interview her. It was really a masterful stroke on the part of the Powers organization.

While in Hollywood Miss Joyce was never seen at any of the public resorts and the Queen of England could not have been more carefully guarded.

With a star of unknown motion picture qualities on his hands and a story of which there couldn't be any doubt would make a successful screen drama, Marshall Neilan's next task was to find a cast that was sufficiently strong in name value and at the same time artists of ability to handle the parts.

The first two selected were Owen Moore and Earle Williams. These two stars have the outstanding parts second in importance to the role portrayed by Miss Joyce. Supporting these players are Gladys Hulette, Sammy Cohen, Bull Montana, Ed Dillon, and many others.

"The Sky Rocket" as a screen vehicle was actually in production almost three months. The actual shooting time covered a period of two months.

Following the completion of the picture Miss Joyce returned to New York and continued to remain in seclusion. The print of "The Sky Rocket" arrived in town three weeks ago for its final titling and editing.

With the arrival of the film it leaked out in film circles that the picture was a wonder and several of the leading distributors began angling for the picture. It was finally obtained for the Associated Exhibitors by Oscar Price and is scheduled for an early release.

In keeping with the plans outlined by P. A. Powers, over $150,000 will be spent on "The Sky Rocket" which will be released as a special and will not be included in the booking of the regular Associated Exhibitors product. Under the supervision of John S. Woody, General Manager, a special sales force is being organized to handle the sale of the picture, while Robert E. Welsh, Director of Advertising and Publicity for Associated Exhibitors, is planning a special field force of exploitation men for the key cities and surrounding territory.

The first advertised official announcement for "The Sky Rocket" will be made next week with the release of a beautiful three colored insert in eight pages. This insert is only the beginning shot in the campaign and after having run in all the national motion picture trade newspapers and regional journals, it will be closely followed by a direct to the exhibitor series of broadsides.

The first of these is now in work and is founded on the beautiful gowns and wardrobe in the picture worn by Miss Joyce.

The second of the series of broadsides of which one each week will be released, is based on the endorsements of some of the world's greatest legitimate showmen and producers on Miss Joyce's ability as an actress.

The release of this broadside will be for the main reason of convincing the exhibitor that in Miss Joyce he has an artist of rare screen ability and that she is not capitalizing on the fact that she is a celebrity.

The art department in the offices of the Associated Exhibitors are busy at work on ideas for a gigantic campaign book. This compendium is planned to be three times as big as the ordinary press book containing among many ideas a full page of publicity written from the woman's standpoint, such as clothes and beauty hints.

"The Sky Rocket" to Go Direct to First Runs

IN a statement in which he denied the report that "The Sky Rocket," starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce, would be roadshowed, J. S. Woody, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, distributing the picture, said that the production would go direct to the big first run theatres and then to the entire field.

In connection with the denial of reports that "The Sky Rocket" would be road showed by a legitimate theatrical organization, it became known that certain newspapers had been premature in stating that the Marshall Neilan production may be shown at the Strand or the Capitol.

Willard Louis Selected for "Don Juan" Cast

Willard Louis has been chosen to play a prominent role in "Don Juan," the Warner Bros. production in which John Barrymore will be starred. Louis will be seen as Pedrillo, probably the most important for which this actor has ever been cast. Mary Astor has the leading feminine part in the picture.

Burr McIntosh Plays Heavy Role in Pathe Serial

Burr McIntosh is playing the chief heavy role in "The Green Archer," the new Pathe serial now in production at the company's studios at Astoria, L. I. McIntosh, who is well known to the stage, screen and radio fans will be seen as Abel Bellamy in the chapter play in which Allene Ray and Walter Miller are co-featured.

"Uncle Tom's Gal" Goes to Exhibitors

"Uncle Tom's Gal," a two-reel Century comedy burlesquing "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and starring Edna Marian, has been released through all Universal exchanges. The picture was directed by William Watson.

Short Subjects and Serials

Sennett's Komedy Kops to Return to Screen

Mack Sennett's famous komedy kops, famous in the Keystone comedy days, will stage a comeback to the screen in "Wandering Willies," a Pathe short feature release being produced at the Sennett studios with Billy Bevan, Andy Clyde, Ruth Hiatt and Kewpie Morgan in principal roles. The picture was directed by Del Lord, who served as the patrol wagon driver at the time the "Keystone Kops" were at the height of their screen glory.

Other units now filming pictures at Sennetts are Harry Langdon, who is being directed in a forthcoming Pathe comedy by Harry Edwards; Alice Day, who is making a yachting comedy; Ralph Graves, playing a "fourflusher" role; and an all-star company in which Billy Bevan, Dave Morris, Evelyn Sherman, Natalie Kingston and Barbara Tennant are appearing.

New Juvenile Thespian in "Our Gang" Troupe

Hal Roach has added another youngster to his group of juvenile stars appearing in the "Our Gang" comedies, produced under the direction of Bob McGowan. The newcomer's name is Jay Smith and is distinguished for his freckles and diffident manner.

Clyde Cook is making a new comedy at the Roach studios under the direction of C. Richard Wallace. Mildred June, Frederic Kovert, Cesare Gravina and Fred Kelsey appear in prominent supporting roles.

Pathe, Ltd. to Distribute "Ko-Ko" Films in Britain

Pathe, Ltd., this week signed a contract with Edwin Miles Fadman, head of Red Seal, for the distribution of the Ko-Ko Song Car-Tunes, an animated series produced by Max Fleischer, in Great Britain.

Pathe, Ltd., concluded negotiations six months ago for the Great Britain rights to two other Red Seal series: the "Marvels of Motion", made via the Fleischer-Novagraph process, and the "Out-of-the-Inkwell" series in which the clown, Ko-Ko, was first introduced.

Century Starts on Third "Buster Brown" Comedy

CAMERA work has been started on "Oh Buster," third of the series of two-reel comedies based on R. F. Outcault's famous Buster Brown cartoons, at the Century studios in Hollywood. The picture is scheduled for release in December.

Gus Meins is directing "Oh Buster" and Arthur Trimble, who created the character on the screen, is in the name role. The first two pictures in the series, "Educating Buster" and "Buster be Good," have won widespread popularity according to reports from Universal, distributors of the Century product.

Mack Sennett presents an all star cast in "Over There-Abouts," a two-reel Pathe offering from which these scenes are taken.

Pathe Program For October 25

Roach and Sennett Comedies Head Schedule of Short Subjects; Serial Episode Included

THE Pathe release program of short features for the week of October 25th is headed by two-reel comedies from the Hal Roach and Mack Sennett Studios, and also includes a chapter of the Pathe serial "Wild West," a Hal Roach one-reel comedy, Pathe Review, "Topics of the Day," "Aesop's Film Fables" and two issues of Pathe News.

"A Punch in the Nose" is a two-reel Hal Roach Comedy with an all-star cast including Lucien Littlefield, Al St. John, "Husky" Hanes, Jimmie Finlayson, Lige Conley, Kewpie Morgan, Al Hallet, Martha Sleeper, Marjorie Whiteis and Dot Farley. The story concerns a stranded "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe.

"A Sweet Pickle" is a two-reeler featuring Alice Day and produced by Mack Sennett. In her new vehicle, Alice is employed in a bakery. Barney Hellum, Alma Bennett and Jack Richardson support Miss Day in providing the fun. Arthur Rosson directed.

"All Wool" is a Hal Roach one-reel comedy with Earl Mohan, Billy Engle and Katherine Grant in the leading roles. Mohan and Engle appear as tailors and Katherine Grant is an ambitious actress who wanted to play in "rain" but lost her umbrella. Tay Garnett directed.

"The Rustlers' Stampede" is the title of the fifth chapter of the current Pathe serial "Wild West," which features Helen Ferguson and Jack Mulhall.

Pathe Review No. 43 presents "Makers of Men," showing how West Point builds military man-power, which was produced with the cooperation of the U. S. Military Academy and the New York Military Academy; "Fresh-Air Tonic," Pathecolor views of Mont Dore, France's favorite mountain resort; and "Sunlight, the World's Champion Producer of Energy," one of "The Magic Eye" series.

"Closer Than A Brother" is the latest of the Paul Terry creations of the "Aesop's Film Fables" series. "Topics of the Day" and two issues of Pathe News complete the October 25th Pathe release schedule.

Hawkinson is Off for New "Sportlight"

J. L. Hawkinson, producer of Grantland Rice "Sportlights" for Pathe, has departed for Whitehall, Montana, to make scenes for a forthcoming sport picture of mountain and outdoor life. He expects to get some exceptional shots of duck and bird shooting, lake fishing and big game hunting. He will return in time to photograph highlights of the big football games in the east.

Scenes from "Baby Be Good," first of the 1925-26 Educational-Juvenile Comedies. Malcolm Sebastian, and Bonnie Barrett are featured.

Langdon Three-Reeler is Due November 29th

"THERE HE GOES," Harry Langdon's first three-reel special comedy released by Pathe, will go to the exhibitors on November 29th. It presents a complete plot and is said to abound in comedy situations and gags. The comedian is supported in the principal roles by Peggy Montgomery and Frank Waitson. Harry Edwards who directed the comedian in a number of his comedy vehicles handled the megaphone on "There He Goes."

Lane's Brother to Support Him in Comedy

Wallace Lane, brother of Lupino Lane, star of a series of two-reel comedies being released by Educational, will play the role of the comedy heavy in a picture now being made with Lane as the star. The picture is being directed by William Goodrich. Virginia Vance, George Davis and Glen Cavender are others in the supporting cast.

Ann Pennington Appears in Pathe Review Reel

Ann Pennington, dancing star of several Ziegfeld Follies shows, appears in a series of scenes produced by the "Process Camera" presented in Pathe Review No. 40. Miss Pennington illustrates the "Charleston" and several other dances in this feature of the Review.

Johnny Arthur has completed his third comedy for Educational, a two-reeler in which he will appear as a boy in love with a movie-struck girl and fascinated only by the handsome heroes of the screen. William Goodrich directed the picture.

Jack McHugh Returns to Educational Studios

Jack McHugh, featured in several Educational-Juvenile Comedies released last season, will again be seen in these comedies. He is being co-starred with Malcolm Sebastian in a two-reeler now being produced under the direction of Charles Lamont.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"A Winning Pair"
(Universal-Century—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

WANDA WILEY has a rather clever little comedy in this one, which shows her first as a bathing girl and later as an equestrienne. She is as attractive in the one costume as she is for the lack of it in the other. Rather a versatile Miss, this Wanda Wiley and she takes many a hard knock to put a comedy situation over. But she does put them over.

There are some bathing scenes with a bevy of attractive girls in the opening scenes and some good high diving stunts before the story starts to unwind. And then it develops that this high dive is all a dream and Miss Wiley wakes up in a dive into a lot of sofa pillows.

There are some fairly humorous shots when the comedienne attempts to mount a horse of considerable proportions when she would start on the conquest of the man she really loves. She is also the victim of some nasty falls, but they accomplish her purpose both in the action of the story and the securing of laughs.

The Cast

The Girl.....Wanda Wiley

A Century Comedy, directed by Charles Lamont.

The Story. Wanda dreams she is a high diver and visualizes herself in the center of a bevy of beautiful bathing girls, making a beautiful swan-like dive for the edification of the man she loves. She awakens to find herself diving into an assortment of sofa cushions. She then joins the man in a horseback ride, feigns a runaway and a fall from the horse to arouse his sympathy. Apparently unconscious, she is revived by the kisses of her lover in the usual happy ending.

Synopsis. A series of interesting episodes in which Miss Wiley shows her versatility as a diving girl and an equestrienne. There is a bit of good comedy in the story, which is far better than the usual run of these comedy tales. It's a fairly interesting picture that should go well in the neighborhood houses.

"Spot Light"
(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS comedy of the veriest hokum and slapstick and for the most part so silly that only the younger children will be able to appreciate the humor in it. It starts out promisingly enough with Lige Conley in the role of the sandwich man on high stilts, who is so frequently seen along Broadway exploiting some attraction. There is some fair comedy as it goes, when Lige becomes entangled with an auto and various other obstacles along the road, but when the scene shifts to the playhouse and the action becomes faster and more furious, the comedy ceases, though it strives hard enough to please.

Every backstage prop and every other form of hokum and slapstick is used to interrupt the acts on the stage. Hooks are applied, sand bags dropped, rain released instead of snow on each succeeding act in an effort to get laughs, which will hardly be forthcoming except from the very young element in the house.

The Cast

Props.....Lige Conley
The Prima Donna.....Virginia Vance

A Jack White production, written and directed by Norman Taurog, photographed by Barney McGill.

The Story.—Lige Conley as Props first has the role of a sandwich man on high stilts, who becomes entangled with autos and motorcycles along the road. Later he handles the props as the show progresses. The act of each entertainer is interrupted by the various devices used backstage and the audience finally leaves the house in disgust.

Summary—A slapstick comedy, whose humor will be appreciated only by the youngsters. There is no story. It is merely a succession of rough gags used to interrupt the acts of performers on a vaudeville program.

"Nursery Troubles"
Universal-Century—Two Reels
Reviewed by Chester J. Smith

ASIDE from a nursery full of attractive looking babies, this comedy would have little to recommend it. There are some exceptionally good shots of these babes taking their bottles and they will bring exclamations of joy from almost any audience, particularly from the feminine customers.

Edna Marian heads the cast in a role that permits her to show all her vivaciousness, first as a female tramp disguised as a boy, and later as the nursery maid in the department store, where youngsters are checked as their mothers shop, and where the comedy develops when Edna passes out the wrong babies to the wrong mothers.

There is not much in the way of exceptional comedy to the picture. For the most part Miss Marian is chased by a cop, whom she has jolted off his pins as she makes her escape from a freight train. For a full reel she succeeds in escaping the minion of the law in the usual manner of these comedies. There is plenty of action such as it is, but it will hardly provide much in the way of laughter.

The Cast

The Maid.....Edna Marian

The Story. Edna, disguised as a boy, makes her escape from a brakebeam only to bump into a policeman who gives chase. She evades him when she changes into girls' clothes in a park. She then proceeds to get herself a job as nursery maid in a department store where babes are checked as the mothers shop. She hands the wrong babes to the wrong mothers, but succeeds in righting matters, with the result that she is promoted to the head of the department and wins the love of the boss.

Summary. This is a fairly fast moving comedy without much of a story and with but few situations that will be productive of laughs. Its attractiveness is in the nursery shots, where some exceptionally bright looking babies will win the admiration of almost any audience and just about put the picture over.

"The Ace of Spades"
(Universal Serial)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THE first three episodes of this ten-chapter serial play affirm Universal's claims regarding fast action, thrill stunts and stirring melodramatic incident. Beyond that the first three episodes serve to convince the reviewer that "The Ace of Spades" gets off to a flying start and offers a veritable bumper crop of those elements of screen entertainment which make a banquet of speedy movement, exciting situations and Homeric heroism for the confirmed serial fans.

There is very little in the way of sure-fire serial material which has escaped the scenarist, director and players in these opening chapters of "The Ace of Spades." The story is simple in outline and yet is supplied with sufficient plot matter to keep the action going for all ten episodes. We have the inevitable "papers"—this time in the form of an old French mineral survey, made before the sale of the Louisiana Territory by Napoleon, which is being sought by villains before the opening of the Oklahoma Land Rush. We have become reconciled to the "papers" in serial plots. They are an economical device of the dramatist and simplify matters as much for the spectator as they do for the playwright. There is nothing confusing about action built around "papers" either the sympathetic characters have them or they haven't, and so the struggle between villains and heroes goes back and forth, like a tug-of-war in which the course of the contest is always clear enough to permit onlookers to concentrate on the struggle itself.

Willim Desmond, whose long experience has filled his box of tricks to overflowing, is the hero—and a suitably commanding and intense hero he is. Mary McAllister is the heroine and others in an excellent cast are Albert J. Smith, a capital serial villain; William A. Steele, Cathleen Calhoun, Jack Pratt, Clark Comstock, Frank Lanning and others.

The play takes its title from the fact that the villainous band sends an ace of spades to those it has marked for its vengeance—a picturesque device and a contributor to the suspense which the story is ever striving to create and sustain.

Director Henry McRae, an experienced and capable hand at serial-making, has set his action to a snappy pace and throws about his characters and situations all the romantic and adventurous glamour necessary to achieve graphic, colorful melodrama. The story by Isadore Bernstein and William Lord Wright has been very capably scenarioized by Jacobson. Based on the evidence furnished by the first three episodes, we are urged unhesitatingly to pronounce "The Ace of Spades" a corking good choice for any theatre seeking a serial attraction.

The Cast

Dan Harvey.....William Desmond
Oliver Heath.....Mary McAllister
Joe Dineen.....Albert J. Smith
Jim Heath.....William A. Steele
"Poker Dice" Ann.....Cathleen Calhoun
Gideon Trask.....Jack Pratt
Martin Heath.....Clark Comstock
Francois Bonaparte.....Frank Lanning

Story by Isadore Bernstein and William Lord Wright. Scenario by Leigh Jacobson. Directed by Henry McRae.

The Story.—Gideon Trask and his henchmen at the saloon in Arkansas City covet the mineral survey of the Louisiana Territory made for Napoleon before the sale of the Territory to the United States. This is in possession of the Heath Brothers, who seek to use it in staking their land when the Oklahoma territory, last of the Louisiana tract to be released by the Government, is opened to Homesteaders. They send Dan Harvey, who has protected the Heath brothers and Martin Heath's daughter from the gang, the "Ace of Spades," which means he is marked for death. Dan and his party set out for the Oklahoma territory and are overtaken by the band. They find shelter in a cave built by Indians as a temple to the Sun God and there make their stand against Trask and his henchmen—the episode which brings the third episode to a close.

Summary.—A finely produced and acted serial play offering a conventional plot but supplied with sufficient melodramatic incident to permit a steady flow of fast action. Picturesque backgrounds and interesting characters give material aid to the plot, which has been well constructed, so far at least as the first three episodes are concerned. It should score a big hit with the serial fans.

"A Good Program Must Have Novelties"

729 7th Ave. RED SEAL PICTURES New York City

EDWIN MILES FADMAN, Pres.

"A Sweet Pickle"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

HERE is a comedy creation from the Sennett studios which may be recommended as a sure laugh-getter for any theatre. It presents a veritable welter of "wow" gags done in the best Sennett style and aimed directly at the risibles of all the fans in Filmdom. It starts off with the conventional "love interest" and ends up with a series of thrill stunts and comedy moments that should have every audience roaring its response and appreciation.

Alice Day is starred, and grateful of the opportunities the director has afforded her and her support to hit the comedy mark clean and often, Miss Day comes through with an excellent performance as the little poor girl who gets invited to a very "swell" party at a very "swell" home. Miss Day has excellent support from Barney Hellum, Jack Richardson and Alma Bennett.

To Director Arthur Rosson must go great credit for the effectiveness of the gags. He has devised a stunt in which Alice hangs out a window on the end of a long strip of carpet, the carpet running back and forth as the heroine ascends and descends on the outside of the building according as the hero is able to pull her up or is forced to let go his hold on the other end of the strip. Around and about this device are several extraordinary clever and effective incidents —a notable one being that which shows a man carrying a trunk on his back as he walks furiously but gets nowhere treading in the direction opposite to that in which the carpet is running with its precious weight toward the street below.

"A Sweet Pickle" is easily the best picture Miss Day has had since her elevation to stardom and it is one that can be backed to make good on screens everywhere.

The Cast

The Girl.....Alice Day
The Boy.....Barney Hellum
The Villain.....Jack Richardson
The Vamp.....Alma Bennett

The Story.—Alice, handy girl at the bakery, delivers a cake at the home of a wealthy customer. Learning that there will be thirteen guests, the son of the house, insists his mother invite Alice to join the party. The rich girl, jealous because she loves the rich chap, dresses Alice up in a ridiculous outfit, making her the butt of the party, but the hero still likes the girl and risks his life to save her when a fight ensues and Alice falls out the window holding to the end of a strip of hall carpet.

Summary.—A brisk and bright slapstick comedy in which quick action and a series of decidedly effective gags have been skillfully injected. The picture is one of broad appeal and should register as uproarous entertainment.

"Baby Be Good"
(Educational-Juvenile—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

QUITE an attractive array of juveniles have been gathered together for this series, of which this is the first, and they go through some highly amusing antics. For the most part it is back alley stuff and particularly true to life. If any adverse criticism is to be found with this picture it is that the producers have tried too hard to cram it with humorous incidents and odd contraptions for the development of laughs.

There is enough of the element of the high class to the picture when the Van Pelton kid is introduced, to bring it out of the gutter and lend a little diversion to it, as well as to develop the story, if the whole thing can be termed a story. It is more a panorama of incidents than a story, but the producers need strive no harder than they have to gain popularity for the series. It is a type of comedy together with the various types of kids that is bound to make it alluring to the picture fans. Charles Lamont directed and George Spear is responsible for the photoplay.

The Story.—The Van Pelton swimming pool is at first revealed with the children of the aristocracy in all of their glory. Two of the gas house kids happen in and determine upon a similar pool down in their neighborhood. All sorts of contrivances are rigged up with a bathtub for a chute the chutes and the price of a chute one bottle. Mrs. Van Pelton happens in the neighborhood with her child and leaves the latter in the limousine. The child wanders to the swimming pool and is made one of the gang. She is discovered by her adoring mother in such a begrimed condition that only a mother could identify her.

Summary.—A good lively kid comedy with some exceptionally good types and almost too many humorous incidents. It is a type of picture that will appeal to all in all kinds of houses.

"Amazing Mazie"
(F. B. O.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THE opening episode of "The Adventures of Mazie" series which F. B. O. is presenting, serves first and most importantly as sparkling, bright and pleasant screen comedy. And next it presents convincing evidence that F. B. O. has launched another eminently successful venture in production enterprise. Every hall-mark of the sure-fire success is found here in this first offering in the new series. We have a neatly contrived situation for the creation of sympathy and a set of characters filled with color and appeal.

"Amazing Mazie" introduces the girl who figures as the central character in the stories —a self-reliant, courageous girl seeking a job to support herself and her invalid brother. She is a product of the American city, trifle bold and boisterous, but a winning, extremely likable kid for all of that.

To Alberta Vaughn has been entrusted this role, and the assignment was wisely made, for Miss Vaughn has every qualification to act the part convincingly and entertainingly. Larry Kent is the hero, a young lawyer who needs Mazie's aggressiveness to help him in his business. Al Cooke and Kit Guard, well and favorably remembered for their characterizations in the previous series which F. B. O. presented, have important parts to do in the pictures.

Ralph Ceder's direction is most capable. His handling of the action shows the most effective timing of the gags and there is dash and color to the play as a result of his treatment.

There is no disposition to act the prophet nor to claim especial wisdom in the judgment of screen comedies on the part of this reviewer in venturing quite confidently the opinion that "The Adventures of Mazie" can be built up into a very profitable box office attraction by any exhibitor who will take the trouble to exploit these comedies as entertainment of the most popular and effective sort.

The Cast

Mazie.....Alberta Vaughn
George Dorsey.....Larry Kent
Tripp.....Al Cooke
Fali.....Kit Guard

The Story. Mazie, a stenographer, needs a job and when the young lawyer to whom she has applied tells her he hasn't even money to pay the rent, she sets about to force the hard-hearted landlord to defer action against the attorney. A plot is evolved which places the landlord in the position of being liable to a suit for $50,000 damages because a client has been delayed, because the elevator halts between floors, or compensating the lawyer for his loss by offering rent free for several months and giving him the landlord's legal work.

Summary. A highly entertaining two-reel comedy based on the humorous adventures of a self-reliant stenographer. The characters are colorful and receive the finest handling by the players cast for them. There is brisk action and the gags have been neatly contrived. An excellent short attraction for any theatre.

"The Heart Breaker"
(Fox—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THERE is a fair story on which this comedy is based, but it is rather slow in getting started, though it develops some fast action before the finish. It is based on a wager that the president of a bachelors' club cannot visit a certain inn without becoming engaged. The comedy in the Bachelors' club scenes is rather overstressed, but there should be some laughs when the second reel gets fairly under way.

The Cast

The Hero.....Sid Smith
The Heroine.....Judy King
The Villian.....Jack Henderson

An Imperial comedy directed by Benjamin Stoloff.

The Story.—When the shortcomings of a member of the Bachelors' Club are revealed to him for becoming engaged, he wagers the club president that the latter cannot spend a week at a designated inn without becoming engaged. The president takes the bet and finds the inn run by women and with only women guests, most of them of the beauteous sort.

That she may avoid an unwelcome suitor, one of the guests is disguised as a boy. The bachelor persuades her to don girl's attire, thinking her a boy, and to represent herself as being engaged to him, so that he may avoid the other girls. By the time he discovers she is really a girl he has fallen in love with her. He helps her to evade the rejected suitor and her father and mother, who have made the match for her. The girl and the bachelor are finally married in the middle of the lake at the height of the chase.

Summary.—This is a fairly fast comedy once it gets under way. It is a combination of hokum and situations in its appeal for laughs, of which it should get a fair number. Sid Smith and Judy King play their roles well and they are ably supported throughout the good story.

"Shootin' Wild"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

THIS one is quite apart from the usual run of Westerns. Save for the atmosphere and the costumes there is little of the Western about it. It strives to be a comedy with Ben Corbett and Pee Wee Holmes in the featured roles, but it does not get far in that direction either.

The wildest kind of slapstick and hokum are employed throughout the two reels and the action is not nearly as humorous as it strives to be. Perhaps in some houses they will appreciate the comedy in a bull with boxing gloves on his horns serving as a sparring partner to a comedy boxer preparing for a bout.

The picture approaches the western in the last reel when the bandits plan a raid of the town while a fair and the boxing bout are in progress. They are routed by the two heroes who set off a batch of fireworks and the skyrockets shooting down the street play havoc with the intruders.

The Cast

Magpie Simpkins.....Ben Corbett
Dirtyshirt Jones.....Pee Wee Holmes

The Story. Dirtyshirt Jones is being prepared for a Fourth of July boxing bout with the town terror as the main attraction of the fair. While the bout is on the bandit band plan a raid of the town. The signal is prematurely given for the raid and as the bandits approach Magpie Simpkins and Dirtyshirt Jones set a match to the fireworks lying on a table at the end of the main street. Skyrockets and devil chasers whiz up the street to the consternation of the raiders and result in the complete rout of the latter, as Magpie and Dirtyshirt emerge heroes.

Summary. There is not much that can be recommended in this two-reeler. The comedy is of the rough slapstick variety with the situations too ridiculous to provide much in the way of humor.

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Without Mercy

(Producers Distributing Corp —6550 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN interesting story with the melodramatic sequences considerably exaggerated, but nevertheless a good buy for the average house, as the acting and tense action will hold the spectators. The picture leans hard on the emotional moments and has an especially strong appeal for feminine patrons, inasmuch as its plot hinges on a woman's revenge on a man for ill-treatment after a period of twenty years has elapsed, and her final triumph. Director George Melford has upholstered the feature handsomely, there are many fine interior settings and the British atmosphere and society glitter are artistically conceived and executed. It is, of course, largely hokum material, but the sort of hokum that scores with most of the fans when properly utilized, and in this case smooth team work between director and players helps amazingly in establishing conviction, even when the most lurid situations flame redly.

THEME. Society melodrama, English setting, tale of young girl's infatuation for unworthy suitor and mother's revenge on him for former sufferings.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The good acting, skilled direction, melodramatic punches and even continuity.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the story's tense emotional appeal, melodramatic force; and feature Dorothy Phillips, Vera Reynolds, Lionel Belmore, Robert Ames.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for average house.

SUMMARY. Has general audience appeal, a society melo, well acted, directed and handsomely mounted.

THE CAST

Mrs. Enid Garth.....Dorothy Phillips
Sir Melmoth Craven.....Rockliffe Fellowes
Margaret Garth.....Vera Reynolds
John Orme.....Robert Ames
Horace Massingham.....Lionel Belmore

Author, John Goodwin. Directed by George Melford. Photographed by Charles G. Clarke.

SYNOPSIS. Sir Melmoth Craven and John Orme are political opponents for seat in English Parliament. Craven borrows money for campaign from Gordon, Ltd., a shady money-lending establishment. Margaret Garth, Orme's sweetheart, becomes infatuated with Melmoth. To save the girl, her mother narrates the history of her own sufferings at Melmoth's hands twenty years before. Mrs. Garth is behind the loan granted Craven and had it suddenly called in. Melmoth kidnaps Margaret, who is saved by Orme. Melmoth falls into trap prepared by Mrs. Garth and is jailed. Margaret and Orme are united.

PRESS NOTICE

A SOCIETY melodrama of intense force and emotional appeal, entitled "Without Mercy," is scheduled to be shown on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The action takes place in England, the story dwells on the theme of a woman's revenge on a man who ill-treated her twenty years before, and with whom her daughter is temporarily infatuated. An unusual picture, attaining a great climax, beautifully mounted and photographed.

The popular favorite, Dorothy Phillips, returns to the screen in this feature, playing the mother role, with Vera Reynolds as the daughter, Robert Ames the hero, and Rockliffe Fellowes, Lionel Belmore, Patricia Palmer, Fred Malatesta, Sidney D'Albrook in support.

CATCH LINES

A woman who deals with a man without mercy, generally has a good reason. See what it was in this case!

Bustin' Through

(Universal—4506 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AN average Western which should make the box office grade generally speaking, and do especially well wherever Jack Hoxie is popular! The latter is undoubtedly one of the best looking of the cowboy-hero tribe, snaggles an engaging grin, is never averse to closeups, and to do him justice cuts quite an alluring figure before the camera. Also, he can ride and scrap in whirlwind fashion, and they give him plenty of rough-house tasks in "Bustin' Through," all of which he executes with such vigor and dispatch that the picture may be said to live fairly up to its title. The story's trend isn't particularly original, but director Cliff Smith, having tackled similar problems before, knew exactly how to overcome this handicap and "pepped" the situations up by dexterous handling, keeping the action whizzing at a lively pace, and attaining a smashing climax.

THEME. Western melodrama, young rancher hero, who defeats scheme of crooks to swindle father of girl he loves; and wins latter.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action, riding and fighting stuff, Jack Hoxie's daring stunts and clever horsemanship, finale in which he pursues villain across country and captures him, romantic interest.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Jack Hoxie. Tell the fans he is at his best in this fast-moving, brisk Western. Bill as intriguing romance of the open spaces, DRAWING POWER. Good program attraction. Should win wherever they want straight Western films.

SUMMARY. Average Western, with Jack Hoxie working at top speed, romantic interest and plenty of action. Story not so original, but will pass as standard program attraction.

THE CAST

Jack Savage.....Jack Hoxie
Helen Merrit.....Helen Lynch
Harvey Gregg.....William Norton Bailey
John Merrit.....Alfred Allen
Rudolph Romano.....Georgie Grandee

Scenario by Buckley Oxford. Director, Cliff Smith. Photographed by William Noble.

SYNOPSIS. Jack Savage refuses to sell his ranch to John Merrit, whom he does not then know to be the father of Helen, the girl he loves. Merrit's lawyer, Gregg, is double-crossing his employer in the land deals the latter is making, intending to sell at a profit to a water company. Jack discovers and upsets Gregg's plans, but is temporarily obliged to run away. Later he returns, eludes the sheriff by a clever ruse, saves Helen in a runaway accident. He captures Gregg, exposes him, and wins Helen.

PRESS NOTICE

ADMIRERS of redblood Western melodrama have a treat in store for them on ——— at the ——— Theatre, when Jack Hoxie in "Bustin' Through" is the main screen attraction. Admirers of Hoxie know him as one of the most daredevil type of the cowboy hero brigade, and he fights, rides and executes any amount of nerve-racking stunts. The story shows Jack defeating the schemes of a crooked lawyer to fleece the father of the girl he loves, falsely accused, but overcoming his foes, and winning her.

Jack Hoxie is at his best in this picture, and supported by a talented cast, with Helen Lynch as the pretty heroine, and William Norton Bailey, Alfred Allen and Georgie Grandee filling important roles.

CATCH LINES

A stirring romance of the cattle country, full of thrilling scenes, fighting and love-making.

Three Wise Crooks

(F. B. O.—6074 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A FIRST-CHOP underworld yarn with sentiment, thrills, comedy and melodrama churned into the sort of attraction that nine out of ten fans will gloat over greedily, go home looking nervously about dark corners, yet wishing there had been more of it. The picture has mass appeal, there's no doubt about that, and Evelyn Brent "wins hands down" when it comes to portraying one of these sweetly fascinating crook ladies whose fingers are as nimble as their smiles are irresistible. There's a big market for this sort of entertainment, folks like to get a glimpse of what they suppose is the real seamy side of life, if overdrawn it makes little difference, so long as the director is on to his job, keeps the action fizzing furiously and gets the right support from his cast members.

THEME. Crook melodrama, with girl heroine and two helpers who finally all get under influence of kindly country persons, settle down and go straight.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Mystery and thrill atmosphere, bright comedy situations. Scene where the three confederates make their getaway after trimming diamond merchant.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up as an admirable example of the sort of picture which has made Evelyn Brent famous from coast to coast. Also stamp it as the best of its kind, feature the star and dwell on the film's snappy comedy.

DRAWING POWER. Ought to prove fine box office attraction in all houses where forceful underworld melodramas are in favor.

SUMMARY. A swiftly moving underworld melodrama in which the star, Evelyn Brent, hits the treasury target hard. The picture is well acted, snappily directed and has general audience appeal.

THE CAST

Dolly ..... Evelyn Brent
Ma Dickenson ..... Fanny Midgley
Spug Casey ..... John Gough
Dan Pelton ..... Bruce Gordon
Grogan ..... William Humphrey

Authors, John Brownell and Fred Myton. Director F. Harmon Weight.

SYNOPSIS. Dolly Duvans, clever crook, pays a visit to Ma Dickinson in Greenville, the latter having being befriended by Dolly in the city. Finding out that the village banker Silas Wetherby and an oil promoter named Wadsworth are framing to cheat the townsfolk out of their savings, she sends for her two Pals Dan Pelton and Spug Casey. Detective Grogan comes to investigate Wadsworth's oil schemes. Wadsworth and Wetherby plan to leave the bank at night. But the safe is empty, Spug and Dolly having taken the money with the intention of returning it to the owners. Dan picks up an incriminating piece of paper left by Wetherby with which he clears Dolly when suspicion is directed to her. Dolly and Dan are united, Spug weds a village girl and all go straight.

Satan in Sables

(Warner Brothers—7260 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A MELODRAMA of life in the shadows and sunlight of Paris, with the inevitable Apache girl, now such a familiar figure on the American screen, as heroine, and a prince of the Russian blood-royal for hero. The whole atmosphere of the picture is ultra-theatrical, but just the same it looks like a good box office bet, being sumptuously mounted, well acted and exciting from beginning to end. To put it briefly, "Satan in Sables" belongs in the "popular entertainment" class and ought to bring the shekles into the exhibitor's treasury. Lowell Sherman heads the all-star cast. His performance is a bit stilted and artificial, but he certainly invests the role with a magnificent dignity which will probably satisfy the average fan's conception of how a prince in real life should conduct himself.

Pauline Garon is vivacious, natural and appealing as the Apache heroine, John Harron plays the part of the prince's younger brother remarkably well, and other members of the company render excellent support.

THEME. Melodrama of high and low life in Paris, with Apache heroine and Russian prince for hero, who finally weds her.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Party given by prince on night of Mardi Gras, when Apache heroine makes debut through window and astonishes guests by her dancing. The rich interiors, colorful atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Title will fetch feminine patrons. Bill as exciting, melodramatic love story of Paris, play up the Apache atmosphere. Feature Lowell Sherman and Pauline Garon.

DRAWING POWER. Should do well in all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. Melodrama of society and underworld life in Paris, plenty of love interest and thrills, story rather artificial, but will please most patrons as it is exciting from start to finish, well mounted and acted.

THE CAST

Michael Lyev Yervedoff ..... Lowell Sherman
Paul Yervedoff ..... John Harron
Colette Breton ..... Pauline Garon
Dolores Sierra ..... Gertrude Astor
Victor ..... Frank Butler
Emile ..... Francis J. MacDonald

Author, Bradley King. Directed by James Flood.

SYNOPSIS. Michael Yervedoff, Russian prince, leads a gay life in Paris. At a Mardi Gras party he gives, Colette, Apache girl, flits through an open window and astonishes all by her wild dancing. She and Michael are mutually attracted. Michael's discarded mistress, Dolores, seeks revenge by vamping Michael's beloved younger brother Paul. On the eve of marriage to Dolores, Paul suspects her former relations with Michael and visits the latter to learn the truth. In a frenzy of grief Paul drives his auto madly through the streets, it is overturned and Paul fatally injured. The shock changes Michael's life. He settles down and weds Colette.

PRESS NOTICE

AN unique and exciting melodrama of society and underworld life in Paris, entitled "Satan in Sables", will be the main attraction on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The story deals with a love affair which springs up between the hero, a Russian prince who leads a gay life, and Colette, an Apache girl. It is packed with suspense, thrills and magnificently mounted. Lowell Sherman plays the prince hero, with pretty Pauline Garon as the Apache girl, both giving splendid performances.

CATCH LINES

Prince Michael lived only for the social whirl and pleasures of life in the French capital. Then, came the strange fascination of a street gamin—a graceful, reckless dancing bit of a girl—and love claimed him.

The Midshipman

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—7498 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

YOU can call this navy propaganda and not be far out, and at the same time pronounce it bully screen entertainment without making any mistake. The Annapolis atmosphere is all that the most inveterate stickler for accurate detail could wish, real dignity being lent the story by the scenes showing the ancient buildings framed by the silver radiance of the glistening Severn. And at the same time we are given a story which not only carries the action, but rings in the human sympathy gag with tremendous vim. The plot is skimpy, but interesting. It concerns the rivalry between a naval cadet and a rich civilian for the affections of Patricia Lawrence. Freckle-faced Wesley Barry fills the role of Patricia's brother Ted, and there's a funny sequence based on the idea nourished by midshipman Navarro that the sister must resemble the unhandsome brother.

Navarro makes an excellent impression in the leading role. He doesn't overact or seem to be handicapped by the wearing of an unfamiliar uniform, something which in the past has sadly hampered the screen gyrations of many so-called stars.

THEME. Navy melodrama with genuine backgrounds, as exemplified by Annapolis scenes taken on the spot, with hero defeating enemies' schemes and winning girl he loves.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The accurate and charming Annapolis scenes and correct naval atmosphere. Excellent acting of principals and supporting cast.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can play this up as a cracking melodrama, with fast action all the way, a capital and exact portrayal of life in the U. S. Naval Academy. Feature Novarro, Wesley Barry and Margaret Seddon.

DRAWING POWER. Should prove good card for big and little houses.

SUMMARY. A forceful melodrama, with navy propaganda ingeniously worked into story, without injuring entertainment values. A box office magnet for any theatre.

THE CAST

MIDSHIPMAN RANDALL ..... Ramon Novarro
Patricia Lawrence ..... Harriet Hammond
Ted Lawrence ..... Wesley Barry
Mrs. Randall ..... Margaret Seddon
Basil Courtney ..... Crawford Kent
Patricia's Aunt ..... Pauline Neff
Rita ..... Kathleen Key

Author, Carey Wilson. Director, Christy Cabanne. Photographed by Oliver Marsh.

SYNOPSIS. James Randall enters Annapolis Naval Academy and falls in love with Patricia, sister of freshman Ted Lawrence. Ted gets into bad company and is forced to sign Randall's name to a check. Randall faces the blackmailers and regains the check Later, Patricia is kidnapped and imprisoned aboard a yacht. Randall goes to her aid, is overpowered and thrown overboard. He gets ashore and starts destroyers on the trail of the yacht. She is overhauled, Patricia rescued, and her bethrotal to Randall announced in due form.

Tessie

(Arrow Film Corp.—6800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

SNAPPY, bright, full of ginger, this comedy drama ought to prove a box office winner for the average house. It deals with everyday sort of folks, has a deal of human sympathy as well as humorous values and trips along at a merry gait with unhampered continuity and good acting by the entire cast. The sub titles are terse and witty, most of them taken verbatim from Sewell Ford's story on which the picture is based. Not the least of the feature's entertaining qualities is its ability to keep the spectators guessing as to what will be the outcome of the tangling-up of Tessie's two suitors, the auto salesman who jilts her for a wealthy widow, and the latter's son, who is rather an unlicked cub, but develops considerable determination at the close, when he carries off the gal in triumph.

This is good direction, and in fact the whole film is very well handled. Pretty May McAvoy is a most enticing Tessie, Bobby Agnew registers a hit as Roddy, the bashful chap who makes good at the last, Lee Moran scores as the bumptious salesman and the support is capital.

THEME. Comedy drama, with girl hotel clerk, sought by two suitors and wedding wealthy one at finish.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent acting of May McAvoy and supporting cast. Ingenious mingling of little pathetic touches with comedy situations. Well sustained suspense and clever climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up as breezy, interesting comedy drama, with heart interest as well as lively humor. Feature May McAvoy, Bobby Agnew and Lee Moran.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in average house.

SUMMARY. Lots of snap and go to this comedy drama, which is well acted, moves briskly and has sympathetic and sharp humorous appeal. Direction capable, photography O. K.

THE CAST

Tessie ..... May McAvoy
Roddy Welles ..... Bobby Agnew
Barney Taylor ..... Lee Moran
Mrs. Welles ..... Myrtle Steadman
Mame McGuire ..... Gertrude Short
Aunt Maggie ..... Mary Gordon
Uncle Dan ..... Frank Perry

Author, Sewell Ford. Directed by Dallas M. Fitzgerald.

SYNOPSIS. Tessie is in charge of cigar and candy counter in large hotel. Her fiance is Barney Taylor, auto mechanic. Wealthy widow Mrs. Welles and son Roddy become guests. Urged by Tessie, Barney gets salesman's job and sells Mrs. Welles a car. Also, he captures the widow's heart. In revenge, Tessie accepts Roddy's attentions. The widow visits Tessie's home to buy her off, but fails. Barney appears, declares he still loves Tessie and that widow vamped him. But Roddy arrives, beats up Barney and carries Tessie off in triumph to wed.

PRESS NOTICE

LAUGHTER and romance mingle freely in "Tessie," a comedy drama which comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. May McAvoy is the star, portraying a cute little hotel girl employed at the candy and cigar counter, who helps her auto-salesman fiance along in business until he makes a ten-strike with a rich widow, and jilts her. Tessie, in revenge, accepts the attentions of the widow's son and a most intriguing set of complications develop.

May McAvoy is said by the critics in general to be at her very best in the role of Tessie and is well supported, with Bobby Agnew, Myrtle Steadman, Lee Moran and Gertrude Short appearing in important parts.

CATCH LINES

Tessie's suitors were many but she was faithful to one, until he played her false. Then, she took a woman's revenge, and vamped the son of the widow her unreliable fiance fell for.

Big Pal

(Ginsberg—5 Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

TO the credit of "Big Pal" and of William Russell, its star, it may be said that Russell puts up as honest a fight in the boxing match which marks the climax of this sentimental melodrama as ever was staged on the screen or in the squared circle itself. We have seen many fights in the photoplays, but not one which exhibited such earnestness nor one in which the hero of the proceedings gave and took such punishment as Bill Russell gives and takes in this picture.

The story, unfortunately, is hardly worthy such earnestness and sincerity as Russell gives forth. It is sentimental conventionalism in melodramatics, and lacks the incident and characterization to sustain it through five reels. Everything works up to the fight scenes, with the hero, a battler because it is his trade and because he needs money to send his ill mother on a health tour, forced into the position of winning the fight and saving his reputation for honesty or losing and regaining his nephew, kidnapped and held for this ransom. The fight scenes are excellent in their every detail and atmosphere but "Big Pal" is mechanical and unconvincing and loses its audience before the fight arrives.

THEME. A sentimental melodrama about a prize fighter and his romance with a girl of the "upper strata" of society.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The climax scenes, reproducing in faithful detail a prize fight. The acting and sincerity of the players.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as a story of fighter who fights to gain the very things for which men in the most distinguished professions strive and work.

DRAWING POWER. For houses with the so-called "transient" patronage.

SUMMARY. A sentimental melodrama honestly played and produced but lacking in dramatic substance and convincing characterization.

THE CAST

Dan Williams.....William Russell
Helen Truscott.....Julanne Johnston
Mary Williams.....Mary Carr
Johnny Williams.....Mickey Bennett

Directed by John G. Adolphi.

SYNOPSIS. Prize fighter, honest to the core, is notified that unless he quits in the fifth round of a big bout his nephew, whom he loves better than life itself, will never be given up by the kidnappers who make him captive on the eve of the fight. Dan spares his opponent and is on the point of a knockout when the boy, who has escaped, runs up to the ringside and Dan then "cuts loose" and wins. He also wins the consent of his sweetheart to become his wife.

William Russell, star of the Ginsberg production, "Big Pal."

Big Pal (Ginsburg)
PRESS NOTICE

AN intensely human characterization of a prize fighter who fights because it's his trade and to get enough money to provide properly for his ill mother, is presented in "Big Pal," the chief attraction announced by the ——— for ———. William Russell, a fine type of athlete and veteran screen actor, portrays the leading role.

Russell has the support of such popular players as Mary Carr, seen in one of her famous "mother roles," Julanne Johnston, the screen beauty who played the heroine role opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Thief of Bagdad" appears as the society girl who falls in love with the fighter, and Mickey Bennett, one of the most talented of the juvenile actors in pictures, head the cast assisting the star.

CATCH LINES

A drama of heart interest, romantic flavor and action in which the human side of a prize fighter is graphically portrayed.

Ridin' the Wind

(F. B. O.—Six Reels)

(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

FRED THOMSON contends with an inept conglomeration of melodrama and slapstick in this offering and finds the task a formidable one. The star, of course, registers a generally pleasant and attractive performance, but he has been left sadly in the lurch by the scenarist, who failed to invent the type of situations best suited for the display of Thomson's talents for humorous characterization and his skill in horsemanship. More "Ridin'" and less slapstick and sentimental hokum would have been better than this inexpert mixture of conventional drivel about a big brother whose charge turns out to be a crook despite the sacrifices which Jim has made in order to give Dicky a college education and all the advantages he knew his mother, who died when they were boys, would have wanted her youngest son to have.

Thomson is supported by Jacqueline Gadson, appealing as the school teacher whom the hero loves, Lewis Sargent, as the weak brother, and Betty Scott, in the role of a spinster who prays every night for Providence to send her a husband. The characters are unconvincing, but further than that the play jolts about from one extreme of the dramatic range to the other, hopping clumsily over the intermediate stages and moving at a snail's pace. It is not up to the standard of this star's former works.

THEME. Western melodrama about a big brother who sacrifices in interests of the younger and then finds that the boy is a member of a gang of notorious crooks.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Comedy scenes in which Thomson and "Silver King" star; the hero's riding and his fights with the villains.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Popularity of star offers best publicity angle. Concentrate on that.

DRAWING POWER. Will ride along on strength of star's previous work.

SUMMARY. A western melodrama hampered by sentimentality and ineffective slapstick as comedy relief. Unconvincing and action is leaden-footed. Star does his best to make his character interesting.

THE CAST

Jim Harkness.....Fred Thomson
May Lacy.....Jacqueline Gadson

Fighting Youth

(Columbia Pictures Corp.—4781 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE'S quite a smart run upon pugilistic pets for screen heroes these days, and muscular, agile William Fairbanks shows to capital advantage as a mitt-wielder in this one. It's the kind of feature that should do very well in communities where they like the whirlwind action and highly colored romance type of picture without worrying about plot probabilities. The formula employed here has nothing uncommon about it, most of the situations having done loyal duty frequently in other productions dealing with the prize ring, but we're bound to admit that the director of "Fighting Youth" has turned out a bright, breezy film without any dull spots in it which will entertain a large percentage of the fans. Moreover, he hasn't spoiled the picture by padding it out to a superfluous length. It stays within the five reel limit where it belongs.

Bill Fairbanks battles vigorously, makes love ardently and indulges copiously in automobile, aeroplane and swimming stunts into the bargain. Pauline Garon, petite and vivacious, shines as heroine Jean Manley and the support is O. K.

THEME. Stunt melodrama of prize ring, hero young society chap with a hot temper, whose fondness for scrapping leads him into all sorts of scrapes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The ring fights. Fairbanks' stunts. Comedy relief.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost the story as a real thriller chockful of action. Tell 'em.about Bill Fairbanks' athletic feats, the auto, aeroplane and swimming situations

DRAWING POWER. Should fill the bill nicely for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Prize ring melo, with comedy relief and Bill Fairbanks scoring heavily as glove-battler and general stunt performer. Moves fast all the way and should make good wherever they want exciting action and plenty of it.

THE CAST

SYNOPSIS. Dick Covington, young society athlete, is upbraided by his fiancee, Jean Manley, for constantly getting into fights. He promises to keep the peace, but a rival steers him into accepting an offer to box at a charity show. Jean is furious until insulted by Dick's prospective opponent, when she bids him win. But his rival has Dick kidnapped and kept prisoner in a barn far out in the country. He makes a getaway in his guards' auto, which is wrecked, gets a lift from a kindly aviator whose plane cannot land at the fight stadium. Dick swims a lake and reaches the ringside in time to fight, is badly battered at first but finally knocks his man out, exposes his rival's treachery and wins Jean.

PRESS NOTICE

WILLIAM FAIRBANKS in "Fighting Youth," comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a thriller in which the star performs some wonderful athletic feats, besides fighting a ring battle which is the acme of realism. The hero is Dick Covington, society athlete, whose fiancee objects to his scrapping propensities. Dick promises to be good, but is tricked by a rival into accepting a challenge to box a professional at a charity show. Jean is furious, until insulted by Dick's prospective opponent, when she tells him to win. He does so, but not until after being kidnapped and meeting with startling adventures.

CATCH LINES

He nearly lost his sweetheart by accepting a challenge to fight, but won the battle and her at the finish.

Thrills, comedy, romance, surprising athetic stunts — one of William Fairbanks' best and most exciting pictures.

The Everlasting Whisper

(Fox—5611 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A TYPICAL Tom Mix yarn and one that will make his huge following whoop in admiration of their hero and—the never-to-be-forgotten horse Tony. Both Thomas and the famous steed deserve all the applause they get, the former, as usual, fights off his foes with careless abandon and success, while Tony bucks his hard hoofs against a bunch of wolves, holding them at bay until his master arrives and takes a hand in the game. Another big scene is that in which Tom gallops along a narrow mountain path and snatches the heroine from her horse just an instant before it plunges upon a broken bridge across a precipice. In fact, this is best described as real "Tom Mixian" melodrama, if one may be permitted to coin a phrase, and a box office winner wherever good Westerners are in favor.

Yet it would not be fair to class "The Everlasting Whisper" as just a Westerner, and let it go at that. The picture is distinctly high-grade in point of direction, acting and photography and should be listed as a super-product of the open-air, romance, adventure sort.

THEME. Western melodrama, with hero defeating swindlers who endeavor to steal secret of gold mine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Tom Mix's smart acting, in combination with his wonder-horse Tony, who executes some marvelous stunts. The fast, sweeping action, melodramatic thrills and well developed romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGELS. Boost this as a regular Tom Mix melodrama, with a punch in every foot, alluring love interest, and Tony, the wonder horse, performing stunts that will make 'em all sit up and take notice.

DRAWING POWER. Has the general audience appeal slant, good for any house.

SUMMARY. Western melodrama, one of Tom Mix's real thrillers, packs a punch every other moment, moves fast, is strong on love angle. Should do well anywhere.

THE CAST

Mark King.....Tom Mix
Gloria Gaynor.....Alice Calhoun
Gratton.....Robert Cain
Old Honeycutt.....George Berrell
Aswin Brody.....Walter James

PRESS NOTICE

THE very mention of Tom Mix's name electrifies the motion picture fans. So that the announcement of that royal screen hero's appearance at the ——— theatre on ——— in his latest picture, "The Everlasting Whisper", should bring the lovers of red blood Westerners out in droves. Because, they know that Mix is there with the fighting stuff, and aided by his wonder horse — Tony, puts across some of the most astounding stunts that a camera has ever recorded.

In this picture Tom works faster than ever before, the horse Tony fights off wolves, comes to his master's call whenever needed, and a charming love story is recorded, with a brilliant finish.

CATCH LINES

This is the romance of a maiden and a modern man. Out of nowhere came the weird summons—and he responded.

She married him in self-defense, and learned to love him.

Durand of the Bad Lands

(Fox—5900 Feet)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

HERE is a real smart Western with a well told and well acted story. Here and there it has a bit of the hackneyed tale characteristic of the western, but for the most part it fairly sparkles with action and suspense such as is rarely seen in pictures of this type.

Buck Jones fits into the role of Durand nicely and his acting brings all the sympathy necessary to the misunderstood and much maligned "bandit." But second to the work of the star is that of another Buck—Buck Black, a youngster who plays the part of Jimmy, the orphaned youth who aids Durand through many tough situations. Young Buck acts as naturally as Buck Jones and between them they will hold many an audience spellbound.

THEME. A Western melodrama in which the alleged "bad man" is ultimately revealed as the real hero and the sheriff is proven the real bad man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The splendid performances given by Buck Jones, Buck Black and the entire cast. The fight between Durand and Sheriff Allison.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. A bookstore tieup, as the picture was adapted from the well known story by Maibelle Heikes Justice. The name of Buck Jones is worth a lot from the box office angle.

DRAWING POWER. There are not many picture goers who would not get some kick out of this picture They will eat it up where the Western is popular and they'll like it elsewhere.

SUMMARY. An exceptionally good Western with a well told and well acted story. It abounds in action and good situations and runs along smoothly.

THE CAST

Dick Durand.....Buck Jones
Molly Gore.....Marian Nixon
Clem Allison.....Malcolm Waite
Pete Garson.....Fred De Silva
Kingdom Come Knapp.....Luke Cosgrove
John Boyd.....George Lessley
Jimmie.....Buck Black
Clara Belle Seesel.....Ann Johnson

From the novel by Maibelle Heikes Justice. Directed by Lynn Reynolds.

SYNOPSIS. Durand is wanted in the West for a number of crimes attributed to him. He befriends Molly Gore, whose invalid father is unable to do any work around the farm. Pete Garson, evil genius of the town and Sheriff Allison plan a holdup of the Boyd gold on the way to the station. They pin the crime on Durand and trail him to the girl's cottage where he has taken the children of the murdered victims of the holdup. Durand makes his getaway and proceeds to the office of the U. S. Marshall, where he establishes his innocence and returns in time to rescue Boyd's daughter who is imprisoned in the mine and to establish the guilt of the real criminals. Durand, Molly Gore and the children ride off in the happy conclusion.

Durand of the Bad Lands
PRESS NOTICE
(Fox)

A WESTERN of unusual action, with a story which far excels the usual run of this type of picture will be on display at the ——— theatre next ——— night. It is "Durand of the Bad Lands," a Fox picture with the famed Buck Jones in the title role. The story is an adaptation from the widely read novel of the same name by Maibelle Heikes Justice.

It is the tale of a misjudged "bad man" who is compelled to go through many thrilling encounters and hardships before he manages to establish his innocence of the various crimes with which he is charged and to pin the guilt on the real culprits.

CATCH LINES

A Western with a real wallop and a real story. A tale of a "bad man," whose badness brings some real criminals to justice. A real thriller of the open spaces with action and suspense galore.

New Brooms

(William De Mille Production-Paramount—5443 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

A LIGHT, airy offering requiring little exercise of the grey matter, but diverting withal. William DeMille has taken Frank Craven's play and transplanted it to the shadow stage in a fairly entertaining manner. It is a picture that will please most audiences because it is pure humor all through. The plot has to do with a self satisfied youth who thinks he knows more than dad about business and household affairs, so pater gives his son complete charge of both for a year, while the elder Bates is running around with the girls and idling. The son soon proves a flop at business as well as love making and in the end, so confesses to dad.

THEME. A comedy of American home life in which a father comes close to wrecking his business, but makes a man out of his son in doing it.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The laughable situation when the son, taking charge of the household, has to pay all the bills, which he formerly ran up with vigor. The son's adventures in the factory with the "Keep Smiling" sign eventually ending in the basket.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Tie up department and hardware store windows with new broom displays. Try and put over a "Clean Up Week" in your town. Give out toy brooms to children at special matinee.

DRAWING POWER. A good program picture, with some well known stars to help pull 'em in.

SUMMARY. An unpretentious but good little comedy which should be suitable material around which to build up an excellent all-comedy program. Well acted, possessing many laughs.

THE CAST

Thomas Bates, Jr.....Neil Hamilton
Geraldine Marsh.....Bessie Love
Florence Levering.....Phyllis Haver
Thomas Bates, Sr.....Robert McWade
Williams.....Fred Walton
Margaret.....Josephine Crowell
George Morrow.....Larry Steers

From the stage play by Frank Craven. Directed by William DeMille. Scenario by Clara Beranger. Photographed by L. Guy Wilky.

SYNOPSIS. After being called a grouch by his son and informed that his business methods are all wrong, Thomas Bates, Sr., decides to put his offspring in charge of said business for a year. Geraldine Marsh, daughter of an old friend, is taken into the home as a housekeeper. Tom Jr., falls in love with her and breaks his engagement to Florence Levering, his dad's ward. Tom suspects his dad of being in love with Geraldine and tells both to leave. They do. Tom is a "flop" as a businessman. At the end of a year Dad and Geraldine return. Tom finds she is not married to his Dad. He weds her. Dad takes over the reins again at the factory.

New Brooms (Paramount)
PRESS NOTICE

WILLIAM DEMILLE'S newest Paramount picture, "New Brooms," based on the stage success by Frank Craven, comes to the ——— theatre, commencing ———. A typical American comedy woven around the adventures of a broom manufacturer, his know-it-all son, his ward and his youthful housekeeper; this production possesses real entertainment from beginning to end. It is filled with subtle humor, unusual comedy situations and is rich in incident.

Bessie Love, Neil Hamilton, and Phyllis Haver are seen in the principal roles and all do well in their characters.

CATCH LINES

It will sweep you off your feet with laughter. Dad decided to do the loafing, while son did the work. The result will keep you shaking with laughter. New Brooms will scatter the glooms.

Simon the Jester

(Producers Distributing Corp.—5870 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

LOOKED at from any angle this production measures up to the best standards. The plot, based upon a story by that fine literary craftsman—William J. Locke, fairly throbs with human interest, and has been developed into a picture of rare beauty and rich entertaining values. Director George Melford displays his usual skill in handling backgrounds and atmosphere, the English scenery seems every whit as charming as the real thing, and the circus life under the big tents is as picturesque and realistic as the most captious critic could demand. A vein of warm sympathy runs all through the feature, which is also strong in suspense and thrills. Of course, Simon's love affair with Lola is the most important thing in the film, and who can withhold pity from a hero whom we are informed at the first stage is ill from a malady bound to carry him off within a short period?

He doesn't die, however, and in this case the producers didn't change the book ending for the sake of attaining a happy finish, for the novel also presents Simon triumphantly recovered. In fact they've kept pretty close to the original story in filming it, so that lovers of Locke's delightful works will find the picture satisfying. The acting of principals and support is superb.

THEME. English drama. Hero ill of malady, doomed to die, falls in love with circus rider, whom he eventually weds, having recovered health.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine photography, clever acting, good direction, smooth continuity.—Sustained love interest, suspense, thrills. Circus atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Lillian Rich and Eugene O'Brien. Boost story's sympathetic values, fine sentiment and exciting situations.

DRAWING POWER. Good for big and small houses alike, and family trade.

Summary. A drama of great heart interest, beautifully photograped, acted and well directed. High-class production with general audience appeal.

THE CAST

Simon de Gex.....Eugene O'Brien
Lola Brandt.....Lillian Rich
Dale Kennersly.....Edmund Burns
Brandt.....Henry B. Walthall
Midget.....William Platt

Author, William J. Locke. Directed by George Melford.

SYNOPSIS: Wealthy young Simon de Gex learns that he has a malady from which he must soon die. He leaves a fortune to his best friend, Dale Kennersly, requesting that he should marry Mazie Ellerton, to whom Dale is engaged, before he—Simon—dies. Dale is infatuated with Lola Brandt, circus rider. Simon goes with Dale to watch her perform. An unknown enemy shoots and kills her pet horse. Lola and her good friend Midget, the clown, vow revenge. Simon meets and is attracted by Lola. Later he is operated on and recovers his health. Lola's wastrel husband is shot by Midget, who also dies. Simon and Lola are united.

PRESS NOTICE

LOVERS of sentiment, romance, thrills and picturesque unfolding of life under the big circus tents will have something to look forward to in the coming of "Simon The Jester" to the screen of the ———— Theatre on ————. The hero of this story is a young Englishman who has been informed by physicians that he is doomed to die within a certain period. He falls in love with Lola Brandt, circus performer, and their subsequent adventures are detailed with sympathetic power.

Lillian Rich and Eugene O'Brien play the leads, with Edmund Burns, Henry B. Walthall, William Platt and others in support.

CATCH LINES

If you knew you had only a short time to live, what use would you make of the days remaining? This young Britisher solved the problem in a peculiar way.

Lovers in Quarantine

(Paramount—6570 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

YOU can't get away from the alluring dash and sparkle of "Lovers in Quarantine" without acknowledging that here is absolutely the most entertaining picture in which fascinating Bebe Daniels has flashed her winsome smile up-to-date. As a cold matter of fact it is one of the most humorous things director Frank Tuttle has been responsible for in the silent drama, and Bebe, as the irresistible Diana, is away better than in anything else she has done. Her success in this role will surprise many who supposed her powers of characterization to be strictly limited to stock-in-trade stuff of the automatic order. She not only looks the part but plays it with such hilarious swing and fire that the audience is fairly carried away on a bright burning flame of enthusiasm.

It would have been fatally easy for the director to have run sex suggestiveness up to the limit in many of the scenes, but Frank Tuttle wasn't taking any chances on the censorship. He just slapped in touches of satire, little hints that made you think something was going to happen which didn't, and through it all steered his players as innocently as so many sheep.

THEME. Comedy, with heroine getting mixed up in elder sisters love affairs, and finally flirting herself into a match with desirable fiance.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent direction. Bebe Daniel's splendid acting in heroine role. The fast action. Clever sub titles. Smooth continuity.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. You can praise this as the best picture Bebe Daniels has starred in this season, without any fear of a comeback from your patrons. There's a strong supporting cast to feature and you can go the limit on the story's comedy values.

DRAWING POWER. Bebe Daniel's name will help to get 'em in and once in they'll stay and be satisfied. A good attraction for any theatre.

THE CAST

Diana.....Bebe Daniels
Anthony Blunt.....Harrison Ford
Mackintosh Josephs.....Alfred Lunt
Pamela Gordon.....Eden Gray
Amelia Pincent.....Edna May Oliver
Lola.....Diana Kane
Silent Passenger.....Ivan Simpson
Mrs. Burroughs.....Marie Shotwell

Adapted from F. Tennyson Jesse's Stage Play, "Quarantine". Director, Frank Tuttle. Photographed by J. Roy Hunt.

SYNOPSIS. Diana Gordon is a vivacious little tomboy who acts first and thinks afterwards. She is attracted by Tony Blunt, who imagines himself in love with Diana's older sister, the flirtatious Pamela and plans to elope with her on a steamer. Diana, thinking Tony is really infatuated with her, takes her sister's place through a clever stratagem, and three days pass before Blunt finds that he has eloped with the wrong girl. Finally the passengers are all quarantined. Subsequent developments reveal "who's who", and Tony and Diana are formally engaged.

Milwaukee

F. B. O. is going to hold open house for exhibitors at the fine new quarters on Seventh Street next week, and from "inside dope" of the plans it looks like a real party was brewing. M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager is scheduled to arrive Oct. 17, to help Sam Abrams and his local staff in conducting the housewarming.

Charles Koehler, assistant manager at Milwaukee for the Progress Pictures Company, beams proudly at pedestrians as he swishes by in his Maxwell all dolled in a new coat of paint.

And speaking of cars: Lyman Ballard, salesman for United Artists, has added a touch of color to Milwaukee's film row with his Chrysler coupe. Lyman works out of the Chicago office, parks his car in front of the Wells Street exchanges, where he gets a first chance at all visiting exhibitors.

Charles Lundgren, live-wire manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation, has just returned to his attractive new headquarters after a trip through the territory.

The Lyric Theatre at Tomahawk, Wis., was opened Friday to excellent business, according to Mrs. Ann Kuehling, managerette, who dropped in to tell Milwaukee friends about her latest achievement. The house has 700 seats and is a real adornment to the little city which it will grace.

Steve Doris, manager of the Star Theatre at Racine, Wis., came up to Milwaukee last week to tell the boys how nicely his latest project, the erection of a fine new theatre in Racine, was progressing.

J. G. Frackman, Milwaukee manager for the Progress Pictures Company, has returned from Chicago, where he conferred with his chief, Frank Zambreno.

John Lorentz, manager of the recently established branch office of the Fox Film Corporation in Milwaukee, has just returned from a trip through the territory, in the course of which he called on exhibitors in all the key cities.

Sam Therion, manager of the Bijou Theatre, Green Bay, Wis., was among the visitors to Milwaukee last week.

From Upper Michigan peninsula came E. J. Bregger, manager of the Gem Theatre at Crystal Falls, to call at the Milwaukee offices for the purpose of booking the 1925-26 product for his house.

Dick Scheinbaum, F. B. O. salesman in the Northern Wisconsin and Upper Michigan territory, has just come back to the Milwaukee headquarters, from a four weeks trip through his territory.

Jimmie Zanieth, manager of the Jeffries and Apollo Theatres at Janesville, Wis., was in Milwaukee last week calling on the offices of the Saxe Amusement Enterprises, with which his houses are affiliated.

Thomas Saxe, who recently announced construction of three new theatres to cost in excess of $3,500,000, was Wisconsin's first exhibitor, having returned from the St. Louis Exposition with an idea that resulted in his opening "Hale's Touring Car." Soon after, in conjunction with his brother John, he opened the old Theatorium, the first bona fide picture house in Milwaukee. The old Crystal Theatre soon followed and the Saxe Brothers started taking the lead over competitors who sprang up like mushrooms.

Some fifteen years ago the picture industry, as well as the entire amusement world, was startled by the announcement that the Saxe brothers had leased the Alhambra, then the largest theatre in Milwaukee and long established as a home for legitimate road attractions. The inauguration of a picture policy in a house of this size was considered foolhardy by many, it being the largest picture house in the country at that time. However, the venture proved very successful and led to the rapid expansion of the Saxe interests and the establishment of one of the most profitable circuits in the Central West.

Throughout the history of their motion picture activities the Saxe's have maintained their reputation as shrewd but daring pioneers. Covering an entire city with key "uptown" theatres is by no means the least of their achievements, and promises to be the most important of recent developments in the Milwaukee picture house history.

San Francisco

E. C. CUNNINGHAM of Pacific Grove has disposed of his interest in the Iris Theatre to the Golden State Theatre & Realty Corporation. The Iris will be permanently closed and Cunningham will devote his personal attention to his other theatre at Carmel.

Clem Pope of the T. & D. in Oakland has returned from a trip to Los Angeles.

The Senator Theatre in Sacramento celebrated its first anniversary the week of September 27th.

Frank Purkett of the Kinema Theatre is President of the Better Business Bureau in Fresno.

Central Penn

THE early fall business of the leading Harrisburg motion picture houses has been unprecedented, a fact that may be attributed to two principal causes: First, the fact that, pending the completion of the rebuilding of the Orpheum theatre, at an expenditure of $750,000, the city is without any "legitimate" shows as rival attractions to the movies, and, secondly, because of the exceptionally fine quality of the pictures that have been displayed in the picture houses.

Announcement made by the Wilmer & Vincent Theatre company, on October 9, that the rebuilding of the Orpheum will probably not be completed until about Christmas week, whereas it had been originally intended to have the theatre ready for opening at Thanksgiving time, means a further delay.

An increase of four in the number of inspectors employed to see that the rulings of the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors are enforced, has just been announced, in accordance with the wishes of Governor Pinchot. The addition of these inspectors to the Board of Censors' force makes the total eleven.

C. Floyd Hopkins, general manager of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, announces that the new State theatre, in Reading, which is being rebuilt, will be ready for formal opening sometime before the close of October.

Extensive improvements have just been completed in the Grand theatre, Stroudsburg. The seating capacity has been increased to 500 and the exits have been enlarged. A new screen and two new projection machines have been installed.

Out-of-town organists have been substituting at the New Strand theatre, operated by the Nathan Appell interests, in the city of York, during the absence of John De Palma, the regular organist, who has been ill with typhoid fever.

Salt Lake City

CARSTEN DAHNKIN, owner of the American Theatre here, has just returned from a trip to San Francisco. Dahnkin will leave soon for the east where he will remain for a short time.

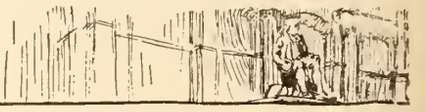
George L. Cloward, manager for Metro-Goldwyn here, has returned from a trip through the Montana territory.

Harold Pickering, Famous Players-Lasky local Exploitation manager, is in Idaho for a few days. A. G. Pickett, manager of this exchange, has just returned from the Idaho territory.



Clyde H. Messinger, manager of the local Educational exchange has left for the coal camps of Southern Utah.

The Grand Prize donated by the Victory and Paramount-Empress theatres, for the Gold Tournament this year, was won by Neil Schettler, leader of the Victory Theatre orchestra.

Among exhibitors visiting the local exchanges this week were: The Peery Brothers, operating the Egyptian Theatre, Ogden, Utah; Tom Berta, owner of The Rialto Theatre, Rock Springs, Wyoming; S. H. Rich, of the Rich Theatre, Montpelier, Idaho, and J. Whitehead, owner of Recreation Hall, Eureka, Utah.

Philadelphia

THE board of managers of the M. P. T. O. A. of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware is now making arrangements for a formal dinner dance to be held in the Benjamin Franklin Hotel on a Sunday evening the latter part of November. This will be the first formal dinner dance given by the organization and it is expected that it will be attended by all the prominent members of the film industry in the East.

Julia Barry who has been secretary to Percy A. Bloch, manager of the Philadelphia office of Paramount, was the guest of honor at a dinner tendered her by thirty-five employees of the exchange at the Arcadia Cafe. Miss Barry was presented with a sterling silver coffee set, the gift of her fellow workers. Miss Barry recently resigned from Paramount to become the bride of Dr. T. S. Collins, a promiment Philadelphia dentist.

George Rosenbaum, who has been a member of Edgar Moss' sales staff in the Philadelphia office of Fox, has been transferred to the home office in New York and will be sent out from there to the Boston exchange. Mr. Rosenbaum has been succeeded by Nat Fleisher, who was at one time connected with the old Goldwyn Company and later with Metro-Goldwyn.

A large delegation of Philadelphia motion picture men attended the formal opening of Len Berman's Savoy Theatre in Bethlehem. The opening was altogether an invitational one and Mr. Berman tendered the members of the film fraternity a dinner immediately after the close of the evening's performance. The Savoy is the third theatre recently acquired by Mr. Berman, who is planning to extend his theatre holdings throughout the eastern part of Pennsylvania ultimately to include about fifteen houses.

The film community in Philadelphia took an active part in the campaign for greater safety during Fire Prevention Week and one of the outstanding features was a mass meeting held in the auditorium of the Catholic High School, which is almost in the heart of the film center. More than 300 exchange employees attended the meeting.

H. S. Powell, who is in charge of the Associated Exhibitors interests in Philadelphia, has recently added Peter Ryan and Joe McCreary to his sales force. Mr. McCreary was at one time publicity director for Carr & Schad in Reading and later was associated with Harry and Gene Marcus in the Twentieth Century exchange. Mr. Ryan has had considerable experience in motion picture circles, having for a time been connected with Real Art and World exchanges. Mr. McCreary will cover Southern New Jersey and Delaware towns and Mr. Ryan will be assigned to Harrisburg and York sections.

The Philadelphia interests of the Harold Lloyd Picture Corporation will be handled permanently by Ben Abrahams, a special representative who has been assigned to the Philadelphia office.

R. A. Bloch and W. E. Smith, branch manager and district manager, respectively, for Famous Players, will leave the first week in November to attend the semi-annual sales conference of district and branch managers of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which is to be held November 6th to 8th, in the Hotel Drake, Chicago.

Cincinnati

L. B. WILSON, popular manager of the Liberty Theater, Covington, Ky., has added two more men to his jazz orchestra.

So many marriages have occured at the Paramount offices lately that Many Nagle, assistant city salesman, has been forced to return to the booking counter. Many filled this job before and when Frances Brown his successor took up matrimony for a position there was nothing left for Many to do but get back into the harness till he trains some one else for the job.

Fred Middleburg, of the Hyman Theater interests of W. Va., was in the city for several days last week.

Claude Harding has purchased the Opera House at Ashland, Ky., and will reopen it under the name of the Ashland Theatre at an early date.

Chas. Trieble of the Pastime Theater, Maysville, Ky., booked several large pictures while visiting film row last week.

W. J. Curran of the Plaza Theater, Kings Mills, O., spent several days looking at pictures recently.

The local Universal offices have organized a club among the employees for the purpose of furnishing entertainments once a month. The name of the club is the Universal Film Joy Club. The officers are Henrietta "Honey" Bocklege, President, Helen Weiler, Vice-President, Helen Cain, Secretary, and Mrs. Gus Geldreich, Treasurer. The first entertainment on the list for the season will consist partly of Charles Lowenburg, the exploiteer, in a song and dance act. Charlie was a vaudevillian before entering the movie game, and Al. Sugarman, short subjects manager, in an Irish monologue.

Gladys Roemes, the pretty operator for Universal, will leave her post at the end of this week to become the bride of Albert Bohner on November 18. All who know Gladys wish her luck and happiness for she is a most deserving and popular young lady.

Beatrice Prang of the Forum Theatre, Hillsborough, O., was a guest at Film Row last week. As usual she was royally entertained.

Chas. Reagan, district manager for Paramount, is one of the busiest men in the film game. Charlie is always on the go and the sales of the office prove that his missions are not in vain.

Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiteer was under the weather for several days last week.

Ann Keck, secretary to Peppiatt, Paramount Branch manager, made her first road trip last week, and her results most satisfactory.

New England

APPARENTLY the motion picture business in Florida will thrive this winter, judging from the number of New England exhibitors that have joined the Florida bound contingent. In a letter to one of the distributors in Boston, a former Bay State exhibitor said he found almost as many of his co-exhibitors in Florida as there were left in Massachusetts. He declared more New England people were in Florida than from any other section.

Three of the New England salesmen have joined the Florida gathering. They are "Chick" Varney and Jack Donovan, who were with the Producers Distributing Corporation of Boston and Charles Phillips who was with the Film Booking Office, Boston. They left this week and declared they would be in Florida indefinitely.

John Foley, who runs the Park Theatre at South Manchester, Conn., is expected back from a sojourn in Florida this week. He has been in the South for several weeks.

"Jake" Laurie is making extensive improvements and doing considerable remodelling of his theatres. As a result, the playhouses are temporarily closed but will reopen about Nov. 1st with the improvements completed. In the three playhouses the seating capacity will be increased by a total of 2300. At the Shawmut Theatre an additional 800 seats are being added; at the Jamaica Theatre 700 more seats will be provided and at the Roslindale Theatre 800 additional seats are being provided.

Mr. Laurie is also building a new theatre to be known as the Morton Street Theatre in Mattapan. This will have a seating capacity of more than 2,000. Work is to be pushed forward rapidly on this playhouse and it is expected to open early in the new year.

The Metropolitan is advertising its opening for Saturday morning, Oct. 17, and it is planned to commence each week's new program on Saturday instead of Monday. On Friday evening, Oct. 16, there will be an inspection of the new playhouse by invited guests.

In Salem, Mass., the Empire Theatre, which has for some years been playing stock, has closed. There is a rumor current that negotiations are under way for reopening the house as a motion picture theatre later in the season.

The Palace Theatre in Bowdoin Square, Boston, is being remodeled by its owner, Louis Boas.

In addition to the Palace remodelling, much remodelling and work on the theatre fronts of the Bowdoin Square, Olympia and Star Theatres is being done in this same section of the city.

"Doc" Hermann has become affiliated with the Producers Distributing Corporation, Boston headquarters, as a salesman, where he is greeting old friends and rapidly making new ones.

Joseph Cloutier, formerly one of the well known salesmen in New England territory, has taken over the Modern Theatre in Manchester, N. H. and has changed the name of the playhouse to the Notre Dame Theatre. The theatre has opened to good business.

Philip Smith, who took over the National Theatre in Boston a couple of years ago and made a big success of it, and who disposed of it a short time ago, has now engaged in the insurance business in Albany where friends are predicting he will make the same success that he did in handling the National Theatre.

Frank Watton, who has successfully operated the Park Theatre in Lebanon, N. H., has just opened a new theatre at Williamsett, Mass., which is a prosperous town in Hamden county near Holyoke, Mass.

After eight years as a motion picture house, the Modern Theatre in Providence, R. I. has changed its policy to stock.

Abraham Spitz will open a new theatre in the outskirts of Providence in about a month's time.

It is reported that Nathan Yamins and Harry Horgan of Newport, R. I., have taken over the Colonial Theatre in that city. Mr. Horgan is at present operating the Opera House in Newport.

The St. James Theatre on Huntington Avenue, Boston, which has for some years been devoted to stock, will reopen early in November with motion pictures and vaudeville under the direction of the Keith-Albee interests. Extensive alterations and improvements are being made and this will give the Keith-Albee interests a Boston theatre in the Back Bay section of the city.

Arthur Viano, who has started the erection of a new theatre in Day square, Somerville, Mass., says that the house will have a policy of motion pictures and vaudeville and will open late in the winter.

"Jake" Laurie is making arrangements for some extensive feature advertising above the marquis of his theatres in Boston. He is spending between $12,000 and $15,000 for these displays at the Beacon, Modern, Dudley, Shawmut, Jamaica, and Roslindale Theatres.

Al Newhall of the Strand Theatre, Lynn, Mass., is motoring about in a new Pierce Arrow sedan which is the envy of his friends.

Moe Silver of Moe Marks' Theatres and manager of the Waldorf Theatre, Lynn, is visiting the Row in a new Marmon car this fall.

A recent visitor to Boston was Pat Downing, publicity director for Metropolitan Pictures at Hollywood.

Mike Newman was a recent Boston visitor. Newman operated the Coast to Coast in Seven Days auto.

A new theatre in Roslindale, Mass., with a seating capacity of 900 is nearing completion and will be opened under the supervision of Stanley Sumner, who is in charge of the Community Theatre in Newton. The new playhouse will operate a straight picture policy.

The Broadway Theatre, Everett, has reopened after undergoing extensive alterations. Nathan Brown is in charge of the theatre and also of the Strand Theatre, in the same city.

The Premier Theatre in Fall River, which had been closed for several years, has been reopened by M. A. Dunn and is said to be having excellent success as a motion picture house. Mr. Dunn formerly owned the Academy of Music and the Palace Theatre and successfully operated them.

E. A. King, formerly of King & Rogers, is now in full control of the Colonial Theatre in Brockton, Mass., and is playing to capacity houses.

Denver

JAMES F. LYNCH, manager of the Empress Theatre, Laramie, Wyoming, has entered into a "tie up" with the Associated Students of the University of Wyoming for an entertainment to raise funds for the sending of the entire Wyoming Football Team on a ten day tour, on which they will play Montana State and Utah Aggies.

The new State Theatre closed Friday night, October 9th, because of its popularity with the fans. Seems queer, doesn't it. But here's the reason. The theatre will be closed for a two weeks' period in which time the stage of the theatre will be enlarged and raised for the purpose of accommodating better and larger acts for the entertainment of the patrons in conjunction with their first run pictures.

James S. Hommel, manager for the local branch of Producers Distributing Corporation, has just returned from a four weeks' sales trip to the Southern territory. Jim returned yesterday after visiting nearly every town of any consequence which included Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Roswell and Jurez.

Eugene Gerbase, manager of the local Universal office, made a hurried trip to Salt Lake City the early part of the week returning Friday.

B. P. McCormick, owner and manager of the Rialto and Liberty Theatres, Florence, Colorado, and the Jones Theatre, Canon City, Colorado, was a welcome visitor in the city a few days ago. Welcome, because when Jim comes to town it means a lot more dates and new contracts for some exchanges.

Harry Lustig, Division Manager for Warner Brothers, arrived in the city today from Salt Lake City enroute to New York City. Mr. Lustig leaves for New York tomorrow.

The exhibitors visiting Denver during the past week were Ed. Marquand, manager of the Isis and Longmont Theatres, Longmont, Colorado; Stewart Tyo, manager of the Tyo Theatre, Wray, Colorado, stopped on his way back home from the American Legion Convention at Omaha; Mrs. Lee Mote, Acme Theatre, Riverton, Wyoming; A. V. Wessels, Orpheum Theatre, Steamboat Springs; Colorado; R. Murray, Eaton Theatre, Eaton, Colorado.

Seth Perkins, District Manager for Metro-Goldwyn, arrived in Denver early this week for a visit with Mr. R. J. Garland, the local branch manager of his organization.

THE local Pathe exchange is getting all ready for the fifteenth birthday celebration of the Pathe News service, which takes place the week of November 14th.

J. S. Jossey, head of Progress Pictures, has added to the dignity and comfort of his exchange by adding a new section to his sales department where exhibitors may sign contracts without danger of interruption. No, there are no bars to the office. Exhibitors may get out as well as get in.

Lou Rogers of Arrow Film Corporation has finished his missionary work in this territory and has moved on to Detroit.

William G. Smith, of Fidelity Pictures, New York, was in town and called on the independent exchange managers last week.

Jules Levy, Universal general manager, spent Saturday in Cleveland.

Sam Bullock, one-time exhibitor, and until recently, field manager for the Motion Picture Theatre owners of Ohio, has just returned from a trip to the auld countree. Bullock was on the other side about two months. If his trip had an official flavor, he has not mentioned it out loud, but it is understood that he went over on organization business of some sort.

The Governor's family were guests of Bill and Harry Skirboll at the official opening of the Opera House at New Philadelphia, last Friday. The New Philadelphia house, which they bought last season, was re-built during the summer, and is said to be one of the prettiest picture houses in this neck of the woods. And James McMahon forsook the management of his picture house in Willoughby, the McTodd, to offer a selection of songs. Many other prominent exhibitors were present at the opening, but they did not participate in the program. Forney Bowers continues as house manager of the Opera House.

Maurice Schwartz, director of "Broken Hearts," for Jaffe Art Film Corp.

When the old Toledo theatre in Toledo recovers from its $100,000 worth of alterations, it will be known as the New Palace. Howard Feigley, managing director of the Rivoli, will also manage the New Palace, which adjoins the Rivoli.

The Cleveland Motion Picture exhibitors Association will hold a meeting on October 26th, to elect officers for the coming year.

W. J. Powell, of the Lo-Net theatre, Wellington, paid his personal respects to some of the local exchanges last week, and expressed himself as pleased with picture conditions as they are and as they promise to be during the coming months.

Mrs. Dolls, of Dolls theatre, Akron, one of the few women exhibitors in this territory, was in town last week to see the latest styles in pictures as well as the last word in feminine attire.

Bert Botzum, who owns the Orpheum theatre in Akron and the Strand in Canton, with his wife and family, is taking a holiday trip through Europe. He booked all the new pictures before he left.

The Empress theatre in Akron is no more. Charles Brill locked the front door of the house permanently on October 3d. That leaves Bill with just two houses in Akron,—the Miles Royal, which plays burlesque, and the old Grand Opera House which will play burlesque also when Brill gets through remodelling it.

Milton Bryer, who owns the Waldorf, People's, Ideal and Winter's theatres in Akron, in partnership with I. Friedman, was in town the other day and said that business in Akron is good. And what's more, Bryer said that the outlook for the winter is excellent.

Clint Kline, of the Arcade theatre, Akron, is all through with his annual visit to Cleveland for the year. Just about once a year Clint makes the twenty-mile grade. So it's an event when he comes and all the exchanges celebrate.

Louis Frisch of the Harbor Theatre at Ashtabula Harbor, while in town last week, told the exchangemen that business is picking up in his part of the country and that he's looking forward to a big season.

Howard Reiff and Percy Essick of the Scoville, Essick and Reiff circuit have made their wills all in favor of the third member of their firm before starting out to hunt wild animals in the Canadian woods. Both of them have demonstrated their ability as straight shooters but never before have they attempted any shooting outside the Film building. "It looks so easy in the movies," Reiff said, "so we thought we'd like to try it ourselves." Scoville will run the circuit during the absence of his partners.

Warner Baxter who will be seen in Paramount's "The Best People."

Mort Shea of New York and L. B. Cool of the Feiber and Shea circuit, spent a day last week visiting the Cleveland exchanges and filling in dates on pictures previously booked.

It is reported that Young brothers are building a new 800-seat movie house in Bowling Green. This isn't their first one. They also have the Delmar. Everybody's and Lyric—all of them in Bowling Green.

Manager Halbert of the Odeon theatre, Canton, is all through with fishing for the season. He recently returned from his last trip to Michigan and has put away the fishing paraphernalia until another summer.

John Schleifenheimer is busy remodeling his Falls theatre, Chagrin Falls. There'll be a lot of new things to greet the eye when Schleifenheimer gets through. He was shopping for some of the things in Cleveland one day last week.

Messrs. Bly and Miller are in the act of building a new motion picture theatre in Conneaut, according to advices along the Film Rialto. They used to own and operate the Liberty at Geneva.

M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington Circuit of Cleveland, was among the missing exhibitors the middle of last week. One guess where he was. Pittsburgh. Correct. "It was a great game" Moe told his less fortunate companions upon his return home.

Jake Stein, who has the Utopia theatre, Paineville, is just recovering from an illness which has kept him away from the film exchanges for several weeks.

Pete Theopolis used to serve entertainment to the patrons of the Pantheon theatre in Lorain. Now he's serving sea food to the patrons of his popular restaurant on Euclid avenue at East 103d St.

George Fleishman, one of Toledo's most prominent exhibitors, while in Cleveland last week, stated that business was good in his town, and at his theatre. He had the World, Atlas and Ohio. Fleishman said that business was good at both uptown and downtown houses, but especially good downtown.

The Empress theatre in Toledo is closed. The lease on the theatre has expired and it will be converted into a series of store rooms. George Dixon, who managed the house has retired.

Joe Trunk and Max Schagrin drove up from Youngstown the other day. It was a business trip for Trunk, who is managing the Orpheum theatre. But it was a pleasure trip for Shagrin, who has sold his Orpheum theatre. As soon as building operations on the new house are begun, the Orpheum will be torn down and will be used as a lobby entrance to the new house.

Two new Keith houses will be ready in this territory no later than January 1st. One is in Youngstown and the other is in Akron.

It is reported that Loew is going to put up a big house in Canton.

Here's a new one. Yary and Frank Ptelka are brothers. They own and run the Union theatre, Cleveland. They work together all week. And they like to play together. So, in order to be able to play together, they close their theatre every Tuesday all the year round. Tuesday is their own day. And their patrons are used to waiting until Wednesday to see their favorite stars on the screen. In a seven days town, where the thought of Sunday closing is a nightmare, Ptelka brother's six days policy is extraordinary, to say the least. But they say the policy is quite satisfactory. It's all a matter of habit.

Howard Franke, has just acquired his third link in the picture theatre chain, which he is building in Ohio. Recently Frankel and Malott bought the Windsor theatre in Akron and the Weber theatre in Dover. Last week they purchased the Cinderella in Coshocton. Other purchases are in the wind.

The Film Bldg. Register showed the following out-of-town exhibitor guests for the past week:—Henry Rosenthal, Ohio theatre, Ravenna; W. L. Beckham, Artcraft, Toledo; D. M. Robbins, Dome, Youngstown; George Mock, Mock's theatre, Girard; E. C. Lair, Louisville theatre, Louisville; Garland Shetler, the new owner of the Opera House, Middlefield; Jim Platt, Lyric, Mt. Vernon; and T. J. Evans, Lyric and Strand theatres of Van Wert.

Sol Brill, proprieter of the Inwood theatre, New York.

SLIGHTLY over twenty years ago, an earnest, hardworking young fellow, by the name of Sol Brill, started out in business in a little shop over in Brooklyn. The business was cloth shrinking and its capital consisted of three hundred dollars.

A few weeks ago, Sol Brill signed a lease on a suite of offices in the building atop Gloria Gould's Embassy theatre. Today, the letters on the entrance door, read "Meserole Securities Company," —and there is a vast difference between the capitalization of this company and that of the old cloth shrinking business.

Recently Sol Brill's "Inwood Theatre" in the Dyckman Heights section of New York City, held it Premiere. It is one of the most modern neighborhood houses in the city and a detailed description is given in the construction and equipment section of this issue.

Shortly after his venture in the cloth shrinking business, Mr. Brill became interested in a penny arcade located at number seven hundred Broadway, Brooklyn. It is interesting to note here that this entry into this form of the amusement business was to prove to be the nucleus that later on was the means of building up his fortune.

The penny arcade was started about nineteen years ago and it was at this time that the commercial possibilities of the "Nickelodeon" began to be talked about, and on the floor above the arcade, Mr. Brill constructed a two hundred seat theatre.

According to Mr. Brill's statements and those of his brother, Dave Brill, the present sales-manager of Universal's "Big U" Exchange, the first piece of film that was able to be run through a machine, was projected on a screen in this little theatre.

Along about this time Sol Brill became associated with William Fox and two more small theatres were built at 899 and 1100 Broadway, Brooklyn. These little places were for the most part, converted stores and a five cent admission was charged.

Following these ventures Messrs Brill and Fox came over into New York City and opened up several more three hundred seat houses, among them the "Yorkville Comedy" whose show used to start at ten A. M. and last through to midnight. A ten cent admission was charged at this theatre. Then, these two men constructed the "Comedy" in Brooklyn, the first motion picture theatre to seat a thousand people.

About this time another prominent showman of today came into the field and joined forces with Fox and Brill. This man was B. S. Moss and with Sol Brill, he built the 86th Street theatre that is now owned by Loew, Inc. Then followed the Jefferson 14th St. and Second Ave., and the Hamilton at 146th St. and Broadway, both now under the control of U. B. O. There was also the Meserole and Sumner in Brooklyn that are now operated by Small and Strassberg.

Sol Brill has continued in the exhibition and construction end of the industry and his present interests include the Strand at Rockaway, The Central at Cedarhurst, the Ogden and Lefferts in Brooklyn, Ferber's Strand at Lakewood, the Ritz and Liberty, Staten Island, the Globe and Central, Brooklyn, Cross Bay, Jamaica, and the Inwood, New York City. In addition to these named, Mr. Brill is financially interested in several theatrical enterprises in the Metropolitan district.

Two years ago Mr. Brill was a large stockholder in Warner Bros., but has since disposed of his holdings. He is a close friend of Carl Laemmle and showed the first single reel that was released by Universal. Mr. Brill is also a director of the Longacre Bank and is connected with the Prudence Bond Company; however, his efforts today are mostly confined to the construction and financing of motion picture theatres and he is ably assisted by his general manager, Harry Shiffman who has been with him for twenty years. Another associate of Mr. Brill's who has put in a matter of fifteen years service, is Harry Thomas, manager of the Rockaway Strand.

Prominent exhibitors and exchange men who were in attendance at the premiere of the Inwood include Lee Ochs, Harry and William Brandt of Brooklyn, Louis Blumenthal of New Jersey, Sam Lesselbaum, of Rachmiel and Lesselbaum, Charles Moses of Staten Island, Charles Steiner of Allwon circuit, Joe Weinstock, of the Freemont, Embassy and City Hall theatres, Harry Suchman, of Suchman Bros. Enterprises, Messrs. Grobe and Nobel, Matthew Christmas and Samuel Roth, Sam Friedman of the Regun, Al Steinman, of the Cosmo and Stadium, Manager Kaisestein from Bayonne, Al Harsten, Harry Buxbaum and Joe Lee, of the Fox Exchange, William Raynor, Manager of the Pathe New York branch, Moe Streimer, of United Artists, Joe Hornstein and Dave Solomon, Samuel Lash, of the Lee-Lash Studios, S. Strauss, "The Sign Man," and Lawrence Bologino, of the Consolidated Amusement Co. Members of the Aywon, Merit and Apollo exchanges were also present.

Albert L. Greene has been selected to manage the Inwood and although Mr. Greene is but twenty-six years of age, he has had a great deal of experience in the exhibition end of the industry, having been a Fox exploitation man and former manager of the Beverly and Premier theatres in Brooklyn, N. Y.

In his work as exploitation man and theatre manager, Greene has always distinguished himself by his unflagging energy and his ingenuity in publicizing both pictures and theatre along the lines of sound, sane showmanship. At the Inwood he will have an unusual opportunity for the carrying out on a wider scale of the same sort of high grade exploitation and capable management.

Another local theatre robbery took place last Sunday morning when burglars jimmied their way through the back doors of the Ogden theatre at 1431 Ogden Ave., New York City. Owing to the yegg-proof construction of the safe, the thieves managed only to burst through the first compartment and secured but six dollars for their trouble. In the inside compartment they overlooked three days' receipts. Moe Weinberg of the Apollo Exchange is the proprietor of the Ogden.

Charlie Goldreyer's new Manor theatre will hold its premiere on Thursday of this week. The Manor is located at Ave. K and Coney Island Ave., Brooklyn. J. Greene, who was formerly with the Paris Court theatre at 292 Court St., Brooklyn, and whose home is only two blocks away from the Manor, will be the new manager.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Buxbaum recently carried off first prize at a costume ball held at Lawrence, L. I. The prize winning costumes were of Chinese design and there are many who believe that Harry is getting acquainted with Oriental customs in order to capture the Chinese trade in this city.

President Joseph M. Seider's two young sons are batting out balls at the rate of 1000 per cent up at their school. The younger one recently managed to get six hits out of six times up and the major league scouts are already looking them over as prospective Babe Ruths.

Milton Kronacher who has covered the lower East Side during the past ten years for Pathe has been given additional territory. In addition to the East Side, he will now take in all theatres in the section up to and including 116th Street. Milt also wants all his friends to know that he has on hand a strictly up to the minute stock of emblems for all lodges. These are on display at his desk in the Pathe exchange.

Bernard La Follette Scholtz, that enterprising young salesman who covers South Brooklyn for Fox, has been appointed editor-in-chief for the house publication, "Fox Folks."

Max Fellerman, Pathe salesman who is contemplating matrimony about Xmas time, was observed on the curb Monday and accompanied by the future Mrs. Fellerman.

The friends of Robert Harris of the Pathe exchange will be glad to know that Mrs. Harris, who has been seriously ill for the past three months, is now getting along in fine shape.

Visitors among the exchanges on Tuesday included Cy Fabian, J. Kelly of Fort Lee, Louis Heiman of Rahway, H. W. Donnegan of Harry Hecht's Passaic, Henry P. Nelson, of the Capitol at Elizabeth, Jacob Unger of the Court theatre, Newark and Herman Metzger of the Park at Caldwell.

George Faulkner who has been with Producers Distributing Corp., in Washington, D. C., has recently joined his father and will help handle the Faulkner circuit of New Jersey.

Leo Brecher's new Boston Road theatre was opened to the public last Friday evening and in spite of the rain a capacity crowd jammed the house to the aisles. The Boston Road is another of the strictly up-to-the-minute neighborhood theatres that are lately being erected. It is of one floor design and every seat a good one. The seating capacity is about 2000.

Al Shiffman, managing director of the Leo Brecher houses, was in charge of the opening and presented a fine program. A number of prominent motion picture stars made their appearance and the usual gathering of well known local exchange men and exhibitors were also there. Refreshments were served in the reception room during and after the performance.

William and Harry Brandt are building another new theatre over on Sutter and Ralph Avenues, Brooklyn. It will be a 2000 seat house and it is expected to be ready about Feb. 1st.

The Gaiety at Trenton, controlled by the Ten Eyck's of the Orpheum in the same city, will open November 10th. The Gaiety will seat 1500.

Frank Becker's new theatre at Englewood, N. J., is nearly complete and the opening is being planned for November 15th. The new house will seat 2000 and will be devoted to feature pictures and vaudeville.

Harry M. Schwartz has a new theatre under construction at White Plains, N. Y. It is of 2500 seating capacity and will be ready on December 1st.

Joe Hornstein of Howell's is still putting over plenty of equipment. The latest list includes the two new Brandt houses, Ten Eyck's Gaiety at Trenton, Frank Becker's New Englewood theatre, and Harry Harris's new house in Mt. Vernon. William Gluck, chief engineer for Joe, has left for Boston to attend the opening of the Metropolitan, the new Famous-Players theatre.

Seattle

L. O. LUKAN and A. J. Kennedy, manager and publicity director, respectively, of the local Universal office, have just returned to this city from Yakima, where they staged the third of a series of Universal Theatre Parties for the exhibitors of the territory. As a feature of the program, J. M. Hone, secretary of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, held a meeting with the exhibitors and urged their attendance at the M. P. T. O. W. convention in Seattle in November.

Les W. Weir, district manager of the Producers' Distributing Corporation exchange, spent several days here last week with W. H. Drummond, local manager, and from here proceeded to Portland to investigate the new office in that city. Mr. Weir was followed a few days later by Dave Frazer, his assistant, who is spending a number of days here with Mr. Drummond lining up Producers' new product for the fall and winter.

Announcements received here last week were to the effect that suburban houses in Portland have recently raised their general admission prices to twenty-five cents, with children's admissions raised to a dime. Newspaper advertisements heralding the raise were signed by the Alhambra, Bob White, Chaldean, Clinton, Colonial, Echo, Egyptian, Granada, Hawthorne, Highway, Irvington, Laurelhurst, Moreland, Oregon, Roseway, Sellwood, Sunnyside, Venetian, Victoria, Walnut Park and Yeager Theatres. Increased costs of theatre operation and film purchasing were declared responsible for the raise by these leading suburban houses.

Joe Roberts, publicity and exploitation director of Al Finkelstein's Strand Theatre, last week announced that he had taken over the management of the "Seattle Amusement Guide," a small booklet published weekly in this city and distributed free through cigar stores, lunch counters and public places. The guide includes the programs from the first run picture houses and legitimate theatres of the city, and is financed through advertising of local firms. Mr. Roberts will continue his work at the Strand in conjunction with his new enterprise.

Louis Goldsmith, former owner and manager of the Society Theatre, is now a full-fledged member of Seattle's Film Row, having joined forces last week with Al Rosenberg's De Luxe Feature Film Exchange. Mr. Goldsmith will represent De Luxe in a sales capacity in the Washington field.

Art Schmidt, Western district manager of the Film Booking Offices, spent a few days here last week in conference with A. H. Huot, manager of the F. B. O. enterprises in this territory. Mr. Schmidt, while here announced his recent appointment as special representative of the F. B. O. Home Office at the California studios, in addition to his present duties as division manager.

Alan Hale, signed as a director by Cecil B.. De Mille.

Among the visitors on Film Row last week were seen Bob White, of the Bob White Theatre in Portland E. W. Grosbeck of Enumelaw and Buckley; and Walter Kraft of Aberdeen. All three of these Washington exhibitors were among those present at the opening of H. W. Bruen's new Arabian Theatre early last week.

Cecil Gruwell, formerly associated with Manager W. H. Drummand's Producers' exchange in the capacity of booker, last week joined the booking department of C. M. Hill's Metro-Goldwyn exchange, where he works in conjunction with A. J. Sullivan, office manager and chief booker. Mr. Gruwell formerly worked in the same capacity with Mr. Sullivan when the latter was associated with the Producers' office.

J. F. Sheffield, associated with Jack Lannon in the Lannon-Sheffield Greater Features Exchanges, left recently for a business trip to the company's exchanges in Oregon and Montana, and expected to be gone for several weeks, during which time Mr. Lannon was scheduled to guide the destinies of the local office single-handed.

Bill Green, former salesman with Manager L. M. Cobb's Portland Pathe exchange, came to this territory recently and is now associated in a sales capacity with the local Pathe exchange. He covers the Eastern Washington territory, with headquarters in Spokane.

The Dolores Theatre, now in the course of construction in the North Park district of this city, was scheduled to open some time in November, according to information received recently from the Brown and Ross Company, who will own and operate the house. It will seat approximately 500 persons.

Kansas City

FRED SPEAR of the Orpheum theatre, Kansas City, felt contented with himself last week, having been first to the newspapers with the fact that his theatre would carry play-by-play detail of the world's series between the Pirates and Senators. But, in the meantime, Earl T. Cook, manager of the Pantages theatre, first run house, successfully countered with a special entertainment for the First Baptist Church Business Men's Bible class, while the Apollo theatre, suburban house, set the pace with a fashion revue of Paris gowns.

"They say competition is the spice of life, but I disagree," asserted Barney Dubinsky of the Regent theatre, Kansas City. "Since down town building improvements have swept away two rival motion picture theatres in the same block I have had better crowds and had far less trouble in buying films. That's that!"

Kansas City exhibitors and exchanges are co-operating in Fire Prevention Week, the exhibitors by running slides and the exchanges by posting posters in the various branch offices.

Exchange activities were many last week. W. J. Morgan and C. D. Hill, general sales manager and district manager, respectively, were in Kansas City on a tour of the Middle West. Universal employees are jubilant over the fact that four of the five exchanges under W. E. Truog, district manager, finished in the first seven in the sales contest in June, July and August.

Earl Cunningham, Paramount exploiteer, is hard at work arranging "something special." Sam Stoll, formerly with Universal, has joined the Paramount sales force in Kansas City, while Leonard Allison, formerly assistant bookkeeper at the Universal branch, has been made chief booker at the Des Moines Universal office, being succeeded in Kansas City by Mark Gilbert.

Charles T. Sears, former president of the M. P. T. O., Missouri and now general manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory, and Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager, left last week for Independence, Kas., to take charge of the Beldorf theatre, recently purchased by Universal.

From Joe Silverman, president, down to the most humble employee, good feeling exists around the Independent Film Corporation office this week, due to several big sales last week. Ned Depinet and F. J. McConnell, southern division sales manager and short subjects manager, respectively, for Universal, were business visitors in Kansas City.

Several changes of management of theatres in the Kansas City territory have been announced. Lee Jones, manager of Universal theatres in Atchison, Kas., has been transferred to Independence, Kas., where he will manage the Beldorf theatre. Mr. Jones was succeeded in Atchison by A. R. Zimmer, who will assume charge of the Crystal and Royal theatres. The Garden theatre, Colony, Kas., has been purchased by T. H. Lauck from W. E. Bearce, owner of a chain of houses. The Robinson theatre at Robinson, Kas., has been purchased by Charles Pirkey from G. L. Rugg.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Hooper, National theatre, Topeka, Kas.; W. H. Weber, Echo and Lakin theatres, Great Bend, Kas.; Lawrence Brunninger, Cozy and Crystal, Topeka, Kas.; A. R. Zimmer, Crystal and Royal, Atchison, Kas.; H. B. Doering, People's theatre, Garnett, Kas.; Harry McClure, Strand, Emporia, Kas.; Edward Peskay, Rivola and Penn, St. Joseph, Mo., S. E. Wilhoit, Jefferson, Springfield, Mo.

A. E. Elliott is to become manager of the New Lewis and Elliott theatres in Independence, Mo., which recently were obtained by Glenn Dickinson, owner of a chain of houses.

An inter-exchange and exhibitors' golf tournament, to be staged at the Lakewood Golf and Country Club, Kansas City, next Monday, is the talk of movie row this week. A handsome trophy will be awarded the winner of the tournament, which will be a medal play event of eighteen holes.

A new Reproduco player pipe organ has been installed in the Gauntier theatre, Kansas City, Kas., owned by R. G. Liggett, while H. S. Beardsley had two new Simplex projectors installed in his new Legion theatre.

Buffalo

THE wrecking crew has started to raze the house at 464 Franklin street, on the site of which will rise the new Buffalo Paramount exchange, which, it is declared will be the last word in exchange buildings. It is hoped to have the building ready soon after the first of the year.

The Palace theatre opened in Syracuse on Monday evening, October 5. The program is being changed daily. The seating capacity is 1,289. Music is furnished by a large Wurlitzer organ. The house is at 2362 James street, corner Stafford avenue.

Eddie Lazinski, manager of the Park theatre, a north Buffalo community house, is sporting a new Buick roadster. When it rains, Eddie leaves his nice new boat in the garage and takes his dad's car to visit the film exchanges. Arnold Febrey, assistant booker at Pathe, was exhibiting one of the new Ford coupes the other day.

The Buffalo community theatre, which, it was reported, was to have been built by Barney Vohwinkle in association with the Shea Amusement company on Genesee street, will not have the Shea company behind it. Mr. Vohwinkle is expected to go ahead with the project himself.

G. K. Rudulph, publicity director of the Fox Film company, stopped off in Buffalo last Saturday to visit old friends along Film and Newspaper Rows. Jerry was en route to the west coast studios, where he expects to remain several months.

We hear that Jimmy Speer, former manager of the Buffalo Dependable exchange, has returned from Florida and is trying to sell exhibitors land in that boom country.

E. J. Hayes, former manager of the Buffalo First National office, and recently associated with the sales staff of Producers Distributing corporation and Bond Photoplays corporation, has entered a sanatorium to recover his health.

O. T. Schroeppel is now in charge of all the booking at the Fox office, where much rearranging has been underway in exchange layout. Harry Bailey, the new manager, has arrived and taken up his duties. J. Emerson Dickman, salesman par excellence, is now combing his hair straight back.

"Hub" Taylor, Pathe salesman, is getting out his snowshoes, shovel, boots, sledge and limbering up his Eskimo dogs, for his winter exploration along the Southern Tier. "Hub" is taking no chances this winter. He got stuck about once a day last year in the drifts down around Jamestown, Elmira, Binghamton, etc.

Corinne Griffith, star of "Classified," a First National Feature.

C. W. Anthony, who recently resigned from the Warner Brothers staff to accept an appointment as Associated Exhibitors' representative in Buffalo, is now out in the sticks acquainting exhibitors with his product.

Manager H. M. Addison of the Binghamton theatre, Binghamton, N. Y., wants to know if there are any harmonica players in his city. If so, Mr. Addison is willing to offer cash prizes to the one who can play the best on Friday night, October 16. So Binghamton is going to hear some real music that night.

House Manager Morris of the Regent theatre, Rochester, tried an experiment this week and it was a big success. The experiment was Mark Daniels, baritone, formerly of Portland, Ore., and now a member of the Rochester American Opera company.

Mitchell Fitzer, and not Ben, as was announced, has taken over the new theatre being built in Kenmore, N. Y. The theatre will be one of the finest in western New York and will be ready for the public soon after the first of the year.

Houston

CURTIS DUNHAM, publicity director for Famous-Players in the South is in town in interest of exploitation.

Milton S. Goss, theatre manager and director from Beaumont and Pt. Author was in Houston for several days this week. Mr. Goss is opening an office in the Auditorium Building which will be in charge of his wife Mrs. Milton S. Goss.

John Freadle and Paul Snider, director of Southern Enterprises, Inc., and supply manager for the same organization passed through Houston on a tour of inspection. They spent a few days in Galveston and returned through Houston enroute to Dallas where headquarters are maintained.

Paul Snell, publicity and advertising man from the California "Movie Colony" spent a week in Houston with friends. Mr. Snell combined business with pleasure while in town.

Eddie Breamer, who has been local house manager of the Majestic theatre for several seasons has won a much deserved promotion. He is now business manager for the Interstate Amusement Company's theatres in Houston. He has established an office in the Palace theatre building.

Bennet R. Flinn who directed the Palace theatre players last season will return to Houston next week to handle the directing of the new Palace Players who will open in Houston for a winter season at an early date. Mr. Flinn is well known in Houston and is very popular with the public and his atcors alike.

Work on the new Ritz Theatre is rapidly drawing to an end. This theatre will be ready for business before the turkey season arrives.

Hal Norfleet, Southerin representative for Fox Film Co. publicity department, is in town for a few days. Mr. Norfleet reports that the theatre business is on the upward go throughout his territory.

Abe Silverberg has been in Dallas for a week buying films for the late winter and spring season.

Ed. Collins, manager of the Queen and Tremont theatres at Galveston, Texas, was in town for a day early last week.

Canada

J. D. FLETCHER has returned to Toronto, Ontario, where he has taken the management of the York theatre, a well-established suburban house. He was in charge of the Algoma theatre at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, for a few weeks but the Algoma is now under the command of Ray Tubman who was manager of the Strand and Palace theatres in Calgary, Alberta, for some years.

Edith Yetta Gebertig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Gebertig of Toronto, was recently married to Norman M. Snider of Toronto in the Pompeiian Room of the King Edward Hotel. Mr. Gebertig is the owner of the Bluebell theatre, Toronto, and is a prominent worker in the Ontario Division of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America.

Manager Jack Allan of the Capital theatre, Kitchener, Ontario, has been laboring under a handicap with regard to poster advertising for the theatre. For some weeks past, he has been unable to secure a 24-sheet stand anywhere in the city, as all the locations have been taken up for commercial advertising. He hopes to get a look-in shortly, however.

Two theatres in Canada cooperated with fire and insurance organizations during the week of October 5, which was designated as "Fire Prevention Week". At Winnipeg, Manitoba, Manager D. E. L. Fisher of the Garrick theatre presented "Fighting the Flames" as a special feature for the week while at London, Ontario, Manager W. L. Stewart presented the same feature at the Patricia theatre.

The Rex theatre at Kindersley, Sask., has been undergoing comprehensive improvements. A new floor has been laid in the auditorium and various conveniences have been added.

William Louis Aiken has been appointed organist of the Metropolitan theatre, Regina, Sask. Until recently, he was the organist of the Metropolitan theatre at Winnipeg, Man.

The Strand theatre, Brandon, Manitoba, formerly an Allen theatre, has been closed temporarily by Famous Players Canadian Corp. The manager, Charles L. Straw, has been placed in charge of a Winnipeg theatre.

Albany

ALTHOUGH a bowling league has been recently formed among the motion picture theatres of Troy, it now looks as though Ben Stern, manager of the Lincoln theatre, and one of the premier bowlers of the city, would not be able to participate. Since pitching in the baseball game three or four weeks ago between the Troy and Mark Strand theatres, Mr. Stern has been suffering from a badly sprained back that may prevent his taking part in the bowling matches which are being rolled one night a week after the theatre is closed.

In order that employees of the Troy theatre might keep up to the minute in the World Series, Walter Roberts, manager of the house and also an ardent baseball fan, had a radio installed in one of the rooms beneath the stage.

Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Strand group of houses in Albany and Troy, is now using an announcement of coming attractions, which is being thrown on the screen and which supplements much the same announcement that is being carried in the newspapers.

The Charleston dance contests are now on their seventh week at the Griswold theatre in Troy, and with no evidence that the public is tiring of the same. In fact, Jacob Golden is finding it a hard matter to accommodate the crowds that flock to the theatre on the one night each week when the contests take place. At the conclusion of the series a silver loving cup will be given the winner, and there will also be a split of $100 in cash among the leaders. On election night Mr. Golden, realizing the intense interest in the local situation, will have a wire service installed furnishing complete returns to his audience.

It now looks as though Ben Apple, a former well known exhibitor in Troy, who went to Florida a month or two ago, and then returned, will remain this winter in Troy. Mr. Apple has been appointed as local representative for a large Florida real estate development.

Eleanor Boardman in "An Exchange of Wives," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

There was a quick shift of managers at the Palace theatre in Troy, last week, resulting in Louis Saperstein, who was named only two or three weeks ago, tendering his resignation to Julius Berinstein, owner of the house.

Efforts are being made in Troy to feature Junior Movies this fall and winter at the Troy theatre, Walter Roberts having the matter in charge. These movies will be given under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association of the city and Mr. Roberts is hoping to enlist the interest of Lansingburg. The movies were held last winter and attracted thousands of youngsters to the theatre on Saturday mornings, with a ten cent admission prevailing.

Lauren Brown, a member of the orchestra at the Troy theatre, has resigned and with his wife, gone to Florida, where he will enter the real estate business with his father-in-law. His wife came to Troy from Miami on a visit, and later found employment as an usher at the Troy theatre. The two met and were later married and then received a letter from Mrs. Brown's parents, telling of the wonderful opportunities offered in the south and suggesting that the young couple come to Florida where Mrs. Brown's father is already in the real estate business.

With motion picture theatres in Albany, Troy and Schenectady, holding an amateur night each week, many of the amateurs in these cities are making a fine living these days in going from house to house, with an occasional side trip to some of the theatres in the Mohawk Valley.

Herman Stern, manager of the F. B. O. exchange in this city, and who is taking a vacation in New York this week, has arranged for a rather novel screening at the Leland theatre, on Monday night, October 19, following the usual show. To this screening, Mr. Stern has invited Governor Alfred E. Smith, as well as all newspaper representatives in Albany, exhibitors and members of the theatrical profession playing the city on that day.

William Shirley, of Schenectady, who has made two trips already to Florida, left for Miami last Wednesday, and according to his own assertions, will not be back north until he has made at least one-half a million dollars. Some of the boys along Film Row, in saying good-bye to Mr. Shirley, said that they did not expect to see him for some years to come.

F. W. Aldrich, of the Regent in St. Regis Falls, has informed Film Row that he will close his house for the winter on November 1. Vic Warren, of Massena, was in New York city during the week. Bob Landry, one of the best known exhibitors in northern New York, left during the week for Florida. The week also brought to town Ely Rosenbaum, of the Hippodrome in Ogdensburg.

John Maxwell, formerly connected with the Frontier Amusement Company of Buffalo, is now handling the Liberty theatre in Herkimer, one of the Schine houses. And speaking of the Schine boys, Gloversville, which is the headquarters of the Schine circuit, has been dubbed "Schineville" along Film Row. The Schines are running a Fashion Show this week at the Glove theatre in Gloversville, along with the feature.

Helen Lynch in "Bustin Through," Universal.

Among visitors along Film Row during the week were Earl Kramer, of Buffalo, Mrs. Fonda, of the Grand in Scotia and the Star in Schenectady, and Margaret Sullivan of the San Souci in Watervliet. The week also brought to town Tom Kennedy of the Lyceum in Champlain and L. Shapiro, of Manchester, Vt., the latter, however, forgetting to bring along any maple syrup for the young ladies in the exchanges. J. B. Harte, of Bennington, Vt., also arrived in town in a brand new Packard. He will leave shortly for Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Charles Henschel, district manager for Pathe, stopped over in Albany for a few hours one day last week, while on his way from New York to Boston.

Nick Dennis, of Utica, is planning to open the Auditorium in that city to pictures and Italian vaudeville on Nov. 2. Mr. Dennis has booked heavily of F. B. O. product and was present at a dinner given by Joe Raymond of the State theatre in that city, last week, at the Hotel Martin, with Harold Filkins, Ely Rosenbaum, and Herman Stern among those at the table.

George E. Loomis has just taken over the Savoy in Frankfort, reopening the house on October 7.

Another minister of the Gospel has been added, during the past week, to the ranks of exhibitors of New York state. Rev. H. H. Black has taken over the Central Bridge theatre and was along Film Row during the week, booking pictures.

Harry Nolan, who hails from the Middle West and an original First National franchise holder, stopped over in Albany during the week, for a visit with Alex Herman, local manager.

The boys along Film Row greeted Harvey Smith, of Wells, during the week. Mr. Smith does not make many trips to town, but now that he has a new car, will probably be seen oftener than in the past.

The Colonial theatre in Monroe has been taken over by J. J. Dimber, of Jersey City, from the K. and B. Amusement company.

George S. Jeffreys, special Harold Lloyd representative from New York city, is in town this week.

Announcement of Christy Mathewson's death came as a shock to Dave Seymour, owner of the Pontiac theatre in Saranac Lake, and one of the best showmen in this territory. During Mr. Mathewson's long stay in the Adirondack village, he and Mr. Seymour became fast friends and would often meet and talk over old times, for in years past Mr. Seymour was out with many a road company and knows the country from end to end.

Employees of the local Pathe exchange, are working hard these days toward accumulating a special fund that will provide the exchange with a victrola which will be used at private screenings and dances on the upper floor of the exchange. Up to the present time the fund has reached $7.50, so it may be some months before the victrola becomes a reality.

The new theatre in Lake Placid is making headway to the extent that the sidewalls are up.

Plans for the proposed Hallowe'en dinner and dance by the Albany Film Board of Trade have failed to materialize and as a result the party has been declared off.

There is a new salesman at the Fox exchange in the person of Morris Simon, who has been employed in both Rochester and New York city. He is scheduled to cover the southern tier.

William Smalley, of Cooperstown, has returned home from the Danbury Fair. Frank Briggs has been placed in charge of the Clinton Square theatre in Albany, with Alex Sayles managing both houses and doing the advertising for the one in Glens Falls, as well. admission.

Junior Movies have started at the Empire in Glens Falls on Saturday mornings, with a ten cent

Charles Gilmore, of Syracuse and Oswego, has leased the Temple as well as the Hohman theatres in Pulaski, assuming possession on November 1. Jacob A. Youngs will be retained as manager of the Temple, while a new manager will be named for the Hohman.

Mrs. Carpenter closed her theatre in Lake George last week. As soon as rather extensive alterations are completed, she will leave for the south to spend the winter.

Omaha

EN C. MARCUS, who has been booker and assistant to Manager Sherman Fitch of the F. B. O., has been promoted to salesman.

F. A. Milhouse, owner of the Summer theatre at Summer, Neb., organized a party of twenty Legionnaires for a trip to the convention in Omaha, October 5 to 9.

L. J. McCarthy, general manager of Balaban and Katz, was in Omaha last week.

Mayer and Phil Monsky, owners of Liberty Films, Incorporated, celebrated their fifth anniversary September 25. They started out with only one picture, but in their five-year business life, they have picked many box office winners. In celebrating their anniversary, the Monsky brothers expressed their appreciation of the fine support theatre owners of Nebraska and Iowa have given them.

The Omaha Film Board of Trade has joined in the fire prevention campaign, October 4 to 10. At fifteen local film exchanges fire drills are held, stocks of film being removed in less than one minute.

W. J. Morgan, general sales manager for Producers Distributing Corporation, New York, and C. D. Hill, district manager, from St. Louis, were here Sunday and Monday.

Edwin Silverman, special representative for Warner Brothers, with offices in Chicago, visited here last week.

Chicago

MARIAN RICE, a daughter of H. E. Rice of the Jackson Park theatre, who was close to winning the recent Smart Set Magazine beauty contest, and whose perfection of face and figure received favorable comment from the judges, is making personal appearances at the Capitol theatre this week.

The three thousand seat Harding theatre at Milwaukee and Sawyer, the first of the nine great houses under construction by Lubliner & Trinz to be opened since this firm's amalgamation with Balaban & Katz, threw its doors open to the bublic on Monday night and in line with the Lubliner & Trinz-Balaban & Katz policy, the house is one of great beauty and is magnificently equipped and furnished throughout, with a large stage. The Logan Square Business Men's Association and other improvement bodies staged a week carnival to celebrate the opening, and on the day of the premier performances throngs blocked the street surrounding the theatre and thousands were turned away.

The new Ambassador theatre at Division street and Mansfield, will have its official opening on October 20th, according to W. P. McCarthy, president of the M. & H. Theatres Corporation. An arrangement has been entered into with Cooney Brothers National Theatres corporation, which insures the same high standard of entertainment for the Ambassador as that which has made the Capitol theater famous during the few months it has been operating.

Frank Schaefer of the Crystal theatre, accompanied by his wife, is enjoying a vacation in Asheville, North Carolina.

Wiliam Kleighe has assumed the ownership and management of the S. J. Gregory Theatrical company, the Hammond Amusement company and the East Chicago Amusement company, S. J. Gregory having severed all his connections with these enterprises, which operate the Parthenon, Orpheum and De Luxe theatres of Hammond; and the Forsythe and Lyric theaters of East Chicago. J. L. McCurdy, who for some time has been connected with the Gregory companies, has been named general manager and will be in complete charge of operation. No reason for the sudden change in the management has been given out, but it is understood that Mr. Gregory will continue active interest in his other theaters.

Manager Roy Alexander of Universal's Chicago exchange, is back again after a trip to the west coast headquarters of his company. It is understood that Mr. Alexander has perfected plans for one of the most important advertising tieups in motion picture history. Among the visitors at the local exchange in the last few days were E. H. Goldstein, treasurer of Universal; Fred McConnell, serial manager, and Lou Metzger, manager of the complete service department.

Samuel Halper and Harry Y. Dissen, operators of four Chicago theatres, and who will soon take over the Terminal, now being operated by Ascher Brothers, have organized the Ritz Theatre Company of Michigan, and will operate the new Ritz theatre, formerly the Globe in Flint, Michigan. The theatre is being completely redecorated, recarpeted and a large thirty foot electric sign and new marquee are being installed, as well as a new Barton organ with the console placed on a lift. Charles Garfield, old time theatre man, will be in charge of the house which is scheduled to open the middle of October, with a policy of first run photoplays and vaudeville at popular prices.

Henry Igel, well known Chicago projectionist, and son of Harry Igel, city hall representative of local film interests, reports the loss of his wife's father by sudden death. He was William J. Ryan, president of the National Ice Company of Forest Park, and also president of the William J. Ryan Cinder Company. He left a widow and six grown children. Henry Igel is one of the executors of the will.

Cooney Brothers state that they are not in a position to either deny or confirm reports that their company will shortly erect a big first run theatre in Chicago's loop. Cooneys, however, admitted that they may have something of interest to give out within a short time.

C. C. Pettijohn of the Hays Organization, was a Chicago visitor this week and made his headquarters at the Congress Hotel.

Is your theatre under this "New" Management?

A sign neatly displayed over the entrance to a theatre in which a new Simplex Projector had just been installed advised the public that the theatre was "Under New Management."

The Simplex Service man in that district dropped in to inquire as to policies of the new management.

"We have only one policy," said the manager. "That is a social one. We consider ourselves hosts to the whole community in which our theatre is located. Through the columns of a local newspaper we issued an invitation to this community to be our guests. It was a social invitation. We said nothing about the pictures we would show, nor about the prices we would charge. Just an invitation similar to ones used in social life.

"We believe our theatre has a definite place in the social activities of this community. We, as the hosts, are responsible for the comfort and pleasure of our patrons and we give as much consideration to their pleasure as any good host would give to the entertainment of his guests. We won't give our patrons broken chairs to sit on, and we'll pay as much attention to the manner in which pictures are presented as a hostess would pay to the dishes on which she serves refreshments.

"As evidence of that you will notice we have just installed new Simplex Projectors. That's our guarantee to patrons that pictures will be presented in the best possible manner." I said our policy was entirely social. It is—but we've found it excellent from a business standpoint too.

F.P.-L's Metropolitan, Boston, Opened

New House, With Seating Capacity of Forty-Six Hundred, Largest in New England

BOSTON'S new theatre, the Metropolitan, at Tremont and Hollis streets, opened Saturday, Oct. 10, taking its place as the largest theatre in New England, with a seating capacity of 4,600. It is a Paramount house under the management of Balaban & Katz and under the direction of Keith-Albee.

The Metropolitan marks the very latest word in completeness, luxury and appointment. From the outer lobby to the rooms back stage nothing has been omitted that makes for the comfort and enjoyment of the patrons and the employees.

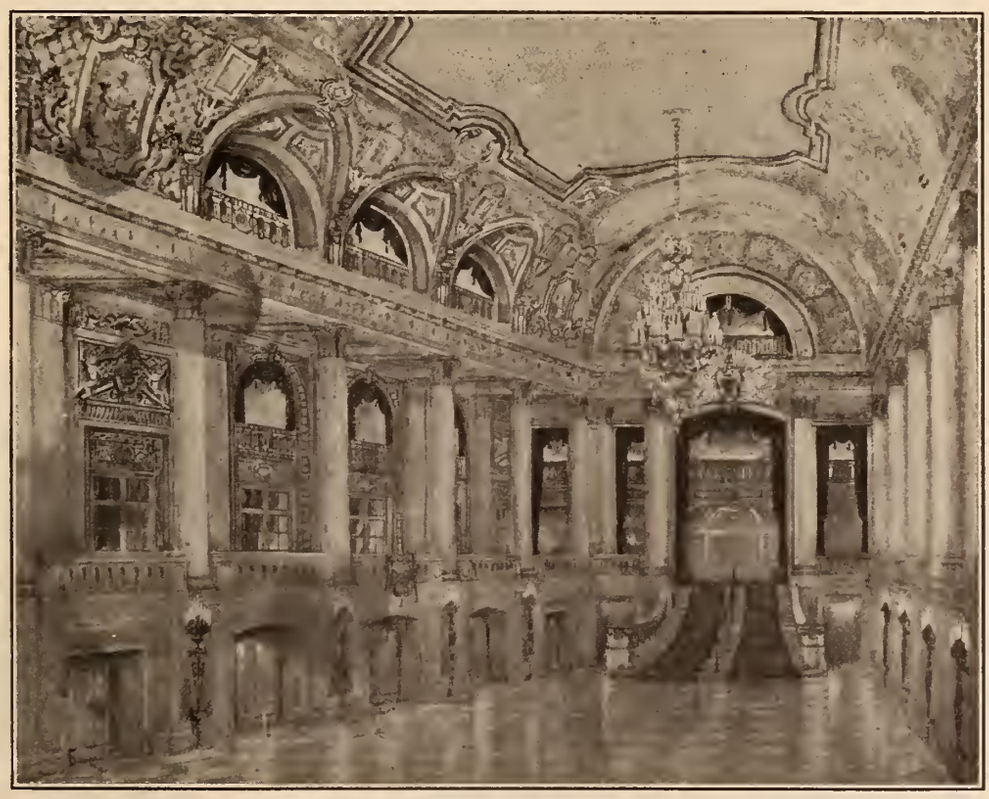
The theatre itself occupies the entire block bounded by Tremont, Hollis, Dillaway and Dore streets and while the seating capacity is placed at 4,600, more widely spaced than in any other Boston playhouse, there is ample room for more than 2,500 more people to sit in the lounges, smoking rooms and parlors of the building. The marquee above the main entrance is so broad that it will permit fifteen automobiles to discharge passengers beneath its shelter at one time.

There will be no waiting of patrons in wet weather outside the theatre. The spacious lobby will care for any sized audience while awaiting their turn at the box office windows. These lobbies, as well as the lounges, parlors and the auditorium of the playhouse will be warmed in winter and cooled in summer.

In the lobbys will be an orchestra of 12 pieces which will furnish music distinct from the 55-piece orchestra in the auditorium. The grand lobby is 70 feet in height, decorated largely in gold and blue with relieving notes of lavender in the background. The ceiling is blue with allegorical paintings by Louis Amarosi of Chicago. Sixteen great pillars of rose jaspar marble range round this lobby, and set in the walls back of them are pilasters of the same stone. On the walls are panels of Botticino marble framed with rose tavernelle marble. All of the marble used came from Italy. Two crystal chandeliers and many floor torches are used in lighting this chamber.

The grand staircase at the end of the grand lobby is framed with deep valances of red velvet. The staircase gives access to two broad flights of steps to the single balcony. At the opposite end are two other flights of steps and nearby, at each end of the grand lobby, are pairs of staircases leading to the grand lounge.

The walls of the grand lounge are heavily panelled with carved walnut, classic leaf ornamental themes being used in the carvings. Opening from the lounge, as well as from the other levels of the playhouse, are retiring rooms for men and women, check rooms, telephone booths and similar services.



Patrons will not be sent hither and thither to find seats because the head usher, stationed at the main entrance, is at all times informed of vacant seats in all parts of the house by means of push buttons, operated by ushers of each section, which show by means of lights in an indicator panel beside the head usher, just where every vacant seat is located. Thus, if a party of eight arrives and wishes to be seated together, the head usher directs them without delay to a place where those seats are available.

The outer lobby is adorned with murals, copies of Titian's "Triumph of Venus" in Rome, painted by Amarosi. The murals in the grand lobby, also by Amarosi, are symbolic of the advance in drama and music. Encircling the ceiling of the main auditorium are a series of murals by Edmund Philo Kellogg of Chicago. The central mural is studded with 250 semi-precious jewels costing $10,000. Surrounding the central figure are five figures symbolizing ballad, operatic, dance, sacred and martial music; and five representing drama, pantomime, comedy, tragedy, history and romance.

There are three mezzanine promenades and one outside promenade. Two spacious elevators carry patrons from the main floor to the balconies. The mushroom system of ventilation is used. All of the loges are equipped with arm chairs. There is a red cross room with full hospital equipment, with a physician constantly in charge.

The 55-piece orchestra will be stationed upon an elevator platform so that it may be raised or lowered to any desired height.

There is an orchestra floor, mezzanine level from which entrance is gained to the mezzanine boxes, and balcony. The sight lines are as near perfect as science and (Cont'd on page 1964)

Brill's Inwood Combines Many Interesting and Novel Features

THE Inwood theatre, located in the Dyckman Street section of New York, with a seating capacity of two thousand, has a frontage of one hundred feet on Dyckman Street and runs back two hundred feet to Thayer Street. As designed by Architect Eugene De Rosa the layout of the house includes many new innovations.

In the portion of the building fronting on Dyckman Street is located the vestibule and entrance lobby to the theatre with four stores. The front is a mattglazed brick with granite base and granite terra cotta trimmings. The walls of the vestibule are lined with marble, the ceiling is of ornamental plaster, and the floors of terrazzo with border of marble mosaic.

Through doors glazed with plate glass divided into small panes the lobby is entered. The lobby is quite spacious having a width of 32 feet. The walls are of paneled marble in which gilded ornamental plaster panels are set in conjunction with mirrors trimmed in bronze and elaborate display panels. There is a richly decorated cornice and a coffered ceiling with ornamental plaster in relief in every panel. The floor is of terrazzo with marble mosaic border.

The auditorium has a length of 160 feet from the stage to the rear wall and a width of 100 feet. A low wainscott is carried around the side and rear walls and the surface above is laid off in panels, with an enriched cornice and freize at the ceiling line. The outstanding feature of the ceiling is a great circular dome 59 feet in diameter. In a cove running around this dome are concealed lights in different colors which may be used singly or in combinations producing most beautiful effects. The ceiling is otherwise decorated with panels, set pieces and running ornament in plaster relief which under the hands of the decorator lends itself to a scheme of decoration which is rich and beautiful in effect.

A small stage has been provided with a proscenium opening flanked with marble columns on either side, which is suitable for a singer or someone giving a recitation. At the back of the stage is the picture screen and at the proscenium opening is hung a curtain of rich material.

Marble staircase with wrought iron railing leading up from the promenade to the mezzanine story where the central space has been used for the projection, rewind and generator rooms where all the latest and best apparatus for showing the pictures will be found. The ladies' parlor, the men's smoking room, manager's office and ushers' room are also on this floor. The lounges provided for the ladies' and men open off into the auditorium with arched openings leading to ornamental balconies which provide an exceptional view of the screen and theatre. Care has been taken, by a study of sight lines and the elimination of all columns, to give everyone in the auditorium a clear and unobstructed view of the stage.

Great attention has also been given to the heating and ventilating of the auditorium so as to insure proper and comfortable conditions of the atmosphere for the patrons.

In the sides of the stage is located the supply fans and hot air ducts through which the heated air is introduced into the auditorium by means of registers of perforated plaster in the side walls. There is also in the basement the musicians' room, the boiler room and coal room.

The projection room, in charge of Julius Wetzler, is equipped with three Simplex machines, two Hertner generators (double 125), two Walsh curtain controls, a Brenkert double dissolver and Bausch and Lomb cinaphore lens. Howell's Cine Equipment Co. did the installation work.

Roofing and sheet metal material were installed by Sobel and Krauss, ornamental plastering by the Architectural Plastering Co., and electrical equipment by the Edwards Electrical Construction Co. Display frames by Markendorff, electric signs by Strauss, chairs by American Seating Co. and organ by the Moller Organ Co.

Instruments Ltd. to Distribute Ross F 2.4 Lens

Sole distribution throughout the United States and Canada for Ross F 2.4 projection lens, an important British mechanical development for the stereoscopic presentation of moving pictures, has been secured by Instruments, Limited, 240 Sparks street, Ottawa, Ontario, according to announcement by A. J. Ames, managing director of the company.

The first installation of the Ross lens was arranged by Donat Paquin for the Laurier Theatre, Hull, Quebec, while subsequent installations in Canada have been made by Manager Don Stapleton of the Centre Theatre, Ottawa, P. J. Nolan for the Rex Theatre and also in the Columbia Theatre, Ottawa. The new lens has made a distinct impression.

Files Plans for New Theatre in St. Louis

Plans for a $1,000,000 theatre and apartment building to be erected at Gravois and Ellenwood avennes, St. Louis, Mo. have been placed before the St. Louis Board of Aldermen by Rupert & Levine, Chicago architects. The owners desire the vacation of an alley to permit the erection of the house.

The new theatre will seat 3,800 and front 137 feet on Gravois avenue by 169 feet on Ellenwood. Six hundred feet of land nearby has been obtained for the apartment.

Reuben Levine of Chicago is the owner of the new project. He has stated that St Louis theatre men will handle the theatre when it is completed.

Chicago to Have New Four Thousand Seat House

A company headed by Andrew Karzas plans to erect a great motion picture theatre at 79th and Cottage Grove Avenue. Plans for the house which will seat in the neighborhood of 4 000 persons, are practically complete and construction work will start immediately, according to those interested in the new house.

Plans Are Filed for New Buffalo Theatre

Plans have been filed with the Bureau of Buildings in Buffalo by the Farber & Yavno Holding company for a new motion picture theatre to be erected at 2275-2285 Genesee street. The house will cost $30,000.

Inquiries and Comments

Change-Over Troubles

A POINT which apparently receives but little attention on the part of the average projectionist is that of changeovers. It seems to be taken more or less as a matter of fact, yet nothing is more important to a smooth presentation than a changeover which cannot be detected as such on the screen by the average person.

The annoyance and irritation caused by a blank screen, or a dark screen, or an "End of Reel 5" marker, or anything else that indicates the projectionist is either lazy, indifferent, or on a "visiting" trip from the side of the warming-up projector where he belongs is seldom brought to the attention of the House Manager by the patrons but the fact remains that such interruptions in the thread of the story that is being woven on the screen tend to utterly dispel the illusion of reality which the producer has attempted to create and furthermore tend to result in anti-climaxes.

In view of the fact that this practice of making sloppy changeovers is unwarranted and really finds little to excuse it, the duty of the projectionist clearly lies in drilling himself so as to attain perfection in this point.

Evidently, J. G. Ashenfelter, Bridge Theatre, Petersburg, W. Va., feels the same as we do about the matter since he is evidently straining effort toward securing changeovers which the most practiced eye would have difficulty in observing.

Read for yourself.

"Dear Sir:—

"Ever since the installation of two projectors in this theatre, I have had trouble making changeovers because I could not get them smooth enough to be unnoticed by the average spectator.

"The first method that I used was to run a string from the handle of the dowser on one projector to the trigger that drops the dowser on the other projector, and vice versa, so that when I raise one dowser, the other is automatically dropped, but this did not seem to give the right effect. Oftimes there was slight margin of blank screen between the dropping of one dowser and the raising of the other. Again, the string would stretch when least expected, and both dowsers would be raised at the same time and the result would be a double picture, a sort of lap-dissolve on the screen for a fraction of a second until I would savagely jerk the string again, sometimes breaking it.

New Method

"The second method, which is more effective in a way which I just discovered the other day, is to fade one projector "out" and the other "in." This involved having the dowser raised on projector A and the lamp heated up, not full; but at about 8 amperes (What kind of a lamp is this? Ordinary arc, reflector arc, or Mazda?—Ed) and when the time for the changeover came, the man at projector B would throw the regulator handle back (Sounds like Mazda—Ed.) and projector A would be started and after the fire-shutter had raised the lamp would be brought on full.

"This appears to me to have at least one disadvantage. It takes lamp B too long to die down entirely to a point where projector A can begin to function and when projector A is started, the lamp has already been heated up to a point where the plainer part of the picture is discernible on the screen. Instead of "fading" in from nothing at all, this makes the white part of the picture appear on the screen in a dull red color.

"The only solution at which I can arrive, is for the various exchanges to put a four-foot fade-out trailer on the end of each reel, and a four-foot fade-in leader on the beginning of each reel after Reel 1.

"I would appreciate hearing your views on this subject, also the opinions of other projectionists."

Something Wrong

From the appearance of the above letter which is printed with no changes whatever in its construction or wording, Friend Ashenfelter appears to be a pretty intelligent sort of fellow. Be that as it may we have been trying to dope out just what sort of a set-up he is using. Mention of the regulator handle and to the "trigger" of the dowser seems to brand it as Mazda, so we will work on that assumption.

We had always thought that the changeover rigging for this outfit worked out pretty good, at least we have heard no complaints concerning it so had assumed that everything was "Jake." Are you sure, Friend Ashenfelter, that the jamming you mention is not being caused by bent "trigger" handles or the dowsers? Such would seem to be the case.

Furthermore, as for the string stretching, why that, we would say is purely a matter of choosing a string that won't stretch to the extent of refusing to work the dowsers. Heavy fish-line, about the size of light mason's twine we should think would be about the thing to use.

When nicely adjusted and balanced, the method of dowser control recommended for Mazda gives complete satisfaction and can be made to be quick and positive in action.

Dissolving Effect

Such a method of changing over abruptly from one reel to the next, however does not give the finished touch to the presentation. In other words it lacks the Master's touch which is a distingnishing characteristic of the work of all artists.

It might be mentioned in passing that if the reel in one projector is allowed to exhaust itself before the changeover period the result will be a "blank" screen, no matter what changeover method is used.

As for the dissolving effect, why that is a step in the right direction but the way you go at it, Friend Ashenfelter, leaves much to be desired.

Cutting down the intensity on one lamp while raising the screen intensity on the second lamp is the proper thing to do but this effect should not be secured by actually reducing the current flowing, through the lamps.

If this is done, as you have attempetd to do, the natural result will be a very sloppy dissolving effect caused by the lag in lighting the filament up or cooling it off after the current has been turned on or off.

The right way to go about it is to leave both lamps burning full brightness and then place an iris diaphragm in each optic system. There are two locations in the optic systems where such a diaphragm could be placed to secure the desired results, viz., at the face of the collecting lens and over the mouth of the objective lens (toward screen).

An iris diaphragm placed at either of these locations would, if closed, gradually reduce the light intensity over the entire picture area and conversely, if opened would gradually raise the intensity over the entire picture area.

At the first location (next to collector lens) it would be difficult to secure dual control of the diaphragms and in the case of the Parabolic condenser on Mazda the diaphragm could not be used at all for lack of space.

The best location, therefore, would be at the mouth of the objective lens since then a metal rod joining both diaphragms could be fixed so as not to interfere with any other mechanism on the projectors.

When so placed, both lamps would be burning full brightness and the diaphragm on projector A would be wide open passing the full amount of the light whereas diaphragm B would be shut tight passing no light. The dowsers on both projectors would naturally be up and the fire-shutter on projector B would be down since this unit would not be working.

At the changeover period, selected beforehand from a cue sheet preferably, the motor switch on projector B would be closed and as soon as the fire-shutter had raised, the handle regulating both diaphragms would be pushed over thus opening B at the same time that A was being closed.

The result would be a dissolving or "vignetting" action which could be regulated as to speed merely by moving the control handle faster or slower.

As for the four foot leaders and tail pieces, Friend Ashenfelter, why that idea is as old as the hills and the only thing we can say about it is that every reel should have such a leader and tail piece attached to the ends of the film not only to assist in smooth changeovers but also to protect the film and aid in threading up the projector.

Million Dollar Theatre for Birmingham, Ala.

The Mudd and Colley Amusement Company, Inc., of Birmingham, Ala., announces this week the early erection of a million dollar motion picture house in that city.

The new theatre, not yet named, will be located on Second Avenue, North, in Birmingham, and covers a ground space of 75 feet by 140 feet deep. Contract for the erection was let recently and the work of dismantling the present buildings has been started.

The structure will be entirely of concrete and steel, and will incorporate as its prime features beauty, safety and comfort. All latest features in theatre design will be installed throughout, and the projection room will contain six projectors with the most modern equipment obtainable. A special ventilation system will be one of the important features.

The architect's plans call for a Spanish design interior of steel faced with granite finish terra cotta, with a polychrome terra cotta trim. The orchestra will seat 1,000, with a large balcony, mezzanine and lounges. Interior to be designed in the Adam period, the auditorium to be hung with silken damask panels, and ornamented with Grecian figures in old ivory against a background of old blue and gold. Stage proper will be fully equipped and of adequate dimensions to allow for the most elaborate presentations.

Orpheum Theatre, Altoona, Redecorated

Elaborate improvements have just been completed in the Orpheum Theatre, Altoona, Pa., a Wilmer & Vincent house devoted to the presentation of "the best pictures" and musical revues. Decorators have wrought costly changes beginning with the marquee over the sidewalk and extending through foyers, stairways, mezzinine gallery, the main auditorium, stages, boxes, walls, ceilings and floors.

New draperies have been installed and the aisles and floors laid with fine Wilton carpets in gorgeous red. New lights have been added and these finely set off the brilliant coloring effects produced by the new decorations.

The management has also installed a new pipe organ. It has all the traps and combinations

Louis A. Vaughn is the house manager while the theatre will be under the general direction of John F. Maloy, manager of the Wilmer & Vincent interests in Altoona.

Fred D. Burns Opens New House at Newport, Va.

Fred D. Burns recently opened his new Burns Theatre at Newport, Vt., replacing the old Premier formerly located on the same site.

Burns personally designed and supervised the construction of this theatre, which is fireproof throughout and complete in every detail, having a total of six hundred and fifty-six seats, five hundred and ten on the lower floor and one hundred and forty-six in the balcony. Seats built and placed by the local, Frost Veneer Seating Company, Newport, Vt.

The entrance is of Vermont granite and lobby decorations are finished with genuine South American walnut. The entire theatre and lobby are lighted throughout with orange tinted lights insuring quietness and comfort to all patrons.

New Willow Theatre at Willimansett Opened

Frank H. Wotton, formerly of the Park Theatre at Lebanon, N. H., has opened the New Willow theatre at Willimansett, Mass., which he has leased from the owner and builder, Mr. Reardon, local builder and contractor.

The Willow theatre is one of the most pretentious, fireproof and up-to-date theatres in this section of Massachusetts. Having 781 seats on one floor, the ceiling is thirty feet from the floor, insuring good ventilation and heating which is of the blower type, and complete changing of air every three minutes.

Suitable arrangements have been made for six piece orchestra and the policy of the theatre will be to show straight pictures of the very best.

New Comerford House for West Scranton, Penn.

Details have been announced concerning the plans for the new West Side Theatre, in West Scranton, upon which construction work has been begun by the Comerford Amusement Company. The contractors are Breig Brothers, and the estimated cost is $300,000. It will require about a year to complete the building which will cover a plot on North Main Avenue, 200 by 116 feet.

It will be a three-story building of brick and stone. A store room will be placed on either side of the lobby on the first floor and the two upper floors will be devoted to apartments. The auditorium will seat 2,000 and will be equipped with a stage, 80 by 30 feet, so that it will be possible to offer vaudeville and legitimate attractions, in addition to motion pictures, if at any time it is desired to do so.

Feldman to Build Theatre in Boston, Mass.

Mr. Feldman plans to erect a theatre on Broadway, Everett square, between Norwood and Church streets where he has already started erection of a business block. The plans call for converting two of the stores in the block into a theatre entrance and the auditorium will be located in the rear of the block, with seating capacity of about 1,500. Feldman plans to lease the theatre.

study can make them. The curve of the seats is shallow and the screen is designed to give an undistorted effect from any seat in the theatre. The mezzanine boxes are on a level with the projection booth, but it is doubtful if many patrons will ever discover the location of the booth, which is well under the balcony and so placed that the lens is directly opposite the center of the screen, doing away with any distortion resulting from projection from the usual high angle. The booth is so located that no patron of the house will be obliged to look across the beam of light to view the picture.

A great dome, done in warm blue, touched with points of gold resembling stars, and with a gold sunburst in the center, will be the source of the concealed lighting. During the overture and other orchestral numbers, five 600-candle power lights will play on the orchestra. The sides of the auditorium have been framed with twelve great glass panels with glossy black backing, copies of the famous black mirrors of Versailles. The stage is said to be one of the highest stages of any theatre in the world.

Earl F. Crabb will be general manager of the theatre and he will have three department heads serving under his direction. One will be John Murray Anderson, producer of the first "Greenwich Village Follies," who will have the stage production part of the program. This will be an innovation to Boston and is arranged with much elasticity so that Mr. Anderson may have a wide variety of selection, ranging from a ballet to a special musical program or playlet.

Jeff Lazarus has been chosen as promotion and publicity director. Selection of the third department head who will have charge of the music, has not been made.

Paramount Managers' Class Visits Nicholas Power Company Plant

THE Paramount Managers' School spent three and a half hours in the Nicholas Power plant, N. Y. City, on October 6th as one of the sessions in the course which the students of this school are taking. The class is in charge of John F. Barry, director of the school, who with Harry Rubin, Chief Projectionist of the Rivoli, Rialto and Criterion theatres, were welcomed by P. A. McGuire, Advertising Manager of the Nicholas Power Company.

McGuire said that he had expected Bart F. Greene, Chief Examiner for electricity and moving picture licenses in the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, City of New York, to address the class, but Greene was unable to be present. Mr. McGuire stated that he had been authorized by Greene to make the following statement: "Protection of audiences by proper enforcement of the law in the motion picture theatres of the City of New York is the duty of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. It is our duty to see that standard equipment is used, properly installed, maintained and placed in charge of competent projectionists. We are required to regularly inspect the equipment after installation and carefully examine all applicants for licenses to operate motion picture machines in New York City.

The class was divided into two groups, and one, under A. R. Schulze, of the Engineering Department of the Nicholas Power Company, were shown early models of Power's Edison, Lubin, Selig, Gaumont, and other projectors used in the formative period of the motion picture industry.

The other group under Mr. Wrede, of the Repair Department, were shown the projection room with three latest type Power's Projectors and three different modern types of lamps, Power's High Intensity, Power's Incandescent and Powerlite Low Intensity Reflector Arc.

After both groups had been shown the models and the projection room, they returned to the auditorium of the Power's testing laboratory and Mr. Schulze explained the special features of Power's Projectors. The members of the class took great interest in Schulze's talk and considerable discussion followed.

Joseph Abrams, who has been installation man for the Nicholas Power Company for nearly fifteen years, then gave a demonstration of the three types of illuminants, High Intensity, Incandescent and Low Intensity, which were shown successively on the screen and then all three at the same time. This was accomplished by superimposing the three lights upon each other but with a few inches of each extending on the side from the others so that the contrasting effect was clearly shown.

After this demonstration by Abrams and explanations by Schulze, Wrede delivered a very interesting talk on repairs and replacements and pointed out the importance of having emergency parts on hand in the projection room. The class was also supplied with an article written by Wrede which gave a list of the parts which should be carried on hand for Power's Projectors.

Studio at Trenton, Ontario, which combines fully equipped stage and laboratories. It is operated by Province of Ontario Pictures under Col. W. H. Price, K. C., provincial treasurer. G. E. Patton is the Director.

At the conclusion of Wrede's talk the class was divided into three groups, one under Schulze, one under Wrede, and one under Wickersheimer, Chief Inspector of the Nicholas Power Company, and were taken through the Power's factory. They were shown how large an equipment it takes to properly and efficiently manufacture a modern motion picture projector and, also, the exactness of the operations, measurements and inspection which enter into the making of Power's parts. In the various departments the groups stopped to watch the assembling of more important parts of the projector and were given explanations which would assist them in understanding the necessity for carefully looking after these particular parts.

The members of the Paramount Managers' School were deeply interested in all that was shown and told to them and asked many questions. Barry and Rubin expressed themselves as being very well pleased with their visit.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"An Exchange of Wives"—M-G-M, Capitol, N. Y.

Graphic: "'An Exchange of Wives' is just as hectic as the title suggests. No French farce that ever found its way from the Place de Theatre to the Gay White Way ever afforded more thrills. The treatment is extremely modern and there are several new and highly amusing angles. The clever titles add not a little to the fun. How Eleanor Boardman arranges the exchange of wives and later straightens out the tangle forms the plot of the highly amusing and well directed comedy."

American: "'Exchange of Wives' is spicy, daring and skates along the edge of suggestion as far as it dares and still keep within censorial bounds." It amuses those who are married and helps those who are single to stay that way and be thankful. Lew Cody does an effective bit of comedy in his moments of trying to square himself with his wife. 'Exchange of Wives' is well done. Hobart Henley has seen to that by doing a very good directorial job."

Journal: "It's an amusing comedy. Cody is a great comedian, and Eleanor Boardman does good work."

Times: "Eleanor Boardman is attractive and capable as Margaret. Renee Adoree is efficient as the constant flirt. Lew Cody is at ease as John and Creighton Hale is effective as Victor.

"Go Straight"—Schulberg, Broadway, N. Y.

American: "If you get a kick out of crook melodrama, 'Go Straight' is your meat. You will have a feast and you will get the same excitement out of the suspense in this picture that you get out of reading a thrilling detective yarn."

Journal: "You'll enjoy it. Gladys Hulette does good work and Moore and the rest are well cast."

Daily News: "A well knit colorful story with romantic Hollywood helping along the narrative. It's told in a clean, straightforward, simple style. Yes 'Go Straight' is first rate. And it goes great."

Alfred Santell, director of "Seven Wives of Bluebeard" for First National.

Fritz Lang, director of "Siegfried," the Ufa production.

Daily Mirror: "Director Frank O'Connor has checked in a crackerjack crook picture. 'Go Straight' unreels lively drama."

Telegraph: "A good, swiftly moving crook melodrama—well acted and logically developed. One of the most convincing stories of crook reformation yet presented on the screen."

Evening World: "If you enjoy a lively and intelligently presented crook play, 'Go Straight' is well worth seeing."

"Sally of the Sawdust"—United Artists. Empire, London, Eng.

Star: "'Sally of the Sawdust' makes you laugh with tears in your eyes. W. C. Fields is the discovery of the year."

Standard: "Dashes of broad comedy, some of it as full-blooded as the old Chaplin-Keystone vintage."

Chronicle: "A recklessly comic picture, lit with splendid humor."

Sunday Herald: "D. W. Griffith does, somehow, contrive to make people cry, and then make them laugh, and he does both in 'Sally of the Sawdust.'"

Referee: "Griffith has given us a genuine comedy, sentimental at times as only Griffith can be, and full of humor that is human."

News of World: "A film that will take a lot of beating. A real honest-to-goodness story with rich humor at every turn."

Observer: "Its humor is good and plentiful."

Express: "Griffith is a wizard of the humanities, and 'Sally of the Sawdust' is as clean and as refreshing as a gale from the sea."

Graphic: "'Sally' will rule the hearts of London picture-goers while she is with us."

Daily Chronicle: "The most satisfying film entertainment from Mr. Griffith since he gave us 'Way Down East.'"

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists, Marble Arch, London

Chronicle: "Mary Pickford in 'Little Annie Rooney' is a sheer joy."

Sketch: "From near the start to the finish the audience has nothing to do but laugh."

Times: "A short pause in the middle of 'Little Annie Rooney' would be useful to allow the spectators to catch breath before being plunged from one series of emotions into another."

Telegraph: "Mary's exploits with foot and fist provoke prolonged and boisterous merriment."

Star: "A quaint mixture of fun and pathos that was received with a succession of chuckles and laughs that fully demonstrated the audience's enjoyment of Mary Pickford's tomboy pranks."

Gazette: "Good entertainment in which 'The World's Sweetheart' repeats those delightful performances of tomboy exuberance."

Standard: "Mary Pickford makes a wonderful tomboy still."

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists, Stanley, Phila.

Daily News: "'Mary Pickford's 'Little Annie Rooney' is charming. 'Our Mary' is a tomboy hoyden, with more than her share of Irish deviltry, and she leads her 'gang' through reels and reels of fights over and through back fences."

Public Ledger: "Mary Pickford has given us one of her old-time pictures. She has taken the hearts of the children again by storm. They laughed and applauded and sobbed. Neither were the children the only ones who laughed and applauded and whom we saw in tears."

Evening Ledger: "'Little Annie Rooney' is a good picture, and very much the type of picture Mary Pickford used to make. It has a remarkably dramatic story, with the humor of human nature allowed to be human naturally. There is bonafide thrill and excitement, and plenty of punch, especially as the film nears its climax. There is good acting in nearly every role."

Bulletin: "Annie Rooney's gang of small companions in Mary Pickford's 'Little Annie Rooney' is humorous. It is perhaps the greatest of this star's ability to act as a child with these children and she fulfills the requirements beautifully."

Inquirer: "'Our Mary' is just as charmingly youthful as she was a few years ago. 'Little Annie Rooney' is in all ways a charming picture."

"Keeping of Bees"—F. B. O., American, Salt Lake

News: "Salt Lake citizens are asked this week to give the first verdict on 'The Keeper of the Bees,' a picture destined to become known over the world. For those who love the Gene Stratton-Porter stories, which means millions, it is sufficient recommendation to say from a preview that what the author put in the book, Mr. Meehan and the cast have put in the picture—a notable achievement. How many of the readers of this book or others by the same author will be able to say definitely wherein lies the appeal or exactly what it was that brought the whimsical smile or the lump to the throat? Yet this intangible charm will carry the picture to the hearts of theatre goers."

Telegram: "Salt Lake City turned out to enjoy the world's premier yesterday at the American Theatre, and to honor J. Leo Meehan, former local newspaper man, who directed Gene Stratton-Porter's great novel 'The Keeper of the Bees.' The charm of the author has been preserved by Director Meehan in the screen version. Against the backgrounds of Southern California, a story more dramatic than the usual Gene Stratton-Porter tale moves smoothly to its climax."

Tribune: "'The Keeper of the Bees,' should rate high in the popular estimation. The picture has just enough heart appeal to make it a success. Acting of high grade caliber and pleasing photography all contribute to make it an entirely meritorious production. Most of the scenes were taken at Santa Barbara just previous to the earthquake. The ocean and the rugged beach do much to enhance the picture. Coupled with the well planned and well done photography, the picture was directed by J. Leo Meehan, former Salt Lake newspaper man, and son-in-law of Mrs. Porter. Under his direction, the scenario has not deviated from the book."

George E. Marshall, supervisor of Fox comedy productions.

KINOGRAMS WINS THE WORLD'S SERIES

As far as the news reels are concerned

Kinograms won every race to the screens of Pittsburgh and Washington during the world's series baseball games

Kinograms got out four specials --- and was first in the theatres with all four

Every special was packed full of news and pictorial values --- Kinograms has put over many a scoop,

But

THIS WAS A LANDSLIDE OF SCOOPS!!

They cost Kinograms a lot of money, but not one extra cent to the exhibitor

That's Kinograms' Service!

8,000 Theatres Are Showing

A smashing record! With 8,000 theatres in the United States and Canada showing Educational Pictures this week, Educational Pictures set a mark that has seldom if ever been touched by any other program of pictures—the finest possible testimonial to the entertainment quality and box-office value of these great Short Subjects.

Educational Pictures This Week

Practically every one of America's Big Theatres is included in the great exchange city houses named on these pages and in the other key-city first-runs that have booked Educational Pictures this week. Almost every other theatre of any consequence in the land is also on the list of bookings. No greater indorsement could possibly be given to any company's product.

What's The Matter With The Movies?

Nothing. Absolutely not a darned thing—Provided You Get The Right Ones!

If you get suggestive pictures and help to stir up censorship there's a lot the matter with the movies. If you get the all-star-no-story pictures it's your own fault. But—

If you get Reginald Denny in "Where Was I?" and "California Straight Ahead" and "What Happened to Jones", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Hoot Gibson in "The Calgary Stampede", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get House Peters in "The Storm Breaker", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Mary Philbin in "Stella Maris" (title to be changed) there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Louise Dresser in "The Goose Woman", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Laura LaPlante in "The Teaser", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

MATTER
THE MOVIES?"

Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corp.)

If you get Virginia Valli, Eugene O'Brien and Mary Alden in "Siege" there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Pat O'Malley and May McAv[illegible] in "My Old Dutch" (title to be changed) there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Alice Joyce and Clive Brook in "The Home Maker" there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Bert Lytell and Marian Nixon in "Sporting Life" there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

If you get Helene Chadwick and William Russell in "The Still Alarm", there will be Nothing The Matter With Your Movies.

And so on, and on, and on with the whole Universal Second White List. It's white all through; it's sold on a white contract. This is what is putting Universal miles ahead of all others.

You don't have to apologize when you show Universal pictures. You'll never have to blush for shame, but you'll give your people every possible thrill and all possible "punch" and entertainment.

What's the matter with the movies? Not a blessed thing—if they're Universals!

Mercy"

GOOD, honest Melodrama is the BEST BOX OFFICE BET! An exciting story—thrills—heart-throbs—and a happy ending—never fail to "get over" with an audience. "WITHOUT MERCY" has all these sure-fire ingredients—and then some! There are plots and intrigues, gripping dramatic moments a real romance—all culminating in a startling climax that will pull an audience right out of their seats.

"BOUND TO APPEAL" SAY REVIEWERS

Variety says: "Its well ordered production, competent direction and acting make it an okeh feature bet."

Film Daily says: "Dramatic offering that builds to good climax and includes varied forms of suspense. Very well acted and nicely directed."

Motion Pictures Today says: "It is bound to appeal to the critical audiences who weary of constant facsimiles and desire newness and freshness in a plot. * * * And it will also hold its appeal for the masses, in that it abounds with action and intrigue."

THE KING OF THRILL-BLA

The Idol of American Youth From

Presented By Hunt Stromberg

THE real "American spirit" is the "spirit of the West." It is the spirit of "Young America"—virile, vibrant, adventurous and devil-may-care.

That's the spirit Harry Carey typifies on the screen — and that's why he's the idol of American youth — from eight to eighty.

Harry Carey, the screen's best loved cowboy, is famous for his broncho-bustin', square-shootin', reckless he-man type of characterizations that appeal to every healthy-minded movie fan. He is essentially the family favorite. Everybody, from seven-year-old Buddy to seventy-year-old Grandma, likes Carey. His pictures are clean, human and meaty with good old-fashioned thrills. The villain gets his just desserts and the hero wins the gal in Carey pictures.

An hour looking at a Carey picture is better than all the medicine in the world for that "tired feeling." Carey is the paprika in the movie bill-of-fare —he's the real "kick" in the screen cocktail.

Reason #6

the whole world wants to see

Gene Stratton-Porter's "The KEEPER OF THE BEES"

Biloxi, Miss., 9-4-25.

Film Booking Offices of America, Inc.,
723 Seventh Ave.,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We, the undersigned, would like to have you arrange to have "Keeper of the Bees" exhibited at the Strand Motion Picture Theatre, Biloxi, Miss as mentioned in your ad. in Mc. Call's Magazine.

Respectfully yours:

Mrs. R. C. Jewell, 619 E. Howard Ave., Biloxi.
(Mrs.) E. B. Morley, 545 E. Howard Ave., Biloxi.
(Miss) Blanche Morley
Mrs Justine McSwithaff
540 E Howard
Mrs G A Bowen
606 E Howard
Mrs. John Adams
434 Fayard St.
Mrs. Lilian Boyd.

P.S. If I had time to do so, I could procure a long list of names as everyone seems to want to see this picture.

Respectfully,

Mrs. Jewell.

HERE'S a sample of what's happening all over the U. S. A. Thousands upon thousands of people are writing in to F. B. O. asking and requesting the showing of "THE KEEPER OF THE BEES" in their various communities.

Read the P. S. on Mrs. Jewell's letter. If that don't convince you of the tremendous public demand for this latest and greatest Gene Stratton-Porter photodrama then we're not even going to try to convince you of anything.

With a reading public numbering more than 10,000,000 people, plus national advertising in McCall's for four solid months, plus huge nation-wide publicity and advertising by Doubleday Page & Co., publishers of the book, you've got a campaign that tops anything this season in publicity and exploitation.

Our giant press book shows you how to put it over. Ask for your copy at your nearest F. B. O. Exchange. Read that book. Study it. It's a gold mine of information and shows you how to put it over.

THE TALK

Have You Solved These Five Problems In Lighting Your Theatre?

YOU have five main problems to solve in planning your lighting and their effective solution means greater success to your theatre.

1. Lighting the front of your theatre to attract attention and dominate all surrounding displays.
2. Lighting your lobby to create an inviting atmosphere and to bring out your display announcements.
3. Lighting your foyer and lobby to enhance the decorative values of your furnishings.
4. Lighting your stage and auditorium to permit the play of color combinations and intensify gradations for effective stage presentations and musical accompaniments.
5. Special lighting touches here and there to bring out in relief any unusual architectural treatment and artistic features of your theatre.

These are problems that demand the attention of experts.

To all exhibitors who are interested in improving the lighting of their theatres Edison Lamp Works offers the free services of their staff of theatre lighting engineers.

These men will study your individual lighting requirements, make detailed recommendations and give you valuable information and advice pertaining to general lighting practice. Their services entail no obligation on your part.

Address your problems to the Lighting Service Department, Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, New Jersey.

Supplementary to their advisory services our engineers have prepared a booklet on Theatre Lighting that is full of valuable information and suggestions.

A copy of this booklet will be sent to you free on request.

One of the many amazing thrills about this amazing picture which are responsible for so many amazing reports from the "hard boiled" critics

A FEW OF WHICH WE REPRINT HERE . . . . .

May Tinee in Chicago Tribune:
"Here's one that is different and a thriller, too. 'The Lost World' is something for you to see."

W. Ward Marsh in Cleveland Plain Dealer:
". . . is an astounding photoplay."

Denver Post:
"No one should miss seeing 'The Lost World'."

Florence Lawrence in Los Angeles Examiner:
"No famed beauty or idol of the fans ever received greater attention than that bestowed by wondering and amazed crowds, as the parade of prehistoric animals marched across the screen."

A First

A. R. G. in Omaha Bee:

"They're packing 'em in at the Rialto. For certainly there is no other picture known to the screen like this one."

Wm. G. Stiegler in Cincinnati Times Star:

" 'The Lost World' is one of the most remarkable pictures ever screened."

Indianapolis Star:

" 'The Lost World' is a truly great picture and should not be missed by any who can beg, borrow or earn the necessary admission price."

Ruford Gordon Bennett
San Francisco Examiner:

" 'The Lost World' is perhaps the most unusual picture ever made."

Prunella Hall in Boston Post:

"It seems as if the millennium in film novelty has been reached. Full of amazing realities."

Kansas City Star:

"If there were more motion pictures like 'The Lost World'—the reviewer's lot would be a happy one."

Wilmington North Carolina Star:

"Thrilled by one of finest screen entertainments seen here in all screen history. A magnificent amazing and super-entertaining picture."

Chester B. Bahn,
Syracuse, N. Y. Telegram and Sunday American:

"The most remarkable and in some respects the greatest picture in the history of the screen drama. One of the pictures you cannot afford to miss."

Verne W. Bailey in Portland Oregon Journal:

"No picture, in many months, has so broken away from the humdrum routine of 'just another movie' as has 'The Lost World' which is packing crowds this week into the Liberty like sardines in a sardine tin."

Detroit Free Press:

"To those who are looking for something new in the world, a picture of thrills and romance, 'The Lost World' will prove a 100 per cent picture. One of the most unusual pictures ever presented."

George Gerhard in
New York Eve. World:

"No words short of stupendous and marvelous will measure up to a description of its scenes."

Waco Texas Times Herald:

"You will acclaim it as the miracle motion picture of all time. The screen's greatest sensation to date and there may never be another to equal it."

Fairmont West Virginia Times:

" 'The Lost World' is here! And what a sensation it has created. It is an amazing picture."

Dayton Ohio Journal:

" 'The Lost World' marks an epoch in screen achievements. Rises to front ranks among the triumphs of screen achievements."

Peoria Ill. Journal:

" 'The Lost World'—a picture you'll never forget."

Philadelphia Evening Bulletin:

A New Department

"Theatre Management" will be started in an early issue of

Motion Picture News

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has long held the position of the industry's first-run trade paper. The creation of the "Theatre Management" department is an extension of the service given by this paper ever since its inception—service that is recognized as indispensable to better theatres everywhere.

THIS department will be conducted by expert showmen. It will be practical in every sense of the word. It will contain material never before printed in a motion picture trade paper.

The inauguration of the "Theatre Management" department is in recognition of the fact that exhibition is rapidly growing in importance as a profession. The day of hit-or-miss methods in conducting the theatre is over. Theatre operation is now a definite business and, as such, it deserves a definite trade paper service along new lines.

Methods that have proved successful; new ideas from many sources; and, most important of all, the promotion of the theatre as a business institution second in importance to none—will be set forth in this regular weekly department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The theatre manager is in the key-position in the industry. His success in the operation of the individual house—no matter how large the chain—is the determining factor in the whole business life of the motion picture.

OUR FILMS

An Editorial

THE anti-American motion picture agitation in Europe, growing for some time, seems to be coming to a head. We are indebted to Mr. Ernest Fredman, editor of the British trade organ—The Film Renter and Moving Picture News—for an advance proof of his current editorial in which he says that the Americans have "only themselves to blame" for the Kontingent which he sees as the probable culmination of the "virulent campaign" about to be launched by the British lay press.

Mr. Fredman has, as he says, always championed in his country the American producer and distributor. He now says:

"Their policy in this country has been one of rapacious greed, and it is reaping its just reward. There has never been shown at any time the slightest sympathy towards the British film producing companies by any American distributing concern . . . All that we have had ad nauseam for the past five years is a succession of utterances from the leaders of the American industry mainly concerned with expressions of good will and constantly reiterated desires to take our pictures." Mr. Fredman deplores the inactivity of Will Hays and the lack of vision and business acumen of our leaders in general. Five years ago, he believes, something could have been done—namely, the marketing here of British pictures. Today, for lack of any reciprocity, the Kontingent System looms.

* * *

WELL, let us see.

To begin with, it is something of a relief to have the British Trade Press take off its gloves and talk bluntly. Nothing can be gained by smoothing over the question. And it is a momentous one—exceedingly so.

We disagree with Mr. Fredman as to the insincere utterances of Americans abroad. We, ourselves, have not been insincere in hoping that British pictures would be shown in American theatres. We do, however, agree that there has been a lack of vision in the matter. But that has been characteristic of the American film industry in many large respects—still is. It is too highly competitive, too infernally busy to see clearly its larger relations. What could have been done to build reciprocal film relations between America and Europe—done some years ago, we do not at the moment know. But at least we made no effort. That is true.

* * *

BUT to turn to the present situation.

First of all: we do not for the moment believe that Great Britain will impose a Kontingent upon American films.

For the simple reason that such a system is uneconomic—to an utter and preposterous degree.

A Kontingent is a radical and artificial trade barrier. Literally, the long arm of a government obtrudes in a crisis, and for radical reasons in radical times, turns upside down the good sound economic basis upon which all trade is, and only can be, established.

Let us not fool ourselves about a Kontingent. There is one in Germany today. It is controlled by the Ufa which in turn is owned by the Deutches Bank, which in turn is owned by the German government. If the latter—the German government—is determined to build up a film monopoly—at any cost, that is the German government's privilege. And its consequences upon German trade and Germany's financial and commercial relations with other countries remain to be seen. But we would not cite it as a just and successful and economic measure operating in the interests of mutual trade relations and an international trade balance.

Suppose the United States were to put a Kontingent system upon German made toys.

A Kontingent is not a tariff restriction. Far from it. That is quite another matter. Even so, a free trade country hesitates a long time before excepting certain goods for tariff protection. But what can be said of a Kontingent—an artificial trade barrier? Great Britain is very largely an exporting nation. We understand that at least three quarters of her annual business turnover is in export. Would she risk a trade war—a vast trade war, with a film Kontingent? We judge not. We can readily understand why Great Britain wants British pictures in the theatres of the world; but we do not for an instant believe that the agitation against American films in the British lay and trade press represents the mind of the British government when the agitation advocates the establishment of a Kontingent.

* * *

NOW as to the matter of fairness. We are accused of a lack of sympathy toward British production interests.

Let us be fair about this matter of fairness in trade. Does sympathy exist at all with any kind of goods involved in international trade relations? Are they not governed altogether by economic laws, by the status of supply and demand? In other words, by straight business consideration?

Take the rubber situation. The American film industry is a paltry affair as compared with the British rubber monopoly. The United States, I believe, uses about 75 per cent. of the world's crop of crude rubber. Last year our manufacturers paid as low as 20 cents a pound to the British control. This year the price fluctuates as high as $1.20, with the result that this country will send several hundred millions of dollars to Great Britain above last year's rubber bill. It is wrong, possibly, to call this "rapacious greed." But at least, no sympathy is given nor asked for. I note that one American manufacturer proposes to get his rubber in Liberia. That sounds like commendable enterprise.

AND EUROPE

By William A. Johnston

AS a matter of fact, is there any British sympathy toward American goods? I spent a year in London as an advertising man, and saw many and many an American salesman go home baffled and beaten by the opposition to his goods—or to his sales methods. I saw one American product go finally over the top, but only because a large and well conducted advertising campaign to the public at length convinced the British housekeeper to insist that the British dealer stock up with this American made article. If an American manufacturer today tried to replace Bovril with an article of American make, he certainly could hope for no success unless he matched the other not merely in quality but with very large resources, chief among them a great advertising campaign to the trade and public.

Which brings us to the root of the matter—the public: the British public and the American public.

How can the American distributor force British films upon the American public, if the American public prefers American films? (In this connection, it is to be noted that the non-advertised American film cannot compete over here with those well advertised to the public.)

And why do 4,000 British picture theatres thrive—we hear they do thrive—on American pictures, if the latter are so unpopular with the British public as some British newspapers assert?

* * *

WE are not minded to present a brief here for American pictures. In the blind hurry of our industry here many—too many pictures are turned out without regard or respect to foreign taste, traditions, etc. They often offend; and there is no excuse for this. It is to be said, however, that pains are now being taken to remedy this fault, and possibly and shortly the day will come when no one can claim that our films give any offence to foreign audiences. It is also to be said that the present day American studio resources are such that there is no excuse for a bad picture and, already, if the resources do slip, the companies can and do throw these mistakes into the scrap heap (one American company this year scrapped eight productions, the total cost of which was well over a million dollars; it proved a good business move.)

But we do have a lot of mediocre product—too much. This market does not want it any more than the British market wants it. I do not defend the product, but I do point out that the only way these pictures can be profitably marketed is through block sales along with better product. Does Great Britain expect the American distributor to shelve his own mediocre merchandise to make way for pictures certainly no better—or at least no better for our American market?

Now I realize that this latter appraisal of British pictures is apt to raise a storm of protest. Who is to say that British pictures are not as good as American? I do not care to raise the question here. So I make the amendment: "good for the American market."

* * *

LET us see what British pictures have done here—by the box-office reports. I have before me a list of twelve distributed here by our National Distributors (including United Artists and Metro-Goldwyn) since 1921. Only one shows box-office success—"Woman to Woman," featuring Betty Compson. "The Bohemian Girl" did fairly well. But, if these pictures had been made in America (with the same casts and direction) by independent producers, I question if they would have been as fortunate in finding national distribution.

We make no effort here to foster our own independent producers (I mean, of course, producers who do not own a national distributing machine). They have a tough time with our industrial machine. Scores of them—able and well financed, have come and gone in the past ten years. Right now they outnumber the British producers; they have, at call, the best of American studio facilities; they use our popular players. Yet, aside from those who use the State Rights market—and then back their wares for all they are worth, and aside from a very, very few good enough to land a contract with a big distributor, they take the chance of either no distribution at all or else one almost certain not to return negative cost. Famous Players, Fox, Metro-Goldwyn, Universal, Warners make the pictures they distribute. United Artists include only big stars and producers. First National alone has kept the door open to the best efforts of the independent producers; and of late this firm, too, has entered heavily into production.

Perhaps this is all wrong; without vision, business acumen, liberality, sympathy. Granted: but at least the blow—the business blow, has fallen most heavily by far upon the American producer, not upon the European. He is the one who has felt the grinding of the wheels of industrial development.

* * *

IN conclusion:

The British film industry, at a rough guess, is composed 90 per cent. of exhibitors, seven per cent. of renters, three per cent. of producers. The 90 per cent. part of the British market has a huge investment in brick and mortar which, in turn, has been rendered profitable by the 90 per cent. booking of American pictures. These pictures helped earn the theatre profits. And these pictures, in turn, were forthcoming from the highly speculative investment of millions upon millions of American capital. This industry is young. Its tremendous stride, its hold upon the world public today, came straight from American producing enterprise—and very little elsewhere. Now the three per cent. of the British industry ask the government to enact restrictive measures against the importation of American pictures for 4,000 British theatres.

Speaking Editorially

THE sales map is being charted today as never before. Distribution heads in New York are really the commanders of field armies. They do not confine themselves to mere staff work but go out, at frequent intervals, into the trenches. Talk with one of these commanders and you gain a lot of information—in detail—about film conditions in this city and that—all interesting and important, too. Which reminds us of a chat this week with Colvin Brown, sales generalissimo for F. B. O. Facts, figures and conditions at his finger-tips; direct shooting at the mark—and a very clear analysis of the field as it actually is, with particular application to F. B. O., of course—featured his comment.

* * *

AMONG the coming events marked on our calendar is the Fifteenth Anniversary Dinner of Pathe News to be held at the Hotel Plaza, New York, in November. Vice-President Dawes will be the guest of honor, and there will be a large attendance from official Washington. Looks like a red-letter evening in which the whole industry will participate with great interest and pleasure.

* * *

HARRY WARNER makes some pointed remarks elsewhere in this issue on the subject of too much star-play and not enough team-play in the studios on the part of stars and directors. He comes right out with a lot of things. A sensational statement, in a way; sensational and timely.

* * *

SECRETARY MELLON advocates retaining the tax on theatre admissions. This is rather a surprise, as it had been understood that the Secretary was in favor of abolishing all the nuisance taxes. There is strong sentiment in Congress, however, for repeal of the taxes. Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican Leader of the House, is for repeal, as noted exclusively in a recent issue.

* * *

TO THE imposing list of picture palaces has been added the Famous Players-Balaban & Katz theatre in Boston—the Metropolitan, which opened recently. One of the great houses of the country, it is the first to come conspicuously under the new Paramount-B. & K. arrangement and, for that reason, the premiere has a double interest. A large party of executives and others went from New York to attend. Incidentally, the Metropolitan puts on an elaborate revue and pageant staged by John Murray Anderson, an expert in this line. Theatre and performance are topnotch in every respect. Surely, we have come a long way from the day of the store-show on the side-street.

* * *

LUNCHEONS in honor of the great of the picture industry are commonplace incidents in the lives of trade paper scribes, and speeches by those who really have a right to talk, are no longer novelties.

But we listened to Ernst Lubitsch as the honor guest at a luncheon given at the Lane Park by Warner Brothers, last Friday, with deep interest.

Mr. Lubitsch, responding to an invitation by Toastmaster Nathan Burkan, did not launch into high-flown rhetoric about his future plans or explain in detail his ideas concerning picture-making.

He just thanked the assembled guests for being present and promised to make the best pictures he knew how. Somehow the sincerity of the speaker, rather than the words spoken, made you feel that Lubitsch's "good as he knew how" will be quite enough.

It was a sensible speech and an honest one. It boosted this eminent director's stock with us a lot, and we've thought mighty well of him ever since he became a factor in American production.

Our Films in Europe

It is our opinion that some very clear thinking and weighing of facts should be done on this very large economic situation—done with vision, impartiality and business acumen, and done by the trade on each side of the water, not forgetting by any means the British exhibitor

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

BROADWAY PRESENTS—

AMONG the new films on Broadway this week, Annie Rooney, with Mary Pickford, United Artists, at the Mark Strand; "The Vanishing American," Paramount's great Indian epic, at the Criterion, and the same company's "Flower of Night," starring Pola Negri, at the Rivoli; occupy front rank as entertainment factors.

Miss Pickford returns to the sort of role that made her famous in a fine portrayal of a twelve-year old youngster on New York's East Side, leader of a kid gang. No hint of maturity detracts from the childish grace of her performance. Annie Rooney shines forth as a genuine slum product, ready for fight or sacrifice, mischievious and tender by turns, but always a real kid. The story combines comedy, melodrama and pathos, hokum stuff if you like, but just the sort of picture which should have a tremendous appeal to the masses, with Our Mary as they used to know her.

"The Vanishing American" registers as an extraordinarily colorful and historically vivid spectacle, with a well sustained note of human interest sounding through the production. It establishes a strong plea for the Red Man, its scenic beauty is marvelous, and the romantic angle well taken care of. From the time of the cliff dwellers up to the present the picture sweeps on in a succession of thrilling sequences, shown against magnificient backgrounds, a miracle of fine camera technique. The acting is at all times excellent, with the work of Lois Wilson, Richard Wilson, Richard Dix, Noah Beery and Malcolm McGregor standing out prominently.

Pola Negri in "Flower of Night" gives a wonderfully fine dramatic performance in the leading role. The part of the young Spanish-Mexican girl is exactly suited to the star's tempestuous, forceful style of acting, she is passionate and wistfully appealing, according as the situation demands, and never strikes a false or jarring chord

The first photo of Gilda Gray as she will appear in "Aloma of the South Seas" (Paramount), her first starring picture under her contract with that company.

Rex Lease, who plays a leading role in "The Last Edition" (F. B. O.), Emory Johnson's story of newspaper life, and is said to show considerable promise.

Another of Universal's See America First beauty contest winners, Dorothy Gulliver of Salt Lake City, who will be sent to Universal City on a six months' contract.

Mary Astor and Jockey Fred Steele, during the filming of scenes for "The Scarlet Saint" (First National) at the famed Empire race track recently.

The snappiest Hula dance we've seen to date is that furnished here by Bonnie Barrett, in "Baby Be Good," an Educational-Juvenile comedy. Bonnie, at the ripe age of four, has nearly that many years of screen experience behind her, and is a pianist, diver, dancer, etc., or what have you?

Jeanie Macpherson, scenarist for Cecil B. De Mille, who is in New York for a conference with officials of Producers Distributing corporation on stories.

Samuel Goldwyn, now producing for United Artists, and his wife, formerly Frances Howard, were seen off by a distinguished crew at the station on their recent departure for New York, including George Fitzmaurice, Marion Davies and Henry King.

throughout the feature. As a matter of fact, Miss Negri is the entire show, in a sense, for the story, which deals with the stormy days in California when the Vigilantes ruled, while colorful and alive with thrills, would lose fifty-per cent of its drawing power with the clever Polish actress out of the cast. Especial attention has been paid to correct detail regarding th ecostume and manners of the period and the scenes depicting Old San Francisco are remarkably well handled.

A BUCK WINS FRESH LAURELS

AT a recent Fox projection room showing the reviewers were given a decided surprise, when Buck Jones, as the hero of "Lazybones" won fresh screen laurels by giving a finely sympathetic portrayal of a small-town youth, an entirely different sort of role from any in which he has previously appeared. We are used to Buck as a dare-devil rider, handy with a gun and ever performing deeds of valor, but this performance opened up a vista of new ideas concerning the star's talents. It establishes him as an actor of rare versatility, and one can expect great things from him in the future.

The picture, with its splendidly developed rural atmosphere proved a real knockout. Clean, wholesome sentiment, with the self-sacrifice angle prominent, was constantly in evidence. There was just one thrill, when Lazybones, then a soldier in the A. E. F., falls asleep and awakens suddenly to take a hand in repulsing a Hun attack. You got a glimpse of the old fighting Buck on that occasion, but the narrative switched quickly back to the even tenor of life in the hero's home-town. A film with undeniable audience appeal, the admirers of Buck Jones will surely respond favorably to the star's impressive work amid heretofore unfamiliar surroundings.

THE PARAMOUNT PEPPERS PERFORM

THE Belvedere room at the Hotel Astor, New York, was the setting for a peppy occasion on Wednesday night, when more than four hundred members (note the social significance of that "four hundred") of the Paramount Pep Club foregathered for the installation in office of Palmer Hall Stilson as president and Vincent Trotta as vice-president.

A well deserved tribute was paid to Harold B. Franklin when the club presented the director of Paramount theatres with a silver token signifying his appointment as honorary vice-president of the Pep Club. The only others on whom this has been bestowed are Jesse L. Lasky, Sidney R. Kent, Elek J. Ludvigh and Emil E. Shauer.

Arthur J. Dunne is the treasurer of the club, and Sally McLoughlin, secretary.

ADOLPH ZUKOR, II

EUGENE J. ZUKOR is wearing an unusually cheery expression these days around the 485 Fifth Avenue offices, thanks to the arrival on October 9 at his home of a son, who will carry the proud name of Adolph Zukor, 2nd. This, coupled with the fact that both Mrs. Zukor and the baby are doing exceedingly well, is being made the subject of numerous congratulations, in which the NEWS is glad to join.

Members of the trade, fan and daily press grouped about Allene Ray and Walter Miller at the Pathe "Green Archer" studio party, at which Miss Ray was crowned Queen of Serials.

EMORY ROLLS HIS OWN

PUBLICITY men are forever bewailing the fact that they have difficulty in obtaining co-operation from the director in such all-important matters as the shooting of proper stills, the preparation of special trailers, and so on, and not always without foundation. The director is not entirely to be blamed, since he is given a schedule of time and cost to which he must adhere, and he is limited in the co-operation which he can afford to give.

Nevertheless, it is those stills, trailers, and other publicity materials which are going to be the basis of selling his picture to the public, and it would seem as if a middle ground could be found that would benefit both the director and the publicity man.

One director who keenly appreciates this is Emory Johnson, who has just completed "The Last Edition" for Film Booking Offices in proof of which it can be said that he is now personally preparing the trailer on this picture. He believes that this is time well spent in behalf of the exhibitor who books the picture, which it certainly should be.

SOMETHING NEW IN AUTHORS

MICHAEL ARLEN, the author, left New York on Friday for an indefinite stay in Hollywood, where he is to write original screen stories for Paramount. That, in itself, is not unique—but the statement given out by Arlen before leaving is nothing if not so.

"I realize," he said, "that the screen is a form of art apart from the arts of the stage and the printed word. I have consented to an adaptation of one of my stories, 'An Ace of Cads,' taken from my volume 'Mayfair.' But that is as far as I am willing to go now. I want to learn the rudiments of how pictures are made before I will attempt to write an original screen story. I want to say frankly, that if after being out there for some time I feel I canont produce an original story fitted to the needs of the movies, I will long hesitate before attempting it."

Bravo, bravissimo, Mr. Arlen!

John L. Johnston assures us that this is the first time the entire Flugrath familly has appeared in one photo, the occasion being Viola (Dana)'s departure for New York to appear in Marshall Neilan-Producers Dist. Corp. picture; included are:. Viola, Shirley Mason, sister Edna, their father and his bride, and Mabel Tallaferro, their old chum.

AN EDUCATIONAL TRIUMPH

A SPECIAL showing of four new releases on the Educational Pictures fall program was held Wednesday afternoon October 14. The presentation was arranged by President E. W. Hammons, and he certainly managed to lure as critical an audience as ever assembled in a projection room to the Wurlitzer Auditorium. There were present members of Will Hays' Public Relations group; of the Federation of Women's Clubs, reformers, clergymen, and representatives from the New York trade journals, dailies and fan magazines. When a string of comedy subjects can bring continuous and hearty laughter from a crowd consisting of such widely varying elements there can be scant doubt as to the high quality of the material offered. In this case the program stood the test and finished with flying colors. It included a "Felix the Cat trips through Toyland," Cartoon, by Pat Sullivan; Lloyd Hamilton in "The Movies"; "Wild Beasts of Borneo," a two-reel adventure special; and the first of the Lupino Lane comedy series. "Maid In Morocco."

All sure-fire mirth provokers; Our old friend Felix the Cat was never in better form, Lloyd Hamilton immense in a snappy burlesque of pictures in the making; and the scenes showing a camera party operating in the Borneo jungles, with occasional captures of pythons, bears, etc., were wonders of realism and suspense, all the more interesting because one knew them to be the genuine thing.

The noted British star, Lupino Lane, scored a decided hit in the screamingly funny melodramatic burlesque "Maid In Morocco," where as a gallant hero he outwits his dusky enemies, performs acrobatics extraordinary and saves the girl of his heart from the black potentate who would fain make her a harem ornament. Mr. Lane's pantomime is excellent, and in every way he lived up to the reputation he has made as one of England's foremost comedians.

Before the program started Mr. Hammons made a short, but very much to the point speech in which he stated that the object of the presentation was to call attention to the excellence of the comedies, novelities and specials being released by Educational as its contribution to a season of Greater Short Subjects for 1925—1926, just now getting under way. Also, that the briefer pictures are to-day playing a bigger part in film entertainment than they ever have done, since the advent of the multiple-reel feature.

A better selection of subjects in support of his remarks could not have been made, and the enthusiastic applause which greeted him at the close of the entertainment marked the affair as a real triumph for Educational-Film Exchanges, Inc.

CAN THIS BE?

CHANGING the titles of plays and books when they reach the screen has been made the subject of so many quips and jokes that it no longer elicits a smile. And, to be sure, the practice has been carried to extremes on more than one occasion.

Which makes all the more remarkable the fact that the first four Metropolitan productions will all reach the screen under their originial titles—"Without Mercy," "Simon the Jester," "Rocking Moon" and "Steel Preferred." William Sistrom believes that a story should be released as titled by the author.

ANOTHER EUROPEAN VOYAGER

HERMAN WOBBER, who has done yeoman service for Famous Players-Lasky as San Francisco district manager, was given a bon voyage luncheon by executives and department heads at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York City, on Thursday. He was to sail Saturday for a vacation in Europe.

Senor M. de Miguel, leading Spanish producer and distributor (at right), visits the office of Motion Picture News and talks over European conditions with William A. Johnston, the editor.

Mlle. Arlette Marchal, one of the most beautiful actresses of France, who appeared in "Madame Sans-Gene," and who arrived to join the Paramount stock company this week.

Left, A. M. Botsford, who resigned recently as advertising manager of Famous Players-Lasky to head the advertising department of the corporation to be formed for the operation of that company's theatres; and right, Russell Holman, formerly his aide, who succeeds him at Famous.

There's no need to ask what company Joyce Compton works for. Who could resist looking at the First National trademark in such a setting?

MARMONT IN RUSH ACT

PROBABLY the busiest morning of Percy Marmont's life was that of October 6. As he stepped from the 20th Century, he was notified by a Paramount official that he was scheduled to sail the briny main for Porto Rico at noon.

Marmount whirled into a buzz of activity that would have shamed a stunt star. Having retrieved his trunks, he hustled into the customs house for a passport, he being an English citizen, and Porto Rico a possession of the United States. Then to the boat, where forty-six members of the company which will make "Aloma of the South Seas," stood on deck and cheered as the star and his wife hit the gang plank just before it was hauled in.

THE ASTERISK QUINTETTE

FIVE golden stars were sprinkled over the film firmanent (as a subtitle writer might say) by the National Board of Review for the week ending October 17. Two features and three short subjects were on the list of recommended films. (Have you noticed, by the way, how many of the short subjects are being asterisked? It speaks well for the rising standards in this field.)

The features starred were First National's "The Dark Angel," produced by Samuel Goldwyn, and the Paramount picture, "Flower of the Night." The short subjects included two Fox comedies, "Strong for Love" and "The Wrestler," and one Pathe release, Pathe Review No. 43.

A new camera study of Greta Garbo, the Scandinavian screen star who has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to appear under the direction of Mauritz Stiller.

You'd have to take several good looks at this photo to realize that it is none other than Rod La Rocque in his make-up for "Braveheart" (Producers Dist. Corp.)

Among the 22 children of the film colony who helped celebrate the first birthday of Leatrice Joy, II, were the members of the Pathe-Roach "Our Gang."

We've run other photos of girl's knees being decorated, but lovely Helen Marlowe is ample excuse for using another. Cliff Bowes is the artist, and they appear in Educational-Cameo comedies.

Lew Cody gives his impression of Little Eva after her ascent, between scenes of "Free Lips" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer), his latest production.

Skouras Bros. Houses In Joint Deal

Goldman-Skouras Operation of Four; F. P.-L. May Acquire Interest in Others; Many Circuit Moves Indicated

DEALS and rumors of deals concerning circuit expansion continued to fill the air this week, involving Famous Players-Lasky and Balaban & Katz, Skouras Brothers, the Saenger Amusement Company, Finkelstein & Ruben, the Shea Amusement Company, the Cooper interests, Fox, the Comerford circuit, the Mark Strand corporation, and other unnamed interests in Denver and middle-western points.

One of the principal developments of the week was the indication that Famous Players-Lasky and Skouras Brothers would enter into an agreement by which the Missouri theatre and the new Ambassador theatre now under construction in St. Louis will become Paramount first run houses under the management of Skouras Brothers, and definite announcement that the Grand Central, West End Lyric and Lyric Skydome, also owned by Skouras Brothers, and the William Goldman King's theatre, would pass into the hands of a corporation jointly owned by Goldman and Skouras Brothers.

The operating agreement covering the Skouras and Goldman deal was filed with Recorder of Deeds Tamme in St. Louis late Tuesday. A new corporation will operate the four houses. Spyros and Chas. Skouras will hold 55 per cent of the 1,000 shares of no par value stock and Goldman 45 per cent. The agreement is effective within thirty days after completion and opening of the Ambassador theatre being erected by Skouras Brothers and runs for ten years. It was dated March 18, 1925, but was held up pending outcome of a series of deals involving purchase by Skouras Brothers of a block of St. Louis Amusement Company stock held by Harry Koplar and the settlement of Goldman's suit against Koplar and the Metropolitan Theatre Corporation and others.

It also provides that if the Grand Central is leased to Universal Pictures Corporation under arrangements heretofore made Goldman shall receive 50 per cent of profits under such lease. He will be paid $12,500 annually and Skouras Brothers $8,750 each for managing the four theatres.

Official announcement that Skouras Brothers enterprises and Famous Players-Lasky Corporation have perfected an arrangement whereby the Missouri theatre and the new Ambassador theatre will become Paramount first-run houses under the management of Skouras Brothers is anticipated in St. Louis film circles.

From a most reliable source it was learned that the papers for such a deal are now in the hands of attorneys for final inspection and it is rumored that the signatures needed to make the deal binding will be placed on the dotted line within a week.

It has been impossible for obvious reasons to obtain official confirmation of the deal involving the Missouri and Ambassador theatres.

Spyros Skouras and Charles Skouras, president and first vice-president of Skouras Brothers Enterprises returned from New York on Friday evening, October 16. While in New York, Spyros Skouras denied that Famous Players or Balaban & Katz were negotiating for the purchase and control of all the Skouras Brothers houses, including the St. Louis Amusement Company string of high-class neighborhood houses.

Skouras pointed out that Skouras Brothers Enterprises hold the First National franchise for the St. Louis territory and having many millions of dollars invested in their houses would entertain no proposition to sell out.

From an inside source it was learned that the first-run arrangement involving the Missouri and Ambassador will in no way affect the St. Louis Amusement Company chain.

Buffalo was another "storm center" during the week, with rumors of new houses and the entrance of Famous Players and Balaban & Katz into the field. Buffalo newspapers received a telegram from the New York offices of the Paramount theatre department stating that arrangements had been completed for the building of a house at 622-36 Main street, known as the Root property, which is owned by the McNaughton Realty company, which is headed by Michael Shea. While many doubt that such a house will be built almost next door to the new Shea Buffalo $2,000,000 house, now in the course of construction, it is understood that if such a move is made it will be in association with the Shea Amusement company. It can be stated, however, that the proposition is still in the negotiation stage.

It is possible, however, that there may be a new theatre near the Shea house and it is understood that plans are all set for the Comerford-Fox interests to place a vaudeville-picture house in the new business building to be erected at 606-614 Main street by Joseph and D. H. Coplon, work on which will start in February. This site is right at the corner of Main and Chippewa streets and between Shea's Hippodrome and the new Shea house. There has been talk of Comerford and Fox getting together on a Buffalo house for several months. Difficulty in placing first runs is believed to have hastened the deal so far as Fox is concerned. It is understood that $500,000 will be spent on the theatre part of the building.

Reports that the Mark-Strand company will build on the old Browning-King store site in Main street, directly across from Shea's Hippodrome are emphatically denied by Walter Hays, vice president of the Strand company. The incorporation of the Buffalo Strand corporation recently in Albany gave rise to this report. While no new house is contemplated at this time, Buffalo some day may again have a link in the Mark-Strand chain throughout the state, it is said.

Rumors of a deal between Finkelstein & Ruben and Famous Players in the Twin Cities, along the lines of the Balaban & Katz arrangement, were printed this week, but no statements were forthcoming from either party to give credence to the report.

A report from Omaha declared that the Cooper interests, which built a house for Famous Players in Lincoln, would also erect a house for that corporation in Grand Island. Universal has already announced a house for the latter city.

Famous Players is reported to have an interest in the theatre which the Saenger Amusement Co. is building in Havana, Cuba.

A charter has been issued to the Famous Players Realty corporation, which it is understood will be the holding corporation for the combined Paramount and Balaban & Katz houses. The incorporators were Elek J. Ludvigh, William H. English and Harold B. Franklin.

Announcement in Chicago threw additional light on the nature of the ten-year agreement between Famous Players-Lasky and B. & K. According to this statement, all of the Famous houses will pass into the hands of the new corporation, in which F. P.-L. will own all of the stock, Balaban & Katz to receive a participation in the profits. New houses to be acquired will be taken over by a second corporation, to be formed, the stock of which will be owned equally by B. & K. and Famous.

Stanley Company Not to File Brief

NO brief will be filed by the Stanley Company of America in connection with the demand of the Government's attorneys through the Federal Trade Commission that the company's exhibiting activities be divorced from its functions as a booking organization. This is the information forthcoming from Wolf, Patterson, Block and Schorr, attorneys for the Stanley Company.

The Stanley Company, with other defendants has been charged with operating in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Law. October 10th has been set as the date for the hearing. Famous Players have already separated their exhibiting activities from their producing and distributing operations. Attorneys for Famous and other co-defendants were allowed twenty days in which to reply to the complain.

Allens Lease New House in Canada

The Allens of Toronto, formerly directing a chain of moving picture houses across Canada, have re-entered the Montreal amusement field once more and will shortly open a brand new moving picture and vaudeville palace in the new Amherst Block at the corners of St. Catherine, Amherst and St. Timothee Streets, Montreal. The business premises and the theatre are being built by the George Rabinovitch Investment Corporation of Montreal, the theatre structure being under lease for a long term of years to H. Allen, one of the members of the Allen family in Toronto. The new house, which is yet unnamed, will have a seating capacity of 1,800 and will be fitted in every way for both pictures and vaudeville presentations.

Jule and J. J. Allen and others had approximately 55 theatres in Canada several years ago under the name of Allen Theatres, Limited. The physical assets of this company were eventually acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto.

Fox Financial Statement Shows Big Earnings for First Six Months of Year

THAT the Fox Film Corporation is in an extremely healthy financial condition is shown by the statement issued for the six months ending June 27th, 1925, which shows net earnings for that period of $1,212,024, equivalent to $7.27 a share on the average amount of stock outstanding. The company's earnings, according to Wall Street reports, are said to be almost double so far this year over last year.

Fox now has 400,000 shares of Class A common stock and 100,000 shares of Class B. The control of the company is vested in Class B.

According to the balance sheet the corporation and its subsidiaries have total assets of $25,016,344, of which $15,629,728 represents current and working assets. The current liabilities are reported as $894,336. The statement show $8,200,000 cash on hand.

National Book Week Dates Set

National Committee Lists Films for Showing Week of November 8 to 14

CHILDREN'S Book Week and Motion Picture Book Week will be observed this year from November 8th to November 14th. Cooperating with the National Association of Book Publishers which promotes Children's Book Week are the American Library Association, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Boy Scouts of America and the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

The National Committee has issued a list of 137 selected films drawn from available published sources, which is being widely distributed to libraries, schools, bookstores, civic organizations, women's clubs and exhibitors. The list includes product of all companies. Among the companies and authors represented are:

Famous Players-Lasky—Joseph C. Lincoln, with "Rugged Water"; Arthur Richman, "Not So Long Ago"; Zane Grey, "Wild Horse Mesa" and "The Border Legion"; Kaufman and Connelly, "Beggar on Horseback"; Morean and Sardou, "Madame Sans-Gene". Universal—Emerson Hough, "North of 36"; Lewis Beach, "The Goose Hangs High"; Samuel Hopkins Adams, "Siege"; Charles Guernon, "The Storm Breaker"; Rex Beach, "The Goose Woman"; Dorothy Canfield, "The Homemaker," Film Booking Offices—Jack London, "White Fang." First National—Struthers Burt, "The Interpreter's House (film title "I Want My Man"); Conan Doyle, "The Lost World." Fox—Channing Pollock, "The Fool"; Edwin C. Hill, "The Iron Horse"; Edward Everett Hale, "The Man Without a Country" (film title, "As No Man Has Loved"); Winchell Smith and Tom Cushing, "Thank You." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Lula Vollmar, "Sun-up"; Leonid Andreyev, "He Who Gets Slapped"; Louis Joseph Vance, "Mrs. Paramor" (film title, "Married Flirts"); Katherine Newlin Burt, "The Way of a Girl." Producers Distributing—William J. Locke, "The Coming of Amos"; Thomas Gallon, "Off the Highway." Warner—A. S. M. Hutchinson, "The Happy Warrior"; Harriet Beecher Stowe, "My Wife and I"; Edwin Bateman Morris, "The Narrow Street"; Leonard Merrick, "The House of Lynch" (film title, "A School for Wives"); James Oliver Curwood, "Steele of the Royal Mounted." Unity—Edmond Rostand, "Cyrano de Bergerac." United Artists—K. and H. Prichard, "Don Q, Son of Zorro." Astor—Omar Khayyam, "The Rubaiyat" (film title, "The Lover's Oath"). Pathe—William Hamby, "The Desert Fiddler" (film title, "Percy").

Suggestions are also given with the list for stimulating public interest in good book-films and books both during Book Week and through the year. Thus the drive for Motion Picture Book Week is made an important part of the whole Better Films Movement. To encourage libraries in particular to continue the book-film tie-up the National Committee for Better Films is offering prizes of its current membership publications up to January 1927, which give advance information on the new selected films, to those libraries rendering the best reports of community cooperation in observance of Motion Picture Book Week in November.

Exhibitor Fined for Juvenile Violation

The Ottawa, Ontario, Juvenile Court opened an attack on several theatre proprietors in Ottawa on October 16, because of the habit of allowing unaccompanied children 15 years of age to enter their theatres, thus violating an Ontario statute. One exhibitor was haled to court, given a lecture and sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and costs or 10 days in jail. Magistrate Hopewell announced that he would raise the penalty for the next cinema manager who was found guilty on a charge of violating the juvenile regulation.

Decision Rendered in Denver Wage Scale Controversy

The State Industrial Commission of Colorado, has decided in favor of the Theatre Managers Association and against the trades-craft unions in the recent wage scale controversy. This marks the end of a fight which has extended over a period of two months and which at one time threatened to result in a general "walk-out" of all union employees. Early in August the unions demanded a twenty-five per cent increase in wages and shorter working time. These demands were denied by the theatre managers. Numerous conferences failed to bring about an agreement. A few days before the expiration of the old contract both sides agreed to submit to arbitration. The State Industrial Commission was selected, this body agreeing to act only on the promise that any award made would be final.

Arguments were presented on October 5th and to-day the decision upheld the contentions of the theatre managers in that the new contract should be substantially the same as the old contract; that present conditions do not warrant the increased demands of the union employees.

San Francisco House Robbed of $2,800

Prying open bars in a second story window and entering Manager C. A. Grissell's private office, expert yeggmen early on the morning of October 13th, robbed the safe of the Union Square Theatre. The strong box was opened and $2,800 stolen. The alarm was turned in by the night janitor, who, after sweeping the outer rooms, entered Grissell's office. All currency and silver, believed to have been the night's receipts was gone. Empty money bags and loose change were scattered about the floor. The bandits reached the windows by climbing down from the roof of the building. Officers believe the strong box was opened by one who knew the combination.

Announce Plans for New Theatre in Chicago

The $3,000,000 theatre to be erected at 79th and Maryland, Chicago, by the Woodlawn Theatre Company, of which Andrew Karzas is the president, will seat three thousand and have a stage capable of accommodating the largest productions. The house will have a cantilever balcony.

Waddill Catchings is Named Chairman of Finance Committee of Warner Brothers

WADDILL CATCHINGS, member of the firm of Goldman, Sachs and Company, has been elected to the Board of Directors of Warner Brothers and named chairman of the Finance Committee. He will handle the financial affairs of the company and thus leave the four Warner brothers at liberty to devote their time to furthering the various ends of the business for which each of them is particularly adapted.

H. M. Warner, President of Warner Brothers, in announcing the acquisition of Mr. Catchings said:

"I feel that Mr. Catchings associating himself with our company is really the most important incident in our entire business career. Warner Bros. have been making such rapid progress, particularly in the past two years, that it required someone with an expert knowledge to advise on the finances of the company while my brothers and myself devoted our time to the production, and distribution of pictures and our theatre interests. With the election of Mr. Catchings this has been accomplished, and we are now prepared to step out unhampered on a scale larger than ever before.

Lasky Denies Program Curtailment

Fall and Spring Groups Will Total 73 Releases; No Material Reduction Planned Unless Sales Conditions Change

PUBLISHED reports to the effect that Famous Players-Lasky would cut its Spring group to 25 pictures, and that the 1926-27 releases would total only 52, were denied this week by Jesse L. Lasky, first vice-president in charge of production.

Present definite plans, he stated, calls for 33 pictures in the Spring group, making a total of 73 for the year, a figure not materially different from the program of the preceding 12 months.

"It should be borne in mind, said Mr. Lasky, "that the volume of production is controlled solely and directly by reports from the sales force in the field. It has been brought out repeatedly at sales conferences that approximately seventy-five pictures is the number which can be marketed to best advantage.

"If, at any time, conditions in the field should change and our sales force should report that an increase or decrease in the schedule was desirable, that change would be made. But until such a recommendation is received no such move will be considered.

"Any one who could have visited our studios during recent weeks would have realized how unfounded any talk of curtailment must be in connection with Famous Players-Lasky. At the Long Island studios, seven units were working at once during a recent week, and activity was also proceeding at top speed on the West Coast. That should be adequate answer to any report that we are curtailing production.

Jesse L. Lasky.

"As matters now stand, we are further ahead of schedule than we have ever been, and are now working on Spring releases. This is a most desirable condition, since it enables us to take the utmost care and thought with these pictures. But there is no basis at present for supposing that the releasing schedule will be materially curtailed."

A report published in a New York newspaper to the effect that B. P. Schulberg had signed as general production manager of Famous Players-Lasky was characterized as a misstatement of the facts by Mr. Lasky, who said:

"In the first place, Mr. Walter Wanger is the general manager of production for Famous, and you may say for me that he is doing very satisfactorily indeed. Therefore, there is no truth in any rumor which states that he is to be displaced.

"However, it is true that we have been negotiating with Mr. Schulberg in connection with a supervisory position at one of our studios, but his contractual status at the moment is such that he is not in a position to sign with us, or with any other company. This status might change at any time, of course, in which case the negotiations would doubtless be renewed. It is not true, however, that he has already signed with us.

"I should like particularly to emphasize that any move which might be made would not affect the position of Mr. Wanger, who is functioning most efficiently."

Blank Will Not Sell, Announcement

Acquires Nine Additional Houses; Sol Lesser Announces Formation of New $2,500,000 Corporation—Others Expanding

COINCIDENT with a statement in which he "most emphatically" denied a report that he was contemplating the sale of his theatres, A. H. Blank, head of the Blank circuit, announced that his organization had acquired nine additional theatres and has plans set for even more ambitious expansion operations. The contracts have been let for the building of the new Blank theatre in Omaha, to be erected at a cost of $1,000,000.

Among the new houses which have been added to the Blank string of over thirty theatres in Iowa, are the Strand and Lincoln in Chariton. Harry Mitznick, who has been manager of the Rialto Theatre at Des Moines has been transferred to Chariton to manage the new houses, which were purchased from W. H. Dewey.

According to an announcement from Sol Lesser from California, the new West Coast Junior Circuit, a $2,500,000 corporation recently formed between West Coast Theatres, Inc., and Michael Rosenberg. Arthur L. Bernstein and Harry Sugarman, will incorporate in the new system the houses of the West Coast Langley Circuit in Pasadena, Glendale, Tafet and Los Angeles, in addition to the thirty-five other houses in Southern California which will be taken over. Mr. Arthur L. Bernstein was the head of the Langley circuit. The West Coast Junior Circuit will also combine the enterprises of the Junior Theatre Syndicate, the announcement states.

A. H. Blank, head of A. H. Blank Enterprises, rapidly acquiring theatres.

The theatres to be taken over in Los Angeles include the Royal, Crystal, Jewel, Riviera and Unique. The Whittier Theatre at Whittier is also included as one of the assets of the new syndicate.

One of the most important theatre transactions of the week was reported from Washington, where Fox has obtained the 4,000 seat house which will be part of the National Press Club building. According to reports when the theatre was first projected, Famous was to have operated this house. The lease which Fox has on the theatre is for a term of 25 years. It is believed that Famous will start plans to acquire a theatre in Washington. In all probabilities the company will build one of its own there.

The pending sale of the Grand theatre, 8-10 Plymouth avenue North, Rochester, for the sum of $85,000, has been made public following the filing of papers to do with the transfer of the realty at the Court House. The prospective purchaser is given as the Schine Theatrical Corporation. The owner of the property is Thomas G. Thompson, formerly of 393 Wellington avenue, adjudged incompetent nearly a year ago, and sent to an institution. Acting as a committee for Thompson were his daughter, Edith V. Thompson, and Attorney E. Reed Shutt. The committee acting in the interests of Thompson, found it best to dispose of the property, and an offer was made last August by the Schine company. This offer was accepted with the provision that it must be approved by County Judge Willis K. Gillette. In the papers filed, Judge Gillette gives his approval of the report of Percival W. Gillette, referee in the proceedings. The purchase of the property will involve the taking over of a first mortgage for $16,000 held by the Monroe County Savings

FLINN LEAVES FOR COAST

May Sign Stars, Directors

JOHN C. FLINN, Vice-President and General Manager of Producers Distributing Corporation left for the coast last week to confer with Cecil B. De Mille and the Christie Brothers on production plans for the 1926-27 season. It is said that a marked expansion of the company's production activities is contemplated for next season and during the stay of Flinn on the coast a number of prominent directors and stars will be signed to contracts.

Nothing definite has yet been arranged for next year's program, though an exchange of ideas has been going on for the past few months between the west coast producers and the executives of the Producers Distributing Corporation. These ideas will be consummated into definite form before the return of Flinn.

Charles Christie, who returned from Europe last week, is also enroute for Los Angeles. Christie left New York on Saturday in order to stop over for one day in Chicago before joining Flinn, with whom he intended to travel from Chicago to Los Angeles.

Award Story Contest Prizes

Omaha Woman Offers Best Suggestion in Frank Lloyd-First National Quiz

THE prizes have been awarded in the Frank Lloyd-First National Pictures Story Suggestion Contest held for the purpose of finding screen stories which had not been previously filmed. Eight prizes were awarded, the first of which, $500 went to Mrs. Hazel Marie Bergh of 118 West Thirty-First Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

The nature of the story suggestion offered by Mrs. Bergh has not yet been revealed, except that it carries an Oriental locale. It will be produced by Mr. Lloyd who will make a special trip to the Orient to take up research work and study first hand the locale and characters in the story.

The other winners in the contest were, Mont Hurst, Dallas, Texas, $200; Mrs. Alien A. Keen, Allendale, N. J., $150; Mrs. G. W. Pliter, Santa Monica, California, $100; Miss Amalia Stetter, Milwaukee, $50, and the special prizes of $33.33 each to R. T. Newton, Little Rock, Ark., Miss Charlotte Thorp, Spokane, and A. Methat, Montreal.

It was announced from the First National offices that 11,947 letters were entered in the contest and that they came from all parts of the world. There were letters from school boys and girls in the elementary grades, letters from authors, artists, lawyers, dressmakers and sailors.

More than a month was required to eliminate the suggestions which, for various reasons could not be considered. A number of suggestions were for the remaking of picture adaptations of well known classics. These could not be considered since the purpose of the contest was to find screen material which had not been previously filmed.

Mellon Recommends Tax Retention

RETENTION of the present tax on admissions to theatres was recommended on October 19 by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon in presenting his views on tax revision to the House committee on ways and means, in Washington, D. C.

"Admissions and dues brought in $31,000,000 last year," he told the committee, and are estimated to bring in $33,000,000 this year. The tax applies only to admissions sold in excess of 50 cents. It does not seem that this tax is any particular burden and in the interests of the revenue it produces it ought to be retained."

The admission tax, however, was not the only one of the so-called nuisance taxes which the Secretary would retain, he also recommended the continuation of the tax on automobiles.

The repeal of the publicity provisions of the present law, as being "utterly useless" from a Treasury standpoint, was recommended.

Blank Denies Reports That He Will Sell Circuit

Bank and a second mortgage for $42,000 held by the Fitzhugh Realty company. At the present time, the Glove City Amusement company holds a ten year lease on the building which will expire July 31, 1934. The amusement concern is given the privilege of either renewing the lease for another ten year span, or purchasing the building at any time for agreed price of $115,000.

The Gordon interests are said to be interested in a new theatre to be erected on Broadway, Everett, Mass. between Ellsworth and Webster streets, which is introducing the innovation of providing a large parking space beside the theatre for autos of its patrons. The new theatre, according to plans now being drawn, will have a seating capacity of 2100 and the architecture and arrangement will conform to the municipal group of buildings adjoining. It will be ready early next summer. Monks & Johnson of Boston are drawing the plans. The theatre includes a baleony seating 500. An organ will be installed and there will be full sized stage and orchestra pit.

Ohio Amusement Company Issues Statement

The following statement has been issued by the majority stockholders of the Ohio Amusement Company, Cleveland, regarding the minority stockholders' suit for dissolution:

The Ohio Amusement Company and stockholders owning two-thirds of its stock, on October 10th filed a motion in court to dismiss dissolution proceedings which have been brought by three employees and minority stockholders of the company, Messrs. Schumann, Fine and Kramer. The motions set forth that the company has since its organization been prosperous, has increased its number of theatres out of earnings from six to twelve and that the net operating profits during the month of September of this year amounted to $15,000.

The motions further charge that the petition of the minority stockholders was not filed in good faith, that they have no legal right to file the proceedings and that the proceedings were filed for the purpose of compelling stockholders of the company to sell their stock at less than its value and for purposes of gaining other advantages for the petitioners.

Officers of the company state that since the election of Mr. Leo Keller to succeed one of the complaining petitioners, Mr. Schumann, as President of the Ohio Amusement Company and since the majority of the stockholders of the company have undertaken a more active management of the company, the company is succeeding better than at any time in its history in spite of the embarrassment caused by the petition. They have the support of the Board of Directors in the present policies of the company and they see no reason why the present petition should be granted or why the complaints of the petitioners in this case should be given serious consideration, if matters should come to a final hearing in court.

Empress, St. John, N. B., is Totally Destroyed by Fire

The Empress Theatre in St. John, N. B., was totally destroyed by fire on October 15 when flames broke out in the projection room during a performanee. There was only a small erowd in the theatre at the time and the spectators quiekly escaped, although a couple of women fainted and had to be carried out. There was one near casualty when Louis MeCourt, the projection machine operator, stuek to his post in an effort to subdue the flames with hand ehemicals. In making his exit finally, he stumbled in the smoke and fell down the stairs, being reseued by firemen. The fire spread quickly through the whole structure. The building, which was owned by the City of St. John, was valued at $50,000.

Shores Assistant Director of Paramount School

Edwin C. King, manager of the Paramount Long Island Studio announces that Lynn Shores has been assigned to the Paramount Picture School, Inc., as assistant director. He will work under Sam Wood, who will direct the picture on which the Paramount Junior Stars will start production November 9th.

Wellenbrink Case Will Go to Jury

Fairness of Arbitration and Uniform Contract Brought Into Trial in New York Supreme Court This Week

FIRST steps toward some final action in the famous and long postponed case of the Apollo Exchange, Inc., vs. the Wellmont theatre, Montclair, N. J., were reached this week when Justice Proskauer of the Supreme Court of New York, special term, directed a jury trial to settle the point of whether or not the disputed contract was signed under duress. Both parties agreed to this, which will automatically bring it up in the regular November term.

The case came before Justice Proskauer on Tuesday morning. Apollo was represented by Louis Phillips, attorney for the Film Board of Trade, although the actual argument was presented by Edward P. Grosvenor of Cadwallader, Wickersham and Taft of counsel for the Hays organization in contract matters. Norman Samuelson, attorney for the M. P. T. O. of N. J., appeared for the defense.

Although the plaintiff's attorney was not inclined to admit that a test case was being made of the matter, observers point out that this is the first time that the Uniform Contract and the arbitration clause have been brought into court, and that therefore any legal action affecting them is likely to have an important future bearing on the negotiations for a new Uniform Contract.

As will be remembered by those who have followed the case, it is based upon Apollo's application for an order to enforce arbitration on a contract for 18 pictures which H. H. Wellenbrink, president of the Wellmont Theatre company, signed, and which he subsequently sought to cancel, after playing one picture, when the exchange tried to substitute "Her Marriage Vow" for "The Age of Innocence."

The joint arbitration board sat in the case last February and granted a judgment of $900 against the theatre by default, putting the theatre on a deposit basis with companies in the F. I. L. M. Club. Wellenbrink paid the deposits but declined to arbitrate or play the balance of the pictures on the contract. The action by Apollo is designed to force him, by legal means, to enter into arbitration and accept the decision of the joint board.

The chief claims stressed by Samuelson for the defense were:

1. That an exhibitor signing the Uniform Contract did so under duress or intimidation, knowing that unless he signed the contract containing the arbitration clause he would be refused film by all the companies in the F. I. L. M. clubs, making it impossible for him to obtain an adequate supply of acceptable product.

2. That the administration of the arbitration clause was unfair, since the individual exhibitor had no voice in the selection of the men who were to represent him, and no right of challenge.

It can probably be safely stated, in view of the statements made by Justice Proskauer on Tuesday, that the matter will largely hinge on these two points, that is, whether an exhibitor is forced to sign this contract whether he wishes to or not, and secondly, whether the arbitration boards as constituted are really an impartial tribunal.

In taking up the question of duress, Attorney Samuelson explained that the exhibitor, in order to obtain the product which he needed to keep his house open must sign the Uniform Contract. Justice Proskauer then turned to the plaintiff's attorney and said:

"Do you think that constitutes duress? Well, I do."

On the other hand, the justice favored the plaintiff on the second point, when, after Attorney Grosvenor stated that three of the members of the arbitration board were selected by an exhibitor body, he turned to Attorney Samuelson and reprimanded him for giving the impression that the arbitration board was wholly selected by the F. I. L. M. clubs. Samuelson then explained that this was a misapprehension, and that what he had intended to convey was that the board as now constituted cannot function impartially, and that the exhibitor members selected do not properly represent the defendant, since he has no voice in their selection and no right of challenge.

An affidavit by Joseph M. Seider was filed by the defense, bearing on the alleged unfairness of the arbitration system, which further tends to make a national issue of the case, since it brings the arbitration clause directly into it. He also took exception to the clause added to the contract which specifies that it may be replaced by any contract adopted and approved by the Hays organization.

The counsel for the Hays office and for the M. P. T. O. of N. J. conferred following the case and agreed on a jury trial, the alternative being to take the case to an appellate court.

Both sides expressed considerable satisfaction with the status of the case, and both expressed entire confidence in the outcome. The only material difference which trial by jury will make will be that Justice Proskauer will be assisted by a jury, and that the case will be argued out in court instead of settled on the basis of affidavits.

Seider Contract O.K.'d by Exhibitor Body

JOSEPH M. SEIDER, Chairman of the Contract and Arbitration Committee of the M. P. T. O. A., has made public a letter from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, endorsing the Standard Exhibition Contract recently drawn up by Mr. Seider. The letter from the exhibitor organization follows:

"Your very kind favor at hand and in reply will say that we had a meeting of the Executive Committee of the State organization yesterday and I read your letter; also the Standard Exhibition Contract and Set of Rules and will say that they have met with the approval of all who attended the meeting, and I wish to say that they do not see how they can be improved upon so far as we are position to judge as your Committee has gone into the matter more thoroughly and no doubt you have discussed the various points and have covered all that should be looked after. I cannot well improve upon the same. Trusting that the report of the Committee will be adopted and wishing you the best of success, I beg to remain.

Yours respectfully,
LOUIS C. HEHL,
Secretary.

T. O. C. C. May Rejejct Hays Contract

THE new uniform contract being drawn up by the Hays organization was the principal topic of discussion at the meeting of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce of New York on Tuesday, October 20.

Nathan Burkan told the exhibitors present that, in his opinion, the new Hays contract was too long and that it did not afford the exhibitor sufficient protection. It was decided to send a copy to each member of the T. O. C. C. The Board of Directors will meet Monday to discuss the matter and on Tuesday it will come up before the whole organization for settlement.

Sentiment in the T. O. C. C. is reported to be strong for rejecting the proposed contract in its present form.

There is also considerable sentiment in favor of the contract drawn by Joseph M. Seider, President of the M. P. T. O. of New Jersey and head of the M. P. T. O. A. Contract and Arbitration committee. The Seider contract incorporates the Burkan clause on the designation of playdates.

Ohio M. P. T. O. to Meet in December

Plans for the annual convention in Columbus, December 8, of the Ohio Motion Picture Theatre Owners are being taken care of by W. M. James, Columbus, president of the organization and P. J. Wood, business manager. A Chairman of the convention committee will be appointed at the executive committee meeting to be held at Columbus, November 10.

This organization, underwritten by a group of members to guarantee its sound financial standing, has been able to dispense with this underwriting because of the excellent showing of exhibitors.

A new secretary of the Joint Board of Arbitration and Film Board of Trade has been selected under a new arrangement with headquarters for both in Cleveland.

Charlotte Board of Trade Elects Officers

The Charlotte Film Board of Trade held their election the past week and Frank Bryan, of First National, was re-elected President. Hugh Owens, of Paramount, was elected Vice President. Jim Reynolds was elected Treasurer and Secretary. The board also elected an executive committee as follows: E. F. Dardine, Universal, Walter Price, Fox Film, and William Conn, F.B.O.

Schulberg Files Personal Bankruptcy Petition; Company Not Affected

B. P. SCHULBERG this week filed a personal petition in bankruptcy in the New York Federal Court. Liabilities are listed at $830,774 and assets at $1,420. The financial status of B. P. Schulberg Productions, Inc., is not affected by the petition according to a statement issued by J. G. Bachmann."

The principal creditors named and the amounts due them are: Standard Finance Corporation, Los Angeles, $300,000; Sol Fillin, $110,000; Standard Film Laboratories, Los Angeles, $90,000; Katherine MacDonald, $60,000; B. P. Fineman, Los Angeles, $48,500; David Jaffe, for loans, $30,000; W. F. Selig, Inc., The Pacific Southwest Trust and Savings Company, $25,000; and the United States Government for income taxes, $2,300.

The following statement was issued by Mr. Schulberg: "The indebtedness of $820,774, from which I am seeking relief by filing a voluntary petition in Bankruptcy, was not incurred by me personally nor used in my personal behalf. It was incurred by Preferred Pictures Corporation, and by myself as its agent in California. These obligations were assumed by me personally at the time Preferred Pictures Corporation (at the request of the Standard Film Laboratories of Califoria, its largest creditor) went into the hands of an equity receiver.

"Since then I have made every possible effort to pay off this indebtedness from my personal earnings, but the attitude of certain creditors, in pressing me without giving me a fair chance to do that which I was under no actual legal or moral obligation to do, has left no other possible course open but to take this action."

Junior Movies Now Featured

Albany, Troy, Glens Falls, and Cleveland Popularizing Saturday Morning Shows

MORE prominent than ever before, Junior Movies will be featured this fall and winter in Albany, Schenectady, Troy, Glens Falls and other cities in central New York.

The Junior Movies in Albany this year are being held at Harmanns Bleecker Hall, with a seating capacity of 2,200, and with the Albany Mothers' Club handling much of the preliminary detail. There is a feature in connection with the movies in Albany this fall and winter, that is new. Such children as have talent to entertain will be afforded a half hour each Saturday morning to entertain the other children present, and as an incentive for other children to develop their dramatic, musical and comedy talent. Girl and Boy Scouts in Albany will act as ushers and assistants.

In Troy, the movies will be under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers' association, and will be given at the Troy theatre, the largest house in the city, and with Lansingburgh, probably included in the territory.

In Schenectady, the first of the Junior Movies was held last Saturday at the State theatre, and almost ended in a small boy riot. Owing to the fact that such movies have never been given in the city before, it was decided to distribute 15,000 circulars over the city, calling attention to the Saturday morning program for children. Over 6,000 boys and girls showed up and after the theatre had been filled, and 2,100 of the number had been taken care of, there still remained about 4,000 outside, begging for admission.

The Empire in Glens Falls announces a Junior Movie season, with a two hour show on Saturday mornings for a ten cent admission.

Special "matinee" performances for children will be offered in Loew's State theatre in Cleveland Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

This announcement came from Lora M. Kendall, press secretary of the Cleveland Cinema Club, which, in conjunction with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, sponsors this program, and will continue to offer one every Saturday morning to the next year. Admission is set uniformly at ten cents for children. Adults will pay twenty-five cents.

$50,000 Fire Damage to Theatre in Madison

More than $50,000 damage was done by a fire that practically demolished the Parkway theatre at Madison, Wis., one of the well known old picture houses of the Badger capital. Only the front, with its offices, remains of the former theatre, which was operated by the Fischer Theatre Company, under the management of Len Brown. Twelve hundred patrons of the house stampeded their way to safety, when the main curtain fell after it had been lowered at the first alarm. It is considered a miracle that many persons were not killed or badly injured as a series of back-stage explosions threw the crowds into general confusion despite the efforts of the management and attaches to file them out in orderly fashion. A five year old child was painfully burned, when it fled to the stage instead of through the exit, but no other serious casualties were reported.

Injunction Closes Urbana's Theatres on Sundays

Urbana's two motion picture shows were dark on Sunday, October 18th because of a temporary injunction issued by the Champaign County Circuit Court late Saturday.

Circuit Judge Franklin H. Boggs will determine at the January term of court whether to make the injunction permanent.

In issuing his temporary injunction Judge Boggs stated there was not the slightest doubt that the legislature had given the right to city councils to regulate amusements and that under that grant of authority the council could prohibit Sunday shows.

New Building Will House Rogers Unit

Work is under way at Universal City upon a new building that will be devoted exclusively to the Charles R. Rogers organization, which will present Harry Carey in a series of Western features for Pathe release. In addition to the star's personal quarters, the building will house the executive quarters of the Rogers company, embracing Mr. Rogers' own suite and offices for the production, publicity and accounting departments.

Carey's first Pathe Western will be an adaptation of "Buck Up," a story by Basil Dickey and Harry Haven which Harvey Gates prepared for the screen. Scott Dunlap is directing. In the supporting east are Harriett Hammond, Bert Woodruff, Ruth King, James Farley, Stanton Heck, Raymond Nye and Joseph Gerard.

Leaders to Celebrate With Pathe

Vice-President Dawes and Other Notables Will Attend Fifteenth Anniversary News Reel Dinner at Plaza

NATIONAL leaders of public affairs, including Vice-President Dawes, have accepted the invitation to celebrate with Pathe the dinner to be held at the Hotel Plaza in New York on November 14th marking the fifteenth anniversary of the Pathe Newsreel. Cabinet members, foreign ambassadors, governors of states, senators and congressmen have expressed their intention of participating in the ceremonies.

The Pathe list of illustrious men who have announced their intention of paying tribute to the news reel on November 14th, includes, in addition to the Vice-President of the United States, such notables as the Honorable Curtis D. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy; Honorable Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior; Senor Don Manuel C. Tellez, Mexican Ambassador to the United States; Baron Ago von Maltzan, German Ambassador; Ralph O. Brewster, Governor of Maine; Alfred E. Smith, Governor of New York; E. Lee Trinkle, Governor of Virginia; United States Senator Coleman DuPont; United States Senator Royal S. Copeland; Thomas A. Edison, noted pioneer film inventor; Chauncey Depew; Owen D. Young; Frank Hedley, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; W. W. Atterbury, Pennsylvania Railroad; P. C. Crowley, New York Central Lines; William Greene, President American Federation of Labor; Dwight F. Davis, newly named Secretary of War; Mayor James M. Curley of Boston; Frank D. Waterman, Republican Mayorality Candidate for City of New York; James J. Walker, Democratic Mayorality nominee for City of New York; Dr. L. W. Rowe, Director-General of the Pan-American Union; Franklin Adams, Counsellor of the Pan-American Union; John Olive LaGorce, Associate Editor of the National Geographic Society, and Melville E. Stone, Counsellor of the Associated Press.

The United States Navy will be represented by Rear-Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, Commandant of the First Naval District; Admiral Robinson, Chief of Naval Operations; Rear-Admiral W. A. Moffett, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics; Admiral Leigh Palmer; Rear-Admiral William S. Benson, retired; Major General John A. Lejeune, Commandant Marine Corps; Captain Walter Gherardi, Aide to the Secretary of Navy; and Mr. T. V. O'Connor, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board.

Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Pathe News.

The Army will be brilliantly represented by Major General John L. Hines, Chief of Staff; Major General Mason M. Patrick, Chief of the Air Service; Major General Charles P. Summerall, Commanding the Second Corps Area, which includes New York City.

A special train on the Pennsylvania Railroad has been chartered by Pathe News to convey the cabinet members, ambassadors, and other prominent officials to the dinner. This train will leave the Union Station in Washington at one o'clock on the afternoon of November 14th. It will return the following day. Two floors have been engaged in the Hotel Plaza for the convenience of the distinguished guests.

Emanuel Cohen, Editor of Pathe News, announces that the dinner at the Hotel Plaza is intended to emphasize the importance of the fifteenth Anniversary of news dissemination by motion pictures.

He said in part: "Twenty-five years ago the flickering and uncertain cinematograph showing the horse drawn fire engine responding to a fire aroused a wave of enthusiasm. Ten years later science had eliminated the eye-tiring, uncertain and cloudy projection of moving pictures. Charles Pathe was the pioneer in the news film field. He was the first to perceive the miraculous possibilities of the motion picture camera as the world's most accurate reporter. It was then that the first attempt was made to organize a world-wide news film service.

"The development of the ordinary camera into motion picture portrayal has made the African jungles almost as familiar to the peoples of the world as the Strand in London or Broadway in New York. The news film has reached every corner of the world during the last fifteen years. The news film serves millions of subscribers in the farthest corners of the world. It speaks the universal language. It reaches all grades of mentality with the same perfection of accuracy. It has become the most accurate reporter of news and events that the world has ever known. It has ceased to be merely an entertainment. It is now an institution. It is to emphasize and honor this achievement that the dinner is tendered."

Pathe Field Executives Win Promotions

SEVERAL promotions and changes are announced by Pathe in their field executives. R. S. Ballantyne, Des Moines branch manager has been made southern district manager, succeeding Oscar Morgan, who at his own request has been made branch manager of the Dallas office. D. J. Coughlin resigned in Dallas because of illness.

A. W. Kahn has been named as Ballantyne's successor at Des Moines. L. E. Kennedy, formerly special feature representative, has been appointed branch manager at San Francisco, succeeding W. W. Kofeldt, who resigned to take a position abroad. Kennedy relieved George Knowles, who has been serving as branch manager. The latter, at his request, has been transferred to Los Angeles as special comedy salesman.

On October 31st, the Washington Pathe branch, now a part of the Southern division, will come under the jurisdiction of the Eastern division, of which Charles Henschel is district manager.

New Broadcasting Link for New York Capitol

Station K. S. D. of St. Louis has been added to the chain of radio stations broadcasting New York Capitol Theatre programs on Sunday evenings. This brings the total to eight stations now in the chain which relays the programs from the theatre every Sunday evening, followed by the supplementary studio program directed by Major Bowes.

The stations on the chain are W.E.A.F. New York, W.E.E.I. Boston, W.C.A.E. Pittsburgh, W.W.J. Detroit, W.C.A.P. Washington, W.J.A.R. Providence, W.T.A.G. Worcester and K.S.D. St. Louis.

Portland Exhibitors Have Trouble With Musicians

The Strand and Empire theatres, picture houses, owned by Abraham Goodside were without orchestras last week owing to a disagreement. A raise of ten dollars per week, longer rests between playing and the discharge of musicians hired outside the state are among the demands said to have been made by the musicians.

The musicians claim, however, that they were told to "get out." Organs have been continued in both houses during the week and it is expected that something in the way of orchestras will be secured before long.

Music Troubles Straightened Out in Schenectady

Things are once more running smoothly between the exhibitors of Schenectady and members of the musicians' union. After several conferences, the musicians decided to withdraw their demands for more wages, and as a result the same wage scale will prevail for another twelve months. Members of orchestras were asking two dollars a week more, while organists demanded $90 a week rather than $54, which they are now receiving.

Kansas - Missouri Exhibitors Advised to Pay Tax

"Like many other exhibitors we had neglected to take out our music license," writes Henry Tucker, owner of the Majestic and Tucker theatres, Liberal, Kan., "So inspectors were sent out and reported infringements and we were assessed $500. After sending my lawyer to Topeka, Kan., to confer with Newell & Wallace, attorneys for the music society, we succeeded in getting the amount cut to $400, which we paid rather than stand suit. And just to think a few months ago we could have taken out a license for $85."

Mr. Tucker's reference to "a few months ago" alludes to the agreement entered into by the M.P.T.O. Kansas-Missouri and the music society, in which members of the exhibitor organization received a 20 per cent reduction on amounts levied. The M.P.T.O. K.-M., which recently waged a bitter fight against the payment of music tax, has advised all its members to pay the tax.

Cast for Next Columbia Production Announced

Harry Cohn, head of the Waldorf studios announced the engagement of Forrest Stanley for the leading male role in "The Penalty of Jazz." He will support Dorothy Revier who is starred in this Columbia production. The rest of the cast consists of Tom Ricketts, Ethel Wales, Maude Wayne, Frank Wood and Erwin Connely.

"The Penalty of Jazz," which was written by Dorothy Azner and Paul Cangolin, goes into immediate production at the Waldorf Studios.

"Phantom of Forest" is Completed

Renaud Hoffman, supervising director has completed "The Phantom of the Forrest," eighth of the series of twelve Gotham productions to be released through Lumas Corporation. The picture stars Thunder the Marvel Dog, with Frank Davis, his owner and trainer in the heavy role. Others in the cast include Betty Francisco, Eddie Phillips, James Mason, Irene Hunt, Rhedy Hathaway and "White Fawn," Thunder's mate. Henry McCarty directed.

Davis Off to Coast for Production Plans

J. CHARLES DAVIS, II, president of the Davis Distributing Division leaves for the coast this week to confer with various producers of product to be distributed through his organization. Immediately upon the arrival of Davis, the second Al Wilson production will get under way.

"Peggy in Chinatown," second of the Peggy O'Day series will be cast and shooting started immediately. Davis will confer with Marilyn Mills on the third picture of her series, the title of which has not yet been announced. He will also consult with Guaranteed Pictures ,Inc., regarding "The Courage of Captain Plum," third of the series of James Oliver Curwood stories to be released about the first of the year.

Luncheon Will Follow Fox Ceremonies

FOLLOWING the laying of the cornerstone of the new $200,000 Fox Exchange building in New York City, Senator James J. Walker, Democratic candidate for Mayor will head the list of guests at the luncheon to be given in the Rose Room of the Hotel Astor on October 28th. James R. Grainger, general sales manager of the company will be the host.

The cornerstone will be laid promptly at noon at 343-45 West 44th street with appropriate ceremonies, in which civic officials, stars of stage and screen, and exhibitors will take part. Heading the list of city and state officials will be Senator Walker, Julius Miller, Manhattan Borough President, and Thomas J. Drennan, fire commissioner. Thomas Meighan, shepherd of the Lambs Club, will lead the delegation of stars representing stage and screen.

Father O'Reilly is Making Record With House

Father O'Reilly and Father Humphreys, the former of Rosendale, N. Y., and the latter in the neighboring village of New Paltz, are making quite a record for themselves these days as exhibitors. Father O'Reilly is running his theatre seven days a week and it is said that on Sunday night it is not uncommon to see more than 200 automobiles parked in the vicinity.

The house of 500 seats was remodeled by Father O'Reilly, who does all the booking and keeps a record not only of every picture that has been played at his theatre but also the hour the film was received and the hour that it was shipped in return. Father Humphreys is more of a newcomer in the business and until he becomes a bit more acquainted, Father O'Reilly will do his booking.

Musicians in Portland, Me., Houses Walk Out

Refused an increase of from $41 to $55 per week, longer rest periods and a walk-out of fifteen minutes each hour by Abraham Goodside, the musicians of the Strand, Empire and Jefferson theatres, Portland, Me., have quit. Fifteen are employed at the Strand and eleven at the Empire. Those at the Jefferson had not yet started work. Goodside declined to meet their demands on the grounds that they worked only five and a half hours a day with alternating twenty minute periods of work and rest.

Goodside also refused to discharge two organists he hired in Boston and New York, whom, he states, the musicians wanted replaced by Portland organists.

"Million Dollar Handicap" Cast Completed

Metropolitan Pictures has completed the cast for "The Million Dollar Handicap" and filming has started under the direction of Scott Sidney. Vera Reynolds has the leading role and in the supporting cast are Edmund Burns, Ralph Lewis, Walter Emerson, Ward Crane, Tom Wilson, Clarence Burton and Danny Hoy. The picture was adapted by F. McGrew Willis and Scott Sidney from the novel by W. A. Fraser.

Al Green Chosen to Direct First National's "Irene"

Word from John McCormick, of First National's West Coast studios, states that Al Green will direct Colleen Moore in "Irene," which, it is claimed, will be one of the most elaborate productions Miss Moore has made. George K. Arthur has been signed for the role of "Madame Lucy" and Lloyd Hughes will appear opposite the star. Charles Murray and Kate Price will also have important roles.

R. A. White Made Sales Manager of Florida Corporation

R. A. White, formerly General Sales Manager of Fox Films, has been made Sales Manager of the Delray office of the Mizner Development Corporation, Palm Beach, Fla., developers of Boca Raton, according to advices received from Harry Reichenback. Delray is located eighteen miles south of Palm Beach and ten miles north of Boca Raton.

Del Andrews to Direct "No Man's Law" for F. B. O.

Del Andrews who recently directed a series of Fred Thompson starring vehicles for F.B.O. has been engaged to direct "No Man's Law," in which Bob Custer will be starred. Custer's support will include Adalyn Mayer, Ralph McCullough, Bruce Gordon and Ethan Laidlow.

The story is by Walter F. Coburn and William Wing prepared the script.

Sebastian Cast Completed for "Fifth Avenue"

Anna May Wong and Crauford Kent are the latest additions to the A. H. Sebastian cast for "Fifth Avenue," which will be released by Producers Distributing Corporation. Robert Vignola is directing and the cast includes Marguerite De La Motte, Allan Forrest, Louise Dresser, Sally Long, Josephine Norman and Lucille Lee Stewart.

"Other Woman's Story" is Next From Schulberg

B. P. Schulberg announces "The Other Woman's Story" as its next release. This production is the first directorial effort of B. F. Stanley, former newspaper man and writer of popular fiction.

"Roxy" to Stage Goldwyn's "Stella Dallas"

AS a special courtesy to Samuel Goldwyn producer of "Stella Dallas," S. L. Rothafel will stage and direct the presentation of that production when it opens at the Apollo theatre, New York, on November 15. Although generally understood that "Roxy," as president of the Roxy Theatres, Inc., would handle no interests other than those directly connected with the promulgation of his new theatre enterprise, it is claimed that the appeal of the production was too strong for the screen impressario to resist. Rothafel's associates, Messrs, Lubin and Atkinson, agreed that the vehicle merited his making an exception to the rule.

Too Many Stars, Says Harry Warner

Studio Workers All Gods in Their Own Minds and Think Only of Their Own Fame, He Declares

EXCESSIVE individualism and the insatiable desire for self aggrandizement on the part of those engaged in making pictures, is responsible for inefficiency in motion picture studios and at the bottom of many of the photoplay failures which issue from them, according to Harry M. Warner in a statement this week, in which he says that the most glaring fault in the studios today is that too many stars think they are gods.

"The 'star' attitude of mind," he says, "permeates the entire studio organization of every company producing pictures today. Instead of an organized force of specialists, each contributing a part to the work of turning out good pictures and functioning with that harmony which is essential to the achievement of an artistic unit composed of several widely different elements, we have in the studios a mass of individuals, concerned mostly with their own personal advancement and entirely blind to the fact that their professional welfare and that of the producer can best be served by co-operative effort in which they give their best and permit their fellow worker to give his best.

"From the office boy in a studio up to the very top of the organizations there is that one idea, 'self.' Each individual in the organization regards himself as the most important personage in the studio, and convinced that he is 'IT,' thinks only of becoming more famous and more brilliant as a star.

Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Bros.

"It is as though the star actor or actress, or star director or cameraman, or star scenarist or continuity clerk, alone counted when the picture had been completed. As a matter of fact no star can continue long as a real star if he or she appears in pictures which are not entertaining as a whole. The star's performance, no matter how brilliant the part nor how impressive the acting, cannot hold an audience if other important elements of the play are subordinated or entirely sacrificed for the sake of glorifying the star.

"If the Yale football team this year goes in for individual glorification as intensely as directors and actors are going in for it in the studios, I pity the chances at New Haven. It is a little bit humorous to watch the film makers at work on this account.

"Most of the assistant directors know more about picture-making than the directors in charge. The assistants get from $100 to $125 a week, while the directors draw salaries ranging from $1,000 a week to $5,000. In one case a director I know sent a prospective script on to his $125 assistant, who happened to be in New York. It was rejected by the assistant, and so the director refused to take it.

"The stars are intolerable in many instances. It is impossible to convince them that they are anything less than gods. We need a new crop of them, and we need them badly.

"The same idea is spreading beyond the studios. Today we have 'star critics' who think their own opinions on pictures are greater authority as to the merits of a screen production than the public for which it has been made. Critics have the right to express their own views of the pictures, but they have no right to tell the people they are crazy for liking these same pictures.

"A way will be found some day to bring organized effort into the making of pictures and the attitude now prevalent that 'I will make a picture' will be changed to one in which the producer, scenarist, director and players will proceed with the idea that 'we will make a picture,' and then more consistent work will be accomplished and the motion picture will be rid of many of the evils which beset it at present."

Pathe Beauty Contest Winners Named

THE national beauty contest conducted by Pathe in conjunction with the showing of the company's serial, "Sunken Silver," has been concluded and the winner is Miss Ivene Whipple of Freeport, Maine. The release of the ten chapter serial was accompanied by a nation-wide newspaper and magazine advertising campaign built around the national beauty contest, which involved $3,000 in prize awards, as well as affording the winner an opportunity to play in a Patheserial.

The selection of the winners was made by a board of judges on the basis of photographs of candidates and letters written by them. The winners were determined on the basis of good looks, expression, intelligence and apparent screen effectiveness.

The winners, in addition to Miss Whipple were:

Laura Lacallade, N. Y. C.; Myrtle M. Cain, Miami, Fla.; Gay Coulton Ingold, Minneapolis, Minn.; Velta Lane, Griffith, Ga.; Hazel Fay Davis, Portland, Ore.; Helen M. Lambert, Seattle, Wash.; Marion Hill, Miami, Fla.; Gladys Tinker, Hollywood, Cal., Carlena Johnson, Dallas, Tex.; Pauline Christy, N. Y. C.; Doris Dumas, Jonesboro, Ark.; Florence Grote, Cincinnati, Ohio; Eugenia L. Lemerle, Washington, D. C.; Cornelia Reid, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Vera de Give, N. Y. C.; Annabelle Ross, Washington, Ind.; Edna Farrington, Sioux City, Iowa; Margaret Cage, Hutchinson, Kans.; Alma Kirch, Willisville, Ill.; Alvina Hofsommer, Breese, Ill.; Zelma Sanders, Cushing, Okla.; Gladys Snider, Cleveland, Ohio; Margaret Conway, Decatur, Mich.; Lucille Gray, Omaha, Neb.

Washington M. P. T. O. Sets Convention

The third annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington was called for Wednesday, November 4, in communications sent out to all members last week by J. M. Hone, executive secretary with offices in Seattle. The convention will again be held in Seattle, and is expected to be attended by at least one hundred exhibitor members from the state.

John Hamrick, general manager of the Blue Mouse circuit, and president of the M. P. T. O. W. will preside, and active chairmanship will be taken over by Mr. Hone. Business meetings, entertainment features and a large banquet are already listed as the principal details of the program now being completely arranged.

Weaver Productions Are Reorganized

H. C. Weaver Productions, Inc., of Tacoma, Wash., was reorganized last week when a new executive board was chosen and officers elected. The personnel of the new board includes some of the most prominent financiers of the Northwest.

H. C. Weaver was chosen president of the company, with W. H. Rust, vice-president and Gen. James M. Ashton, secretary and treasurer. These three men, with Chester Thorne and J. T. Gregory constitute the board of trustees.

Plans for the company as announced by President Weaver include the production of about eighteen pictures, contracts for which already have been authorized by the Vital Exchanges and Associated Exhibitors.

Invites Wyoming to Join National Organization

A letter congratulating the Wyoming exhibitors upon the formation of a stage organization and inviting the body to join the National Organization of theatre owners, has been sent to James Lynch, president of the Wyoming association, by Eli Whitney Collins, head of the Arkansas M. P. T. O.

Mr. Collins extends his congratulations as an "exhibitor who has tested organization," and declares that the Wyoming exhibitors can enjoy National protection only through an alliance with the National organization.

Irish-Jewish Series For Fox

Popular Characters Will Be Launched in Eight Two-Reel Imperial Comedies

FOX FILM CORPORATION has launched a series of two-reel comedies based on the romance of a Jewish boy and an Irish colleen. There are to be eight of them in all, the first of which is titled, "East Side, West Side," which will be released Sunday, November 15th. Thereafter the comedies will be released under the Imperial brand at the rate of one every eight weeks.

Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy have been engaged under long term contracts to portray the leading roles. Harris was a Jewish comedian in London before he succumbed to the lure of the motion pictures. Miss Luddy is a capable actress, well qualified to play the heroine role.

The best title writers available will interpret the wit and humor of the Irish and the Jews in the series. The intermingling of the two races as the result of the Irish-Jewish romance gives rise to hilarious situations and a chance for exceptional merit in title writing.

In "East Side, West Side" George Williams plays the Jewish father and Tom McGuire is the Irish father. Red Thompson is cast in the role of a crook.

Feelers sent out by the short subjects department of Fox Films are said to have brought back wide expressions of approval of the new series, which give promise of becoming exceptionally popular.

F. B. O. Fixes 1926-27 Program

Company Announces Twelve Specials and Six Star Series; Also Offers Short Reels

F. B. O. will have its entire next season's program arranged in the very near future according to an announcement issued by J. I. Schnitzer, vice-president in charge of productions. Though the titles of the various important productions are being withheld it is understood that at least twelve special attractions will be made, among them "The Life of Theodore Roosevelt."

There will be at least six star series, including productions starring Fred Thompson, Maurice (Lefty) Flynn, Dick Talmadge, Tom Tyler, Bob Custer and it is likely that one or two of the first rank stars will be engaged for a series of special productions, continues the statement from Schnitzer.

F.B.O. will also continue active in the short subject field with another series titled "Fighting Hearts," to be put in production as soon as the current "Mazie" chapters are completed. Sam Hellman is the author of "Fighting Hearts." A series titled "Bill Grimms Progress," which detail the experiences of a taxi driver will be H. C. Witwer's contribution to the short subject program.

Dwan Will Produce "Sea Horses" on Coast

"Sea Horses" will go into production for Paramount shortly after the arrival of Allan Dwan on the coast. Dwan left New York last week. The picture is an adaptation from the novel by Francis Brett Young and was prepared for the screen by Becky Gardner. The leading roles will be played by Florence Vidor, Jack Holt, Noah Beery, George Bancroft, William Powell and Lawrence Gray.

Charleston Dancers in Bennett Production

Four couples, who are recognized in New York as the best exponents of the Charleston style of ball room dancing, according to Whitman Bennett, will take part in "Share and Share Alike," Bennett's latest production for Arrow release. To make the scene as realistic as possible, the couple adjudged to be the best dancers, will be presented with a silver challenge cup.

Mary O'Hara Writing Script for "Perch of the Devil"

Mary O'Hara is writing the adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's "Perch of the Devil," which Universal will produce. The picture is to be directed by King Baggot. Miss O'Hara made the scenario for "Black Oxen," another Gertrude Atherton work adapted to the screen.

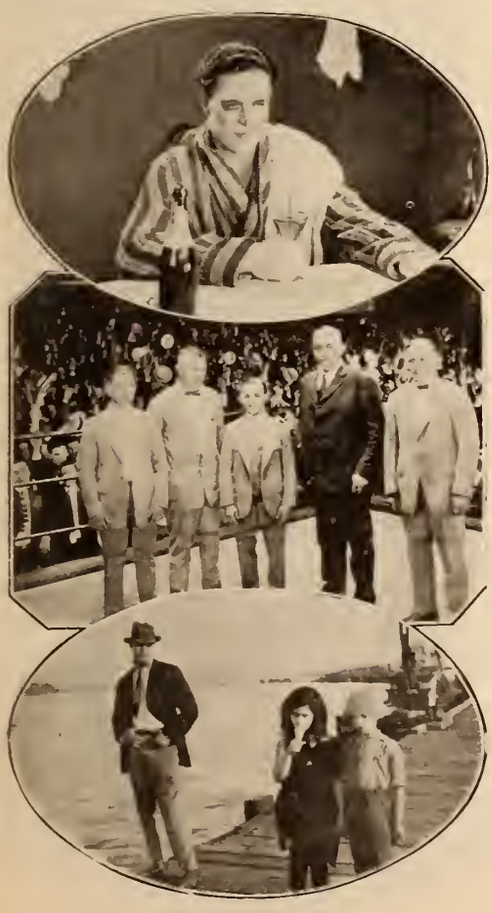
Chadwick Starts Production on Railroad Drama

Chadwick Pictures Corporation has started production of the "Transcontinental Limited," a railroad drama which it is announced will be filmed on an elaborate scale. The picture will have Johnnie Walker in the star role, with Mary Carr, Eugenia Gilbert, Alec Francis and Bruce Gordon in principal supporting roles.



Among the spectacular features included in "Transcontinental Limited" will be a realistic railroad wreck. Nat Ross, director of many Universal productions, is directing the picture.

Austin Succeeds Panzer in "Her Cowboy Prince"

Fox has found it necessary to cast Jere Austin instead of Paul Panzer in the bandit role in "Her Cowboy Prince," the newest Buck Jones starring vehicle. The change was necessary because Panzer could not be spared from his work in the title role of "The Ancient Mariner," the special Fox Christmas release which is now in production.

Herrick Completes Cast for "Keep It Up"

The cast has been completed for "Keep It Up," F. Herrick Herrick's first picture for Davis Distributing Division, which is now in production. Eleanore King is the star, with Reginald Simpson playing opposite her. In the chief supporting roles are Hugh Wilson, Harry Stone, Ricca Allen, William Calhoun, Dennis Mullin, Al Stewart and Robert Billiomps.

Associated Product Is Titled

Program of Thirty Pictures Will Be Released as "The Triumphant Thirty"

"THE Triumphant Thirty" is the title chosen by Associated Exhibitors for the company's thirty pictures for the season. The first picture to be released under this title is "Counsel for the Defense," a melodrama of a small town and a keen girl lawyer. Betty Compson plays the stellar role with House Peters and Rockliffe Fellowes.

"Camille of the Barbary Coast," one of the biggest of the company's thirty, is scheduled for release November 1st. It features Mae Busch and Owen Moore. The stars are backed by a cast which includes Harry Morey, Dagmar Godowsky, Burr McIntosh, Fritzie Brunette, Dorothy King and Tammany Young. Hugh Dierker directed.

In addition to the scheduled thirty, several unusual specials will be released, one of which is already completed and is "The Sky Rocket," starring Peggy Hopkins Joyce. Marshall Neilan directed.

The first eight pictures have already been released, among them some prominent successes of movicdom. These were "Never Weaken," starring Harold Lloyd with Mildred Davis; "Headlines," starring Alice Joyce with Malcolm McGregor; "Keep Smiling," Monty Banks, with Ann Cornwall; "Manhattan Madness," Jack Dempsey and Estelle Taylor; "His Buddy's Wife," Glenn Hunter, with Edna Murphy; the great crook melodrama, "Under the Rouge," with Tom Moore and Eileen Percy; "Camille of the Barbary Coast," Mae Busch and Owen Moore; and "Fifty Fifty," with Lionel Barrymore and Hope Hampton.

Two Glenn Hunter pictures are scheduled for release in the near future. Pictures starring such well known players as Blanche Sweet, Ralph Lewis, Clara Bow, Percy Marmont, and many others of like calibre, in addition to other pictures by stars who already have appeared in the first eight, are in process of production.

"U" Announces Cast for "Skinner's Dress Suit"

The cast which will support Reginald Denny and Laura La Plante, co-stars of the picture, in "Skinner's Dress Suit" has been announced by Universal. Those who will be seen in principal roles are Ben Hendricks, Jr.; E. J. Ratcliffe, Arthur Lake, Henry A. Barrow, Hedda Hooper, Lionel Braham, William A. Strauss, Lisle Leslie, Betty Morrissey and Broderick O'Farrell. The picture is being directed by William A. Seiter.

F. P.-L's Metropolitan Opened

Paramount Executives and Stars Present; Boston House is Largest in New England

ALVAN T. FULLER, Governor of Massachusetts; James M. Curley, Mayor of Boston; Edward F. Albee, head of the Keith-Albee circuit; and John Murray Anderson, were the speakers at the invitation dedication of the new Metropolitan Theatre, Tremont and Hollis streets, Boston. This is New England's largest theatre. It is operated by Famous Players and Ballaban & Katz.

The invitation opening was on Friday evening, Oct. 16. Arrival of the Merchants Limited from New York started traffic trouble incidental to the initial opening of the playhouse. This train brought over from New York, in two special cars attached to the rear, film stars and luminaries. In the party were Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, Mr. and Mrs. Harold B. Franklin and Charles E. McCarthy of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Thomas Meighan, Harrison Ford, Bessie Love, Lois Wilson, Diana Kane and others.

By eight o'clock every seat in the big playhouse was filled. Practically every one in Greater Boston identified in any way with the theatrical and motion picture industries being present. Paramount officials occupied the spacious box at the left of the projection booth off the mezzanine floor. In the corresponding box at the right were the Paramount stars.

John Murray Anderson was master of ceremonies. The speakers were Governor Fuller, who extended the felicitations of the Commonwealth; Mayor Curley, who extended greetings on behalf of the city of Boston, and Edward F. Albee, who briefly outlined the work of construction of the theatre. All paid high compliment to the directing genius of William J. MacDonald. Mayor Curley presented Mr. Albee with a gold key to the city, the highest honor paid by Boston.

Then, as curtain after curtain was drawn aside, each in turn drawing admiring applause, the entertainment commenced. It was the regular opening program. The 55-piece orchestra rose slowly from the orchestra pit into view on the specially constructed elevator-platform under the direction of Nathaniel W. Finston, formerly musical director of the Chicago and Uptown Theatre, Chicago, and with Arthur J. Martell at the organ. As the opening overture, "1812" was completed, the orchestra slowly receded into the orchestra pit again. There were vaudeville numbers, a combination film and stage production on the life of Chopin with the big orchestra again taking a leading part; a pageant specially staged by Mr. Anderson depicting early New England up to the present time, with more than 40 taking part, and finally the feature film. Owing to the delay occasioned by the traffic jam, the program was late in starting and it was one o'clock before the film was finished.

The scale of prices, which it is understood is the scale which is to prevail, is: 11 a. m. to 1. p. m. 35 cents; matinee to 6 p. m. 50 cents; evenings 65 cents except Saturday, Sunday and holiday evenings which will be 75 cents.

Metropolitan Signs Noted Studio Artist

Edward Withers, studio artist, has been signed by Metropolitan Pictures as assistant to art director Charles Cadwallader. Withers is a graduate of the Langham School of Art in London and studied under Linley Richardson of the Royal British Academy.

"A Savage in Silks" Rights Bought by Universal

Universal has purchased the screen rights to "A Savage in Silks," by Winifred Reeve, which is to be published as a novel. The work was bought as a starring vehicle for Mary Philbin. The leading role is said to offer Miss Philbin a part that differs greatly with any she has hitherto essayed and Universal states that the star made screen tests in the make-up and rehearsal of some scenes before the work was purchased. The author, Mrs. Reeve, is Universal's Editor-in-Chief and literary advisor.

Denig Directs New First National Department

A new special feature department has been created at First National and will be in charge of Lynde Denig, who for several years has been a member of the publicity staff of First National. Denig's duties will also include the handling of trade news. Frank Shields Jacobs, a Metropolitan newspaper man of fifteen years' experience, has been made city editor of the department. He will direct the gathering and dissemination of First National's news.

Blanche Mehaffey Joins Pola Negri Cast

Blanche Mehaffey has been making rapid progress as a screen actress, whose services are much in demand. She has been signed by Paramount for an important role in Pola Negri's new production.

Seven Fox November Releases

Three Recent Broadway Stage Successes Due for Exhibitors Next Month

SEVEN feature pictures and a number of short subjects are included in the Fox November release schedule. Three of them are recent Broadway stage successes, "Thank You," "Lazybones" and "The Fool." A fourth well known stage success is "East Lynne." The other features will be Tom Mix in "The Best Bad Man" and Buck Jones in "Durand of the Bad Lands." A seventh feature will be announced later.

"Thank You," third of the John Golden plays will be released November 1st. It has already been well received in New York and Cleveland. Jacqueline Logan and George O'Brien have the leading roles. The other November 1st release will be Buck Jones in "Durand of the Bad Lands." Marian Nixon is the heroine and Malcolm Waite the villain.

"Lazybones," the Owen Davis stage success, will be released November 8th. Buck Jones again has the title role, but it is a vastly different one than any in which he has been seen before. In the supporting cast are Madge Bellamy, Jane Novak, Zasu Pitts and Leslie Fenton.

"The Fool" is next on the release schedule on November 15th. It is based on Channing Pollock's stage success. Edmund Lowe will be seen in the title role, with little Anne Dale as the crippled girl. The supporting cast includes Mary Thurman, Paul Panzer, Brenda Bond and Raymond Bloomer. Harry Millard directed.

"East Lynne" was produced under the direction of Emmett Flynn and the cast includes Alma Rubens, Edmund Lowe, Lou Tellegen, Paul Panzer, Frank Keenan, Leslie Fenton and Harry Seymour. It will be released November 22nd.

"The Best Bad Man," with Tom Mix, will be released November 29th. The story is by Max Brand who wrote "Just Tony" and "The Untamed." J. G. Blystone directed. In the supporting cast are Clara Bow, Cyril Chadwick, Paul Panzer, Frank Beal and Tom Kennedy.

Five two-reel comedies and three Fox Varieties are included in the month's releases. Earle Foxe will be seen in "The Wrestler," third of the new Van Bibber series, which will be released November 1st.

"East Side, West Side," first of the new Irish-Jewish comedies is scheduled for November 15th. "The Peacemakers," third of the Helen and Warren comedies goes to the exhibitors November 15th. "Failure" of the O. Henry series is due November 29th. "The Sky Tribe," a one-reel Variety is set for November 1st, "White Paper" for November 15th and "The River Nile" for November 29th.

Three Added to "Golden Strain" Cast

Fox has added George Reed, Frank McGlynn, Jr., and Coy Watson to the cast of "The Golden Strain," the screen version of Peter B. Kyne's "Thoroughbreds," which has just been put into production at the West Coast studios.

Lloyd Making First for Paramount

HAROLD LLOYD'S first production for Paramount will be made under the working title of "For Heaven's Sake." It is an original story conceived by Lloyd and being developed by Ted Wilde, John Grey, Clyde Bruckman and Tim Whelan, with Sam Taylor directing.

The story deals in part with missionary endeavors in the slums and the comedian is now working on one of its most important sequences, scenes for which are being shot in the most congested districts of Los Angeles. Lloyd's supporting cast is again headed by Jobyna Ralston.

Schenck Signs Nobleman to Play Leads

Tullio Carminati, leading man and managing director for Eleanora Duse during her last tour in Italy, has signed a three year contract with Joseph M. Schenck to appear as leading man in productions including those starring Constance Talmadge. Carminati, whose full name is Count Tullio Carminati di Brambilla, though he has never used the full title, played leads in repertoire in Italy when but nineteen years of age. He afterwards co-starred with Leda Borelli and then formed his own company.

His first picture appearance was with Princess Matchiabelli; later he played in Ufa pictures in Germany. He came to this country recently to study picture conditions here. He will leave for the coast shortly with Schenck and will play opposite Constance Talmadge in one of her forthcoming productions.

Production Started on "The Agony Column"

Work was started this week on Monte Blue's next starring production for Warner Bros., "The Agony Column" with Dorothy Devore cast for the leading feminine role. The story, dealing with the "Personals" printed daily in the metropolitan newspapers, was written by Earl Derr Biggers. It is being directed by Roy Del Ruth.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

Stunts Sell "Our Gang" Comedy

Shea's Uses Letter Signed "Farina"; Youngster's Ball Game Staged by Kessler

TWO rather novel exploitation stunts recently developed in connection with drives for the "Our Gang" comedies produced by Hal Roach for Pathe release, may be cited as evidence that stunt publicity may be applied effectively to short subjects and that for theatres which regularly show established comedy series this exploitation effort is a profitable venture.

The two examples to be pointed out in this connection include a stunt by the management of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., as a special drive for "Your Own Back Yard," a recent release in the "Our Gang" series.

To a list of prominent people a series of letters under the signature of Farina, the dusky star of the "Gang," were sent. These were written in the style illustrated in the following specimen:

"Dear Mister ————————

"I have lots of trubbles becaus evrybudy pix on me but i will get even with them if you will tell the little boys and little girls that i will be at mister Shay's Hipodroum next Sunday and they made me eal my show 'Your Own Back Yard.'

"I just know how much you will like me and my gang and my show and pleas tell all yore frinds about me."

Manager Nyman Kessler of the Atlantic Theatre, Atlantic, Mass., called the week beginning September 7, "Our Gang Week" and gave wide publicity to the Pathe short comedies. Kessler arranged a baseball game in connection with the showing of "The Champeen." A Boy Scout Team met a nine from a Quincy School, Kessler umpiring the game and inviting all the players to be his guests after the contest. The winning team received a baseball bat, with autographs of players in "Our Gang" and a catcher's glove.

The B. S. Moss' Franklin Theatre, New York, has printed a two-color 8 x 11, throwaway announcing to its patrons the fact that the entire output of Pathe's Hal Roach two-reel comedies will be an added feature to the Keith-Albee vaudeville program at that house during the coming season.

Good Teaser Copy for "Are Parents People"

The important feature of Manager Warren Irvin's campaign for "Are Parents People" at the Imperial, Charlotte, was the teaser campaign he started in the newspaper several days prior to opening.

Two column two inch ads were run with copy as follows: "Are Parents People?"—You'll Know Sunday. On Sunday, day before opening, these teaser ads were followed up by a large 3 x 11 inch display in the newspapers.

Three days prior to showing 1,000 postal cards, written in longhand, were mailed out. These carried the title only, with "I. T." (Imperial theatre) at bottom. This type of teaser aroused considerable interest in the picture.

Lehman Repeats "Charleston" Feature at Orpheum

So popular was the Charleston dance contest staged by the Orpheum theatre a few weeks ago that Lawrence Lehman, manager, decided to duplicate the feat this week. And he was not disappointed, the increase in attendance being well worth the effort, he says.

"Masked Marvel" Exploits "Don Q" in Spokane

A "movie ball" at the leading amusement park, with 7,000 persons in attendance, to see a "masked marvel" in a "Don Q" costume, was one of several exploitation bits put on by the management of the Liberty theatre, Spokane, Wash., when Douglas Fairbanks' new United Artists Corporation production was shown there.

A representative of the theatre made a speech in which he told the dancers Fairbanks had hoped to attend the ball and be present at the Northwest premiere of his new picture, but had been too deep in work on his next production.

There also was a special morning matinee for Boy Scouts and junior Y. M. C. A. members; a whip-cracking contest for boys under eighteen in a tieup with the Spokane Press, a special preview for 150 of the city's leading men and women; an automobile ballyhoo; and theatre attendants in Spanish costume, with several window displays.

"Freshman" Megaphones Distributed at Game

As the leading unit of his campaign for "The Freshman" at the Majestic, Austin, Tex., Manager E. B. Roberts had cowboys distribute 4,000 megaphones, bearing appropriate advance copy on the picture, at the football game between Texas University and Mississippi, which took place the Saturday before the Monday opening of the Harold Lloyd comedy at the Majestic.

The stunt was conducted in cooperation with a clothing shop, which paid for the printing of the magaphones in consideration of space advertising the concern. The tieup was extended to the display of "Freshmen" clothing in the store window, in which generous space was given to the billing for the theatre.

One of the girls Barry Burke, manager of the Palace, Dallas, Tex., sent out in connection with a publicity stunt for "The Coast of Folly," Paramount.. Burke got considerable newspaper space on the story of a vogue for suspenders had been started by Gloria Swanson in "The Coast of Folly.

Auto Speeder Test Used to Sell "Seven Days"

Producers Distributing Corporation was very successful in its exploitation stunt for "Seven Days" in Minneapolis. The Daily Star gave generous first page space to Mike Newman and his car in which the cross-continent trip was made in seven days. Kick was given to the story by Newman's pulling a demonstration of the actual time saved in breakneck driving through traffic. With traffic policemen and newspaper men aboard he drove from the Gateway to Lake street in Minneapolis first observing all the rules and then drove back breaking most of them and crowding his way through. In the trip of three miles it was found the saving was less than two minutes which got both news and editorial notice in the paper with a good three-column picture of Mike's car.

"Peacock Feathers" Style Show at Small House

A well turned out fashion show was produced recently at the Cameraphone Theatre, East Liberty, Pa., by Richard Brown, manager of this popular little suburban house. With the assistance of Lou B. Ramsdell, exploiteer for Universal, East Liberty was flooded with exploitation for the "Fall Fashion Show," produced in conjunction with the Universal Jewel, "Peacock Feathers."

Six beautiful girls, attired in the latest of milady's garments ended their part of the performance by appearing on an illuminated runway that ran the entire length of the house. The setting was an old Moorish castle. It was a style show well worthy of a house more pretentions than the Cameraphone.

An especially attractive display for "Tracked In The Snow Country," Warner Bros. production, designed by Ollie Brownlee, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Oklahoma City.

Show "Lost World" In Airship

Feature Screened for German Notables Aboard Dirigible Sailing Over Berlin

BERLIN newspaper editors and personages in Germany's political sphere were the invited guests of the First National's offices in Central Europe at a novel advance showing of "The Lost World," which next week will attain to the distinction of being the first motion picture to be screened in a dirigible while in flight over Berlin.

While the stunt may be new to Germany, it was done previously in London, where Horace Judge, of First National's publicity staff in England, gave a showing of "The Lost World" in the clouds, as he called it.

When the idea was projected for use in Germany, the necessary permission of the Government was obtained and work immediately started to install a projection machine in the dirigible.

An added feature of the novel presentation was the inclusion of a musical accompaniment to be supplied by radio, equipment having been installed to furnish this important element of the modern motion picture entertainment.

The music is to be a surprise for this first afternoon audience, and is to be specially rendered by one of Germany's leading concert orchestras. The intervals will be timed exactly and the start will be arranged by telephone from the airdrome to the broadcasting station. The surface of the plane will be used as an antenne

Frank Newman got real display results on "Sally of the Sawdust" (United Artists) at the Rialto theatre, Los Angeles. The authorities don't permit cut-outs on the streets, so Newman mounted them on net and hung them back of the street line.

College Team in Football Togs See "Freshman"

Added attention was attracted to "The Freshman" in Maryville, through the attendance in a body of the Maryville College football team clad in their gridiron togs at the Palace theatre. The stunt was arranged by Manager J. E. Everett and through heavy advance billing of the event a highly effective publicity campaign was accomplished for the presentation of the Lloyd comedy.

Excellent window displays were secured. One with a department store in fall clothes for young men, one with a hardware store exhibiting football uniforms, and another with a drug company, displaying "Memory Books" for students. A feature of the standard campaign was a huge canvas football hung across the street in front of theatre, lettered with "Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman' Mon., Tues. Wed."

M-G-M Trackless Train Reaches Los Angeles

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Trackless Train after a cross-country tour in which it exploited that company's pictures from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast has arrived in Los Angeles. The event was celebrated with a huge pageant and other forms of celebration calculated to give the utmost publicity to the novel stunt.

The vehicle was met at the city limits by Mayor George Cryor and prominent city and county officials, including Boyle Workman, President of the City Council and I. Birnbaum, Chairman of the Police Commission. Irving G. Thalberg, Harry Rapf, Hunt Stromberg, associate studio executive and Edward J. Mannix, studio manager, rode at the head of the parade which included floats from the studio, from Loew's State Theatre, from Grauman's Egyptian, from various West Coast Theatres and from the local exchange. A large military escort from Fort McArthur accompanied the parade, in which stars and players from the Culver City studios rode in their own machines.

Enormous difficulties were encountered and successfully overcome on the train's trip. Muddy roads which made traveling exceedingly difficult for the heavy transport were encountered, especially in Oklahoma and northern Texas, where some of the heaviest rains recorded in these districts made the roads almost impassable. In Michigan a cloudburst carried away a bridge, making it necessary for the crew to choose between making a very long detour and constructing an emergency bridge. The latter course was taken, thereby enabling the train to arrive at its next stop, where crowds awaited it in the rain, with the loss of only two hours in time.

The special is shortly to extend its trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

Telegraph Co. Helps Him Exploit "Pony Express"

Acting Manager George Guise of the Fenway Theatre, Boston, made an effective tie-up with the Postal Telegraph offices in Boston and vicinity in connection with the presentation of "The Pony Express" with an especially effective window display in their various offices.

Special 36-foot cut-out, constructed and painted for the engagement of "The Iron Horse" (Fox) at the Liberty theatre, Kansas City, the Palace, San Antonio.

Miniature 'Open Spaces' in Display for Grey Film

The important feature of Manager F. J. Miller's campaign on "Light of the Western Stars" at the Modjeska, Augusta, was the shadow box display across the lobby front. This consisted of a background painted to represent a night scene with stars and a brilliant moon. In the center was a cutout of Jack Holt and Billie Dove embracing, while on each side were cutouts of cactus plants.

Elaborate Style Revue for "Trouble With Wives"

Through the combined efforts of Manager Barry Burke and publicity director Raymond B. Jones, of the Palace theatre, Dallas, an elaborate fashion show was staged in connection with the presentation of "The Trouble With Wives" at that house recently. The event attracted widespread notice, obtaining extensive extra publicity through the advertising efforts of the merchants who cooperated with the theatre.

"The Airways of Fashion," as the presentation was called, was given in three episodes, First, "Modish Mitzi," with a model displaying snappy street costumes Second, a silk bazaar in a street in Persia, where mannikins paraded in brilliantly colored silk frocks. Third, against a rainbow sky setting, colorful evening gowns were shown on pretty models. Episode four, represented the entrance to the International Exposition of Decorative Art, Place de la Concorde, Paris, 1925. In this setting, gorgeous evening gowns and wraps were exhibited.

Newman Starts Drive for Take-a-Chance Week

Based on the success of last year, the Newman theatre, Kansas City's largest first run down town house, is making extensive plans for another take-a-chance week next week. A unique program arrangement of four pages has been issued, the front page being devoted to a list of famous men who "took a chance," along with the suggestion that it might not be amiss for the audience to also take a chance. Cuts of the stars in the picture, with their faces left blank, the ankles of other feminine members of the cast and a long series of question marks all add to make up an interesting and attractive medium of advertisement. This year's take-a-chance program, however, will be under the direction of Bruce Fowler, who is managing the Paramount controlled house, and Frank L. Newman, who is now managing three Paramount theatres in Los Angeles.

The entire window space of a large hardward store was given over to a display for First National's "The Lost World" in connection with its presentation at the Lyric theatre, San Angelo, Tex. The merchant featured firearms in this elaborate display, representing a jungle and giving the lion's share of the attractor to the picture.

Hartford Campaign to Put "Lost World" Across

The Strand theatre, Hartford, recently played "The Lost World." Encouraged by New Haven's achievements, Hartford set out to go it one better and with the aid of First National's exploitation department under the direction of Allan S. Glenn, a farreaching campaign was conceived and effected in one week's time.

The Hartford Times and the Hartford Courant each co operated on the engagement viewing the showing of the picture as a distinct news event. Each paper carried a series of seven stories on their news pages, illustrated with stills from the picture, of scientific interest.

In addition The Hartford Courant carried a weight guessing contest in which a different story and photo of one of the "Lost World" monsters was carried daily with a prize for those guessing the weight of the beast. A half-page story in the feature section was used the day prior to the opening date describing and depicting the possible consequences of a visit to Hartford by one of the dinosaurs from "The Lost World."

The advertising budget was increased to allow for some quarter-page ads and an equally vigorous and liberal campaign was instituted via the billboards, rotogravure inserts, heralds and numerous novelties from First National's accessory department.

Lowell H. Stormont of First National's staff, assigned to assist the local management, in addition to his aid in preparing the material placed in the newspapers also effected a tie-up with the local taxi company who placed banners in the backs of all its cabs advising all and sundry in Hartford that "the cabs would take them to the Strand where the world's wonder picture 'The Lost World' was showing."

"Iron Horse" Ballyhoo is Entered in Parade

The Greater Movie Season parade recently held at Seattle, Wash., was made doubly interesting by an "Iron Horse" ballyhoo of the Liberty theatre, which headed the procession.

The engine used to represent "The Iron Horse," was a real old time relic, 47 years old, which was dug up from the bone yard of one of the railroad companies. Several days were consumed working over the old thing, cleaning it and getting it in shape to run.

Securing permission to run the old engine on the municipally-owned tracks of the Seattle Street Railway company was about as formidable a task as inducing the old timer to show its speed, but both problems were eventually solved.

As the decrepit old relic swung into line at the head of the parade, it puffed, snorted and smoked as nothing ever did before. Several buildings along the line of march, had to be cleaned after the parade, because of the incrustation of smoke and grime that the ancient engine covered them with. The old horse also proved its equine relationship at several critical moments in the pageant, by pulling a real sure enough balk. Every time the horse went around a corner, it would jump a track. The engine was followed by a wrecking car from the street railway company, and every time the refractory engine would derail itself, the wrecking car would promptly put it back on the track and start it on its way again. The stunt created no end of amusement.

One corner of the outer lobby of the Heilig theatre, Seattle, during the run of "The Lucky Horseshoe" (Fox). The cut-out of Mix on Tony was mounted on rockers, operated by a motor, to make it "gallop."

"Light of Western Stars" Posters Illuminated

The most noteworthy unit of Manager R. Newton's splendid campaign on "The Light of Western Stars", was the placing of a beautifully hand-painted 24-sheet on the side of the Capitol theatre, Little Rock.

The four large stars, each carrying the name of one of the four featured players in the picture, were cut out and faced with paper with a light behind each. The picture title and author's name were printed on the display sheet, along with mention of the short comedy subject on the program.

Brilliantly illuminated at night, the sales value of the exhibit was tremendous.

YOUR IDEA

LIBRARY TIE-UPS.

AT a recent exploitation conference held by William N. Robson, Paramount exploiter at the Pittsburgh exchange, Miss K. S. Stamm, publicity director of the Pittsburgh Public Library, read a brief on book tie-ups and library co-operation that we are printing here in full as an important contribution on the subect of exploitation. The assistance given by such progressive libraries as the Pittsburgh, Cleveland and other institutions deserves recognition. Miss Stamm said:

A highly artistic and atmospheric prologue was given in connection with the showing of "Romola" (Metro-Goldwyn) at the Tivoli theatre, Chattanooga, staged by Manager E. R. Rogers and pictured above.

Co-operation between libraries and motion picture theatres is being knitted more closely throughout the country. The movie and the public library both influence large groups of people, and a close contact between them is bound to increase the usefulness of each to the community.

The people who visit the library are not always movie fans. Yet if they see a good play advertised by the library, and perhaps associate it with a favorite author, the desire is created to see the picture.

Regular attendants at movie houses do not always use the library, or know how it can serve them free of charge. Having the theatre suggest its use for other stories by the same author, such as was done by the Aldine theatre in Pittsburgh when Jack London's "Adventure" was being shown, or for books concerning the setting, as was was done by the Olympic and Liberty theatres while "The Covered Wagon" was being shown, creates a mutually advantageous bond.

During the past year, for the first time in its history, the Carnegie library of Pittsburgh has joined hands with local theatre owners in spreading publicity. The exploitation representatives of the theatres, and the publicity representatives of the library watch production schedules for a play which links up well with some good books—not only novels to be filmed, but books of travel as in the case of "The Ten Commandments," history as in the case of "Joan of Arc," biography as with "Abraham Lincoln," etc.

The joint publicity usually takes the form of a bookmark announcing a picture. Printed on the face is a short list of appropriate books concerning the film. The list is compiled by the library, and the local theatre pays for the printing. The markers are then distributed at the theatre a week before the production, and are given out with circulating books at the main and branch libraries. In the neighborhood of one thousand people visit the Central library alone in one day. Considering the nine branches in various parts of Pittsburgh, two sub-branch libraries, thirteen adult deposit stations, five high school libraries, 26 platoon school libraries, nine school deposit stations, and 95 classroom libraries, the circle influenced is quite large.

In the case of "The Little French Girl," besides the bookmark publicity, a pre-view of the fiilm was arranged to be shown at the library's lecture hall for the director and library staff. The exploitation represenative gave a short talk to the librarians, so that they might be informed in recommending the picture.

The Liberty theatre, Seattle, decorated its front brilliantly for "The Iron Horse" (Fox), making use of electric lighting to increase its effectiveness.

AND OURS

Usherettes of Loew's State theatre, Los Angeles, in a street stunt for "Shore Leave" (First National) in co-operation with a Navy Recruiting Week.

"Stills" are sometimes sent from the theatres for bulletin board display. I am thinking now of the appeal made by those from "Peter Pan." Reports from branches show that Barrie's books moved particularly well at that time. A poster, not too flagrantly commercial, is often used with an exhibit of books dealing with the picture advertised. In the case of one picture, I remember, bookmarks were put for distribution by the theatre's publicity man, into shops displaying advertising posters for the photoplay.

At special times of the year, the motion picture houses show slides for the library between their "Big picture" and the "comic." This was done this past year for Children's Book week in November, and for Library week in schools in May.

ONE INGENUITY IN ADVERTISING

ONE of those little ingenious twists that help to make a theatre's advertising noticed and talked about was used in Winnipeg papers by H. M. Thomas, Western Canadian supervisor for F. P.-L., in advance of "The Ten Commandments" at the Capitol theatre.

Appropriate use was made of the numerals from "1" to "10" throughout the text of the one-column advertisement, the numbers being in proper series in large type from start to finish of the copy. The figures were prominently shown, the announcement reading as follows:

"1 picture you ought 2 see broke all records by playing to capacity crowds during 3 calendar years on Broadway. It will now be shown in Winnipeg 4 a run of six days. You will agree with the 5 or 6 million persons who have enjoyed it that it is a cinemasterpiece. Commandant Number 7 is given dramatic emphasis by Director Cecil B. DeMille which may explain why London, Paris, Vienna and New York 8 it up. 9 popular stars enact this melodrama which blends the orgies of ancient Egypt with the humors and tragedies of this jazz-mad age. Jeanie Macpherson wrote the story You'll enjoy the 10 Commandments. A Paramount Picture coming."

SOME LET THEM WRITE YOUR ADS

SOME week, when there doesn't seem to be any particular outstanding exploitation angle in the picture lined up, let your customers write your advertising. In other words, tell them what the picture is all about, then offer a prize for the best ad which any person submits.

As a matter of fact, of course, plenty of of them will resolve to write an ad and send it in, but very few of them will ever actually get around to it. The important thing is, that in announcing the contest, you have an excuse to describe the picture in great detail, and because there is a prize offered, they will read this description with more interest than if it were merely the routine publicity yarn.

Another angle to this is that when you have an unfamiliar title or something about the picture that needs to be explained, it gives you a good chance to do it. For instance, when Manager Bert Crowe of the Capitol theatre, Peterboro, Ont., was playing "The Chechahcos," he used this contest as an excuse for explaining what a "Chechahco" was.

Like the Taka-Chance Week stunt it fits any picture and is well adapted for use with pictures of the sort that don't seem made for the usual tie-ups and advertising.

OF HEAVY SHORT SUBJECT CAMPAIGN

OF UNUSUAL scope and intensity is the big campaign being worked out for "Wild Beasts of Borneo," which Educational is releasing as a Special, with corresponding exploitation effort.

Several big news photo services and window display advertising service are broadcasting photographs showing some of the scenes of ferocious animals taken by Mr. and Mrs. Lou C. Hutt during their two year expedition into the darkest jungles of Borneo.

Educational is issuing a concise but complete press sheet to assist exhibitors in their local exploitation. Several advertising and publicity cuts are illustrated and the press sheet provides publicity stories for newspapers, suggestions for type ads, program paragraphs, etc., and a number of valuable suggestions for exploitation stunts.

Co-operation of the National Biscuit company, manufacturers of Barnum's Animal Crackers, has been obtained to arrange window display tie-ups with local grocers. The 2,200 salesmen of the National Biscuit company throughout the country are being instructed to assist grocers in arranging tie-ups which will exploit the animal crackers and "Wild Beasts of Borneo."

ALTHOUGH THE OLD AND THE NEW

ALTHOUGH the idea of exhibiting an old time film by way of contrast to the modern type of production has been done on several occasions, it was presented with particular attractiveness by Manager Harry Greenman of Loew's State theatre in St. Louis. Done as a feature of Greater Movie Season, it would be equally suitable at any other time.

He arranged a stage setting first of the exterior of an early day nickelodeon with the characteristic signs and the sing-song of the barker ticket seller.

Then when the audience had been sold the exterior of the odeon was shown with the screen in the front. It was an old style whistling, cheering, jeering, clapping audience that persisted in prompting and advising the screen stars.

The old-style movie was complete in every detail. Prior to the opening of the 2-reel feature picture the customary advertising slides were flashed upon the screen and also the union label of the operator.

The illustrated song was not overlooked and was "rendered" in the most approved style by a he-man tenor.

HARRISON GOOD SUMMER SHOWS PAY

HARRISON SMOOTS of the Vine theatre, Mt. Vernon, O., told a film representative last week that this has been the best summer he has ever had in the picture business. Asked the reason for this he said: "Well, heretofore I have always laid down on the summer programs. I offered the weaker sister in the feature field, feeling that folks didn't want to attend picture shows in the summer time and that there was no use wasting the big picures on empty benches.

"This summer I tried the opposite tactics and the results have been astounding. I played the biggest pictures I could get. I put in the strongest productions on the market instead of the weakest. And the people came. And they kept on coming all summer. Now I'm planning to give my patrons the best of the new pictures. I'm getting ready to launch a big advertising campaign on Big Pictures, and I expect this to be the biggest winter I shall have had, just as it's been the biggest summer."

Painted flats and special still frames were featured in the lobby of the Rialto theatre, Colorado Springs, by Manager Pat August for "The Ten Commandments" (Paramount).

Historical Riddles Boost "As No Man Has Loved"

Labelled a nut-cracking contest, a means toward brushing up on American history has just been staged by the Rialto theatre, Charleston, West Virginia. That the list of brain twisters made a hit with local historians was evidenced by the number of replies received. The general excellence of the replies indicated as well, that Charleston's histories and reference books came in for a fine thumbing and combing during the week of the contest.

The Charleston Daily Mail did its patriotic bit toward the dissemination of our country's history by conducting the affair in a generous and public-spirited manner. The newspaper featured the contest in a prominent position each day, under a double column head. As the idea was launched to be one of the exploitation aids given the local engagement of "As No Man Has Loved," it can be appreciated that the picture came in for a lot of valuable free space.

A few of the thirteen queries propounded are as follows: 1. Who and what was Thomas Jefferson? Aaron Burr? 10. How many stars in the flag in 1807? and 1863? Who was president in the same years? 13. In what year was Philip Nolan condemned to be a man without a country? How long was he a man without a country? What was it he loved "As No Man Has Loved?"

Contestants sending the best answers were awarded the following prizes: First prize, $5 in gold; second prize, $3; third prize, $2. Honorable mention prizes consisting of six pairs of tickets were also awarded. Contestants were directed to send their answers, not to the newspaper offices, but to Lieutenant Nolan, Rialto theatre, Charleston.

Auto License Numbers Aid "I'll Show You the Town"

Any person whose automobile license number was printed in one of the ads on a double truck co-operative put out for "I'll Show You the Town" at the Kelley theatre in Iola, Kans., could collect two tickets for the show from the firm in whose advertisement he found it. That was the twist Bob Gary, Universal's exploitation man in Kansas City, worked out to make folks read the co-op.

He arranged a neat layout of his pages with a two and a half inch strip across the top of both pages telling of the free ticket stunt and an 8 x 12 space in the center of the page for the theatre's ad. Surrounding it were those of the fourteen merchants who had taken space.

"Last of Duanes" Scene is Reproduced in Lobby

Manager C. F. Creslin's lobby for "Last of the Duanes" at the Rialto theatre, Augusta, is noteworthy for two reasons. First, because of its faithful reproduction of an actual scene from the photoplay, and second for its action appeal.

Display consisted of a background painted to represent a house with a cut-out of Tom Mix and the heroine on Tony, the horse, leaping from the house into a pool of water below. The "leaping" effect was produced by suspending cut-out from a wire attached to top of shadow-box. The whole was mounted in a shadow-box painted to represent a desert with cactus, at top of which was printed "Tox Mix" and Tony make this leap in Zane Grey's "Last of the Duanes." Brilliantly lighted, the display arrested the attention of everyone.

Jewelry Window Display Advertises "Marry Me"

The outstanding unit of Manager John B. Carroll's campaign on "Marry Me" at the Victory, Tampa, was the tie-up he arranged with the Duval Jewelry company.

These jewelers had a beautiful window display of wedding gift suggestions with a large vase in the center filled with wedding rings. In the window was a one-sheet mat, stills and photos, with a miniature bride and groom in the center. Outer edges of window were decorated with old shoes, rice, etc.

The window attracted unusual attention, the contents getting valuable publicity both for the theatre and jewelry company.

A week in advance of opening date, wedding rings, each tied to a small card carrying picture title, were distributed at the theatre and on the streets.

By giving a ticket to see "Pretty Ladies" (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) at the Melba theatre, Dallas, Texas, to each purchaser of a hat, Manager Sid McDonald and Publicity Manager Raymond B. Jones, obtained this window tie-up on the picture.

Intensive Drive for "The Phantom" in Pittsfield

Backed by an intensive exploitation, advertising and publicity campaign, "The Phantom of the Opera" opened recently at the Union Square theatre, Pittsfield, Mass. The campaign was put across by General Manager Fred W. Homan and House Manager Beandin, assisted by a representative of the Universal Exploitation department.

More than a dozen windows in the most popular thoroughfares of Pittsfield were tied-up with "The Phantom," including furniture stores, millinery shops, drug stores, book shops, jewelry stores, textile emporiums and one double window in a vacant store. This, filled with oil paintings, art photos, cards, posters and the many accessories designed for the attraction, drew considerable attention.

Liberal newspaper advertising, extensive display of posters throughout Pittsfield and outlying districts, together with house to-house distribution of the artistic "Phantom" heralds, all proved effective. In addition to the stock paper, Homan designed and had distributed several hundred special 1-sheets and window cards. Another effective medium was a specially-made herald distributed at the final game of the local baseball season.

As a result of a tieup on the Fox production of "Lightnin'," the Victory Theatre in Indianapolis was advertised in windows and on the wheels of the messengers of the Postal Telegraph Company's offices in that city.

Futuristic Art in "Beggar on Horseback" Display

A "futuristic" lobby display, carrying out the bizarre effects in the dream sequence of the picture, proved a good attractor for the showing of "Beggar on Horseback" at the Galax theatre, Birmingham. The arrangement, which required nothing more than some compoboard and paint of various vivid hues, was designed by Rodney Bush, manager of the Galax.

The effect was produced by painting special door banner and three sheet frames with squares, triangles and overlapping circles, with a white panel in each for display copy. The one sheets were painted with uneven, broken letters of different colors and the red cow, two quart hat, musical frogs and huge necktie were all featured in the display.

The centerpiece was of compoboard showing Neil McRae in bathrobe and high silk hat riding a black horse with orange trappings. Sleepy Homer Cady, in a chair, was shown riding behind McRae, with the goddess money riding in the stirrup. To enhance the attention value of the exhibit, cutout circles in bright colors backed up these figures.

Shoes for Babies is Stunt in "Goose Woman" Drive

C. E. Lounsbury, Denver exploitation man for Universal, evolved a clever tie-up for the America theatre in that city for the engagement of "The Goose Woman." Denver is in the midst of a civic drive which has "500,000 in 1930" as its slogan. Hooking up with the idea expressed in this campaign, Lounsbury induced a baby specialty shop to offer one pair of baby shoes to each baby born in the city on the day which the picture opened at the America.

The stunt had a wide appeal and several avenues of valuable publicity were opened up to it, with the result that the merchant realized on his advertising and the theatre was prominently mentioned and exploited in various ways. The shop assisted with a big window display and the mailing of several hundred special heralds to a selected list.

Highway Traffic Signs Are Advertising for "Fool"

Automobilists on the main arterial highways in and about Ottawa, Ontario, have been getting plenty of admonition recently anent the perils of joy riding, through a new set of upright signs that made their appearance overnight at every dangerous street crossing. The signs, which were eight feet in height with a two foot square sign board at top and a three foot cross-piece half way down the sign-post, carried white lettering on a red surface, with the following copy:

The Fool takes chances. Slow Down. (See "The Fool" At The Regent Now).

The signposts were part of the exploitation of "The Fool," which played at the Regent recently.

Crystal Gazer Parades for "The Mystic"

A sandwich man dressed as a Hindu carrying a small crystal ball on a small shelf in front of him attracted attention to a showing of "The Mystic" at the Haines theatre in Waterville, Me. The boards he carried were appropriately decorated with mystic signs and announcements of the showing.

A dry goods store contributed a window display featuring a card which read "There is no Mystery about our bargains—we leave that to 'The Mystic' at the Haines Theatre." One hundred special blocks in green and red on white were displayed prominently throughout the town, and a trailer was used. Twenty-five 1-sheets, six 3-sheets and three 6-sheets were posted. Floyd Stuart, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer, waged this campaign.

Theatre display and ballyhoo used by the Liberty Theatre, McKeesport, Pa., for the engagement there of the Fox company's "The Iron Horse." The street demonstration consisted of a miniature engine mounted on a motor truck suitably bannered to exploit the attraction.

Opinions on Current Short Subjects

"A Punch in the Nose"
(Pathe—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Thomas C. Kennedy)

THIS, as a parenthetical line below the title remarks, is not a love story. It is a series of punches in the noses and kicks in the pantses of all the players in the cast—and what a cast it is. Among the many whose names stand for something quite worth while in short comedies appearing in this Hal Roach production directed by Jay Howe are Lucien Littlefield, Al. St. John, Lige Conley, Martha Sleeper, Dot Farley, "Husky" Hanes, Kewpie Morgan, Jimmie Finlayson, Al Hallett and Marjorie Whiteis.

With a line-up like that "A Punch In The Nose" seems entitled to the "all star" tag without any further question. But the significant thing is the comedy itself—and here, unfortunately, we are again taught that too many stars may spoil the picture, or rather, that all stars in the cast cannot make funny a series of incidents which have no comic merit of their own.

"A Punch in the Nose" is fast and furious as to the movement of its action and scenes, but little more than sheer movement develops. It is slapstick of the slam-bang style and seems always to strain for its comedy effects.

The Cast

Lucien Littlefield, Al. St. John, "Husky" Hanes, Jimmie Finlayson, Lige Conley, Kewpie Morgan, Al Hallet, Martha Sleeper, Dot Farley, Marjorie Whiteis.

The Story.—An "Uncle Tom's Cabin" road show gets stranded in a country town, where there is a sanitarium needing several specialists in swimming, massaging, cooking, etc. The troupe applies en masse for the jobs. They are all better actors than sanitarium specialists, even though they are not good actors. When the bruiser who runs the establishment learns that they have misrepresented themselves he sets after the whole crew, but by that time the actors have learned that the little slavey is the real owner of the sanitarium and they banish the villain.

Summary.—Few two-reelers boast casts made up of such well known comedians as are brought together here, but the players do not receive much support from the material and picture, owing to lack of effective gags, becomes a routine affair specializing in slapstick of a merely mechanical sort.

"The Boundary Line"
(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

A BOUNDARY line dispute with a Rebel war veteran on one side and a Union veteran on the other, and a family feud between them, furnishes the action on which this romantic western is based. Fred Humes is the hero and as usual, he acquits himself creditably. The story is rather a good one, a little out of the ordinary for the type of picture, but abounding in all of the usual action. In fact there is a little more action than usual with the climaxes developed naturally. The old soldiers are well played, as are all the other characters in the picture.

The Cast

Jack Barton Jones.....Fred Humes

A two-reel Mustang Western.

The Story. Colonel Jasper, Rebel war veteran, and Colonel Jones, old Union soldier are at the height of a boundary dispute with the arrival of Nellie Jones, granddaughter, from the east. She is compelled to drive alone from the station in a buckboard and in the ensuing runaway she is saved by Jack Barton Jones, grandson of the Southern Colonel. Later Jack also saves her from the unwelcome advances of Monte Boyle, ranch foreman, but Colonel Jasper orders him off the premises and forbids the girl to associate with a Jones. Boyle, the foreman, seeks revenge, sneaks into the Jasper house and steals $4,000. Escaping he accosts the girl and tries to force her to accompany him. She is again rescued by Jack, who turns Boyle over to the sheriff, and the usual happy ending follows.

Summary. This is an entertaining and well acted story with a nice little love theme running through it. It fairly abounds in action and also has its humorous moments. It should go well where the short Western is appreciated.

"Working for the Rest"
(Bischoff, Inc.—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS is a take-off on the mother-in-law theme used so often and usually with excellent results as regards coining laughs. It is a sprightly affair with a number of good gags interspersed throughout the main business which has to do with the adventures experienced by a young newlywed who embarks on a vacation with his wife's entire family in tow.

From the start Johnny is hounded by his mother-in-law; nothing that he does seems right in her estimation so that he undergoes all the tortures of the damned in his efforts to conform to her method of keeping house, or rather camp, which is the form of vacation chosen.

The best bit of business in the production is the scene in which Johnny struggles through the woods with a canoe over his head which gives him the appearance of some strange animal. He is espied by two hunters who take pot-shots at him.

Another funny situation shows Johnny, in a dream as a result of being clouted by the mother-in-law, chasing a bevy of elusive bathing beauties who entice him into the water only to dive when he makes an attempt to catch them; he too dives but finds he is in an inch of water.

The cast all render good performances with Johnny Sinclair as the particular highlight of the production.

The Cast

Johnny Sinclair, Lois Boyd, Evleyn Thatcher, John Rand.

A Trem Carr production.

The Story—Johnny stars out on a camping trip accompanied by his wife and her mother with the usual collection of bundles. After many mishaps they arrive at their destination and Johnny's clumsy efforts at pitching camp arouse the mother-in-law's ire so that he is the object of her verbal and physical assaults. He finally escapes with his wife and they return home but just as he is about to declare himself "monarch of all he surveys" the mother-in-law, in some mysterious way, appears on the scene, so all becomes "as it was."

Summary—A rather lively comedy with some amusing gags utilized in a story that is of a conventional pattern. The cast turn in creditable performances and the direction is good.

"Cured Hams"
(Red Seal—Two Reels)
(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THE adventures of two ham-actors in a very small town theatre forms the basis of the comedy in this Biff production featuring Jack Richardson and Al Alt. Their arrival in town, aboard what appears to be a limousine but which turns out to be only half of one drawn by a Ford truck should put your patrons in a laughing mood.

The sequences in the theatre, showing the audience in different postures of repose should evoke a mirthful response. During the performances the two hams run through the gamut of vaudeville routine appearing as musicians, acrobats, hand to hand balancers—even playing the Romeo and Juliet scene—all with very amusing results due to the faulty work of the stage hand and the very indifferent attitude of the audience.

There are several novel stage gags introduced—one showing one of the theatre patrons coming to the performance with a lounge which he places in the aisle—another showing the actor doing a bar gymnastic act which fails to get over because the assistants in the wings, who are holding the Jay ropes, are drawn through the air and on top of the Hams when they start to mount the bar.

This is a good bet for the entire family.

The Cast

Jack Richardson, Al Alt, Bud Fine and Dixie Lamont.

A Gold Medal Production.

The Story—Jack and Al, two actors, are due to perform in a small town 'Opry' house. They arrive and after a few mishaps succeed in getting started on their routine which consists of doing everything known to vaudeville from playing musicians to the 'dumb' or acrobatic act. Try as they do they can't seem to awaken the audience from its lethargic state. Having finished most of the work they go into a Bowery melodrama scene but during the performance the 'snow' catches fire and the actors become the unwelcome recipients of a variety of vegetables. The story closes with a scene showing the actors trying to sell that with which they were hit.

Summary—An amusing production with all manner of vaudeville gags used most of which should draw a laugh. The principals are good in their roles and the direction is fair.

"All Wool"
(Pathe—One Reel)

THIS Hal Roach production with Billy Engle and Earl Mohan in the leading roles is considerably above the average of one-reel comedies and may be recommended as effective entertainment. The principals are seen as a pair of misfit tailors, striving to make a living at a trade of which they appear to know precious little. Their efforts to please the man who wants his suit cleaned and pressed, the lady who wants to see a cloak exhibited on a living model before she will buy, and the demands of a hard-boiled customer who brings his "skirt" in to have a skirt made, make the way for a number of amusing items. The picture was directed by Tay Garnett.—T. C. KENNEDY.

"A Goofy Gob"

(Educational-Christie—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BILLY DOOLEY and Natalie Joyce have the leading roles in this two-reeler, which is well above the average for this type of comedy. The story is a fairly good one and supplies an abundance of humor both of the situation and slapstick variety. Dooley is a real comedian on the screen and goes through all sorts of evolutions that are bound to bring laughs. He gets some rough treatment in the exclusive girls' boarding school where he goes to deliver a ring for a superior officer, to conceal the latter's love for the daughter of the commander of the ship from the commander. There's a funny situation when Billy disguises himself as the punching bag in the gymnasium and there are numerous other funny ones as the action progresses to its humorous conclusion.

The Cast

A Goofy Gob.....Billy Dooley
An Ensign.....Jay Belasco
The Commander.....Bill Blaisdell
Betty.....Natalie Joyce

A Christie comedy from the story by Hal Conklin; directed by William Watson; photography by Paul Garnett and Frank Sullivan; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod.

The Story. The commander of the ship discovers on the finger of the ensign a ring similar to that he has given his daughter. The ensign denies it is the daughter's ring and the Commander leaves for the exclusive boarding school to ascertain the truth. Billy the gob volunteers to get the ring to the daughter before the arrival of her father. In the wild chase Billy arrives first, gains entrance to the school with difficulty, but has difficulty in finding the daughter. He is summarily dismissed from the premises a number of times, as the Commander waits the arrival of his daughter in the reception room. Eventually the girl is brought before her father who demands to see the ring. The girl, with her hands behind her backs before a huge grandfather's clock in which Billy is secreted. To her surprise he slips the ring on her finger and she proudly exhibits it for her father, who departs cursing himself for a suspicious old fool.

Summary. This comedy is replete with humorous situations and with enough slapstick to allow Dooley to show his versatility. The action is fast and the story well above the average. It should go well in almost any type of house.

"Transients in Arcadia"

(Fox—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

IT'S a real pleasure to sit through a comedy of this type without the customary hokum and slapstick. It's a situation comedy pure and simple, an adaptation from the O. Henry story, which is a good enough guarantee for any story. It was directed by Daniel Keefe, who handled both subjects and players well.

It is really a delightful little tale and one that does not clamor for laughs, but gets them naturally. Mary Akin and Hugh Allan have the leading roles and they do them admirably. Not only is the picture well acted and the story well told, but is splendidly and almost lavishly produced. Miss Akin is the shop girl who saves her money for an entire year to pose as an aristocrat for one week at a fashionable summer resort. Allan is the collector for an installment payment house, who is at the same resort for the same purpose. The climaxes of the story are well worked up and the ending a perfectly natural one, without a false note to mar the telling.

"A Good Program Must Have Novelties"

729 7th Ave. RED SEAL PICTURES New York City

EDWIN MILES FADMAN, Pres.

The Cast

Mamie.....Mary Akin
Farrington.....Hugh Allan
Rosie.....Yvenne Howell
Mrs. Beaumont.....Marie Walcamp
Mr. Beaumont.....Anthony Merle

An O. Henry story, directed by Daniel Keefe. Supervised by George Marshall.

The Story.—Mamie is a New York shopgirl who saved for an entire year that she may pose at an exclusive Summer resort for one week as an aristocrat and perhaps win for herself a "Prince Charming." Farrington is collector for an installment payment concern who is at the resort for the same purpose. A series of humorous incidents invariably throw them together. In the end when Farrington calls at the shop for Mamie's installment each is revealed in his and her true character. They reveal their love for each other and start for a honeymoon at Coney Island.

Summary.—This is a real high class and real amusing comedy, whose humor is based on situations alone, and whose situations are so naturally brought about that the humor is spontaneous. This will not appeal to those who clamor only for slapstick and hokum in their comedies, but it will be highly amusing for those to whom a real comedy has an appeal.

"Roomers Afloat"

(Bischoff, Inc.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

YOUR patrons should get many a laugh out of this comedy which details the efforts of a couple of young rent-dodgers to escape from their room unbeknownst to the landlady, in which effort they are successful but only after considerable trouble to themselves and a couple of strangers.

The opening scene shows them in their room about to arise but halted when they hear the landlady's knock on the door. They tear a sheet and tie it between the bed post and the door but when the landlady pulls open the door the bed folds up and they are 'hors de combat.' The lady of the house takes their clothes.

Espying two men on the street in front of their window the boys fashion grappling hooks out of sheets and clothes-hangers and, paying them out through the window, succeed in hooking the strangers and drawing them up to the room whence they strip them and clothe themselves. The director has worked up this gag to a laugh-producing affair as the boys in an effort to lower the disrobed strangers to the street start a see-saw affair finally hanging the strangers out the window and making their exit.

They are pursued and, having run into a modiste's shop, proceed to perform all kinds of stunts to elude their pursuers but are caught, disrobed and knocked out.

The bed room scenes and those in the modiste's shop should draw a mirthful response from your patrons.

(The Cast)

Jack Cooper, Jack Richardson, Ilona Marlowe and Agnes Steele.

The Story—Tom and Jerry, unable to pay their rent, are left clothesless in their room by the landlady. Seeing two strangers on the street in front of their room they hook them up by means of torn sheets and clothes hangers and strip them of their clothes, leaving the disrobed ones dangling from the window ledge. Tom and Jerry leave the room but are pursued by the police and dodge into a modiste's shop. They are followed and a merry chase ensues in which Tom and Jerry perform all sorts of stunts in an effort to hide from the police, but they are finally caught, stripped and beaten and left in an alcove in the shop. They form an unconscious tableau when a mannequin draws back the curtains to display some gowns.

Summary—An hilarious farce with many mirth-provoking gags interspersed throughout a thin story. The production is well mounted and the direction is of good quality.

"Slippery Feet"

(Educational—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

BOBBY VERNON has some fast comedy stuff in this two reeler, which suffers only from repetition. The first reel is devoted almost entirely to comedy dancing which would be considerably funnier if there was only about half as much of it. Ditto for the second reel in which Bobby is disguised as Bad Dan Derby when Bad Dan puts in an appearance at the exclusive party and the guests become confused as to which is the real one. Both the deception and chase continue entirely too long in an effort to crowd in a few more laughs, which would be more readily forthcoming if they were not so eagerly sought. There is much wild slapstick throughout.

The Cast

Bobby.....Bobby Vernon
Frances.....Frances Lee
George.....George Hall
Aunt Muscena.....Blanche Payson

A Christy comedy, directed by Harold Beaudine; photography by Paul Garnett and Frank Sullivan; cartoons by Norman Z. McLeod.

The Story. Bobby is the guest at the party given for Frances, and George is his rival. George connives so that Bobby is compelled to dance with Aunt Muscena, while he dances with Frances, but Bobby outwits him. George then bets Bobby he cannot disguise himself as Bad Dan Derby and deceive the party into believing he is the real Dan. Bobby dons the disguise as the real Dan appears. The guests are robbed of their jewels by Bobby, who returns them, and they are then taken by the real Dan, from whom Bobby steals them and again returns them. The police arrive and take Bobby for the real culprit, but after much confusion he turns over the real Dan to them.

Summary. A rather fast moving comedy which would be more effective without so much of repetition. There are some humorous situations in it and an abundance of lapstick. All together it should be good for a few laughs in the neighborhood houses.

"A Taxi War"

(Universal-Century—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Chester J. Smith)

EDDIE GORDON is featured in this two reeler, which is purely slapstick and not too entertaining. It is just a succession of alleged comedy situations that are almost too ridiculous to be really funny. It is first the old story of trying to dodge the landlady and later develops into a taxicab war between Gordon and his Pal who are working for rival companies.

The Story. Eddie and his pal after repeatedly standing off the landlady, find the door of their room barricaded and escape cut off. Eddie endeavors to make his escape across a wire to a telegraph pole, but the wire breaks and he swings back into the room, breaking the barricade from the door. They make their getaway and Eddie sneaks into the garage and gets his cab, as his pal is fired for being late. The latter appeals to a rival company for a job promising to take all the business from his late pal. It is then a chase between them for customers with all sorts of devices resorted to to secure business.

Summary. This is a slapstick comedy with a lot of knockabout stuff that will hardly get laughs except in some of the smaller neighborhood houses.

Film Facts "H"

(Red Seal—One Reel)

THIS number of the series deals with the ancient art of glass shaping by the blowing process and hand turning. The spectator is taken in to the factory and each step in the manufacturing of glass receptacles is shown from the molding to the final planing process. It is an entertaining and instructive number of the series.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Short Subjects and Serials

Work Started on Second Half of Fox Comedies

There has been no let up in production at the Fox West Coast studios even though the halfway mark in comedy production was passed a few days ago. Under the general supervision of George E. Marshall, Tom Buckingham is engaged on a new Helen and Warren comedy as yet untitled. Charles Sellon and Tiny Sanford have been added to the cast. Earle Foxe is working on a Van Bibber, and Georgie Harris and Barbara Luddy are making the second Irish-Jewish comedy.

Carroll Nye, juvenile comedian, has been signed to play leads in the series of O. Henry comedies, under the direction of Robert Kerr.

Walter Hiers is Ready to Resume Work

Following an injury which compelled him to stop work for several weeks, Walter Hiers will return to the Christie studios next week to resume his comedies for Educational release. A number of his fingers were damaged while making a scene in a current production.

Gale Henry in Standard Fat Men Comedy

Gale Henry has been assigned to the feminine lead in Joe Rock's Standard comedy now in production for F.B.O. release. She will play opposite "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander, the featured players. The comedy, a two-reeler, has not yet been titled.

Clyde Cook makes his debut as a Pathe comedy star in "Moonlight and Noses," a two-reeler produced by Hal Roach. The scenes are taken from the picture.

Alice Day is starred in "A Sweet Pickle," a two-reel Mack Sennett comedy from which these scenes are taken. Released by Pathe.

Succeeds With Short Subjects

Harrisburg, Pa., Broad Street Theatre Profits With First Experimental Program

THE first exclusively short subject program ever put on at a motion pictnre theatre in Harrisburg, Pa.—one of the few, in fact, ever presented in the Central Pennsylvania district—was tried as an experiment in the Broad street theatre, Third and Broad streets, that city, on Wednesday, October 14, and was declared by the management to have been a success beyond all expectations.

Oscar B. Feldser, one of the proprietors of the theatre, who is the house manager, declared that the short subject program, which consisted entirely of comedies, with the exception of a Fox news reel, brought entirely satisfactory returns and as a result of the one-day experiment the Broad street theatre will put on a similar program every other Wednesday as a permanent proposition.

None of the numbers on the program was of greater length than two reels. The numbers consisted of:

The two-reel "Our Gang" comedy, "Commencement Day," released by Pathe.

One reel of "Fun From The Press," (Literary Digest) released by the Producers Distributing Corporation.

Two-reel Mermaid comedy, "Motormad," Educational Pictures Incorporated.

One reel of Lyman Howe's travel pictures, "Earth's Oddities," including comedy cartoons, Educational Pictures, Incorporated.

The two-reel Christie Comedy, "Step Fast," also released by Educational.

One reel of Fox News films.

In his newspaper advertisements Mr. Feldser mentioned each of the program numbers individually. He said in an interview afterward that he made the selection of each attraction on the basis of his own judgment, instead of depending on any individual booking concern to prepare the combined program.

Mr. Feldser, who is looked upon in Harrisburg as a particularly astute and progressive exhibitor, is a partner with Samuel Katzman, also of Harrisburg, in the ownership and operation of the theatre.

"For six months," said Mr. Feldser, "we had been considering the wisdom of experimenting with an exclusively short-subject program and finally decided to try it. It was my thought that the public would be slow to respond to the novelty but I was surprised beyond all expectations when we did 20 per cent more business than usual, on the first day of the try-out. That convinced me that the public wants that sort of program, and the Broad Street theatre is going to give it to them as long as the demand keeps up."

Allene Ray and Walter Miller Broadcast

The Pathe Serial stars, Allene Ray and Walter Miller, addressed the radio audience recently from Station W.R.N.Y, New York. Miller described his experiences during the filming of "Play Ball," a current Patheserial, in which he played the role of a rookie ball player. Miss Ray, interviewed on the air by Charles D. Isaacson, announcer of the station, related her entrance into pictures, why she preferred playing in serials and why she was particularly interested in her role in "The Green Archer," a Patheserial, the filming of which was completed recently.

"The Green Archer" will follow "Wild West" on the Pathe schedule.

Two New Beauties Join Educational Company

Winona Shirley and Anna Styers, newcomers to motion pictures, have been added to the aggregation of beauties who will appear in Educational Comedies.

Miss Shirley is a cousin of Buster Keaton and recently arrived in Hollywood from her home in Terre Haute, Indiana, where she completed her education a short time ago. Miss Styers is of the celebrated Dominguez family, which once owned the land on which San Pedro, Long Beach and Torrence, Cal., are located, under a land grant from the Spanish King when California was a Spanish colony.

Historic Figures In New Universal Serial

Alexander Graham Bell and Theodore N. Vail, whose genius contributed much to the development of the telephone, will be characterized in the new Universal serial titled "Strings of Steel," a ten-chapter play dealing with the invention and development of the telephone. Ted Duncan will impersonate the character of Vail and Alphonse Martel will appear as Bell. The picture is being directed by Henry McRae with William Desmond and Eileen Sedgwick in the featured roles.

Rock Making New Standard Comedy for F. B. O.

"Look Out Below" is the working title of the current Joe Rock Standard comedy featuring "Fat" Karr, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fatty" Alexander. Besides the featured players the cast will include Gale Henry and Lois Boyd, the latter a recent discovery of Rock's. Slim Summerville is handling the megaphone.

Upon completion of this vehicle Rock will begin production of a Blue Ribbon comedy featuring Alice Ardell.

Walter Lewis is Added to "Green Archer" Cast

Walter P. Lewis has been added to the cast of "The Green Archer," the new Patheserial now in production and featuring Allene Ray and Walter Miller. The serial is an adaptation of the Edgar Wallace novel prepared by Frank Leon Smith and directed by Spencer Bennett. It will be released following "Wild West" on the Pathe schedule.

Fox Starts Production on Two Two-Reelers

Two new comedies have been started by Fox in the Helen and Warren and O. Henry series. "The Silent Witness" is the title of the Helen and Warren two-reeler, based on another of Mabel Herbert Urner's stories. It is being directed by Tom Buckingham and again has Kathryn Perry and Hallam Cooley in the roles of Helen and Warren. They are supported by David Buther, Grace Goodall, Grace Darmond and Mickey McBan.

"Cupid a La Carte" is the new O. Henry picture being produced under the direction of Daniel Keefe. Florence Gilbert has the leading feminine role, with Carroll Nye cast as the hero. Maine Geary and Sidney de Grey have important supporting roles. Both comedies are being produced under the supervision of George Marshall.

Fleischer to Edit Series for Urban-Kineto

Max Fleischer, Out-of-the-Inkwell cartoonist, signed a contract this week with the Urban-Kineto Corporation, whereby he will be Editor-in-Chief of two new film series "Reelviews" and "Searchlights" for the corporation. "Reelviews" will be a film magazine of current topics and "Searchlights" a series of one-reelers on popular science. Fleischer will have a staff of cameramen reaching around the world ready at a moment's notice to take needed scenes. In addition to editing the reels Fleischer will also write the titles.

Urban-Kineto's studio and laboratory are at Irvington, New York.

"Our Gang" Making Xmas Comedy for Pathe

At the Hal Roach studios the "Our Gang" comedians are being directed by Bob McGowan in two-reeler with a Christmas flavor for release during the holiday season by Pathe.

Great production activity is in evidence at the Roach lot at present. Charley Chase, Clyde Cook and Glen Tryon are among the stars who are now engaged on new two-reelers. The all-star unit, being directed by James W. Horne, has "Husky" Hanes, Martha Sleeper, Jimmie Finlayson, Frank Butler, Vivian Oakland, Fred Malatesta and other well known comedians at work on a picture for early release by Pathe.

"Slim" Summerville Signs With Joe Rock

Joe Rock has signed "Slim" Summerville to direct his next Standard comedy for F.B.O. release. The picture, which has not yet been titled, is scheduled to go into production this week. Standard productions are two-reel comedies featuring the trio of fat men, "Fatty" Alexander, "Kewpie" Ross and "Fat" Karr.

Jimmie Adams Starts New Christie Comedy

William Watson is directing Jimmie Adams in a new Christie comedy under the working title, "A Busy Bum." Molly Malone again appears as Adams' leading lady.

Scenes from "Educating Buster," first of the series of "Buster Brown" comedies produced by Century and released by Universal.

Sennett Two-Reeler and "Our Gang" Vehicle Head Program for November 1st

ONE of Hal Roach's "Our Gang" comedies and a Mack Sennett two-reeler head the Pathe list of short subject releases for the week of November 1st. "Better Movies" is the title of the "Our Gang" vehicle, which was directed by Robert McGowan. The "gang" find a deserted studio and proceed to stage their own comedies and thrillers. The "gang" is augmented for this release by Martha Sleeper and "Husky" Hanes.

"Dangerous Curves Behind" is the Mack Sennett two-reeler directed by Eddie Cline. In the cast are Ruth Taylor, Jack Cooper, Joseph Young and William McCall.

"The Diamond Girl" is the title of the sixth chapter of the Patheserial, "Wild West," which features Jack Mulhall and Helen Ferguson. Virginia Warwick and Eddie Phillips lend prominent support in this chapter.

"What Price Touchdown?" is the Grantland Rice "Sportlight" release. Rice shows in this reel the course of training the big college teams must go through before they are ready for a game.

"The Sea of Galilee" is the third of "A Pilgrimage to Palestine" series and reveals scenes of Christ's early ministry. This series in addition to being both educational and entertaining, is particularly adapted for showings during the Christmas season.

Pathe Review No. 44 presents three subjects of wide appeal: "The Old Man of the Sea," an adventure of a Japanese fisherman; "Feminine Farmers." Pathecolor views of a manless town in Switzerland; and "Plundering the Sea," a camera record of the Arcturus Oceanographic Expedition, are released in co-operation with the New York Zoological Society.

"Wild Cats of Paris" is the latest of the "Aesop's Film Fables," "Topics of the Day," the reel of press humor, and two issues of Pathe News complete the November 1st schedule.

Christie Production At Peak

Twenty-Eight Two-Reel Comedies Under Way for Educational Release

THE Christie Comedy Company is busy with the greatest production schedule in the history of the organization, with twenty-eight two-reel comedy productions to be released through Educational Film Exchanges during the 1925-26 season. The new schedule includes four separate series with Bobby Vernon, Neal Burns, Jimmie Adams, Billy Dooley and Walter Hiers as the stars.

Variety of characterizations is the keynote of the new schedule. It is said the Christie comedians will be seen in entirely different roles than they have appeared in before. A new system in directorial assignments will also be in order. There will be an exchange of directors with each production.

Earl Rodney, erstwhile Christie comedian, has been elevated to the rank of director, and with William Watson, Robert Thornby and Harold Beaudine, comprises the directorial staff. Scott Sidney has been loaned to Metropolitan Pictures for one production, "The Million Dollar Handicap."

Frank Boland Conklin is editorial supervisor of the Christie forces and Sig Herzig and Hal Conklin are working with him. Norman McLeod is chief gagman at the studio.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Freshman"—Pathe, Southern, Columbus

Dispatch: "When football practice starts, the player never knows what may be expected of him. So yesterday I was not surprised to get an assignment to cover a movie with football atmosphere, Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman,' at the Southern. If all movies were like this, the reviewer's life would be the life for me. This picture has just about everything and I want to recommend it, with all my heart, to everybody on and off the campus."

Journal: "If you want to see a duplicate of Ohio Harley's 80-yard run for touchdown against Wisconsin in 1916, then don't fail to see Harold Lloyd in 'The Freshman' at the Southern all this week. Lloyd runs the length of the field for the winning counter in the best Harley manner sidestepping and straight-arming as well as the great Chic ever did."

Citizen: "'The Freshman' is a riot. It is the funniest picture we have seen in years. From the moment when Harold Lloyd meets Jobyna Ralston on train, while she's solving a crossword puzzle, to the finish of the picture, there are laughs every minute. We asked Charlie Weidner to write his own notice of this picture (Charlie being the manager), but he was too busy herding the crowds in the lobby. Please see this picture."

"The Midshipman" — M-G-M., Capitol, N. Y.

Telegraph: "The picture gives Novarro opportunity for some excellent comedy scenes. He is splendid in them. The scenes in the mess hall, the boys' struggle for a pretty partner at the dances, and the spirit of comraderie and good fellowship among the men are deftly and at the same time amusingly portrayed, and the audience enjoyed it all hugely."

Brooklyn Eagle: "Ramon Novarro immaculately attired in the habiliments becoming a future admiral, presents a dashing and quite irresistible figure on the Capitol's screen. Harriet Hammond is seen opposite Novarro in a role to which she does complete justice with an unusual measure of good looks and a flare for dramatic interpretation, which should carry her far in pictures. The comedy in 'The Midshipman' is exceedingly bright. Yesterday afternoon these light touches aroused many a resounding peal of laughter in the packed theatre. Harriet Hammond is attractive as Patricia Lawrence, and Wesley Barry is amusing in the role of the young plebe. Crauford Kent gives an excellent performance in the heavy role. Christy Cabanne, who directed this picture, manifests a penchant for comedy, which he portrays with imagination."

Herald-Tribune: "'The Midshipman' is an entertaining picture, beautifully done. Whatever Mr. Novarro does is right. He is one of the most intelligent, yet ingratiating players on the screen. We believe that the proper way to express what we mean is 'Take your boy friends to see him, girls—he's a wow.' Wesley Barry is very good as an almost grown-up midshipman."

Mirror: "Youthful America will adore this flag-waving story of Naval Academy life. It will warm the cockles of their hearts, and even inspire enthusiastic audiences to cheers. Novarro makes a husky, upstanding, wholesome midshipman. Slices of 'middy' life at Annapolis are revealed with an adroit combination of humor and pathos."

Telegram: "The audience applauded at the end of the picture, and more audiences battled in the lobby to get a glimpse of Ramon, who is shown as stroke of the crew and as an upright naval officer."

Evening World: "Annapolis makes a charming setting and the buildings and grounds provide beautiful scenes beautifully photographed. The big scenes were so arranged as to include the students, and the result is imposing."

"The Midshipman" —M-G-M., Loew's Palace, Washington, D. C.

Times: "They came through the rain and the puddles, in slickers and rubbers, under umbrellas or without them—but they came! And they—the Ramon Novarro fans—gave manager Larry Beatus one of the bigest days that Loew's Palace Theatre has ever enjoyed. Every performance of 'The Midshipman' was packed to the doors. The audience was not disappointed. The handsome Novarro appeals to the girls, and he's such a good actor that the males haven't anything against him, either."

Star: "Ramon Navarro has worn a great many uniforms in his screen career but none has set off his comely face and figure as does the garb of the midshipman in the new film, 'The Midshipman' which was given its premiere at the Palace yesterday. Novarro, let it be said, also is an actor as well, and his acting in 'The Midshipman' is excellent. The film is undoubtedly a true portrayal of the often fascinating development of a Navy officer."

Herald: "The conflict of love and duty interwoven with the esprit de corps of Annapolis has been chosen for the theme of Ramon Novarro's new picture. 'The Midshipman' will make a special appeal to the flapper and to the young man intending to enter a career in the navy. The audience seemed pleased with the picture and often broke forth into applause."

Post: "Mr. Novarro presents a sympathetic picture of what happens to a young man entering Annapolis and the life there. He managed so to absorb the atmosphere that his characterization of Dick Randall is most lifelike and appealing."

"The Mystic"—M-G-M., Park and Mall, Cleveland

Plain Dealer: "'The Mystic' is another fine picture by Tod Browning, that surpasses his 'The Miracle Man' and perhaps equals the later and better production, 'The Unholy Three.' For interest and finesse of direction, it is probably one of the best pictures of the year. Aileen Pringle and Conway Tearle make the picture ring true with their startling, realistic characterizations. These two are personality personified and create the impression of not only acting their roles but of actually living their parts."

"The Unholy Three" — M-G-M., Chicago

Tribune: "Strange, sinister, human, inhuman, brilliantly acted, forcefully directed, with a compelling story that holds your interest like a magnet. A grim, fascinating story shot through with flashes of ghoulish humor that will return to haunt and wiggle an ear at you every time you visit the side shows of a circus. Lon Chaney is marvelous in his role. Mae Busch is darling! The others, all of them splendid!"

"Little Annie Rooney"—United Artists, Strand, New York

World: "'Little Annie Rooney' is a film in which Mary Pickford returns to the type of playing with which she made her beginning, which, is and there can now be little question about, Mary Pickford at her best. I have never seen her more youthful nor lovelier. She is as wistfully juvenile as she was ten years ago, and every inch as adorable."

American: "'Our Mary' is not only giving the world and his wife what they want in 'Little Annie Rooney,' but she is demonstrating beyond the shadow of a doubt that she can look like a little girl ten years old. I know 'Little Annie' is going to delight Miss Pickford's large army of admirers. It is the sort of character she plays so well, and in addition it has been most ably directed by William Beaudine. I cheerfully recommended this play to those who are shopping for pictures this week. Mary is back younger and more adorable than ever."

Daily News: "Here's your Mary Pickford—the Mary of the angelic smile and the golden curls and the fighting fists. Mary Pickford plays Mary Pickford and we like her best that way. Like 'Little Annie Rooney'? I think you'll love it. Mary and her gang are irresistible."

Mirror "The delicious Mary Pickford of 'Daddy Long Legs' returns to the screen in 'Little Annie Rooney.' The audience says it in peals of laughter. The box office says it in huge figures. Mary Pickford is a marvel."

Times: "Capitulating to the desire of the vast majority of her public, Mary Pickford returns to curls, short frocks and to the part of an East Side hoyden. 'Little Annie Rooney' is delightfully filmed and Miss Pickford's characterization is emphatically pleasing. She look smaller than ever. She makes Annie a lovable, wistful little creature. This charming actress has not changed perceptibly since the early days of pictures."

Telegraph: "In 'Little Annie Rooney' Mary Pickford is captivating as the little gamin. There is lots of fun in this picture, and many laughs. Anything in which Miss Pickford appears is never boresome, and in this she is another of those lovable scamps which has endeared her to the public for years."

Herald-Tribune: "Those who have been wishing for the Nation's Sweetheart in childish roles should be amply satisfied with 'Little Annie Rooney.' We think there is not an actress on the screen who can do anything better than Miss Pickford can do it. Probably 'Little Annie Rooney' will make millions of dollars. Plenty of people are delighted with it."

Journal: "The kind of picture in which everybody wants to see Mary Pickford, and she is seen in a role that is absolutely delightful. Mary looks amazingly young, and the 'gags' in the picture are uproariously funny. Don't miss it."

Graphic: "'Little Annie Rooney' is Mary Pickford as you love her—human, natural, hoydenish, generous and loving—she's great. Mary hasn't done anything half as good for a long time, and you'll like it. The story is cramful of heart interest, comedy, and tense situations. The tears follow laughter in rapid fire succession."

Sun: "'Little Annie Rooney' brings back to the screen—after an absence of more than a year—America's first widely popular movie star, Mary Pickford, and judging by the cordial reception with which she was received—well, she is still 'Our Mary' as of long ago. From every angle the picture proved its worth. I should say that 'Little Annie Rooney' would entertain nearly everyone."

Post: "Mary Pickford romps through 'Little Annie Rooney' as a wild, wild tomboy of New York's East Side tenement district. It is Mary Pickford back in her old form."

Evening World: "Unless first indications are entirely misleading 'Little Annie Rooney' will be a popular Broadway attraction and even more popular as the film gets out to the neighborhood theatres where Mary's friends have been most numerous. The story has pathos, humor, comedy, tragedy and romance, and the role of Little Annie is exactly the kind of role which endeared Mary to the multitudes."

Telegram: "'Little Annie Rooney' has laughs and many tears and the vibration from the two are sympathetic vibrations, stirred alike by the happy impulse to please."

"The Live Wire"—First National, Broadway, New York

Post: "A swift pace is maintained in 'The Live Wire' with apparently no effort at all. The comedy stunts, even the best ones, are not emphasized unduly nor played upon for more than their allotted time. Mr. Hines himself seems to be acquiring a steadily increasing facility in pantomine. At any rate he helps along many of the situations tremendously. The star is also blessed with a competent supporting east."

Mirror: "'The Live Wire' is chuckful of gags. The comedy must be a merry hit, for the Broadway audiences gave vent to loud laughter throughout. Johnny is his usually energetic self."

American: "A fat man sat in back of me at the Broadway theatre and laughed so uproariously at Johnny Hines in 'The Live Wire,' I took a look at him to see if he had been placed there by the energetic management to help arouse enthusiasm. But a little later, I forgot my portly neighbor in my own amusement over Johnny Hines in the circus, as a tramp, and a little later, as an agent for electric signs. The gags are well thought out and the plot, while hokum, is the variety that flourishes among our most ardent movie patrons."

"The Live Wire"—First National, Circle, Indianapolis

Star "'The Live Wire' is the best picture Johnny Hines has had in a long time. There is an undercurrent of fun that bubles and seethes throughout. It would better be described as a romance with comedy, although there are moments when it becomes a comedy with romance. Johnny has enough ideas to sink a barge and provide the best comedy that Hines has offered in months. The whole makes a delightful picture that is well worth watching."

"The Live Wire"—First National. Rivoli, Baltimore

Sun: "Johnny Hines is the Fred Stone of the screen. Johnny's pictures are just as clean as Fred's shows, and that's saying something. What's more, they're just as speedy and full of 'pep.' Maybe Johnny can't jump through windows and do all the fancy dancing that sparkles from Fred's tootsies, but when it comes to keeping you laughing—not a mere chuckle or two but downright button-busting roaring—you've got to hand it to Johnny."

Anne Dale, who appears in the F. Herrick-Herrick series titled "Fragments of Life" released through Davis Dist. Division.

"The Live Wire"—First National, Leland, Albany

Times-Union: "There is absolutely nothing misleading about the title, 'The Live Wire,' Johnny Hines' latest film. This up and doing star is busier than ever in this tale of a circus performer, who turns tramp and then nerves himself into a good job with the daughter of the job-giver as the final reward. There is lots of fun in the circus sequences; in Johnny's adventures with a fractious cow and a trusting grocer to whom he sells the same pigs several times. Hines is brazen, but his audiences seem to enjoy it, and since his stories are just wild farces, it does not matter."

"Satan In Sables"—Warners, Warners', New York

American: "I listened for an opinion from the Warner audience and this is what I heard repeated word for word: 'Lowell Sherman is simply grand. I love him in this picture.' 'Mr. Sherman is a good actor and I like him very much.' Gertrude Astor, looking very lovely, is a new kind of blonde. Pauline Garon does very well as Colette and John Harron gave a creditable account of himself. I feel in my bones 'Satan In Sables' is a money-maker."

Morning Telegraph: "A colorful melodrama. James Flood in directing it has invested it with considerable charm. It moves along easily and consistently and there are bright little touches of humor. On the whole it is the sort of picture that Lowell Sherman fans, and audiences in general, will like. The star plays the hero in his usual suave fashion. Pauline Garon is charming as the little dancer. Johnny Harron and Gertrude Astor round out the cast nicely."

Evening Graphic: "Lowell Sherman, 'twould seem, never steps out of his character. Not that Mr. Sherman is the bad, bad man he portrays in pictures. But his mannerisms, his detached air, his nonchalance and aloofness are all with him off the screen as well as on. It's difficult to criticize his performance when one feels he's just being himself. As Colette little Pauline Garon is a delight. John Harron gives a splendid characterization. He is a very good actor and we predict that it won't be long before he's doing 'bigger and better things."

Sun: "Mr. Sherman is an actor who can hold an audience. He makes his role continually interesting."

"Vanishing American"—Paramount, Criterion, N. Y.

World: "One of the most beautiful and stirring things yet done in the films. There need be no secret of the fact that I am going to try to be a weekly patron of the Criterion for at least the next three months. In the broad and colorful curtain which serves as its background, in the exquisite camera work which has gone into the photographing of its far flung scenes, and in the remarkably true reproductions of its characters there is more than any man may digest in a mere visit. 'The Vanishing American' is the finest thing of American history ever done in the cinema."

Times: "From a fleeting glimpse of the aborigines, one is taken to their skin-clad and paint bedaubed successors, and then to the more interesting but slothful cliff dwellers. The battle scene is a work of art, as one perceives the primitive spears being thrown helter-skelter among the lazy mass of cliff dwellers. Here, in spite of certain short-comings in the actions of some of the characters, is a photodrama which is a fine accomplishment."

Herald-Tribune: "Accompanied by the usual crowds of curious, are light, first nighters, policemen and stars, 'The Vanishing American' appeared on Broadway last night. The crowds were so dense that the wooden Indian stationed outside the theatre was scarcely able to resist the onslaught. We cheerfully recommend this latest Paramount picture. Its scenery is magnificent, its photography superb, its heroine charming. Its cast is perfect."

American: "It is a superb piece of work, covering as it does the various periods from the early cliff dwelling days down to the late war when the Indians marched away to do their bit."

Daily News: "It is like a full-throated war cry ringing down through the ages, this epic of the American Indian. A glorious moving picture that has caught the spirit of the Indian of today. Technically the picture is a marvel. Richard Dix scores a triumph. Noah Beery is the usual bland villain. Lois Wilson is effective as Marion. An impressive picture that is heartily recommended."

Mirror: "'The Vanishing American' awed an enthusiastic first night audience at the Criterion last evening. In its subject matter 'The Vanishing American' is a great, humane, romantic picture. In its photographic presentation it enraptures, for cameramen C. Edgar Schoenbaum and Harry Perry have acquitted themselves splendidly."

Morning Telegraph: "'The Vanishing American' may be considered a personal triumph for Richard Dix and Lois Wilson. I believe Richard Dix is permanently established as a star of the first rank, due to his excellent performance, and Miss Wilson, perfectly cast, plays her role with wisdom and restraint and is, in fact, more interesting in this picture than in any the writer has witnessed in the past. 'The Vanishing American' is typically historical. Its appeal will last so long as the romance of the early days of this country lasts; it will be heralded by educators, scholars, mothers and fathers as one of the finest motion pictures of the day."

"Drusilla With a Million"—F. B. O., Capitol, New Bedford

Standard: "The Capitol Theatre was sold out for the two evening shows at least yesterday to crowds that re-acted demonstratively to every laugh-and-cry device in the show world. The picture was 'Drusilla With A Million . . . Mary Carr gives a good performance as the sad, tired-out little charity inmate."

"Drusilla With a Million"—F. B. O., Capitol, St. Paul

Pioneer Press: "In 'Drusilla With A Million' featuring that most esimable of screen mamas, Mary Carr, the Capitol has a knockout picture. Highly recommended. In fact, it is one of the remarkable pictures of the year."

"Drusilla With A Million"—F. B. O., Terminal, Newark

Star-Eagle: "'Drusilla With A Million' featuring Mary Carr of 'Over the Hill' fame, is a photoplay that will set your heart athrob as the tale unfolds. The Rev. Henry R. Rose of the Church of the Redeemer, in addressing a movie audience recently, declared that the theatre-goer needs a touch of pathos with movie diet. This picture will furnish the emotion. Crowded with tense moments."

The Call: "Seen at the opening performance yesterday, the picture appears to have all the heart appeal, human interest and fine acting of 'Over the Hill.' The film has been heralded as one having a soul and it is a relief from the usual offerings."

William Haines who appears in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production "The Tower of Lies."

Pre-release Reviews of Features

Below the Line

(Warner Bros.—6053 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A SIMPLE and appealing story in which that famous canine actor Rin-Tin-Tin appears to splendid advantage. It is out and out melodrama, but well handled, the thrill punches going over like machine-gun bullets, and Rin-Tin-Tin always Johnny On The Spot, busily engaged in getting himself out of trouble, or leaping to the resene of his young master and the heroine. Juveniles will be especially pleased with this picture, but adults will like it as well, and all dog-lovers stamp it first-chop entertainment. Among the many stunts so cleverly executed by the four-footed star, is that in which Rin-Tin-Tin climbs an old tree, pulling himself up from branch to branch, something we have never seen any of his four-footed screen contemporaries attempt. And his technique is peculiar to himself. This dog has real pantomimic gifts and it's no wonder that so many of his staunch fan admirers pronounce him king of the tribe.

THEME. Melodrama, with famous dog Rin-Tin-Tin for hero, saving his young master and girl from bloodhounds, tracking and killing villain and generally distinguishing himself.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Rin-Tin-Tin's fight with bloodhounds and slaying of villain and general stunts. The love story, good atmosphere and vibrant thrills.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Rin-Tin-Tin, the fans all know him. Bill as one of his best adventure films.

DRAWING POWER. Good for all classes of theatres.

SUMMARY. Another Rin-Tin-Tin picture, with dog hero performing wonderfully intelligent feats. Good melodrama, interesting love tale. Should please most fans.

THE CAST

Rin-Tin-Tin ..... Himself
Donald Cass ..... John Harron
May Barton ..... June Marlowe
Jamber Niles ..... Pat Hartigan
Cuckoo Niles ..... Victor Potel

Author, Charles A. Logue, Director, Herman Raymaker.

Jamber Niles, a sinister character, knows money has been left in Donald's care, demands it, and is slowly choking him to death when Rin-Tin-Tin arrives and kills Jamber. A pack of bloodhounds sent out by Cuckoo Niles attack Donald and May, but are beaten off by Rin-Tin-Tin. The murder is tracted to Jamber Niles Donald and May look forward to happy future.

June Marlowe who appears in "Below the Line" a Warner Bros. production.

Below the Line (Warner Bros.)
PRESS NOTICE

THE picture fans who know and admire canine actor Rin-Tin-Tin will be glad to know that the wonder dog will appear in a film entitled "Below The Line" at the ——— Theatre, on ———. This time Rin-Tin-Tin is the hero of a cracking melodrama, with an alluring love romance included. Among other feats, he fights off a pack of bloodhounds and kills the would-be murderer of his beloved master. A dandy story, replete with big punch situations.

As regards the human actors, John Harron plays the leading role of Donald Cass, while June Marlowe gives a fine performance in the sweetheart role. Others are Pat Hartigan, Victor Potel, Edith Yorke, Chas. Conklin, Gilbert Clayton.

CATCH LINES

A vicous dog made loyal and fine through tenderness of youth who loved him. Don't miss the big scene where Rin-Tin-Tin fights off the bloodhound pack, and saves his master's life.

The Primrose Path

(Arrow Pictures Corp.—6800 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THERE is a great deal more sympathetic interest interwoven into the plot of this picture than is usually found in the average melodrama. A straight story is told, without ringing in too many side issues and befogging the progress of events, but the suspense is well maintained without such doubtful aids, and director Harry O. Hoyt deserves credit for a very neat and compact bit of work. The hero's weakness is gambling, with the addition of a too well nourished liking for hootch, and it is through these faults that he finally finds himself locked in the booby-hatch, an accusation of murder hanging over him. There's a decided leaning toward arguments in favor of prohibition in the tale, but not enough to rank as actual propaganda, so that the exhibitor whose patrons' tastes don't jibe with the dry element, needn't be afraid of booking it. All-in-all, what with its clear-toned human note, murder mystery, and well-defined suspense this film ought to hold its own at the box office.

THEME. Melodrama with murder mystery and heart interest. Hero accused of the crime, but finally freed, and winning girl who has waited for him.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Scene where hero Bruce is forced through ill-luck at cards into diamond-smuggling scheme. The mystery of the killing and subsequent scenes with Bruce in jail accused of murder. Court-room proceedings. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Make it plain that this is a forceful melorama, with deep sympathetic and romantic interest, a murder mystery and decisive thrills. Feature Wallace MacDonald and Clara Bow.

DRAWING POWER. Effective for the average house, with proper exploitation.

SUMMARY. A strong melodrama, with human interest developed well, a murder mystery, hero wrongly accused and girl who is faithful to him, possesses thrills and suspense, takes a shot at the over-abuse of liquor, but isn't propaganda.

THE CAST

Bruce Armstrong ..... Wallace MacDonald
Marilyn Merrill ..... Clara Bow

PRESS NOTICE

IF you want to enjoy a story replete with pathos, a tender love affair, murder mystery, and crowded with breathless suspense and excitement, be sure you are present when "The Primrose Path" is flashed across the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This is a picture which the critics pronounce one of the most gripping films of the season, beautifully photographed, splendidly acted and a sure hit.

Wallace MacDonald plays the hero, unjustly accused of murder, thrown into jail, but with his sweetheart, mother and little brother ever loyal to him, until his innocence is proved. Others in the talented cast are Arline Pretty, Stuart Holmes, Clara Bow.

CATCH LINES

Youth treads the Primrose Path light-heartedly, unheeding what the goal may be.

Bobbed Hair

(Alan Crosland Production-Warner Brothers—6700 Feet)

(Reviewed by Frank Elliott)

LOVERS of action pictures will find this one to their liking. It is based on the novel written by twenty authors, each of whom wrote a single chapter. The title, however, is somewhat misleading as the picture is not a society tale but a mystery story dealing with mysterious theft of $50,000 and the adventures ensuing as its recovery is sought. There is an exciting auto chase in the early part which ends in one of the cars being wrecked. The crooks pursue the hero and the girl to a yacht where there are more battles.

The plot is not a very convincing one, the continuity is weak and the acting just fair. Marie Prevost, the star, is not called upon to do much more than look pretty. Kenneth Harlan is an acceptable hero and there are some good yegg types.

THEME. Crook mystery drama in which a society girl finds real love and much thrilling adventure in a chase for stolen booty.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The costume ball. The auto chase and the wreck of one of the cars. The battles aboard the yacht. The artistic interiors.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the names of Marie Prevost and Kenneth Harlan. Emphasize the twenty authors idea. Tie up with beauty shops on the title.

DRAWING POWER. Should draw well through popularity of stars and its good title. A good program picture.

SUMMARY. A fairly diverting mystery drama with lots of action. Well mounted and fairly well acted. Not especially convincing in plot or characterization

THE CAST

Connemara Moore	Marie Prevost
David Lacy	Kenneth Harlan
"Sweetie"	Louise Fazenda
Saltonstall Adams	John Roche

"BOBBED HAIR," the screen version of the novel written by twenty popular authors will be shown at the ———— theatre on ————. Marie Prevost is the star and she is supported by her husband, Kenneth Harlan, Louise Fazenda, John Roche, Reed Howes and other well known players. The composite mystery novel of 20 chapters, each of which was written by one of the 20 authors, is a fast moving tale which keeps the cast going "on high," throughout the picture.

A thrilling auto wreck, an exciting chase and battle on land and sea for the recovery of $50,000 booty,

CATCH LINES

To bob or not to bob; that was the question? A romantic tale of a flapper who did not know which of two men she loved, so she ran away with a third. Twenty famous authors wrote this exciting and dramatic story of revenue agents, bootleggers, smugglers and lovers.

Little Annie Rooney

(United Artists—8850 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A PICKFORD picture of the good, old fashioned kind, the sort that won her the titles of "Our Mary" and "America's Sweetheart." Out of the shadows of heavily magnificent costume plays she emerges, once more the slim, wistful, but at times spit-fire kid that the fans loved and still keep on loving. Certainly the years have dealt kindly with her. Is there another actress on screen or stage who could impersonate a twelve-year old girl and act and look the part to such perfection? Not a single one, not if you fine-combed the U. S. for a double from the Golden Gate to the Statue of Liberty. As to the story, it has all the real flavor of Gotham's East Side, as realistic in atmosphere as it is compelling in heart interest, with rampant comedy which makes an audience rock with laughter. Lots of pure hokum, of course, but hokum with unfailing audience appeal. Make no mistake about it, this is a box office winner, a genuine Pickford triumph. And, incidentally how the kiddies will enjoy it!

THEME. Comedy-melodrama, East Side atmosphere, gangster stuff, humorous episodes, Mary Pickford as twelve-year old heroine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Excellent direction. Mary Pickford's acting. Realistic East Side scenes. Dance-hall shooting. Episode where Mary gives blood for transfusion to save Joe's life. The pleasing finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Just tell patrons it's a Pickford picture with Mary playing a child role as convincingly and appealingly as she did in the old days. One love with first girl ha has ever seen. The melodramatic pathos and comedy.

DRAWING POWER. They'll flock to see this one wherever it is shown.

SUMMARY. A fine production and great box office bet. Mary Pickford back in the youngster type of role that made her famous. Wonderful East Side atmosphere, melodramatic thrills, pathos, bright comedy.

THE CAST

Little Annie Rooney	Mary Pickford
Joe Kelly	William Haines
Officer Rooney	Walter James
Able Levy	Spec O'Donnell
Tony	Carlo Schipa
Mamie	Vola Vale
Spider	Hugh Fay

Author, Katherine Hennessy. Directed by William Beaudine.

SYNOPSIS: Little Annie Rooney keeps house for her father-cop and brother Tim, and incidentally is leader of a gang of kids whom she heads in many brick-throwing and hand-to-hand scraps. She is a great admirer of big Joe Kelley whom she is fully determined to marry some day. During a dance-hall brawl officer Rooney is shot and killed and Joe Kelley blamed. Brother Tim avenges his father by putting a bullet in Joe. Annie, who knows him to be innocent, saves Joe's life by giving her blood for transfusion. All ends happily.

Little Annie Rooney (United Artists)

PRESS NOTICE

MARY PICKFORD in "Little Annie Rooney," her new film, is the star attraction at the ————Theatre on ————. She is seen in one of the kid roles which made her famous, a pert, scrappy but tender-hearted girl of New York's East Side. The story is replete with melodrama and bright comedy. Mary Pickford never acted better or looked more childish. This is a rare treat for all movie-goers, Besides Miss Pickford, the cast includes such prominent players as William Haines, Vola Vale, Joe Butterworth and Eugene Jackson.

CATCH LINES

Mary Pickford at her best, in the sort of role that made her famous—that of a twelve-year old kid. You can't afford to miss this picture, with its combined humor, pathos and pungent melodrama of the East Side.

Red Hot Tires

(Warner Bros.—6600 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A CRAZILY funny farce comedy, as much a stunt picture as anything else, and carrying out the title's suggestion by hitting up a red hot pace from start to finish! There are enough thrills, accidents, automobile smashups in this feature to furnish material for a high-speed serial, it got a tremendous reception and kept the on-lookers in a continuous uproar of laughter during its initial showing at Warner's Theatre, New York; and gives every indication of being a money-maker wherever it is billed. Of course, it's all sheer "foolishment" but the masses will certainly like it, and there's additional lure in the development of the love affair between hero and heroine, which is ever in evidence all through a medley of exciting situations, crowded one upon the heels of another. Director Erle C. Kenton surely stepped on the gas when he made this one and the result is a cracking good audience film.

The principals, Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, are busier than bees in swarming time all the way through. Both do excellent work and are well supported. Photography is well up to standard mark.

THEME. Farce comedy. Young society man, driving auto, temporarily loses nerve through accident, regains it and has innumerable adventures chasing around after girl he falls in live with.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The fast action and slapstick comedy. Scene where Monte Blue pursues crooks who have seized girl, grabbing a fresh machine, whenever one he is driving breaks down. The amusing climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play this up as a regular hurricane farce comedy, chockful of excitement, hair-raising accidents and so forth. Feature Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller.

DRAWING POWER. Suitable for any house.

SUMMARY. Has whirlwind action, many thrills, smashup stunts galore. Is a sure box office bet wherever they want speed and undiluted farce comedy.

THE CAST

Easy Going Gordon

(Gerson Pictures Corp.)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

ANOTHER of Richard Holt's gingery pictures in which he puts his usual energy and agility into a number of clever stunts. It's snappy comedy-drama, not so much to the plot, but plenty of excitement running wild, lots of fun, and a queer twist to the general run of things when Richard suddenly gets hep that his girl is disgusted with his lack of ambition and his dad about to topple into bankruptcy. Whereupon he reforms and changes into a regular demon of speed and resourcefulness. It isn't the kind of film that members of the high brow contingent are apt to endorse, but it does furnish cheerful, brisk action entertainment, and as such, will please a large percentage of movie-goers. This should do well at the box office in the neighborhood and smaller houses. Duke Worne has done a nice job in directing this one, and has retained it within just the right limit of footage.

The star, besides his athletic feats, puts effective humor-seasoning into his portrayal of the hero role, Kathryn, as the heroine, is pretty, has little to do, but does that little well,

THEME. Comedy drama, enlivened by stunts of Richard Holt in hero role, he having suddenly resolved to make good with father and sweetheart, which he does, surprising everybody.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The big chasing scenes, from automobile to train, from train to ferry-boat, and finally to aeroplane, with hero keeping ahead, finally captured, but winning out in end and getting the girl.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the novel idea of hero going into get-rich-quick business with two hold-up men. Feature Holt's stunts, the comedy and romance.

DRAWING POWER. O. K. for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Typical Richard Holt picture, comedy drama, not quite so many stunts as in former productions, but enough to throw the thrills. Cheerful entertainment, will please lots of folks in average houses.

THE CAST

Gordon Palmer ..... Richard Holt
Aileen Merton ..... Kathryn McGuire
Slung Williams ..... Gordon Russell
Beef O'Connell ..... Fernando Galvez
Judson ..... Roy Cushing
George Elvin ..... Harris Gordon

Author, Grover Jones. Director, Duke Worne.

SYNOPSIS. Gordon Palmer, rich man's son, is slothfully lazy, until his sweetheart quarrels with him, and two hold-up men frisk them both for their jewelry, including Aileen's engagement ring. Gordon, at last aroused, pursues and scares thieves into returning ring. Later he goes into partnership with them in a get-rich-quick scheme. Financial ruin threatens his father and Gordon goes after proxies to save the situation. His crook friends, Gordon and proxies, all get tremendously mixed up in the chase, but Gordon triumphs and wins Aileen.

Flower of Night

(Paramount—6374 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER wrote this story especially for the purpose of starring Pola Negri, and succeeded in providing that brilliant actress with a role in which she shines resplendent. The action takes place in California in the days after the gold rush, when the Vigilantes arose to restore law and order in their own lawless, but unquestionably effective way. The tale doesn't differ a whole lot from scores of others dealing with that period, which have reached the screen, but it is none the less colorful, intense; and the combination of Paul Bern's skillful direction and Miss Negri's superb acting places this feature in the front rank of the season's most entertaining productions. Miss Negri, as Carlota, daughter of an old, impoverished Spanish Don, gives what many of her numerous admirers will consider her best performance on the screen. In her varying and subtly expressed moods of love, hate, terror and triumph, she is always convincing, swaying her audience as only a born actress could do.

THEME. Melodrama of California in year 1856. Heroine, daughter of improverished Spanish Don, who falls in love with young American and wins him after numerous adventures with Vigilantes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The even continuity, sweeping action, colorful backgrounds. Carlota's adventures in dance hall. Scene where she saves lover after he is wounded defending mine from attack. The crashing finish.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill as Pola Negri's best screen performance. Play up names of supporting cast. Advertise film's tremendous melodramatic power.

DRAWING POWER. Should get the money in any theatre.

SUMMARY. A great Pola Negri picture, with role which gives her best acting chance she has ever had, and of which she takes full advantage. Melodrama of Vigilante days in California, sweeping action, continuous thrills and love interest.

THE CAST

Carlota y Villalon ..... Pola Negri
Don Geraldo y Villalon ..... Joseph Dowling
John Basset ..... Youcca Troubetzkoy
Luke Rand ..... Warner Oland
Vigilante Leader ..... Gustav Von Seyffertitz
Josefa ..... Helen Lee Worthing

Author, Joseph Hergesheimer. Director, Paul Bern.

SYNOPSIS. Don Geraldo y Villalon detests Americans, who he thinks robbed him of his mine. Against his wishes, his daughter Carlota attends a dance at the mine. He kills himself. Carlota falls in love with mine superintendent Basset, who does not encourage her. She becomes a dance-hall girl in San Francisco and attracts Vigilante leader Luke Rand. To win her, Rand orders the mine confiscated. Carlota, repentant, joins Basset as he defends the mine. He is wounded and she conveys him out of danger. Later, Basset shoots and kills Rand. He is exonerated and returns Carlota's love.

PRESS NOTICE

A NEW Pola Negri picture is always a big event in filmland, and the coming of her latest success "Flower of Night," to the ——— Theatre on ——— will assuredly prove a treat to its patrons. The action takes place in California after the gold rush when the Vigilantes ruled. Miss Negri appears as the headstrong daughter of an impoverished Spanish Don, who falls in love with a young American mine superintendent, passes through a number of startling adventures, and is finally united to him. A great film, with Miss Negri at her best.

In support of the famous star are Joseph Dowling, Youcca Troubetzkoy, Warner Oland and other well-known players.

CATCH LINES

The tale of a flaming Spanish belle who fought for honor and the man she loved in the lawless days when the Vigilantes ruled California.

Lazybones

(Fox—7234 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

QUITE different from the regulation Buck Jones pictures of straight adventure and riding feats, this picture is strongly sentimental, beautifully photographed and directed, aims at and hits squarely the heart target, and stands out in bold relief as one of the best attractions in which the star has figured. It's a sure box office card, has general audience appeal and registers as a credit to the versatile Mr. Jones and all concerned in its production. The small-town atmosphere is perfect, the types just the sort you can see in any burg of similar size, and the whole picture fairly radiates sympathy and human interest. Also, the director had the courage to finish up without straining for the traditional happy ending. For the hero doesn't wed the girl he intended to, but at the same time there's a hint of consolation for him from another source. The rural settings are true to life, and there's a war shot, with Lazybones in France, which is particularly well done.

Director Frank Borzage mixed his entertainment values nicely, for besides the dramatic scenes and pathetic touches, he has enlivened the action with timely comedy.

THEME. Dramatic romance, small-town atmosphere, hero easy-going youth, who adopts a motherless baby girl, loses his sweetheart, fights in France, returns to find girl grown, hopes to wed her, but fails.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. The alluring small-town atmosphere and realism of rural life. The touching sentiment and hero's self-sacrifice.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost this as different from the regular Buck Jones film, but explain that it is one of his greatest roles. Praise story to limit.

DRAWING POWER. Should do good business at any house, large or small.

SUMMARY. A heart drama of intense power and sentimental lure. Different from Buck Jones' usual work, but a sure winner, with general audience appeal.

THE CAST

Lazybones ..... Buck Jones
Kit ..... Madge Bellamy
Mrs. Tuttle ..... Edythe Chapman
Ruth Fanning ..... ZaSu Pitts
Dick Ritchie ..... Leslie Fenton
Agnes Fanning ..... Jane Novak
Mrs. Fanning ..... Emily Fitzroy

Adapted from Owen Davis' Stage Play. Director, Frank Borzage. Photographed by Glen MacWilliams.

SYNOPSIS. Agnes Fanning's easy-going lover is known as Lazybones. Agnes' sister Ruth returns from school with a baby claiming to have wedded a sailor who was drowned. She tries suicide and is rescued by Lazybones. He adopts the baby girl. Because he refuses to surrender the child Agnes renounces him. Ruth dies. Years pass, war comes, Lazybones goes to France. Returning, he plans to marry his ward, now a grown girl. But she loves and marries another. The climax offers a hint that Agnes and Lazybones may yet be united.

Buck Jones in "Lazybones," a Fox production.

Lazybones (Fox)
PRESS NOTICE

BUCK JONES in "Lazybones" comes to the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. This picture presents Mr. Jones in an entirely different role from any he has yet attempted, and the critics say that his impersonation of the lovable, easy-going hero is easily the best thing he has done on the screen. The story concerns the self-sacrifice of Lazybones, who refuses to give up the child of an unfortunate girl he has adopted, when his sweetheart so demands. She renounces him. When war breaks in after years he goes to the front and returns intending to wed his ward.

Supporting Mr. Jones are such popular favorites as Madge Bellamy, Jane Novak, ZaSu Pitts, Leslie Fenton and Edythe Chapman.

CATCH LINES

He was lazy but lovable and loyal to the core. When he adopted an orphan baby, he lost his sweetheart because he wouldn't give up the child.

The Mysterious Stranger

(F. B. O.—5270 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

AS a general thing the plot values of Richard Talmadge's pictures are subordinated to the hair-raising stunts performed by that rubber-and-steel acrobat of the silent drama, yet they satisfy most of the fans who are out for the big thrills, and care little for anything else. In this instance the breath-taking stunts are as numerous as ever, but in addition they have fixed Dick up with an oddly interesting story. He appears as a young chap, who because of certain misfortunes which befell his father in the past, lives with him until over twenty in a house surrounded by great walls, and has never seen a woman or taken a step into the outside world. When he does get loose, strange things begin to happen, as might be imagined, and you can fancy what wild gyrations Talmadge indulges in under the circumstances. It's a film that's bound to amuse, loaded with burlesque touches, red-hot action, romance and wild adventure.

Talmadge is as wonderfully agile as ever and does some good acting into the bargain. The support is fine and photography of the best quality.

THEME. Comedy drama. Hero young fellow secluded from world for over twenty years, who finally emerges into a whirlwind of startling escapades.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Unique plot. Talmadge's astounding stunts. Scene where he walks in his sleep and is picked up by party masqueraders and falls in love with first girl he has ever seen. The melodramatic punches and romance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Talmadge's stunt work, but explain that there's an unusual plot in this picture which ranks it above his ordinary vehicles.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house where star is favorite.

SUMMARY. Another swiftly moving Richard Talmadge stunt film, but offering a more unique and interesting plot than usual with this star's pictures. Has strong melo and brisk comedy values, as well as romance.

THE CAST

Paul Lesage ..... Richard Talmadge
Raoul Lesage ..... Joseph Swickard
April Lesage ..... Carmelita Geraghty
Herman Bennett ..... Lewis Sheldon
Helen Dresden ..... Duane Thompson
Arnold ..... Bert Bradley
Chauffeur ..... Robert Carleton

Scenario by James Bell Smith. Directed by Jack Nelson.

SYNOPSIS. Unjustly suspecting intimacy between his wife, April and Bennett, an artist, Raoul Lesage forsakes her and lives for over twenty years in a house surrounded by high walls, with his young son Paul. Latter has never seen a woman or the outside world. One night he walks in his sleep and gets out. Fate throws him into the company of Bennett, the latter's ward, Helen, with whom Paul falls in love, and April. After participating in a whirl of adventures, he foils Bennett and carries off Helen and April, who is reconciled to her husband, while Paul weds the girl he loves.

PRESS NOTICE

ANOTHER Richard Talmadge picture, alive with the extraordinary stunts for which this star is noted, but offering in addition a unique plot. This is "The Mysterious Stranger" which comes to the screen of the ————Theatre on the ————. Talmadge portrays a young chap, who has lived secluded from the world for over twenty years with his father, and has never seen a woman in that time. One night he walks in his sleep, gets out—and then the thrills and funny situations come fast and thick.

Talmadge works with his customary furious speed and acts better than he has ever done.

Hidden Loot

(Universal—4738 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A GOOD Western with a snappy plot which gets out of the common groove and gives Jack Hoxie something else to do besides shoot and ride. Not that the picture is lacking in thrills, or that Hoxie turns into a meek creature. But the leading role represents the star as a smooth-spoken, wise, not to say crafty, kind of chap, and the characterization is subtle and natural to a degree that makes a great impression on the spectators. Mr. Hoxie surely deserves credit for his fine work in this film. Incidentally, this story furnished Frank Mayo with a cracking good vehicle about four years ago, which was very successful. The narrative has undergone considerable changes, but the indications are that it will make as decisive a box office hit as its predecessor. The mystery enveloping the hero is cunningly handled, even the girl in love with him doesn't suspect his identity until the finale, when he stands revealed as a ranger officer.

Robert North Bradbury directed, and turned out a good job. The photography is pleasing throughout, including some magnificent bits of out-door scenery and the support is adequate, with Olive Hasbrouck excellent in heroine role.

THEME. Western melodrama. Mysterious stranger solves robbery of B. B. ranch and wins girl who is part-owner.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Well concealed mystery of hero's identity. Hoxie's good acting. Scene where he and girl hold off attacking party. Surprise climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Bill this as a Western with unusual, but exciting plot. Feature Jack Hoxie as playing a different role from those he has appeared in heretofore, and making a hit. Also, mention Olive Hasbrouck's good work.

DRAWING POWER. Should go over big wherever Westerns are popular.

SUMMARY. Western with plot out of ordinary, exciting, but showing Jack Hoxie in characterization role differing from his usual presentations. A likely card.

THE CAST

Cranner (Slipper Tongue) ..... Jack Hoxie
Jean Hones ..... Olive Hasbrouck
Dick Hones ..... Edward Cecil
Big Bill Angus ..... Jack Kenny
Buck ..... Buck Connors
Manning ..... Bert DeMarc
Jordan ..... Charles Brinley

Author, William J. Neidig. Director, Robert North Bradbury. Photographed by William Nobles.

SYNOPSIS. Jean Bronson of the B. B. ranch encounters a mysterious stranger while out riding. Shifty Bill, head of a gang, steals ranch payroll bag. The stranger and his dog trail the thieves and recover the bag. He is captured, but escapes with dog's help. Later Jean falls in love with him, although suspecting his honesty. Trapped by the gang, they hold their own until rescued by sheriff's posse. Sheriff identifies stranger as ranger-detective. Jean confesses her love for him.

PRESS NOTICE

A lively Western with unusual plot containing good mystery angle, "Hidden Loot," is billed as the big screen attraction at the ——— Theatre on ———. Jack Hoxie is starred as a mysterious stranger who falls in love with Jean Bronson of the B. B. ranch. When the ranch payroll bag is stolen, the stranger and his dog track the thieves and recover the loot. Later, with Jean, he holds off the attacking outlaws until the sheriff's posse comes to their aid. The sheriff introduces the stranger as a celebrated ranger-detective. Jean confesses her love for him.

Olive Hasbrouck is the heroine, with Edward Cecil, Jack Kenny, and other well-known players in support.

CATCH LINES

He was such a slick, mysterious, smooth-spoken chap that the girl fell in love with him, although suspecting his honesty. But he cornered the thieves and turned out to be a famous detective.

Greater Than a Crown

(Fox—5000 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THE usual dashing young American and princess royal of a mythical kingdom figure as the chief characters in this romantic mystery melodrama, wherefore the plot isn't dazzlingly original. Nevertheless it affords pleasing entertainment likely to make a hit with the average fan, although not strong enough for a first-run, big-house bill. It is well directed, R. William Neill having managed the mystery angle neatly, so that the identity of the heroine isn't by any means apparent until well toward the finish. Also, he has kept the action swishing along at a zippy gait, and there are no dull moments in the whole picture. It gets off to a ripping start, with the hero and his pugilist friend being mixed up in a lively knock-'em-down-and-drag-'em-out scrap in a London bar, shortly followed by another bout at fisticuffs when they meet and rescue the mysterious young lady from a couple of assailants.

Edmund Lowe shows up well as the Yankee hero and Dolores Costello registers as a very pretty and appealing heroine. Support adequate. Photography O. K.

THEME. Melodrama, with mystery side, mythical kingdom, American hero and princess heroine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Suspense created by carefully covering up princess' identity through story's early stages. The smart action and thrills. Romantic developments. Clever climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Feature Edmund Lowe. Boost story's romance, mystery atmosphere. Play up as ardent love affair of princess and young American.

DRAWING POWER. A good card for neighborhood and smaller huses.

SUMMARY. Melodrama with mystery and love angles. Depicts adventures of Young American abroad, who woos and wins princess of mythical kingdom. Plot not original, but well handled. Will please average fan.

THE CAST

Why Women Love

(First National—6570 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

A STIRRING melodrama of the sea, with considerable heart interest and several tragic interludes, including the burning and blowing-up of an oil-laden schooner which registers as a very effective bit of realistic photography, and aftermath showing the waves aglow with the flaming compound while an old lighthouse keeper rows desperately to rescue the only survivor in sight, the captain's daughter. The melodramatic paint is laid on pretty thick, but nevertheless, the picture will make a strong appeal to those who like high-tension stuff kindled into a veritable furnace of emotions. The plot hinges on a seduction case, which may possibly be considered "too strong meat" by sticklers for strict propriety. But while not suitable entertainment for juveniles, a majority of adult fans will respond favorably to the absorbing human interest of the feature as developed by the fine acting of principals and supporting cast.

THEME. Marine melodrama, with lighthouse as principal locale, and romance of girl who waits faithfully for lover reported lost at sea.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Attractive marine atmosphere. Good photography. Scene where schooner blows up. Episode where Molla discovers Pearl is about to become a mother. Romantic appeal.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Boost as an exciting marine melo, with heart interest as conveyed by double love-affair, Pearl's betrayal. The burning vessel, and happy culmination of Molla's loyalty to fiance.

DRAWING POWER. Good for any house, except in communities where exhibitor caters to patrons who may not approve of seduction angle.

SUMMARY. A well-produced, beautifully photographed marine melo. Has strong heart interest and plot.

Why Women Love (1st National)
PRESS NOTICE

A THRILLING melodrama of the sea. "Why Women Love" is scheduled as the chief attraction on the screen of the ——— Theatre on ———. The story throbs with sensational thrills and includes two love affairs, one that of a ship-wrecked girl, who remains in a lighthouse, waiting for a long-lost lover, the other, an intrigue which results in a betrayal. There are some remarkably fine marine shots, and a lurid episode showing the blowing-up of an oil schooner. Intensely dramatic and full of human interest, this picture ranks as a great audience feature.

Beautiful Blanche Sweet plays the heroine role, one of her finest achievements, with Robert Frazer as hero. In support are, Dorothy Sebastian, Alan Roscoe and others

CATCH LINES

This girl waited for years for a lover who believed her dead. But her loyalty was rewarded, for he came at last. A tale of women's hearts, true love and false.

The Circle

(Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—5511 Feet)

(Reviewed by George T. Pardy)

THIS adaptation of W. Somerset Maughan's stage play starts off well but doesn't fulfill its promise, as it lags badly toward the middle and never quite recovers speed. It may suit as a program attraction, but there really isn't much to be said in its favor as an offering for critical audiences. In the early reels it develops some capital high comedy, and the subtitles are unusually witty and brilliant, helping the action along splendidly. But this happy mood dies out and thereafter, the narrative moves slowly, the characters seem artificial, despite the most strenuous efforts on the part of the players to instill life into them. The fact of the matter is that not one of them arouses sympathy, you can't feel particularly sympathetic toward the foolish young wife, who instead of profiting by the experiences of her husband's runaway mother, proposes to do the same thing with a friend of the family, and none of the rest moves the spectator's feelings to any great degree.

THEME. Drama of young wife undecided whether she will follow example of husband's mother who ran away with lover, or remain true to her own hubby.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Fine settings, colorful English atmosphere, good photography. High comedy stuff outlined in early reels. George Fawcett's acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Don't go too strong in boosting story's human interest. You have a practically all-star cast to play up, every name of which has box office value.

DRAWING POWER. Lists as fair program attraction for neighborhood and smaller houses.

SUMMARY. Drama with English society settings, colorful backgrounds, first half offers pleasing comedy, remainder rather uninteresting. Just an average program attraction.

THE CAST

Elizabeth	Eleanor Boardman
Edward Luton	Malcolm McGregor
Lord Clive Cheney	Alec Francis
Lady Catherine	Eugenie Besserer
Porteous	George Fawcett
Arnold	Crieghton Hale
Dorker	Otto Hoffman

Adapted from Play by W. Somerset Maughan. Director, Frank Borzage. Photographed by Chester A. Lyons.

SYNOPSIS. Lord Cheney's wife elopes with his friend Porteous. Thirty years later his son Arnold is married and his wife Elizabeth plans to run away with one Luton. Elizabeth invites the old runaway pair to Cheney Castle. They come. Old Lord Cheney arrives, but greets the unusual guests calmly. Elizabeth at times is influenced by the sight of the ancient elopers to stay home, and again to fly with Luton. In the long run, however, her husband employs rough methods and Elizabeth stays.

PRESS NOTICE

ADAPTED from a play by W. Somerset Maughan, 'The Circle," a picture offering a dramatic and unusual story, is listed to be shown at the ——— Theatre on ———. It deals with the temptation of a young wife, mistress of Castle Cheney, to run away with one Luton. Formerly, her husband's mother eloped. Elizabeth invites the old runaway pair on a visit. They come and odd complications ensue. Elizabeth at times is inclined to carry out her scheme, again, in doubt, she resolves to be true to her husband.

An all-star cast is headed by Eleanor Boardman and Malcolm McGregor.

CATCH LINES

She wanted to elope, but fate kept pulling her in contrary directions. How the problem was solved is told graphically in "The Circle."

The Unnamed Woman

(Arrow—6300 Feet)

(Reviewed by Edw. G. Johnston)

"THERE'S one good thing about divorce—it keeps women in circulation"—is one of the subtitles of this picture and it rather sums up the story. There are plenty of women in circulation, high pressure jazz parties, etc.

The story revolves around the efforts of two penniless girls to trap a husband for one of them. They succed in this but find that their prize is debt ridden. An opportunity arises to frame the innocent wife of a wealthy, jealous member of their crowd and the plan is worked out with almost disastrous results.

A very good cast has been assembled and Katherine Mac Donald does good work in the role of the innocent wife. Likewise, does Herbert Rawlinson, as her husband. Wanda Hawley and Leah Baird work convincingly as the fortune hunters. John Miljan is well chosen in his role of the society waster.

THEME. A society drama dealing with the efforts of a penniless girl to capture a rich husband who later turns out to be as poor as she. They are bordering on divorce when the opportunity comes to frame an innocent wife of a wealthy man.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS. Katherine MacDonald's acting, the jazzy party, the fight between the husband and co-respondent and the final confession of the frame-up.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES. Play up the prominent stars in the cast. Bill it as a modern social tangle entertainingly presented.

DRAWING POWER. A suitable program picture with an excellent cast. The plot is old but one that is generally interesting to the average audience.

SUMMARY. A modern society drama with a divorce tangle. Has audience appeal and a collection of stars that lend strength to exploitation possibilities.

THE CAST

Flora Brookes	Katherine Mac Donald
Donald Brookes	Herbert Rawlinson
Doris Grey	Wanda Hawley
Billie Norton	Leah Baird
Archie Wesson	John Miljan

Author, Charles E. Blaney, Director, Harry O. Hoyt. Produced by Arthur F. Beck.

SYNOPSIS. Doris Grey, hounded by creditors, resolves to trap Archie Wesson, a society waster, into a proposal of marriage and enlists the aid of her friend Billie Norton. The marriage is loveless and soon border on divorce when Doris discovers that Archie is deep in debt. Doris takes her case to Donald Brookes. In the meantime Flora has spent the night at the Wesson home and awakened by burglars calls for help. Archie Wesson responds, the burglar escapes and Archie is caught in the act of holding the fainting Flora in his arms. Archie and his wife both sieze on this opportunity to frame Flora whose husband is wealthy. Wesson's chauffeur finally confesses to the attempted burglary and clears up the tangled situation. All are re-united.

Katherine McDonald who appears in "The Unnamed Woman" an Arrow release.

The Unnamed Woman (Arrow Picture Corp.)

PRESS NOTICE

A MODERN society drama that brings to the screen of the ——— theatre such well know stars as Katherine MacDonald, Herbert Rawlinson, Wanda Hawley, Leah Baird and John Miljan. It is a story of how an innocent woman almost became separated from her husband thru the machinations of a money hunting couple. "The Unnamed Woman" is a modern society tangle with jazz and cocktail parties, a lover and a jealous husband.

This fascinating society drama was directed by Harry O. Hoyt, who has many successes to his credit, and is adapted from a story by the famous Charles E. Blaney. It should be a real treat for the fans.

CATCH LINES

The story of how an innocent wife almost paid the penalty—A whirl of modern society life with a jealous husband and the eternal triangle.

Regional News from Correspondents

Milwaukee

FEBRUARY 15 has been tentatively set as the date of the formal opening of the new Bay View Theatre being erected for Walter A. Baier of the Walter A. Baier Film Company. The new house will be located in the rapidly developing Bay View section of the city. It will be fitted and equipped to take its place with the finest neighborhood theatres in the city.

E. J. Vollert, formerly manager of the Ideal Theatre at Fond du Lac, has purchased the Liberty Theatre at Milwaukee from Charles Washicheck. The house is well located and under Vollert's capable direction is expected to rank as one of the best bets in the outlying districts of the city.

E. C. Prinsen, general manager of the Fond du Lac Theatres Company of Fond du Lac, Wis., has resigned his position. His plans for the future have not been announced, but it is expected that he will seek new fields to conquer, without leaving the film industry.

Charles Bauman, manager of the Star Theatre at Oshkosh, Wis., visited his friends on the Milwaukee film row during the past week. He appeared optimistic about the season's prospects.

J. Stanley Wolf, traveling auditor for the Producers Distributing Corporation, has gone on to Minneapolis, after spending the past two weeks at the Milwaukee branch of the organization.

Edward Klein has been named manager of the poster department of the recently established Milwaukee branch of the Fox Film Corporation, which is now "hitting on all six."

Several major changes were made in the staff of the Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation during the past week. Tom McConnell, formerly with Paramount and Pathe, has been assigned to the Fox River Valley sales territory for P. D. C., while Dave Levin of Detroit has been placed in the western Wisconsin territory. George Lemonoff, another salesman, has been transferred to P. D. C.'s Minneapolis branch.

Miss Eva Reichelm, formerly secretary to O. J. Wooden, manager of the Garden Theatre, has taken up new duties as private secretary to Charlie Lundgren, manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation.

Leon Goetz of Goetz Brothers, operators of a chain of picture houses in half a dozen Wisconsin cities, paid his periodical visit to the Milwaukee exchanges during the past week.

The Rex Theatre at Racine, Wis., will be reopened November 1, after having been extensively remodeled, according to Frank Steffen, who came to Milwaukee for a chat with his exchange men friends. Those who have seen the progress of the contractors in redecorating and rebuilding the house, declare it to be an excellent job.

Another house that has undergone changes for the better, is the Idlehour in Milwaukee. Max Krotta, its owner, has spent time, money and effort to make his house representative of the better class of theatres on the South Side, and apparently his efforts have been well repaid.

John Lorentz, manager of the Milwaukee branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has returned from another trip through northern Wisconsin and upper Michigan, and reports that conditions in that section are improving.

Among the visitors at the Milwaukee branch of the Producers Distributing Corporation during the past week were Cecil Mayberry, district manager, who stopped over for two days en route to Minneapolis, and Fred Knispel, assistant district manager.

Jimmie Long has been appointed assistant house manager of Saxe's Wisconsin Theatre to succeed Elmer Zieman, who quit his post to go to the Coast with other members of his family.

The prize in the first annual outing and golf tournament of the Milwaukee Film Board of Trade, were awarded as follows: First prize in the driving contest to Parkis Waterbury, Idle Hour Theatre, JeJfferson, Wis.; second, O. J. Wooden, Garden Theatre, Milwaukee; third, Charles Trampe, Rainbow and Climax theatres, Milwaukee; first prize in approaching and putting contest, N. T. Thompson, Lyric Theatre, Fort Atkinson, Wis.; second, Parkis Waterbury, Idle Hour Theatre, Jefferson, Wis.; low gross to O. J. Wooden, Garden Theatre, Milwaukee; low net to Ross Baldwin of the Pathe Exchange, Milwaukee; second, Sam Shurman, Metro-Goldwyn Exchange, Milwaukee; third, Harry Schuman, Associated Exhibitors, Milwaukee. The event was an unqualified success and will be an annual event from now on, according to those who arranged it this year.

Neil Duffy of the Elite Theatre, Appleton, Wis., is going to have one fine winter season, if his predictions made at the Milwaukee exchanges he visited last week come true.

Otto Meister, affable and affluent manager of the White House Theatre, Milwaukee, made a flying trip to Chicago, Sunday, being back at the theatre just six hours after leaving it and bearing a satisfied smile of achievement in regard to the business he set out to attend to. Just what the business was has not been disclosed, but it is understood that "O. L." has another big stunt up his sleeve.

Rapid progress is being made on the construction of the new theatre being erected on the East Side for Joe Cullen, former owner of the Jackson Theatre, Milwaukee. The new house will have 1,000 seats and will compare favorably with the other high class theatres recently erected in that prosperous section of the city.

E. P. Vollendorf, office manager for the Milwaukee branch of First National, now greets visitors from a Ritzie private office that has been equipped for him in the exchange quarters. The new arrangement has many business advantages and adds becoming dignity to Ed's daily grind.

F. B. O. is now established in its new Milwaukee branch quarters on Seventh Street, having finally severed the ties that bound it to the venerable Old Film Exchange Building on Second street. All this week Sam Abrams, branch manager, and Art Roberts, his first lieutenant, are extending a glad hand to visitors who are coming to offer congratulations on the fine new office lay-out. The new quarters are no larger than the old, but are infinitely superior as far as convenience and attractiveness are concerned. M. J. Weisfeldt, district manager, also spent a part of the week at the Milwaukee office to help in the "housewarming," which was attended to in grand old style.

St. Louis

A SLIGHT fire in the projection room of the Missouri Theatre, Grand boulevard at Lucas avenue, at 2.15 p. m. October 16 damaged film and apparatus about $500. The fire failed to interrupt the performance and the audience did not know a fire was in progress. Firemen were summoned by telephone and extinguished the blaze with chemicals. The blaze resulted from a short circuit in the projection machine. The loss was covered by insurance.

J. W. Miller, owner-manager of the Madison Theatre, Madison, Ill., died at his home in Madison on Thursday, October 15th. He had been ill for several months.

Edward Blanton has opened a new theatre at McKittrick, Mo.

The Kozy Theatre, Kahoka, Mo., has been purchased by James A. McLaughlin. It was formerly operated by Mrs. W. H. Felt.

D. D. Cox has given up the management of the Community Theatre at Raymond, Ill.

Visitors of the week included: Jack Pratt, Fulton, Mo.; Harry Mueller, Festus, Mo.; Jim Reilly, Alton, Ill.; J. McNamara of Virden, Ill.; and J. W. Cotter, Moberly, Mo.

Jack Underwood, manager of the St. Louis office of Enterprise Distributing Corporation, will leave for Dallas, Tex., on Sunday night, October 25, to assume charge of the Dallas office for Enterprise. Jack formerly lived and worked in Dallas and has many friends among the exhibitors of that territory. He is a wonderful chap and St. Louis hates to lose him.

Tom McKean, manager for the local F. B. O. office visited Hannibal, Quincy and vicinity during the week.

Felix F. Feist, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was a recent visitor to St. Louis. With J. E. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and A. W. Smith, Jr., of the First National home office in New York, he was the guest of Charles Skouras at quite a banquet given at the Busch home on the Gravois road, St. Louis County.

Leslie B. Mace, First National salesman, sustained a fractured nose and other injuries when his automobile skidded on a wet road.

"Buns" Derby, contract chaser for F. B. O., spent a cheerful night in his Lizzie when the contraption skidded into a ditch while trying to negotiate some of Illinois' good roads. All highways are not concrete in the Prairie State.

Lew Bent of the F. B. O. sales organization returned from his vacation Monday, October 19, all pepped up for a big season.

Pending the return of Mr. Werner, J. E. Flynn, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn has appointed W. B. Scully as acting resident manager in St. Louis. He formerly was in charge of the Metro-Goldwyn office at New Haven, Conn., recently closed.

Commenting on his illness Mr. Werner said that he was feeling very much better. He also expressed his heartfelt thanks to the home office management of Metro-Goldwyn, the St. Louis office and his various friends among the exhibitors of this territory and elsewhere throughout the country and his fellow exchange men and film salesmen in St. Louis for the many cheering letters, telegrams and flowers he has received since his illness set in.

Atlanta

ANNA AIKEN PATTERSON, publisher of the Weekly Film Review, who landed in New York Saturday aboard the S. S. Ryndam after an extended trip abroad, was met by her husband, Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan Theatre, and arrived in Atlanta Friday afternoon aboard the Piedmont Special.

Pat Dowling, director of publicity for Al. and Charles Christie, producers of the well-known Christie comedies, was in Atlanta this week on a visit to Producers and Educational exchanges, who handle Christie product in the Southeast.

T. F. Ware of the Star and Palace Theatres, Talladega, Ala., and T. C. Germain of the Peoples Theatre, have sold their interests to E. F. Ingram of the Ingram Theatre, Ashland, Ala., it was reported this week. The change in management took effect last Monday.

George F. Lenehan, district manager for Producers, was in Charlotte the first of the week and arrived in Atlanta Wednesday night. It is not known how long he will remain here.

George W. Rollins, veteran showman, who has been coming to Atlanta for the past thirty years, is here this year as the guest of W. A. Sanges, manager of Progress Pictures.

A. H. Frazer, a district booker for Southern Enterprises in Charlotte, has served his connection with that company and was in the city this week. Mr. Frazer stated that his future plans were not entirely decided upon as yet.

Arthur C. Bromberg, president of Progress Pictures, had as his visitor last week-end his brother, Mr. F. W. Bromberg, a prominent jeweler of Birmingham, Ala.

Hank Hearn, manager of Liberty's Atlanta exchange, left last Sunday for a trip through south Georgia. He was expected back in the office Friday.

A. J. Borders, who has been traveling for Progress out of the Charlotte exchange, came to Atlanta this week and will hereafter travel south Georgia and south Alabama for his company, out of the Atlanta office.

Tom Little, local manager of Producers, left Wednesday night with his new salesman Bill Wassman for Florida. Manager Little will accompany Bill over the state in order to familiarize him with Producers' Florida territory.

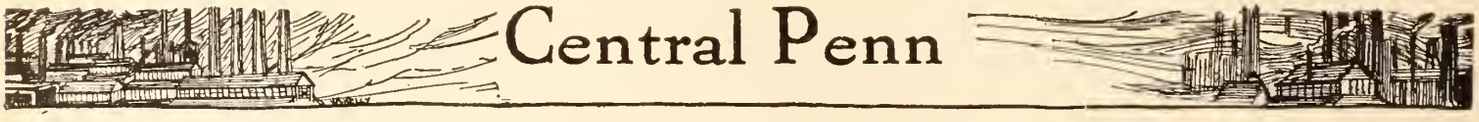
Jack Elwell, Tennessee representative for Metro, was in town last week-end, and left again for his territory after spending Monday in the office.

P. C. Parrish, manager of Southern Equipment Company was out of the city for a few days early in the week. He returned to his office Friday.

E. E. Geyer, exploiteer for Paramount, who left about ten days ago, reports that he is spending busy days in New Orleans and will not return to Atlanta for some three weeks yet. Mr. Geyer spent a short time in Augusta, Ga., en route to New Orleans.

L. J. Duncan, one of Producers' salesmen out of the local exchange, was in town last week-end and remained through Monday. He left again for his territory all set for action and a successful trip.



H. E. Edenfield of the Dreamland Theatre, Augusta, Ga., was in town for several days this week. He left Atlanta Wednesday night.

D. L. Earnest, superintendent of the State Normal School at Athens, Ga., was here this week on one of his regular trips to purchase pictures for the school. He returned to Athens during the week-end.

F. A. Leatherman has just returned this week from Nashville, Tenn., where he spent several days on business.

Walter L. Brandenburg, popular exhibitor from Fort Valley, Ga., who came up to spend several days enjoying the Southeastern Fair, brought his bright young son Walter, Jr., along with him.

Fred Bryan, exhibitor from Cocoa, Fla., and well-known along Film Row, came up to Atlanta this week and remained for several days before returning to the land of perpetual sunshine.

Central Penn

SYDNEY J. GATES, of Harrisburg, Pa., youngest manager in charge of any motion picture theatre in the entire circuit controlled by the Marcus Loew interests, has received a new promotion. He received word on October 15 that he had been transferred from the post of managing director of Loew's Regent theatre, Harrisburg, and that he was instructed to report to the office in Pittsburgh, of Louis K. Sidney, division chief for the Loew theatres, which is in the district comprising Pittsburg, St. Louis, Reading and Harrisburg. It is understood the transfer of Mr. Gates means a material promotion for the young man, who, though only 24 years old, already has managed some of the most important theatres in the Loew chain. Mr. Gates left Harrisburg on Sunday, October 18.

Mr. Gates' successor as managing director of Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, is Russell Bevim, who was transferred from a like post in Loew's Aldine theatre, Wilmington, Del. He already has taken charge in Harrisburg.

A picture theatre that will seat 600 will be a feature of a community building that will be erected by the Good Will Fire Company and Beneficial Association, of Hyde Park a suburb of Reading. The structure will be completed early in 1926.

After having undergone extensive improvements the Poli theatre, Scranton, and the theatre of the same name in Wilkes-Barre, have been reopened and are being devoted to photoplays and vaudeville. Both theatres are owned by the Union Theatre Company, of which Fred Herrman, of the Capitol theatre, Wilkes-Barre, is the director.

Alterations to the Pastime theatre, Lewistown, are rapidly nearing completion. A new ventilating system is being introduced and other changes being made, according to announcement by Isaac Berney, the proprietor.

Rev. F. W. Ruth, a Bernville pastor, negotiates the bookings for the town's only motion picture theatre, which is maintained in the Community Hall.

Flames were discovered in the projection room of the Hippodrome motion picture theatre, Pittston, on the afternoon of October 10. Considerable smoke began to pour from the building and the city firemen were summoned and put out the fire before it could extend to other parts of the building. The firemen were somewhat handicapped by fumes from burning films. The loss was confined to some films that were destroyed.

Peter Magaro, former owner of the Regent motion picture theatre, Harrisburg, which he sold to the Marcus Loew interests last spring, and former member-at-large of the executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was chairman of the reviewing stand committee of the annual Columbus Day parade held by the Italian societies in Harrisburg on October 12.

Butte

THE Tenth of October marked the opening of the American Theatre which has been closed since last June.

Manager W. J. Sullivan of the Silver Bow Amusement company, has remarked that among the hundreds of pictures he has reviewed in previews during the last three months that the best have been selected for future showing at the American and Rialto theatres for this winter season.

The Broadway theatre under the management of Merle Davis is one of the attractive amusement places this season. The vaudeville program is a rare combination cleverly staged with strong photo play that brings compelling appeal to the theatre fans.

Active part in fire-prevention advocacy is being taken by the Montana Film Board of Trade, local representatives of the Motion Picture Distributors of America, by means of a committee of two film exchangemen and secretary Meyers of the Montana Board. This committee, according to the board, will carry out a program, in connection with Butte's observance of Fire Prevention Week, under the direction of Secretary Harry Meyers.

Mr. and Mrs. William Heineman of Universal fame are the proud parents of a wee baby girl born this week at the Murray hospital. Mrs. Heineman was formerly Miss Blanche Martin.

George L. Cloward is at present covering Montana territory from his office in Salt Lake where he is in Charge of the Metro pictures.

W. F. Gordon, Executive manager of the First National exchange of Salt Lake City has been in Montana touring the state and looking into the First National business. Vete Stewart, salesman, has been accompanying Mr. Gordon.

W. K. Bloom, F. B. O. salesman is spending a few weeks in Montana out of the Salt Lake office.

It is rumored that the beautiful new Temple theatre, that closed last summer is to be opened soon and that a big orchestra will be engaged and that only big first run pictures will be programmed.

Albany

FROM now on, it is expected that there will be more news forthcoming from the meetings of the Albany Film Board of Trade. Many of those connected with the Board have felt for some time past that if some of the action taken by the Board in session was permitted to reach exhibitors and others, that there would be less trouble encountered through violated contracts and other things. The Board did not meet on Columbus Day, as many of the managers were out of town, it being a half holiday along Film Row. The meeting was held on Saturday.

Clarence Gardner, who runs the Pine Hills theatre in Albany, a strictly residential house, is busily engaged at the present time in installing a new organ that will replace the piano and violin that have furnished music ever since the house was opened some years ago.

Julius Berinstein, running the Colonial and Hudson theatres in Albany, and the Palace in Troy, does not intend to take any chances either this fall or any other fall, for that matter, with coal shortage due to strikes. He has ordered oil burners installed in all three theatres at once.

Tony Veiller, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, is saving himself hundreds of steps a day through a new office that has been installed on the second floor front of the theatre. This will give the use of the main office to Mr. Hill, and will do away with the necessity of Mr. Veiller chasing back stage every time he wishes to visit his own sanctum.

Ben Davis returned to Albany last week from a short visit to New York city. Mr. Davis has two or three propositions in view, the nature of which he is not disclosing for the moment, further than to say that he will continue to be connected with the theatrical business. Since leaving the Schine circuit of Gloversville, Mr. Davis has been making his home at the Hotel Ten Eyck in Albany.

Meyer Freedman, of Schenectady, having spent a thousand or more dollars in fixing up the Rialto theatre in that city, now has one of the finest residential houses in these parts. Mr. Freedman, however, does not intend to devote his entire attention to the theatre, as he is still casting longing eyes towards Florida, and if William Shirley makes the connection he intends to, it is a safe bet that Mr. Freedman will shortly be receiving his mail around Miami.

Harry Hellman utilized the radio which he installed in his Royal theatre several months ago on the occasion of the World Series last week. Mr. Hellman advertised the fact and his matinees were well attended, the patrons receiving a report of the World Series as well as an afternoon of pictures for a dime. Mr. Hellman is still busy with his camp at Crooked Lake and has now built a very handsome fireplace in the living room.

W. W. Farley, of Albany, has recovered somewhat from his illness of two or three weeks ago and was able to journey to Binghamton the latter part of the week to register in connection with the fall campaign. Mr. Farley is one of the best known Democratic politicians in the state.

Harold Filkins, of the local F. B.O. exchange, is on a two weeks' trip through northern New York.

George Roberts, of Kingston, who has two theatres in that city, is now considering the advisability of buying a new car, and is inclined to talk automobile more than pictures when the film salesmen call. Mr. Roberts is running straight pictures in one of the theatres and pictures and vaudeville at the other.

Unless all signs fail, Robert Mochrie, manager of the Producers Distributing Co. exchange in Albany, will be on his way to Los Angeles in January through the record made by himself and his office force in the present cash sales contest. Last March the Albany exchange was in twenty-fifth place, but during the weeks and months that have followed, the exchange, under the able management of Mr. Mochrie, has advanced point by point until it now leads the entire country.

The many friends of James Rose, of Troy, will rejoice with him in the fact that Mrs. Rose is now on the road to recovery and left the hospital for her home a week or so ago.

Jerry Reap, well known in this city, where he was formerly connected with the Fox exchange, is now a salesman with the Famous Players office in Buffalo.

William Curry has not yet decided as to the policy of the Victory theatre in Cambridge, which he took over a few weeks ago. Under L. L. Connors, the house ran six nights a week. Mr. Curry believes that this is too much for a place the size of Cambridge, and that if the theatre was open but three nights a week, that the villagers would be more eager to see the pictures than otherwise.

Fred Mausert is having exceptionally good business at the State theatre in Glens Falls. Additional competition is in sight for all theatres in Glens Falls on and after November 12, when the Rialto will reopen with a program of vaudeville and pictures.

Tom Thornton, of Saugerties, has the agency for a couple of automobiles and between this and his theatre, in which he is running vaudeville one night a week, he is so busy that he rarely gets to Albany any more.

Elsie Cunningham, pianist at the Crescent theatre in Schenectady, for the last nine years, is now Mrs. Vernon Brand, but will continue at the theatre. Shortly before the wedding, Mrs. Brand was given a shower by Janet Noon, who formerly operated the theatre, and Miss Betty Feuer, the present operator.

Frank Braymeier, who managed the Barcli in Schenectady before it closed several months ago, is back at the old stand, now that the house has reopened under the Farley banner. Up to the present time no definite policy has been decided upon for the theatre. It is now given over to first-runs at a ten, fifteen and twenty-five cent admission, using up pictures booked but not run at either the Strand or the State theatres.

Arthur Adams, of the Happy Hour theatre in Lake Placid, and brother of Mrs. Elizabeth Walton, is back home from a most enjoyable trip with his family through western New York.

Jack Mathews, of Plattsburg; Claude Wade, of North Creek, and Rae Candee, of Utica, are among the exhibitors who have unlimbered their heavy artillery at the opening of the deer hunting season. Film Row is anxiously awaiting the outcome, hoping against hope that venison may be included in some express package received by the exchanges.

Jerry LaRock, who runs Fairyland in Warrensburg, was among the recent visitors in Albany.

The American theatre in Schenectady was badly handicapped one night last week, when something went wrong with the transmission lines, and the theatre was left without lights during the entire evening. The house is operated by Claude Fish, who gave all patrons passes that could be used on the following day.

Jacob Feltman, and his son Alex, took over the Lincoln theatre in Schenectady just two months ago. They like the business so well and the theatre has proved so successful a venture that now they are making no bones of it in saying that they are looking around for another theatre, and in time they may become competitors of the Schine boys. The younger Mr. Feltman serves as the organist at the Lincoln and was formerly connected in a like capacity with the Hudson and Colonial theatres in Albany.

A. VINCENT SEAS has sold the Miles theatre, which he was personally running, to Charles R. Broz. Broz bought the whole building in which the theatre was located.

LeMotto Smith, of The Smith Amusement Company, operating a chain of picture houses in Alliance and Warren, paid the Cleveland exchanges a visit last week.

Harry Charnas has bought out Mrs. George R. Moore's interest in the Southern theatre, Bueyrus. Charnas, who heads the Standard Film Service Company, largest independent distributors in the country, had an interest in the house previously.

Rose Levine, of the booking department of the Cleveland First National Exchange put one over her office associates by quietly marrying Louis Sattler on October 11th. The bride and groom are honeymooning in Detroit where they will remain a week. Rose will be back in the office after that to receive congratulations.

Genevieve Richmond, secretary to Universal exchange manager Al Mertz has chosen Tuesday, October 20th, for her marriage to Arthur E. Engelbert, booker for the local Producers Distributors Corporation's office. They have a new home in Rocky River, a Cleveland suburb, all ready for them to move into, where the welcome signs will aways hang out for their film friends.

William Banks, secretary of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association is taking a belated vacation of a week. His secretary, Rose Killeley is running the office in his absence.

C. B. Dyar has concluded his student course in the local Fox exchange, and is now a regularly registered film man, associated with the Boston Fox office. Just so the Cleveland office will not get lonesome for students, G. J. Hermann has been sent out from New York to succeed Dyar.

W. C. Baehmeyer has returned unto the Metro-Goldwyn fold. For ten consecutive years Baehmeyer was central division manager for Metro, and then for Metro-Goldwyn. He resigned to fill a similar post with Fox. He is now doing special work out of the Metro-Goldwyn home office in this territory.

W. F. Rogers, sales manager of the eastern division of Metro-Goldwyn paid the local exchange a brief visit last Thursday. Rogers has been making a tour of exchanges. He left Thursday night for New York.

R. S. Shrader, central division manager for Pathe was in town last week and held an important sales conference of the entire office. Shrader plans to hold similar meetings in each office that lies in his territory. That means Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cincinnati and Indianapolis.

The new $25,000 Wurlitzer organ recently installed in Loew's Alhambra theatre, was officially dedicated last Sunday with due ceremonies. Ernest H. Hunt, organist at the State theatre, presented an elaborate organ recital which included both classical and popular numbers, together with several original arrangements.

The Marquis Theatre, Crawford Road, Cleveland, is once more resplendent with bright lights. Closed for several months under the ownership of B. C. Steele and his associates, it is now opening under the management of W. S. Glenn.

Frank Hard, for years and years in charge of publicity for the Standard Film Service Company, has resigned. His plans are not announced as yet. Neither is his successor.

Robert Cotton, division manager for P. D. C. is on a vacation trying to forget there ever were such things as motion pictures.

Martin Brown opened his New Lorain Theatre last Saturday. This is not a new theatre, but Brown has rebuilt it during the summer until it looks like new. He added 400 seats to the auditorium, redecorated it throughout, put in new equipment, built a new lobby with new electric light signs over the new marquee and then invited his patrons to come and have a look. Judging from appearances, they were all there on the opening night.

New England

THE Royal Theatre, Lowell, Mass. has been incorporated with $10,000 capital. The incorporators are George Husson, 196 Pawtucket street, Lowell, who will be president and treasurer, and Rose Husson.

The new Metropolitan Theatre, Boston's newest and largest theatre with approximately 5,000 seats, has adopted the same policy in vogue at the Fenway, Boston, of starting its week's programs each Saturday. The other Boston houses commence their week's programs on Mondays.

Joseph Donahue of the Park Theatre, Woonsocket, R. I. was a recent visitor to Boston's Film Row.

Laurence Stuart, formerly manager of the Fenway Theatre, Boston, who was promoted to the Theatre department of the Paramount organization in New York City, was welcomed to Boston for a brief return visit after several weeks elapsed since his transfer to the Metropolis.

Bob Cobe of the Merit Film Co., Boston, was a New York visitor during the week, going there on business.

James Sheehy, formerly manager of the Allston Theatre, Boston, is to be the manager of Alfred Locatelli's new theatre, the Capitol, on Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, Mass., midway between Arlington Center and North Cambridge. It is expected that the Capitol will be completed and ready for opening about Nov. 9.

The Jefferson Theatre, Springfield, Mass. has been incorporated with capital of $25,000. Louis Cohn of 254 Fort Pleasant avenue, Springfield, is president and treasurer of the corporation and Frederick Cohn is clerk.

Charles Morse, one of the best known men in Boston's Film Row, is to be married next June to Miss May Silver, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. B. M. Silver of Gloversville, N. Y., according to announcements issued by the young ladies' parents. Miss Silver is a graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music of Boston. Mr. Morse is a World War veteran.

Nathaniel Finston, director of the 55-piece orchestra of the new Metropolitan Theatre, Boston, comes to Boston from New York, where he opened the Capitol Theatre. He is not a stranger to Boston, however, for he at one time played second violin in the old Boston Opera Company.

Boston secures another New York musician in the person of A. D. Richardson, who becomes organist at the new Keith-Albee house, the New Boston Theatre. Mr. Richardson has been organist at the Rialto Theatre, New York. Mr. Richardson will give a series of solos on the $50,000 Wurlitzer for the present at the new playhouse.

Samuel Lerer, owner of the Rialto Theatre building in Maynard, Mass., has sold the property to Gruber Brothers of that town. The transaction involves nearly $50,000.

Canada

SAM COPLAN, proprietor of the Princess Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, has been elected president of the congregation of the Rideau Street Synagogue, Ottawa. Mr. Coplan is also directly interested in the Imperial Theatre, Ottawa, which is under the management of his son David Coplan, with another son, Joseph Coplan, assistant manager. Both the Princess and Imperial theatres are strictly independent moving picture houses.

Oral Cloakey, former manager of the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, and previously with large moving picture houses in Hamilton, Ontario, Calgary and Winnipeg, is now on a business tour of the United States which is taking him as far as Florida and California. Mr. Cloakey is now identified with the new gold fields at Rouyn, in Northern Quebec.

Peter Kehayes and associates of Ottawa and Montreal reopened the Capital Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, on October 19, this having previously been the Franklin Theatre. The policy under the new name and management includes the presentation of a complete film programme coupled with five acts of vaudeville, programmes changing every week, the change date being Monday. Three performances are given daily and the top price is 40 cents. Mr. Kehayes was formerly manager of the Casino Theatre, Ottawa, and various theatres in Montreal.

Col. John A. Cooper, Toronto, president of the Motion Picture Distributors and Exhibitors of Canada, has made arrangements whereby all literature of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., New York, with which the Canadian body is affiliated, is distributed regularly among the newspaper editors of Canada, clergymen, social workers, educationists and others directly interested. "The Motion Picture," the monthly booklet of the Hays organization, is chiefly distributed in this way, although special bulletins are included at times.

The Classic Theatre at Stratford, Ontario has undergone substantial changes, the theatre front having been remodelled particularly. The manager of the Classic is John. V. Ward, one of the best known veteran exhibitors in the Dominion. The Classic operates under the auspices of the Famous Players Canadian Corp.

Phil. Kaufman, general sales manager of Regal Films, Limited, one of the leading film distributors of Canada, has just recovered from a serious operation for internal troubles at the Toronto General Hospital. Mr. Kaufman has been identified with the moving picture business in Toronto for many years.

Minnesota

SAM SHAPIN, the Warner Brothers auditor from New York is doing his stuff with the Minneapolis branch books.

Lou Hummel is hard at work at his new job managing Associated Exhibitors Minneapolis business.

Ted Quandell and G. W. Turner are new men on the sales force of Associated here.

Morris Abrams of the Metro-Goldwyn offices here is doing all the exploiting he can at Milwaukee just now.

It isn't often that the head booker gets a trip around the territory but Al Anderson at the Paramount office has just got back from a little whirl among the accounts.

John Sholseth of Sioux Falls must be doing a real business at his Princess Theatre. He drove down to the Twin Cities recently in a Hudson of pre-war vintage and went back in a brand new Cadillac.

Ralph Branton of the Educational offices of the district suffered the loss of his father, Robert Branton, for many years connected with the Chamber of Commerce, last week.

Three of the first four salesmen in the Paramount contest list for the United States are working out of the Minneapolis office. They are Fred Benno, Frank Thayer and James Cobb. Cobb's performance is particularly remarkable as he has only been in the film business four months, having come from the correspondence school line.

A. W. Nicolls, district manager of Paramount, for this section, heads the highest group in the contest, leading the nation by a safe margin.

Miss Annebe Barstow of Anoka has taken the place of Mrs. Lucia Comer as secretary to A. V. Leak, Paramount manager here. Mrs. Comer has gone to Chicago.

Jack Hellman, Paramount exploiteer, was all packed up to go to Cleveland, Ohio, to take charge of the exploitation there for his company when he received notice to stay where he was for the time being and so he will remain in Minneapolis.

That was a great trip that Jack O'Toole got back from the other day. Not content with being pulled out of the mud and snow after spending half the night marooned in his car between Hayward and Ashland, Wis., he decided to engage in a little public demonstration for one of the Producers' films in Eau Claire. Herman Swan and Cecil Mayberry, Jack's immediate superior, decided to pull one on him and they had him arrested for using a siren on the automobile. (It was Mike Newman's car, by the way, with Mike driving.) They did some tall explaining and some taller swearing but they were forced to sit in the "hoosegow" three hours before the chief of police could be found to admit them to bail. They spent most of the time studying the Eau Claire traffic laws.

Ben Friedman of the Friedman Film Corporation is up and around again minus a pair of tonsils that he decided to have removed.

Theodore Hays, veteran Minneapolis theater man, who is one of the ace's in the Finkelstein & Ruben organization, has been laid up for several days.

Baltimore

THE Brodie Theatre, 1118 Light street, with a seating capacity of 600 persons, was reopened to the public on Thursday, October 22, after having been completely remodeled at a cost of $25,000, according to Joseph Brodie.

Work on the playhouse was done after the plans of J. Lowther Forrest, architect, and the construction work was done by the Mervis Construction Company. The front is in Spanish Mission style.

The Reviera Amusement Company is now operating the theatre and the entire playhouse is practically new. It is a residential house.

A large circular, cushioned seat has been placed in the inner foyer of the Rivoli Theatre. It is located directly under the art-glass dome in the center of the ceiling.

Guy L. Wonders, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, is limping around on a cane these days with a game leg, having sprained several ligaments recently when he accidentally fell while going down the concrete steps in his home.

The by-laws of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Maryland will have some changes made in them according to a decision which was made at a meeting of the Board of Directors on Wednesday, October 14.

A committee of three was appointed to look into the matter. The members of this committee are: William M. Whitehurst, chairman; Frank H. Durkee and J. Louis Rome.

Abram Eskin, formerly Baltimore representative for Paramount in Baltimore, has resigned to go to New York. He has been succeeded by Joe Oulahan who formerly covered the Eastern Shore of Maryland for Paramount.

R. Ayers has returned to Washington, D. C., as manager of the Independent Film Exchange of that city. He was formerly in Washington and then in Philadelphia for the same company.

Rudolph Berger, Manager of the Washington, D. C. exchange for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and H. Mendelsohn, District Manager of that company, visited Baltimore last week and looked over the field.

Ushers and doormen in the larger houses of Baltimore practically all are wearing their new fall uniforms. Greys and dark blue are the predominating colors.

A charter has been given the Metropolitan Theatre, Morgantown, W. Va., by the Secretary of State and it will still retain the same name as a corporation of which the capital stock is $500,000. All the incorporators are from Morgantown including George P., Henry P. and John P. Communtzis, Norma Lough and Louis F. Tanner.

Services with motion pictures have been resumed at the Associate Congregational Church, Baltimore.

Houston

John McCarty special pep man for Paramount pictures is in Houston and this territory for a two weeks' tour. Mr. McCarty is making the tour in an especially built truck and will help exploit Paramount pictures wherever they are playing.

Ed. Collins city manager for Southern Enterprises in Galveston stopped off in Houston early this week enroute home from Dallas. Mr. Collins was called to north Texas on account of his mother's health, however she was out of danger before he left for Galveston.

Ben Broyles Fox Film Service representative is in town for a few days' business trip. After leaving Houston Mr. Broyles will go to Dallas the home office of the Fox interest.

Theatre owners from South Texas and the San Antonio district were guests of the Richard Dix, Paramount, Company last week. They arrived in a body and went direct to the Bassett ranch.

Rain and stormy weather has hampered the work on the new million dollar theatre being erected by Jesse H. Jones. They have only been able to put in about half time the past ten days. It is hoped that the basement will be completed before Thanksgiving arrives.

Kansas City

FROM all corners of the Kansas City territory they came, those golfers, with clubs polished agleaming for the abundance of prizes awarded in the annual exhibitors' and inter-exchange golf tournament, which was played over the Lakewood Golf and Country Club course, Kansas City, Monday.

So plentiful were the prizes—given by various theatres and exchanges—that virtually each contestant had a "story" for the wife that night. Following the nine holes of the morning, a round which was for the purpose of determining the handicaps for the 18-hole round of the afternoon, there was a banquet, at which merriment was made and hurled to the winds. C. R. Rhoden, manager of Midwest Film Distributors, Inc., was toastmaster. In order to provide a little "spice" to the event, the scores of a couple of well known exhibitors, the names of whom have been concealed as carefully as a "scales" hip pocket, were contested, they being accused of little short of embezzlement. The joke, so the story goes, went over great until one of the "accused" called forth his anger to defend his dignity—then it was all off.

The winners of the more important prizes:

No. 1—Silver loving cup, given by the Newman theatre for the lowest net score, won by Harry Taylor, Universal branch manager at Kansas City.

No. 2—Silver cigarette container, given by Pathe for the lowest gross score, won by Leon Abraham, Pathe.

No. 3—Wrist watch, given by the Mainstreet theatre on blind bogey event, won by T. O. Byerle, Kansas City First National branch manager.

No. 4—Golf bag, given by Liberty theatre, Kansas City, for low net score on first nine holes, won by Roland Thompson, Midwest Film Distributors, Inc.

No. 5—Driver, given by Globe theatre, Kansas City, for low net on second nine holes, won by Edward Dubinsky, manager of the Regent theatre, Kansas City.

No. 6—Driver, given by Pantages theatre for low score against par on any hole, won by O. H. Lambert, Metro-Goldwyn.

No. 7—Driver, given by Electric theatre, Kansas City, Kans., for blind bogey event, won by C. A. Schultz, P. D. C. branch manager at Kansas City.

No. 8—Golf bag, given by Isis theatre on blind hole event, won by R. C. Libeau, Paramount district manager.

When Adolph Eisner, former president of the M. P. T. O. Kansas City, opened the Circle theatre, Kansas City, and started a "rush on the gate" with 10-cent admission, he set a precedent.

Brisk steps and facial expressions smacking of big business were in vogue along Kansas City's movie row this week. N. E. Depinet and F. J. McConnell, Universal southern division sales manager and short subject sales manager, respectively, held a lively sales meeting in Kansas City, while B. H. Goldstein, treasurer and general manager of Universal, Julius Singer and A. E. Fair, head of the theatre department, were in conference with Charles T. Sears, former M. P. T. O. Missouri president and now midwest manager of Universal theatres.

C. M. Parkhurst, formerly with Warner-Vitagraph, now is with the Kansas City F. B. O. sales force, while James Bradford of the P. D. C. sales force left for Omaha, Neb., to accept a similar position with the same company in that city.

J. F. Burke, traveling auditor for Educational, was a busy Kansas City visitor.

E. O. Brooks, serial sales manager for Pathe, conducted a sales meeting at the Kansas City exchange.

H. O. Bartels, former Denver exhibitor and Associated Exhibitor's branch manager of Los Angeles, has been added to the Pathe sales force in Kansas City. T. W. Edwards, formerly with the Salt City Pathe branch, also has been added to the Kansas City staff of that company.

Improvements aplenty are in progress at the Fox branch. Not only is M. A. Levy, branch manager, having the interior repointed, but opera chairs have been installed in the projection room.

J. E. Flynn, Metro-Goldwyn district manager, was a Kansas City visitor, as was W. G. Bishop, Metro-Goldwyn exploiteer of St. Louis.

New decorations for the interior, installation of new vestibule partitions and other improvements are being made on the Best theatre, Parsons, Kas., according to Walter Finney, manager of the Universal owned house.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Rugg, Opera House, Troy, Kas.; Walter Finney, Best theatre, Parsons, Kas.; Charles T. Sears, manager of Universal theatres in the Kansas City territory; Ben Levy, Hippodrome, Joplin, Mo.

Salt Lake City

F. W. GORDON, manager for the local Associated First National exchange, has returned to his office after a short trip to Butte, Montana.

Harry T. Nolan, Associated First National District Manager, is in New York City at the present time. He said before leaving here that he was going there to work, but Manager Gorgon is of the impression that he really went to see the ball game.

Vete Stewart, who covers the Montana territory out of the Associated First National exchange in this city, is working his way back from that section. Outside of tipping his car over, the trip was uneventful.

W. G. Seib has left his managerial chair at the local Pathe office for a few days during a short trip to Northern Utah and the Idaho branch. Seib was accompanied by Ben Fish, Special Feature representative.

Ed C. Mix, in charge of the Associated Exhibitors office in this city, is leaving for a short trip into Cache Valley and other Northern Utah points.

Lon Hoss, who was for a short time connected with Preferred Pictures here, has recently joined the selling forces of Associated Exhibitors, and is now covering the coal camps of Utah out of this office. Hoss will have all of the state of Utah as his territory.

Associated Exhibitors are now planning to put on another salesman to work exclusively in Idaho.

Warner Brothers' local manager, R. S. Stackhouse, is now in Boise, Idaho. George Jensen is covering Montana out of this office, and L. W. Hyde is still in Southern Utah.

L. A. Davis, who has charge of the F. B. O. exchange in this city, is expecting to leave this week for a short trip into Cache Valley, Utah.

A. A. Schmidt, Western representative for the Film Booking Offices, will shortly pay a visit to Salt Lake City from Los Angeles.

W. K. Bloom is due back from Montana where he has had a very successful trip with his F. B. O. product. After a few days' rest he will make a trip into Southern Utah. Joe K. Soloman left this week for a trip into the Nevada territory out of this office.

Samuel Henley has left his managerial desk at the local Universal exchange, for a trip into North Western Idaho.

L. J. Schlaifer, Universal Division Manager, left here this week for Butte, Montana.

M. Aparton has been added to the Universal sales force, this last week, and is now doing his stuff in Northern Idaho.

Joe McElhenney, salesman out of the local Universal exchange, has left for North Western Nevada.

George Mayne, owner of the Preferred Pictures and Super-Feature Independent exchange in this city, is planning to make a trip through Idaho which he expects to be the longest trip he has ever made. Mayne is leaving next week.

All of the open situations in Nevada were closed recently by J. A. Tidwell, Fox salesman, who expects to return to the local office the later part of this week.

H. Bradley Fish, Fox exchange manager in this city, is in Boise, Idaho, for a few days.

Carl Stearn, in charge of the local United Artists exchange, has returned from a trip to a number of Utah towns.

A new salesman has been added to the sales force of United Artists in the person of M. K. Cohn. Cohn was formerly connected with the Universal office here, and has been manager of various exchanges in Salt Lake and Denver.

James R. Keitz has just returned to the local Greater Features exchange of which he is manager, from Pocatello, Idaho.

J. T. Sheffield, General manager of Greater Features Incorporated, is expected to make a visit to this city within the next few weeks.

Andy Anderson, formerly with Fox, is the new shipping clerk for Greater Features here.

Clyde H. Messinger, manager for Educational in this city, has returned from his trip through Southern Utah, and leaves next week for Idaho.

An Educational drive is to begin October 25th, and the local office expects to go over the top.

Exhibitors visiting Exchange Row this week are: John Ruger, owner of the American theatre of Park City, Utah; Mell Stringham, operating the Colonial theatre, Ogden, Utah; Garl Ridgeway, owner of the Star theatre, Kimberley, Idaho; The Peery Brothers of the Egyptian theatre, Ogden, Utah, and C. M. Pace, owner of the Pace theatre, Delta, Utah.

Des Moines

PACE and Bauma have bought the Princess Theatre at West Union. The Opera House at Corning, formerly owned by Hal Kelly has also changed hands.

A. W. Kahn was established as the new manager of the Des Moines office of Pathe on October 12, succeeding R. F. Ballentyne who won a very nice promotion to the position of district manager in the southern part of the country. Mr. Kahn has been manager of Educational for the past four or five years, ever since the opening of the office in Des Moines. Mr. Kahn took with him to the Pathe organization one of his star salesmen, O. H. Garland, who will take charge of the sale of two reel subjects in the southern part of the state. The northern part of the state is covered by Mr. McEwen. Mr. Garland is an addition to the sales staff of Pathe.

J. W. Ross, formerly salesman for Universal has joined the staff of First National and will cover Iowa territory for them. No plans are made by Universal to put a man in Mr. Ross' place. Mr. Allison, who came from the Kansas City office to take the place of booker, has on his staff Al Yarowsky who recently won promotion from the shipping department. It is the general impression that Al worked hard and deserved this recognition of his endeavors. Harry Stephens now wrestles the boxes in the shipping department.

Another change in the Universal office is in the cashier's cage where Elsworth Hull was replaced by M. Lee, recruited from outside the film business. Mr. Hull has signed up with another film exchange.

Paramount Student Theatre Managers at the Edison Lighting Institute

THE Class of the Paramount Theatre Managers Training School recently spent a week at the Edison Lighting Institute getting a complete course of instruction and practice in theatre lighting, arranged by John F. Barry, director of the School, with the engineers and lighting specialists of the Edison Lamp Works. The work done at the Edison Lighting Institute will complement what the students are doing at the school and at the local theatres where their practical training is held.

The week at the Edison Lighting Institute was decided upon so that advantage could be taken of the demonstration facilities that are provided there. Each lecture was accompanied by practical demonstrations of the particular principles or type of theatre lighting under discussion. Demonstrations were made with the equipment of the various departments of an up-to-date motion picture theatre. The students, therefore, were not only given thorough instruction in the principles that govern the correct lighting of theatres but were shown how these principles are practically applied.

The first part of the course reviewed the progress made in theatre lighting practice from the early periods to the present day. A detailed outline of the development of the incandescent lamp was given and an inspection made of lamp manufacturing plants. The characteristics and purposes of each type of lamp manufactured were explained so that the students have adequate knowledge of what style or type of lamp most efficiently fills each lighting requirement.

Lectures on the fundamentals of electrical engineering and on the mechanics of lighting design gave the necessary technical information applied in planning and developing individuality in the lighting of theatres.

The lighting requirements of each department of the theatre were explained in detail and typical illustrations of the recommended systems and arrangements reproduced in the Institute's demonstration rooms.

Lectures on foyer lighting dealt with the use of luminaires, pedestal lamps, and cornice lighting; the selection of hangings and wall decorations to harmonize with desired color lighting effects and the various schemes of rest room lighting that give proper predominance to decorative and restful elements.

Talks on lounge room lighting emphasized particularly the value of light as a decorative medium. Instructions were given in the art of combining colors through the use of portable lamps, spot lights, etc. to obtain desirable contrast and touches of high light.

The lighting of auditoriums was outlined and the general principles that are essential in every lighting scheme applied in this department of the theatre. This included the use of indirect and direct lighting, the application of colored light for psychological effects, orchestral lighting and the relation of light and music. It also included a special discussion on safety lighting.

Lectures and demonstrations on stage lighting covered the usage and operation of foot lights, border lights, flood lamps, "effect" apparatus, switchboard, and wiring; the production of colored lighting and the effects of colors on the appearance of objects.

The sales value of light was fully discussed in its relation to the lighting of the marquee, sign, side walls, poster boards, flood lighting, show window lighting, and other special advertising effects. The students were given special instruction in the use of the electric sign as an advertising medium. Lectures on this subject included the fundamental principles of sign lighting; the proper use of different types of electric signs; designing and spacing of letters; effect of letter size on readability of signs; general considerations in the selection of lamps for sign lighting, and wiring calculations.

Time was given to the study of projection to complement the thorough course in Projection which will be given at the school by Harry Rubin, projection expert of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Theatre Department. The theory of various projection devices now in use and the fundamental phenomena of optics were explained. The study of optics covered reflection, refraction, the use of parabolic reflectors, spherical mirrors, and other reflecting projection devices; the control of lighting by lenses, chromatic apparatus, etc. and a study of the tonal quality of light emitted from different projection sources. The adaptability of incandescent lamp projection to various sizes of theatres, tests of optical systems and the operation of incandescent lamp projection equipment was given special attention.

The course is intensely practical and contained much material directly applicable by the theatre manager. For example, in the concluding session a talk was given on "Lighting for Stage Prologues" in which actual demonstrations were made of standard stage equipment in service and details given on very simple methods by which numerous effects such as twinkling stars, lightning, rainbows, etc. can be produced at practically no expense. Another topic in this session was "Light and Music." This is a subject to which much thought has been given and one of vital interest to the motion picture organization. On the miniature stage available at the Lighting Institute is equipment for producing fine gradations of color. This was utilized in connection with music. Of course, for the symphony orchestra a phonograph must be substituted, but nevertheless the demonstration is exceedingly effective. Several well known compositions were analyzed as to motives and the most appropriate color treatment, and then the principles set forth visualized in actual use.

The students, accompanied by Mr. Barry and Mr. Myrick of the Paramount School, reported each morning of the week at the Lighting Institute and spent the entire day there.

New Daytona Theatre Has Premiere

The Florida Theatre, of Daytona Beach, Fla., beautiful new Famous Players house, opened recently with a program indicative of the high type of entertainment they expect to offer, and an array of prominent speakers to give the new house a most fitting send-off.

The house seats over 1,800, with a large balcony arrangement. It is built on the Colonial Spanish type. The lobby is done in mahogany, with walls of stone and a beamed ceiling, and the floor is laid with pink Tennessee marble. The foyer and auditorium are heavily carpeted in a mulberry shade, and the color scheme for the interior is principally ivory and grey with border effects in polychrome having a touch of gold. The lighting equipment, considered only secondary in importance today to the music of a theatre, is in three colors which may be changed imperceptibly to amber, red or blue. The degree of illumination used in the auditorium is many times greater than used to be considered sufficient for the interior of a house, but in no way destroys the efficiency of the projection, since all lighting is indirect, diffused, and well-shaded. The lobby is brightly illuminated, but there are no bulbs in view. The light comes from a 1,000 watt electric bulb placed at the top of the box office providing indirect but thorough illumination.

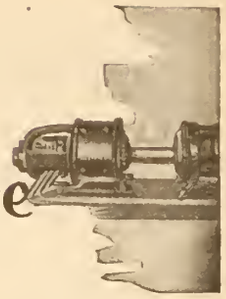
The Audience Doesn't Know

FEW people in the audience know the reason why some houses show dark, unreal, smudgy looking pictures, and others show pictures that are snappy, bright and lifelike. But they know what they like, and they go there—to the place with the CINEPHOR PROJECTING Lenses.



You and your projection man know that the CINEPHOR Lens gives them a well defined impression of a quality theatre.

Inquiries and Comments

An Editorial Bid

GUY E. McALLAN who hails from Millicent, Alta. (Canada) and signs himself Motion Picture Projection Engineer writes in offering his services as Associate Editor in conducting a "Hints to Projectionists" column, providing we pay him his "usual rate." He doesn't state, however, what his "usual rate" is so we are somewhat in the dark concerning this important point.

Here is his letter:

"Dear Sir—I am writing you to see if you can use a series of helps for projectionists as per enclosed samples. I ran such a series for about eight months in the 'Canadian Moving Picture Digest' during 1924."

We are sorry, Friend McAllan, but the Officers of this Journal feel that having one Projection Editor on the payroll is just about all the game can stand. Sometimes the results of even this one editor are doubtful, for projectionists are notoriously poor correspondents and practically the only indication as to whether or not the stuff is getting across is from the way inquiries for information and offer of ideas come in to the office.

The average person is quick to criticize but loathe to help.

Advertise Yourself

We feel that by offering the use of these columns to projectionists for discussions and debates that we are giving them a good chance to advertise themselves in a national way, which, in the long run is worth far more than slight monetary benefits which might be obtained by their shopping around for someone to buy their ideas and editorial services.

McAllan sent in a couple of his "ideas" as samples and we are taking the liberty of giving them here for what they are worth—having written him beforehand of course, that we intended to do so.

Idea number one has to do with the glare from exit lights and states that it can often be reduced without impairing the visibility by inserting a sheet or two of orange colored glass behind the red glass of the sign. The orange glass, he states, can be obtained from any dealer in photographic supplies.

Toning High Intensity Light

The second idea relates to improving the color quality of the light from the high intensity arc which, as is commonly known, is of a harsh chalky white and renders the true reproduction of colors and tonal values in the original print practically impossible.

According to McAllan, "a slight trace of amber color will tone down the white and give it a more pleasing tone. A ray filter for this purpose can be easily made as follows: Get an old photographic plate and remove all trace of the emulsion by washing in hot soda water. When thoroughly dry and clean it may be given a bath of orange color as follows:

"Obtain some orange diamond dye and make up a solution which should be allowed to flow over the plate until it has the proper degree of color. The proper shade of orange can only be determined by experiment, as the color density will vary with the amperage being used. Just enough color should be used to get away from the rather greenish white of the high intensity arc.

"When the plate is ready, mount it up against the front of the projection lens . . . ."

If space permitted we could offer a few ideas of our own for tempering the white light of the high intensity arc in addition to describing some interesting stunts tried out by other people. However, we will have to pass this up until some other time.

As far as we are able to determine offhand, McAllan's "cure" should be all right up to a certain point. It might or it might not work. He doesn't state whether his particular "dyed plate" idea has actually been tried, or not. Somewhat similar efforts have already been made with varying degrees of success—and failure. However, let it ride—for the moment.

Where Can He Get It?

John F. Kraczek, Milwaukee, Mo., is exceedingly anxious to learn where he can purchase a copy of "Motion Picture Projection," by James R. Cameron.

He states that he has placed an order for one of these handbooks with his local dealer and, after a wait of two months, has not yet received it.

As far as we know this book is being sold, or distributed, only by dealers in motion picture supplies, so if your local dealer hasn't it, the obvious thing to do is to write to a dealer in another town. We would suggest, therefore, Friend Kraczek, that you try the supply companies of Chicago or New York, if you still desire this particular book.

Who's "Ad" Was This?

That wonderful little part of our anatomy, called the brain, sometimes plays us tricks by refusing to function when most necessary. It appears that Harry S. Miller, Ford City, Pa., is in this predicament, as you can judge from his letter.

"Dear Sir:—I wish to ask a favor of you. Some months ago I noticed an 'ad' in your section of a concern that specialized in cleaning and renovating screens. Somehow I lost that issue and cannot recall just what issue carried this ad. Furthermore, I cannot even remember the name or address of the company whose ad that was.

"My screen rather needs painting badly, and as I have a gold fibre screen, I would like to get the address of the company who sells this painting material for screens."

Step Up, Advertisers!

Well, Friend Miller, we do not know the particular company who advertised that screen preparation, so we are broadcasting your appeal through these columns in the hope that the particular advertiser in question will step forth and announce himself. If he doesn't, you may rest assured that others will.

Hertner Electric Company Reports Increase

The Hertner Electric Company reports that there is a very marked increase in the purchase of Transverters for the coming season.

The company have just recently received orders from the following theatres:

Bluebird Theatre, Baltimore, Md.; Merlin Theatre, Duquesne, Penn.; Midwood Theatre and Park Theatre, both at Brooklyn, N. Y., and Bellevue Theatre at West Roxbury, Mass.

These orders originate through N. C. Haefele and Company, Baltimore, Md., Hollis, Smith, Morton Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., Howells Cine Equipment Co., New York, and United Theatre Equipment Co., Boston, Mass.

Stern Enterprises Building in New Jersey

In addition to the chain of theatres already established by the Joseph Stern Theatrical Enterprises its plans call for one house to be constructed and five now being erected which will be opened shortly after the first of the year.

The houses in construction at present are the Ritz, Springfield Ave., Newark, a two thousand seat house which will open on February first, the Royal theatre, Bloomfield, a two thousand seat house which will run both vaudeville and pictures, open Jan. 1, the Sanford theatre, Irvington, also with a vaudeville and picture policy which seats eightcen hundred to open Jan. 15, the Red Bank in Red Bank, vaudeville and pictures with a two thousand seating capacity which opens March 1, and the Cranford, a fifteen hundred seat house which will run pictures only.

A site has been secured at 63-73 Kearny Ave. and 52-56 Maple Street, Kearny, N. J. which plot comprises 150 x 200 feet; an eighteen hundred seat vaudeville and picture house with six stores will be erected at a cost of $275,000, and will be opened March first.

Blackstone Amusement Co. Negotiate Lease

R. L. Willis, who is erecting one of the largest suburban motion picture theatres at Thirty-eighth and Main streets, Kansas City, took title to the building site last week. The property, 165 x 65 feet, was deeded by John B. Kassebaumn to Mr. Willis. Mr. Willis is erecting the theatre to comply with the terms of a 25-year lease to the Blackstone Amusement Company, of which George Trinastitch is president. The lease, filed for record, calls for an annual rental of $16,500 for the first five years of the term and $18,000 a year for the remainder of the twenty-five years. Footings and foundation of the theatre already have been completed. The theatre will be a Spanish type building, designed by the architectural firm of DeFoe & Besecke and will have a seating capacity of 3,000. An attempt will be made to have the house in operation by January 1. The Blackstone Amusement Company also operates the Isis theatre of Kansas City. Jack Roth, manager of that house, also will be in charge of the new theatre.

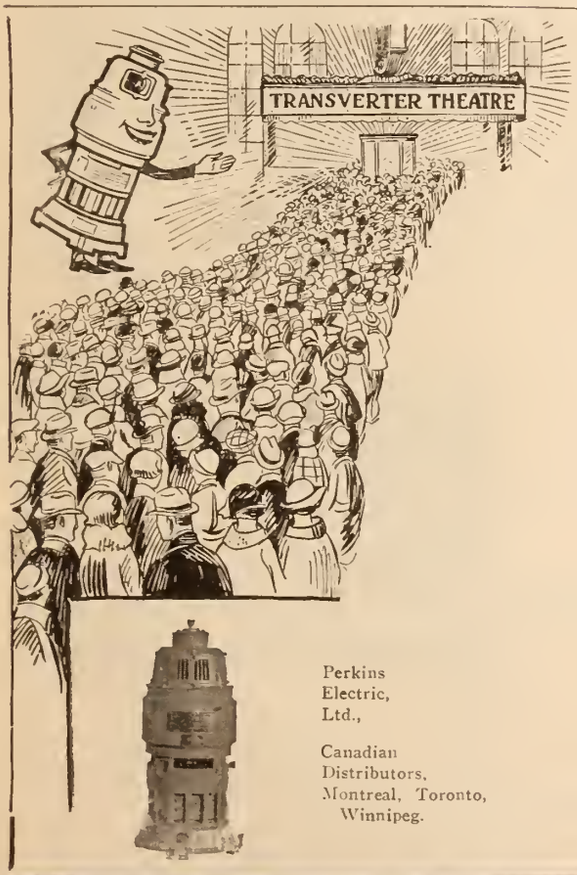
Stern Enterprises Building in New Jersey

The $2,000,000 St. Louis Theatre, Grand boulevard at Morgan street, the grand opening of which has been delayed from time to time, is scheduled to throw open its doors within a very short time now according to the latest advices.



The building was erected by the Metropolitan Theatres Corporation of which David Sommers is president; Sam Koplar, vice-president; Emil S. Strauss, treasurer, and Lambert E. Walther, director. It will seat 4,200 persons.

Several months ago the theatre was leased to the Orpheum circuit and will be used as a combination vaudeville and picture house. It adjoins the Grand Central Theatre, owned by Skouras Brothers Enterprises, while but across Lucas avenue is the Missouri Theatre, owned by Paramount and Balaban & Katz.

Walther is also a director in the St. Louis Amusement Company controlled by Skouras Brothers and Harry Koplar.

Andrew Pegu to Build New Vermont Theatre

Contracts were awarded this week for the new theatre in St. Johnsbury, Vt., to be built by Andrew Pegu of that city at a cost of between $140,000 and $150,000. Architects Haynes & Mason of Fitchburg, Mass., drew the plans. The theatre will be one of the largest in the Green Mountain state and it is expected that it will be completed in about a year. John Bergeron of Keene, N. H., has the building contract.

Theatre Construction On Increase in St. Louis Zone

THE Arsenal Theatre, Grand boulevard at Arsenal street, St. Louis, Mo., plans to erect a handsome steel canopy in front of the house. It commands South Grand boulevard for many blocks. The St. Louis Amusement Company are the owners.

The Jonesboro Amusement Company, Ark., will soon take bids on a $100,000 motion picture and vaudeville theatre to be erected at Church and Monroe streets.

The house will be 75 by 120 feet and of steel, stone, concrete and terra cotta construction. E. J. Wolpert is the architect.

Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., has had plans prepared for a $50,000 theatre for Shelbyville, Tenn. It will be erected on the site of the present opera house.

William Schrader plans to erect a $75,000 motion picture and vaudeville house in Sterling, Ill. The plans prepared by Bradley & Bradley, 520 Brown Building, Sterling, call for a house two-story and basement, 50 by 135 feet. It will be of brick, concrete and stone construction.

The Columbia Theatre at Sixth and St. Charles street and the adjoining Strand Theatre will be demolished shortly to make way for a four-story store building for the McCrory Stores Corporation of New York. The company recently obtained a 99-year lease on the property at an annual rental of $110,000. The fee is owned by the Columbia Theatre Company and the Supreme Realty Company controlled by Frank Tate and Charley Cella.

T. W. Sharp of Little Rock, Ark., has awarded the contracts on his new theatre to be erected at 620 Beech street. Jenkins & Apple, 215 West Second street, Little Rock, are the contractors. The house will be two-story, 44 by 140 and cost about $50,000.

World Ticket Supply Co. Report New Sales

The World Tieket and Supply Company are reporting an increase on the sale of Simplex Ticket Registers this season. They have been installed in many of the new theatres which include the Capitol at Newark, Pollack and Bratter's Hawthorne, Newark, N. J., The Kinema, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Charlie Goldreyer's New Manor, Brooklyn, N. Y.

It is claimed that the new model register has several improvements over the past one and the sales force is being enlarged in anticipation of a big season ahead.

Safeguards negative quality—

EASTMAN POSITIVE FILM

At Kodak Park every known precaution is exercised to make sure that every foot of Eastman Positive Film actually will reproduce tone for tone, all the detail of the negative.

Eastman experts safeguard for the screen the photographic quality your audiences are entitled to see there—and expect.

Look for the identification "Eastman" "Kodak" in black letters in the margin of prints you screen.
